The conſideration of this circumſtance ſhould be of great force to make us reſpect and reverence the Sacrament, ſeeing Chriſt inſtituted it then when he was about to depart out of this life, and to ſuffer death for us: we uſually remember the words of a dying friend.

was kept at even, Acts 20. 7. Tempus veſpertinum, propriè ſpectabat ad Paſcha vetus, ex lege. Quia verò Chriſtus Paſchati Cœnam ſubſtituere volebat, utrúmque Sacramentum eâdem veſperâ, unum poſt aliud celebravit, & vetus per novum abrogavit. Ita per accidens factum eſt, ut novum Sacramentum tempore V. Pertino ſit inſtitutum: Unde & cœna nomen accepit, & in hodiernum uſque diem retinuit. Neque Apoſtoli ad tempus Veſpertinum ſe aſtrinxerunt, ſed pro occaſione Cœnam adminiſtrarunt, aliàs diurno tempore, ut legere eſt Act. 2. 46. aliàs intempeſta nocte, ut Act. 20. Quo facto ſatis oſtenderunt, tempus cœnæ per ſe eſſe indifferens. Paræus De Ritu Fractionis in S. Euchariſtia. c. 5. * Plin. Epiſt. 97. ad Trajanum. Euchariſtia Sacramentum antelucanis cœtibus ſumimus. Tertullian. de Corona militis.

The Elements of the Euchariſt: Bread and Wine, Mat. 26. 26, 29. Mark 14. 22. Luk. 22. 19, 28. 1 Cor. 11. 23, 24, 25.

They are two, not only differing in number, but alſo in their kind, Bread and Wine, the firſt of which is ſolid and belongs to meat, the latter liquid, and ſerves for drink. The body is ſufficiently nouriſhed if it have bread and drink. Chriſt cals himſelf both, Joh. 6 58.

It is a great condeſcenſion for God to give us any outward ſigns and pledges of his faithfulneſſe, we are bound to believe in his Word.

Bread becauſe it ſtrengtheneth the body is therefore called Chriſts body, and Wine becauſe it turneth into bloud, is therefore called Chriſts bloud. Iſidor.

Theſe two creatures are,

1. Of ordinary uſe, not rare, gotten in every Countrey.

2. Such creatures as God of old made repreſentations of his grace, Iſa. 25. 6. & 55. 3.

3. They are creatures beſt in their kind, of all things we eate, bread is moſt nouriſhing and univerſally neceſſary for all kind of bodies, Panis à paſcendo, and wine of all drinks.

Panis & vinum quum præ cæteris cibis ſint alendis corporibus noſtris accomodata, commodiſſimè nobis illum deſignant, in quo uno vita æterna reſidet. Bezæ Quæſt. & Reſp. Paulus non præceptum vocat, ſed inſtitutum 1 Cor. 11. 23. Jam verò eſt eaque fuit ſemper, ſub lege etiam rigida ſymbolorum natura, ut facile ex cauſa probabili omitti ſe ferant. Sic panes ſacros, quos lex ſolis ſacerdotibus addixerat, in ſuos uſus vertit David. Sic & Circumciſio tam ſevere precepta, & Paſchalis Ceremonia omiſſa totis annis 40 quibus Hebræi per deſertas Arabiæ terras ambularunt, nempè quod inter itinera parum commodè interventuri fuerant tot dies aut otio tribuendi aut medicando corpori. Grotius, an ſemper communicandum per ſymbola, c. 5. Vide Jonſtoni Syntagma de Communione veteris Eccleſia, c. 3. Artic. 1, 2, & 3.

1 Cor. 10. 17. We are all one body, in as much as we are partakers of one bread. The Analogy ſtandeth thus; as many grains of Corn make one loaf of bread, and many Grapes make one meaſure of Wine in the Cup: So, many Chriſtians partaking faithfully of this Sacrament, become one myſtical body of Chriſt by the union of faith and love.

The Lord hath appointed thoſe Elements, to ſhew that men ſhould come with an appetite and thirſting, to receive the Sacrament in ancient times was as much as deſiderare, è cujus manu deſideravit.

In Baptiſm we have one ſign as the material part, in the Supper we have two ſigns, partly to note out our whole, full, and perfect nouriſhment in Chriſt, having whatſoever is requiſite for our ſalvation; and partly to ſhew a fuller remembrance of his death, for the wine which is a figure of his bloud, doth as it were repreſent it before our eyes. Atterſol of the Sacr. l. 3. c. 5. Vide Aquin. Sum. part. 3. Quæſt. 74. Art. 1.

Eph. 5. 26. Acts 8. 36. Mat. 28. 19. Acts 2. 16. M^r Elton's Catech.

There are two repreſenting ſigns in the Sacrament of the Lords Supper:

1. That we might know that in Chriſt we have whole and perfect ſpiritual nouriſhment, and whatſoever is requiſite to ſalvation.

2. For a more lively repreſentation of Chriſt his death and paſſion, in which his bloud was ſeparated from his body.

Theſe Elements are to be adminiſtred in both kinds ſeverally; Chriſt at his laſt Supper delivered firſt Bread by it ſelf, and then Wine, and not Bread and Wine together in a Sop, or Bread dipt in Wine. In the Sop the Wine is not drunk but eaten.

Of Receiving the Sacrament in both kinds, Bread and Wine.

Conſtat Euchariſtiæ Sacramentum duabus externis partibus, id eſt, duplici materia, pane & poculo. Neque quenquam contradicentem pati poteſt diſertiſſima relatio inſtituti onis apud Matthæum, Marcum, Lucam, Paulum, neq; perpetua Eccleſia traditio, Chamierus de Sac. lib. 8.

The Communion was inſtituted by Chriſt in both kinds, as three Evangeliſts ſhew Mark 14.23. & Luke 22.20. *Matth.*26.27. It was adminiſtred by the Apoſtles in both kinds, 1 Cor. 11.26, 28. & 10. 16. It was received in the ancient Church for the ſpace of fourteen hundred years in both kinds, as it is confeſſed by their own Councel of Conſtance, and that of Trent alſo. This was conſtantly practiſed in the Church for divers hundred years, untill the Councel of Conſtance in the year of the Lord 1414.

Some Northern Councels there are (ſaith *Bellarmine Tom.*3. *de Sacr. Eccleſ.*l.4. c. 28.) where wine is not to be had, therefore for uniformity ſake the Church thought fit that every where the Sacrament ſhould be adminiſtred but in one kind.

Although there be not wine or wheat in ſome Countreys, yet it may eaſily be carried to all, as much as ſufficeth for the uſe of this Sacrament. Aquinas part. 3. *Quæſt.*74. *Art.*1.

See Janſen. Concord. on Luk.22. p. 155. the danger of communicating in both kinds. The Church of Rome hath decreed, Conc. Trident. Seſſ. 21. c. 2. That it is not neceſſary for the people to communicate in both kinds, and holdeth them accurſed that hold it neceſſary for the people to receive the Cup conſecrated by the Prieſt. Vide Caſſand. conſult. See Doctor Featleys Grand Sacriledge of the Church of Rome, chap 1, 2, &c. to the 16. Chapter, And Biſhop Davenants L. Queſt. in his Determinat. And Maſter Cartwrights Rejoynder, pag. 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287. Vide Broohm. de cœna Dominica c.9. Queſt.11. See Maſter Thorndike of the Laws of the Church, c. 24.

Object. Some (ſaith Bellarmine) are abſtemious and abhorre wine, they cannot endure it, and it may offend ſickly perſons.

Anſw. Extraordinary caſes muſt not juſtle out ordinary laws and cuſtom, Vinum in modica quantitate ſumptum non poteſt multum ægroganti nocere. Wine moderately taken cannot much hurt the ſick. Aquin. ubi ſupra.

Object. Whoſoever ſhall eat this bread or drink this Cup unworthily, ſhall be guilty of the body and blood of Chriſt, the conjunction Or (ſay they) doth ſo diſ-joyn both kinds, that is free to take one without the other.

Anſw. If this be true, then it ſhall be lawfull alſo to take the Cup without the Bread, that disjunctive is put not for that it is lawful to take one kind and omit the other, but that greater caution may be uſed, and he ſpake of both ſeverally, becauſe irreverence may be uſed in both ſigns, and to ſhew that it ſufficeth not to carry our ſelves holily in part, unleſſe we finiſh the whole action holily, otherwiſe in the ſame place Bread and Wine are joyned together eight times.

The Apoſtle ſometimes putteth the other part, viz drinking of the Cup, for the whole celebration of the Supper, 1 Cor. 12. 13. The Heathens called a feaſt ſymposium, yet they had meat Object. Act. 2.42. & 20.7.

Anſw. Suppoſe the bread of the Lords Table be there meant, yet it is a Synecdoche whereby the part is put for the whole, otherwiſe you may as well ſay they had no thankſgiving, becauſe Luke maketh only mention of prayers, as to ſay they had not the Cup, becauſe mention is made only of bread, verſ 46. ſpeaking of the common Table (from the ſimilitude whereof the Lords Table is taken) he uſeth the ſame phraſe of breaking of bread without making mention of any drink, he ſaith breaking bread they took bread, which can hardly be ſaid of the Lords Supper

Chriſt as fore-ſeeing the ſacriledge of the Papiſts, commandeth all, not to eat of the bread, but to drink of the Cup, *Mat.*26 27. Mark 14.23. 1 *Cor.*12.13. and Mark ſaith, They all drank of it.

Certainly

Certainly I perſwade my ſelf, that our Saviour expreſſed the note of univerſality, viz. in delivering the Cup to all, ſaying, Drink ye all of this: and not ſo in giving the bread, of ſet purpoſe, to prevent that abuſe which the Romiſh Church of late hath brought, by taking away the Cup. As in like manner the Apoſtle ſaith of marriage, It is honourable in, or among ſt all men, Heb. 13.4. and he ſaith not ſo of Virginity or ſingle life, although it be honourable, becauſe the holy Ghoſt foreſaw, that ſome Hereticks would deny marriage to be honourable among ſt all, and prohibit it to ſome, viz. the Clergy. Which two Texts of Scripture the Romaniſts leudly pervert, and ridiculouſly contradict themſelves in the interpretation of them, extending all to the Laity in the one, and excluding the Clergy; and extending all to the Clergy in the other, and excluding the Laity: Marriage is honourable among all, ſay they, that is, all, ſave Prieſts. Drink you all of this, that is, all, ſave the people. Doctor Featleys Grand Sacriledge of the Church of Rome, chap. 2.

Drink you all of this, ſaith the Author of the Sacrament: he ſaith not expreſly, Eat you all of this; as foreſeeing that impiety, which in time humane preſumption ſhould bring in, upon, and againſt his own inſtitution, fulfilled in the Church of Rome at this day. Bp Montag. Anſw. to the Gagger of Proteſt. Sect. 36.

The Papiſts ſay, That the univerſal particle All belongs to the twelve Apoſtles, who were Prieſts, ſay they, and alone preſent at the inſtitution of this firſt Supper, and therefore it belongs only to Prieſts, not Lay-men, and they receive the blood with the body ratione concomitantia. By this reaſon they may as well take away the bread from the people.

at their feaſts. Admiranda hic eſt duorum Evangeliſtarum diligentia & harmonia, unus refert de Poculo Chriſtum diſertè & expreſſè mandaſſe, ut omnes ex eo bibant; Alter Diſcipulos omnes, ex eo bibiſſe, Quis igitur conformitatem cœnæ Chriſti agnoſcet illic, ubi diſpenſans, vel ſolus. Quos Chriſtus juſſerat manducare, eos bibere omnes juſſit: Bibete, air, ex hoc omnes. Sed illud omnes (inquiunt Pontificii) reſtringi debet ad Apoſtolos, quos alloquitur ſolos. Quod ſanè non dicerent, ſi cogitarent, Apoſtolos iſtic Eccleſiam totam repræſentare. Nulli dubium eſſe debet, quin quamvis ſoli eſſent præſentes Apoſtoli, tamen finis fuerit Chriſti præſcribere Eccleſiæ rationem adminiſtrandi cœnam quam ſervari vellet, uſq; dum venerit ad judicandum. Voſſius in Theſibus. Edit & bibit, omnibus cæteris præſentibus auditoribus & diſcipulis neglectis, vel panem quidem vel ſolum, illis participat & exhibet. Buxtorf. de prima cœnæ ritibus & forma. Quod omnes tunc ſpectabat Apoſtolos; quibus Chriſtus Sacramentum tradebat uſurpandum, omnes quoque ſpectat fideles in Eccleſia, qui Sacramentum idem ſunt recepturi à ſuis paſtoribus. Nec ulla ratio poteſt fingi cum illud Bibite ad ſolos conſecrantes debeat reſtringi, cum Apoſtoli in prima cœna non conſecrantium, ſed communicantium ſuſtinuerint perſonas, & tam latè debeat patere illud bibite, quam illud comedite, quo omnes adulti fideles obligantur. Mareſ. de calice Euchariſt. Vide Calv. Inſtit. l. 4. c. 17. Sect. 47, 48, 49.

This device of receiving Chriſts blood in the bread, per concomitantiam, was but a late invention. And the newneſſe of this imagination (which was generally applauded in the Romiſh Church in his time) was one ſpeciall Motive, why that Reverend Paſtor of bleſſed memory, Maſter Gilpin, did diſclaime the Romiſh Churches Doctrine, in the Point of Tranſubſtantiation, as Bp Tunſtall his Uncle before him had done. Dr Jacks. on the Creed, l. 11. c. 4.

The Apoſtles in the firſt Supper did not repreſent the order of Prieſts, but the whole Church of Communicants, and Chriſt adminiſtred the Sacrament to them not as Apoſtles, but as Diſciples, therefore Paul extends this particle All, to all the Chriſtians in the Church of Corinth, and to men of all order, condition, ſtate and ſex, 1 Cor. 11.25,26,27,28,29. The Sacrament repreſents Chriſts death and his blood ſhed out of his veins, Matth. 26.27,28. That Helena of concomitancy, which the Lutherans alſo admit, (as we may ſee in * Gerhard) doth abound with ſo many ab-

* Loco de cœna. Ubi ſtabilita fuit Tranſubſtantiationis prodigioſa doctrina in concilio Lateranenſi per Innocentium tertium anno 1215 hac concomitantiam ſtatim peperit & concomitantia multiplicationem Sacramenti. Mareſius de Calice Benedicto. Ut Baptiſma regenerationis, ita ſacra cœna eſt Sacramentum nutritionis noſtræ ſpiritualis, quæ perfectè non poteſt adumbrari niſi potu & cibo. Ex Hiſtoriis res eſt clara, & fatetur Gregorius de Valentia apud Humf. Lynd. Equitem Anglum in via certa S. 6. Non niſi paulo ante concilium Conſtantinenſe hanc mutilationem univerſaliter receptam fuiſſe. Mareſ. ib. Periculo effuſionis & irreverentiæ ſatis cavebatur in veteri Eccleſia etiam adminiſtrata integra communione; nihil tunc vel à barbis prolixioribus Laicorum, vel ab eorum manibus paralyticis metuebatur; multo minus placebat Gerſonis ratio imparem eſſe dignitatem Sacerdotis & Laicorum. Abſtemios non magis obligat hoc præceptum de ſumendo calice, quam ſurdos de audiendo præconio Evangelij. Neceſſitas legem non habet. Id. ib. Vide Epiſc. Daven. Quæſt. L. Quære ab illis, cur ſiccam Euchariſtiam populo Chriſtiano porrigant? Cur illis in cœna myſtica calice Dominico interdicam? Scilicet reverentiæ cauſa faciunt, & propter honorem Sacramenti, quia periculum eſt ne in prolixis barbis Chriſti ſanguis inhæreat, ne quo caſu dum circumfertur in terram fundatur, ne vaſa ſacra populi contactu ſordidentur, ne alij aliis bibentibus faſtidium calicis concipiant, &c. At ô inſipientem Chriſtum, ô fatuos Apoſtolos & Patres ſexcentorum & ſupra ſeculorum, quibus rationis illa graviſſima & doctiſſima nunquam in animum venerunt, ut tantorum ſcandalorum pericula vitarent, & reverentiam atq; honorem ſacramenti ſanguinis Chriſti populo calicem prohibendo procurarent. Abb. Antich. Demonſt. c. 20. Vide Phil. Morn de ſacra Euchariſt. l. 1. c. 10, 11, 12 ſurdities,

ſurdities, and was ſo unknown to antiquity, that it is a wonder that judicious men will defend it, only that they may maintain their figments of Conſubſtantiation and Tranſubſtantiation.

This Argument from concomitancy proveth as well that they may drink the wine only, and not receive the bread.

2. Though Chriſt wholly be ſealed to us in the uſe of the bread really, yet not wholly ſacramentally. Vide Picher. de miſſa c. 4.

Object. Bellarm de Euchariſt. l. 4. c. 25. ſaith, There is a plain difference between the Bread and Cup, for 1 Cor. 11. he ſaith of the Bread abſolutely, Do this, but of the Cup conditionally, As oft as ye do it, therefore thoſe words do not ſignifie that the Cup ſhould alwayes be given when the Sacrament is adminiſtred, but they only preſcribe the manner, that if it be ſo, then it ſhould be done in memory of Chriſts paſſion.

Anſw. But this is a moſt frivolous cavil, for the words do both command the thing, and alſo ſhew the end of doing it. In the Verſe immediately following the Apoſtle hath thoſe words, ſpeaking as well of the Bread as Cup. As often as ye eat of this bread and drink of this Cup. Therefore there is one and the ſame reaſon of both, the Bread and the Cup. We muſt take and eat the one, and take and drink the other, and whenſoever we do ſo, we muſt do it in remembrance of Chriſts death.

Object. More irreverence will be ſhewed to the Sacrament by ſpilling of it, to which in a great multitude of Communicants the Wine muſt needs be ſubject to.

Anſw. Reverence due to the Sacrament conſiſts in a religious partaking of it, not in a neceſſary abſtinence from one of the Elements.

The Papiſts have cut out their Sacrament according to the meaſure of their doctrine, for as they teach Chriſt to be but half a Saviour, by making their works joynt-purchaſes of their ſalvation with him, ſo they miniſter half a Sacrament of ſalvation. Carwt. againſt the Rhem. on Joh. 6.

Our practice and profeſſion is the receiving the Communion in both kinds: for which I joyn iſſue with all Papiſts living; that it is the prime, original inſtitution of our Saviour, which giveth birth and being to a Sacrament; that it is ſacriledge to alter it therefrom; that it was never otherwiſe uſed in the Church of God, for above two thouſand years after Chriſt. Let all the Papiſts living prove the contrary, and I will ſubſcribe to all Popery. Bp Montag. Anſwer to the Gagger of Proteſt. Sect. 36.

This was the cuſtom in all the Fathers times, as I could deduce almoſt out of every one. This is every where the cuſtom in all the world unto this day, but in the Romane exorbitant Church, as Caſſander ſaith; and was not quite aboliſhed in that Church till about thirteen hundred years after Chriſt, and by much art, colluding and fine forgery, was retained from being caſt out of that Church in the late Conventicle of Trent, only kept in for a faction, but mightily oppoſed by learned, honeſt and conſcionable Catholicks. Id. ibid.

Mat. 26. 26, 27. Firſt, If none may drink of the conſecrate wine but the Prieſts, then none ſhould eat of the bread but Prieſts, for to whom Chriſt ſaid, Take and eat, to thoſe he gave the Cup, and ſaid, Drink ye: The ſigns being both equal, all Communicants muſt drink of the one, as well as eat of the other, there being the ſame warrant for the one that there is for the other.

Atterſol of the Sacr. l. 3. c. 5. Secondly, The Cup is a part of Chriſts Will and Teſtament, Gal. 3. 15. Heb. 9. 16, 17. the dead mans Will may not be changed. The Lords Supper is a Sacrament proper to the New Teſtament, Luk. 22. 20.

See Bp Landaff on the Sacrament from p. 171, to 182. Thirdly, The bloud of Chriſt ſhed upon the Croſſe belongeth not only to the Paſtors and Teachers, but to all the faithfull that come to the Table of the Lord, Matth. 26. 28. Luke 22. 20. why then ſhould the Cup of the Lord be barred from them?

1 Cor. 11. 25. Fourthly, All the faithfull that come to the Lords Table muſt ſhew forth his death untill he come, and this is done by them as well by drinking of the Cup as by eating of the bread, therefore all the Communicants muſt receive the Sacrament under both kinds.

To

To which theſe Reaſons may be added:

Firſt, From the Inſtitution, for Chriſt commanded them to drink the Wine, as well as to eat the Bread, therefore this is a violation of Gods command.

Secondly, The Apoſtle bids every one to try themſelves, and ſo to eat of that bread, and drink of that wine, ſo they did not only eat and drink then, but they were commanded ſo to do.

Thirdly, To celebrate the Sacrament otherwiſe, is to make void Chriſts two main ends in appointing the Sacrament,

1. To repreſent his death and blood ſhed out of the veins.

2. To ſhew that Chriſt is full nouriſhment to the ſoul, as bread and drink to the body.

The bread and wine being the matter of the Sacrament may not be changed in the Lords Supper.

Reaſons.

1. The inſtitution of the Supper, and the example of Chriſt himſelf, whom the Church is to imitate and follow, 1 Cor. 11. 25.

2. No other ſigns are ſo ſignificant and effectual as theſe are for this purpoſe, to ſtrengthen and comfort them that are in trouble and almoſt in the preſent eſtate of death, Pſal. 104. 14, 15. Prov. 31. 6.

Rogatus piæ memoriæ vir D. Calvinus à Fratribus, qui tum in America erant, ubi nullus eſt vini uſus, liceretne pro vino uti in cœna Domini vel aqua ſimplici quæ plerumque illic utuntur, vel alio illic non inuſitato potionis genere. Nihil (aiebat) à Chriſti conſilio ac voluntate alienum facere videri, qui non contemptu neque temeritate, ſed ipſa neceſſitate adacti, pro vino aliud in iis regionibus uſitatæ potionis genus uſurparent. In hac quæſtione eandem valere rationem arbitramur, ſi modo is de quo agitur, vel minimam vini deguſtationem ferre nequit, ut potius quam integram cœnam non peragat, vel aqua vel alia ſibi familiari potione utatur. Beza Epiſt. 25. Quod Beza cenſuit in regionibus in quibus non eſt uſus panis & vini noſtri, ex Analogia inſtitutionis Domini, qui uſuario pane & potu uſus eſt, poſſe Euchariſtiam celebrari in uſuario pane & potu regionis illius; id non caret ſua probabilitate: de quo tamen, quia non eſt neceſſarium, contendere nolim: nec etiam id in me ſuſcipere; Sed ubi vel neutrum ſignorum à Chriſto inſtitutorum reperitur, vel alterutrum tantum, malim planè abſtinere quam vel ſigna mutare, vel Sacramentum murilare; quod poſtremum fieri non poteſt ſine grandi ſacrilegio. Riveti Jeſuita vapulans, c. 7. Vide ejus Grot. Diſcuſ. Dialyſ. Sect. 10. Neceſſitas legem non habet: ubi Sacramentorum materia non habetur, à Sacramentis abſtinendum, & ſpiritualiter Chriſto communicandum. Rivet. Exam. Animad. Hug. Grot. p. 80. Vide Balduin. de caſ. conſ. l. 2. c. 12. caſ. 8.

3. The matter and form of every thing do conſtitute its eſſence. So it is in the Sacraments, where the ſignes are the matter, and the words of inſtitution the form. Atterſol of the Sacraments, l. 3. c. 5.

4. If the bread and wine might be changed in the Supper, and yet the Sacrament in ſubſtance remain: then in like manner, water in Baptiſm might be changed, and yet be true Baptiſm: but the Miniſter cannot baptize with any other liquor or element, than with water, as the matter of that Sacrament.

5. If we grant a change in the ſigns at the pleaſure of men, why may we not alſo change other parts of the Sacrament? why may we not inſtead of the Miniſter appointed of God and called by the Church, admit private perſons, and receive other alterations inforced upon the Church by the Papiſts?

Some hold, that if the Sacrament cannot be adminiſtred, and received in both kinds (according to the inſtitution of our Saviour) it is wholly to be forborn. Others think that in defect of the elements, preſcribed and uſed by our Saviour at his laſt Supper, others which are Analogical to them may be taken. There is a third opinion, which is a kind of medium betwixt theſe two, viz. neither to ſubſtitute other elements, nor wholely to forbear or debarre others from the receipt of the Sacrament, when bread and wine, or either of them cannot be had; but if there be either an Antipathy againſt either kind, or want of either, to be content with that which may be had and taken. Maſter Leys reſolution of the Caſe.

Bucan Inſtitut. loc. 48. Beza Epiſt. 2. think, that where there is no ſtore of bread and plenty of wine ſufficient for this purpoſe, ſome other thing may be taken inſtead of them.

Thus it may come to paſſe (ſaith Atterſol) that we ſhall have nothing which Chriſt

Chriſt commanded and ſanctified by his example, and yet boaſt that we have his Supper, and do that which he appointed. For whereas we make four outward parts of this Sacrament, the Miniſter, the Word, the Signs and the Receiver: There are which hold there is no neceſſity of the Miniſter: Others, that there is no neceſſity of the words of Inſtitution: Others, that there is no neceſſity of the Signs: Others, that there is no neceſſity of the Receiver: So if we once admit any alteration in any of the parts, we open a gap to all innovation, and bring in great uncertainty in the Sacraments.

Chriſtus diſertè dicitur fregiſſe panem. Fractio panis non eſt accidentalis Sacramento Euchariſtiæ, ſed ex inſtitutione, ac proinde haud aliter neceſſaria, quam accepto in manus, quam traditio, quam communio. Etſi nolimus enim tam severè de ea contendere, ut nulla ſocietas retineri poſſit cum iis qui omittunt: tamen defectum rei non exiguæ diſſimulandum non putamus, imò nec toleraudum, ſi tolli queat. Enimvero tam diſerta fractio eſt in inſtitutione quam quicquam aliud, & tam curioſè reperta ab omnibus quibus recitata inſtitutio eſt, Evangeliſtis, inquam, Paulo, Liturgijs cunctis. Chamier. de Sacramentis l. 7. c. 11. Fractio panis non eſt ritus adiaphorus humanitus inſtitutus, ſed cæremonia neceſſaria, ad ipſo Chriſto tum obſervata, tum etiam mandata, Matth. 26. 26. 1 Cor. 11. 23. Alting. Exeg. Aug. Confeſſ. Art. 24. Vide Wendelini Chriſt. Theol. Syſtema maius l. 1. c. 23. & Piſcat. Aphori. de cœna Dom. Aphori. 6. & 7. cum exegeſi.

Whether the breaking of the bread be an indifferent Ceremony?

Some make the breaking of the bread to be ſimply neceſſary, and an eſſential part of the Supper, ſo that without it there can be no Sacrament.

1. Becauſe the Sacrament is called the breaking of bread, and this breaking of bread is ſaid to be the Communion of the body of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 10. 16.

2. Others make this breaking to be meerly indifferent and not neceſſary; accidental, and not of the ſubſtance; ſo the Lutherans.

* Paræus in 1 Cor. 11. where he handleth this Queſtion largely, & de ritu fractionis cap. 5. Voſſius in Theſibus. Atterſol of the Sacraments, l. 3. c. 5. See Mr Hilderſ. little Treat of the Sacraments. Panis fractio manifeſtè nititur exemplo Chriſti, Apoſtolorum & univerſæ Eccleſiæ ultra mille annos continuato exemplo. Nec obſcurè mandatum verba inſtitutionis præferunt. Unde omnes haud difficulter intelligunt, ejus omiſſionem de juſta integritate actionis nonnihil delibare. Non urgebimus, ut partem eſſentialem agnoſcant. Crocius in Auguſt. conſeſſ. Quæſt. 2. c. 29. Utrumne an plures adhibendi ſint panes, digitiſne frangendi, aut cultro ſcindendi, nulla eſt inter noſtros controverſia. Id. ibid. Noſtri non deſtruunt, non diſcerpunt, non frangunt Eccleſiam propter panis fractionem. Quod vel inde patet, quod fratres noſtri per Poloniam panem non frangunt, nec Baſilienſes multis annis fregerunt. Non damnant Eccleſias, quæ carent hac Ceremonia. Zanch. ib. Quæſt. 2. c. 12.

3. Others * hold a middle way between both extreams, that it is neceſſary; yet not as an eſſential but an integral part.

The Ceremony of breaking bread was continually obſerved by Chriſts firſt inſtitution, by the practice of the Apoſtles, by the antient and univerſal cuſtom of the whole Church of Chriſt, as well Greek as Latine.

Act. 2. 42. & 20. 7. Lorinus in Act. 2. 42. By Morton of the Maſſe, l. 1. c. 2. Sect. 4. Ecce In cœna Chriſtus fregit panem, & tanem Eccleſia Catholica hodiè non frangit, ſed integrum dat. Salmeron.

This act of breaking of bread is ſuch a principal act, that the whole celebration of this Sacrament hath had from thence this appellation given to it by the Apoſtles to be called breaking of bread; it is alſo a Symbolicall Ceremony betokening the Crucifying of Chriſts body upon the Croſſe, 1 Corinth. 11. 24. But the Papiſts yet do not break it but give it whole, and this they pretend to do for reverence ſake, leaſt ſome crumbs of bread ſhould fall to the ground.

Three Evangeliſts mention the breaking of the bread.

It is not material whether the bread be broken or cut, but it is more probable that Chriſt broke it from the cuſtome of the Jews, ſaith Voſſius: but Balduinus the Lutheran [a] ſaith, they receive a perfect Sacrament who intermit this fraction in the uſe of the Supper, becauſe Chriſt broke the bread that he might diſtribute it, therefore ſay Gerhard [b] and he, Perinde eſt, ſive in ipſa actione cœnæ, ſive antea frangatur. Baldwin quotes Beza, Aretius, Zanchius to that purpoſe, to ſhew that fraction may be omitted in the very act of the Supper.

[a] De Caſ. Conſ. lib. 2. cap. 12. Caſ. 10.

[b] Chriſtus uſus eſt fractione panis vel propter ſignificationem quandam Sacramentalem, pura repræſentationem paſſionis, vel propter diſtributionem, tantum propter diſtributionem Chriſtus uſus eſt fractione, neque quicquam intereſt, ſive fractio illa panis ante admiſſionem cœnæ ſive in ipſa admiſſione adhibeatur. Geth loc. commun. de ſacra cœna. Fregit Chriſtus panem, cum Sacramentum hoc inſtitueret, & quidem non gratiâ diſtribuendi tantum ſed precipuè mortis ſuæ repræſentandæ cauſâ. Jonſtoni Syntag. de Commun. Veteris Eccleſ. Art. 1. c. 4. Vide plura ibid.

But

But Zanchy in an Epiſtle to a Noble man hath this paſſage. The bread is to be broken before the people, after the example of Chriſt, the Apoſtles and all the ancient Churches, and alſo to expreſſe the myſtery of the paſſion and death of Chriſt which are lively repreſented by that action.

The breaking of the bread ſignifies:

1. How we ſhould be broken in humiliation for our ſins, and the pouring out of the wine, how our bloud and life ſhould be ſhed and poured out for our ſins, if we had that we deſerve.

2. They repreſent unto us how the body of Chriſt was broken, and his bloud poured out for our ſins. M^r Perkins.

Not the Palatine, the French or Engliſh Churches have lately invented or brought in the breaking of the bread, but the whole Apoſtolical, ancient Church above 1500 year ago, and ſince that time have uſed it according to Chriſts command, Do this. Paræus de Ritu fractionis in S. Euchariſtia c. 5. See his 6^th Chapter, where he ſhews how frivolous that Argument is, Frangere, Hebraica phraſi nihil aliud eſt, quàm diſtribuere, and gives this Rule, Where ever in Scripture the word Break concerning bread is put alone, it is an Hebraiſm, and ſignifies to diſtribute, becauſe the Hebrews above other Nations uſed not to cut bread with a knife, but to break it with their hands, when they took it themſelves, or gave it to others to take, but when the word Give is expreſly added to it, it ſignifieth the true breaking or dividing of the whole bread into parts, as *Mat.*14.19. Marke 6.41. *Luk.*9.26. Mat. 15.36. Mark 8. 6. and in the inſtitution of the Supper, *Mat.*26.26. Mark 14. 22. Luk 22.19.

It is not neceſſarily required, that the Lords Supper be adminiſtred in unleavened bread. For bread is often times named and repeated: but the word (unleavened) is never added. Wherefore as it is in it ſelf indifferent whether the wine be red or white, and whatſoever the kind or colour be (if it be wine:) ſo it is not greatly material whether the bread be leavened or unleavened, ſo it be bread. Atterſol of the Sac. *l.*3. *c.*5.

Neceſſarium eſt ut ſit panis triticeus ſine quo non perficitur Sacramentum. Non eſt autem de neceſſitate Sacramenti, quòd ſit azymus vel fermentatus, quia in unoquoque confici poteſt. Conveniens autem eſt, ut unuſquiſque ſervet ritum ſuæ Eccleſiæ in Sacramenti celebratione. T. Aquin. par. 3. Quæſt. 74. Art. 4. Græci olim pro fermentato pane litigabant cum Latinis, & hi pro pane azymo contra Græcos tanta contentione, ut Latini Græcos appellarent fermentarios, Græci Latinos azymitas Pontificii quoque pro uſu panis azymi, tanquam pro aris & focis pugnant. Bellarm lib.4. de Euch. cap.7. An panis ex hordeo vel tritico piſtus ſit, an azymus vel fermentatus ſit, nihil refert: hoc enim ſubſtantiæ panis nihil addit, aut adimit. In Eccleſiis noſtris azymus, adhibentur, ex nulla neceſſitate, ſed liberè, quia Chriſtus eo uſus fuit in inſtitutione cœnæ, & panis Euchariſtici typus fuit panis azymus, qui in eſu agni Paſchalis uſurpabatur, *Exo.*12.8. Si autem Eccleſia aliqua fermentato pane utetur, non eſt cur quis ſibi eo nomine ſcrupulum faciat. Nullum enim Chriſti mandatum habemus, ut vel azymo vel fermentato utamur, res hæc merè eſt ἀδιάφορον: Eo fermentato æquè ac azymo fieri poteſt communicatio corporis Chriſti. Prout ergo fert uniuſcujuſque Eccleſiæ conſuetudo, ita faciendum, nec una Eccleſia aliam propter diſſenſum condemnare, nec communicantes hoc in genere nimis curioſi eſſe debent. Balduin. de caſ. conſc. l. 2. cap.12. caſ.9. Vide Gerh. loc. commun. Nævus eſt duplex in iis Eccleſiis quæ azymo potius quam fermentato pane utuntur. Hoc enim & Judaiſmum ſapit & minus eſt quotidiani cibi analogiæ accommodatum. Beza Quæſt. Panis autem, azymus ne ſit an fermentatus, non magnopere putamus laborandum, quamvis communem panem ſentiamus ordinationi Chriſti multo eſſe convenientiorem. Cur enim azymo pane uſus eſt Dominus, niſi quia per id tempus quo ſacram illam cœnam ipſi viſum eſt inſtituere, nullus in Judæa alio pane utebatur? Aut igitur azymorum feſtum ſimul reſtituatur oportet, aut fatendum eſt communem & omnibus uſitatum panem exemplo Domini rectius uſurpari, quamvis azymum panem Dominus adhibuerit: de veteris purioris Eccleſiæ more taceam, quem adhuc Græca Eccleſia retinet. Beza Epiſt. 12. Vide Voſſii Harm. Evangel. lib. 1. cap. 15.

The Papiſts pretend the inſtitution of Chriſt, Who (ſay they) made the Sacrament of unleavened bread, inſtituting it after he had eaten the Paſſeover, which was to be eaten with unleavened bread, according to the Law of Moſes; neither was there any leaven to be found in Iſrael ſeven dayes together? We deny not (ſaith Atterſol[a]) but Chriſt might uſe unleavened bread at his laſt Supper, having im- *Exod.*12.8,18.

[a] Some think no other than unleavened bread could be uſed without a manifeſt tranſgreſſion of the Law which did forbid that any leaven ſhould be ſo much as uſed among them at that time. Yet the neceſſity of uſing unleavened bread in the Euchariſt, doth no more follow from thence, than that we muſt celebrate the Sacrament at Even, becauſe Chriſt did then inſtitute it.

mediately before eaten the Paſchal Lamb, yet no ſuch thing is expreſſed in the Goſpel. The Evangeliſts teach, He took bread: but make no mention or diſtinction what bread he took, nor determine what bread we ſhould take, no more than limit what wine we ſhall uſe, but leave it at liberty to take leavened bread or unleavened, as occaſion of time, place, perſons, and other circumſtances ſerve, ſo we take bread. If Chriſt on this occaſion uſed unleavened bread: it was becauſe it was uſual, common and ordinary bread at that time, as we alſo ſhould uſe that bread which is common. It is therefore no breach of Chriſts Ordinance, nor a tranſgreſſion of the firſt otiginal inſtitution of the Lords Supper, to eat either the one or the other.

Paraus on 1 Cor. 11. handleth this Queſtion, and makes it indifferent, he ſaith, We ſhould rather look that the heart be free from leaven than the bread, 1 Cor. 5.7. and De Symb. Euchar. cap. 3. He ſaith with the Schoolmen, Conveniens eſt, ut in hoc caſu cujuſq; Eccleſia obſervetur conſuetudo, modo vitetur

The Papiſts give a myſtical reaſon why the bread muſt be unleavened, becauſe hereby is ſignified our ſincerity; but this is ridiculous, for if unleavened bread becauſe it is unmixed muſt ſignifie my ſincerity, than the wine becauſe it is mingled with water muſt ſignifie my duplicity and hypocriſie.

Whether it be leavened or unleavened bread, we will not ſtrive, but take that which the Church according to the circumſtance of the times and perſons ordain; Yet this we dare boldly ſay, That in the uſe of leavened bread we come nearer to the imitation of Chriſts action than thoſe which take unleavened. For our Saviour took the bread that was uſual and at hand, there being only unleavened bread at the Feaſt of the Paſſeover, and no other to be gotten. We therefore taking the bread which is in ordinary uſe, and cauſing no extraordinary bread to be made for the nonce, are found to tread more nearly in the ſteps of our Saviour Chriſt. Therefore (unleſſe you will renew the Jewiſh Paſſeover of baniſhing all leaven at the time of the holy Communion) your preciſe imitation of unleavened bread is but apiſh [c].

Although Azymes were uſed by Chriſt, it being then the Paſchal Feaſt, yet was this occaſioned alſo by reaſon of the ſame Feaſt which was preſcribed to the Jewes: Proteſtants and Papiſts both grant it not to be of the eſſence of the Sacrament that it be unleavened, but in its own nature indifferent [d].

necceſſitatis opinio ac ſuperſtitio, & ſpecietur communis adiaphoria. [c] Cartwright on the Rhemiſt Teſtament on 1 Cor. 11. 22. [d] Biſhop Morton of the Maſſe, lib. 1. cap. 1. Sect. 4. Farinacea folia (Wlaſtrabe) neque panis formam habent; neque pro pane unquam uſquam gentium fuere uſitata. Chamier. de Sacramentis, l. 1. c. 4. Hoſtia neq; ab Hebræis, neq; Græcis, neq; Latinis vocantur panis, ſed diſtinctis appellantur nominibus, à probatis autoribus ad nullum genus panum referuntur, non ſunt communiſſimum & nobiliſſimum nutrimentum, non roborant corpus humanum, ergo non ſunt verus Cibarius, & ουσιώδως ſic dictus panis. Sylloge A. Frat. Roſæcrucis donata. Panis azymus glutinoſus erat, & frangebatur ſine manu ſine cultro. Lorinus in Act. 2 42. Nos ſentimus panem azymo & fermentato confici Sacramentum poſſe, & retinendum eſſq; eſſe ſua Eccleſiæ motem. Verum addimus primò optimum eſſe omnes Eccleſias etiam hac parte conformes eſſe tum teſtandæ unionis gratia, tum ut infirmiorum conſcientiæ conſulatur. Deinde optimum videri & proximum inſtituto Sacramenti panem uſurpari fermentatum, itaq; hac potius uſimur, paucis Eccleſiis exceptis, quibuſcum non eſt propterea nobis, unanimis conſenſus. Chamier. de Sacr. l. 5. c. 4. Cum nuſquam niſi panis mentio ſit, nulla addita circumſtantia, panis intelligitur uſitatus & communis. Conſtat panem azymum fuiſſe extraordinarium, nec vulgo uſitatum. Id. ib.

When the Ebionites taught unleavened bread to be neceſſary, the Church commanded conſecration to be made in leavened bread.

The Grecians uſe leavened bread, the Papiſts unleavened, and that made up in ſuch wafer cakes that it cannot repreſent ſpiritual nouriſhment.

We hold either indifferent, becauſe in the inſtitution we read of bread without commanding leavened or unleavened. De panis qualitate nos non contendimus, ſi modo verus ſit & ſolidus panis; quod de hoſtia Papiſtarum, vix poteſt affirmari. Amel. Bell. Enerv. Tom. 3. Diſp. 32.

Caſſander himſelf complaineth that the Papiſts bread is of ſuch extream thinneſſe and lightneſſe, that it may ſeem unworthy the name of bread. Whereas Chriſt uſed ſolid and tough bread which was to be broken with the hands, or cut with the knife.

The cuſtom of the Chriſtian Church by the ſpace of above a thouſand years, was to put upon the ſacred Table after Chriſts and the Apoſtles example, a ſolid loaf which was broken into pieces among the Communicants: for all the people did communicate. Now this quantity of bread is reduced into round and light wafers, wafers, in the form of a peny, whereof they give this myſtical reaſon, becauſe that Chriſt was ſold for thirty pence, and becauſe that a peny is given for a hire unto thoſe that have wrought in the vineyard, Matth. 20. 10. Upon theſe Hoſtes they have put the Image of a Crucifix. Pet. du Moulin of the Maſſe, lib. 1. cap. 7. & lib. 3. cap. 3.

The Sacrament was in thoſe times delivered unto each Communicant in a ſmall round Wafer, called commonly by the name of Sacramentum Altaris, or, The bleſſed Sacrament of the Altar, and ſuch parts thereof as were reſerved from time to time, were hanged up over the Altar in a Pix or Box. Some zealous ones then in hatred to the Church of Rome, reproached it by the odious names of Jack-in-a-box, Round-Robin, Sacrament of the Halter. Dr Heylins Eccleſia Reſtaurata in the Hiſt of *Edw.*6.

The uſe of the Wafer-cake is defended by the Papiſts and ſome Lutherans, as Gerh. loc. commun. Tom. 5. *de ſacra Cœna, c.*7. but Chriſt uſed it not, whoſe action is our inſtruction; and alſo there is no Analogy, or a very obſcure one between the ſign and thing ſignified.

Whether it be neceſſary to mingle water with the Euchariſtical wine.

Aquinas[e] ſaith, Water ought to be mingled with wine, but it is not de neceſſitate hujus Sacramenti.

[e] Parte tertia Quæſt. 74. Art. 6, 7.

Some Papiſts for mingling water with wine pretend the Antiquity of Councils and Fathers: But we ſay,

1. There is no ſuch thing in the Inſtitution.

2. The authority of theſe is not divine but meerly humane.

3. It was an ancient cuſtom in Tertullians time to give milk and honey in Baptiſm to the Infant, yet the Papiſts themſelves do not keep it: So that unleſſe we had Chriſts inſtitution we cannot do it, eſpecially knowing that it is dangerous to add to any eſſential part of the Sacrament ſuch as the wine is. But then they are moſt ridiculous, when they will make a myſtical ſignification in this, that the union of the water with the wine muſt ſignifie the union of the people (which is denoted by waters, *Rev.*17.) with Chriſt: Thus Bellarmine. But it ſignifies not this union either naturally, for then it would ſignifie ſo in common feaſts: nor by divine inſtitution, for then the Scripture would have delivered it. Beſides Revel. 17. Great waters (not a few drops) ſignifie the people, and that not of believers, but Heathens, and if it ſignifie the communion of the people with Chriſt, why do they deny it them?

Eſt ritus à veteribus nonnullis olim obſervatus; ſed nec dogma fidei nec eſſentialis pars Sacramenti. Quia vinum forte fuit in illis regionibus calidis, paululum aquæ admiſcebant. Epiſc. Daven. de Jud. controverſ. cap. 8. Apol. 2. In regionibus orientalibus ubi fortia vina ſunt, uſitatum fuit non merum ſed vinum aqua temperatum bibere. Unde Chemnitius verſimile judicat, Chriſtum vinum non merum ſed temperatum bibiſſe. Mixtio aquæ potius aliquid addit inſtitutioni, quia Evangeliſtæ ſolius vini mentionem faciant, Matth. 25. 29. Marc. 14. 25. Luc. 22. 18. Gerh. loc. commun. Verſimile eſt Chriſtum miſcuiſſe vinum, cum orientis vina generoſa ſint & calida. Illud etiam non diffitemur, Eccleſiam veterem uſam eſſe vino mixto. Nempe quia poſt cœnam eodem vino celebrarent Agapas ſuas, anſam dare gentibus nolluerunt quaſi mero ad ebrietatem uterentur. Voſſius in Theſibus. Vide Voſſij Harmon. Evang. lib. 1. cap. 15. Papiſtæ vino conſecrando admiſcent aquam, quamquam exigua quantitate. Nos ſentimus, rem eſſe merè indifferentem, ideóque liberè uſurpandam, omittendamve; dum ne turberur ordo Eccleſiæ. Tantum ergo reprehendimus in Papiſtis, quod nullo præeunte verbo Dei, peccata & quidem mortalia fingant. Ghamier. de Sacramentis lib. 5. c. 3. Vide Jonſtoni Syntag. de commun. vet. Eccleſ. c. 3.

The drink then uſed being called the fruit of the Vine, *Mat.*26.29. it is evident that there was no mixture of water, for then it had not been the fruit of the Vine, but another drink compounded of water and wine.

Some ſay this reaſon is not of force; for he that drinks Vinum dilutum, drinkes the fruit of the Grape as well as he that drinkes merum. That our Saviour Chriſt and his Apoſtles ever mingled water with wine in the Sacramental Cup, cannot be ſhewed by any teſtimony out of the word of God.

As for the water guſhing forth with the bloud out of our Saviour Chriſt, it is frivolous: the wine in the Cup is not a Sacrament of the bloud of Chriſt which was ſhed after that he was ſlain, but of the bloud which he ſhed before his death. Cartw. on Matth. 26.

The Fathers used wine tempered with water, because in the place where they lived the wine was so strong. Matth. 26.29. Mark 14.24. t De Euchar. l.4.c.10,11.

This was an ancient custom, Justin Martyr makes mention of it, and Cyprian pleads for it; yet Jansenius doth ingenuously confesse, that there are evident testimonies of Scripture for wine, but none for water, though Bellarmine t impudently affirm, That there is as much proof for the one as the other, viz. Tradition for both, Scriptures for neither, and labours violently to wrest the plain places another way, yet at length he doth not deny, but it is Calix Domini, though there be no water in it, and he tels us, that the greater part of Divines hold, that water is not de necessitate Sacramenti. Jansenius saith, it appears by Scripture, though not expresly, yet implicitely, that there was water in the Cup which Christ consecrated, because there was wine in it, and in those hot Countreys they used not to drink meer wine, but allayed with water, this is an uncertain conjecture.

Cartw.

The beginning of it was lawfull, because there were in the Church that could not bear the strength of the wines, especially in the East and South countreys where the wines are strong.

Dr Reynolds Medita. on the Lords Supper, chap. 14.

The Christians in the Primitive Church had a custom of mixing water with the wine (as there came water and bloud out of Christs side) which however it might have a natural reason because of the heat of the countrey to correct the heat of the wine with water, yet it was by them used for a mystical sense to expresse the mixture (whereof this Sacrament is an effectual instrument) of all the people who have faith to receive it with Christs bloud, water being by the holy Ghost interpreted for people and Nations.

Eucratitæ & Aquarii temperantiæ prætexta vinum refugiebant, ac loco ejus aquam solam in hoc Sacramento usurpabant. Vossius in Thesibus. Augustin. Aquarii ex hoc appellati sunt, quòd aquam offerunt in poculo Sacramenti, non illud quod omnis Ecclesia. cap. 64. de Hæres.

The Aquarii used only water in the Eucharist in pretence of Sobriety, which Cyprian confuted only upon this ground, viz. That this practice was not warranted by the Institution of Christ, wherein Christ ordained wine and not water only.

In the Scripture we find the fruit of the Vine, but not water, therefore we account not that to be of any necessity in the celebration of the Lords Supper. In the Primitive Church water was used first of Sobriety, then of Ceremony, at length it grew to be counted of necessity. Dr Fulk against Martin.

Mr Ball in his Catechism saith, Because the Sacrament is a spiritual feast, therefore the finest Bread and purest wine is of most laudable use. Spiritus tenues, clari & puri ex bono vino potius, quam quovis alio potu generantur. Hinc est quod Theologi in contemplatione circa sacrosancta Dominicæ passionis mysteria, optima cum primis vina deligunt, quæ ob id ipsum jam passim, etiam Theologica nominantur. Renatus Moreav. in Schol. Salern. De conservanda Valetudine, cap. 73. Vide plura ibid.

Of the Consecration of the Elements.

The words of Institution are delivered, Matth. 26.26. Mark 14.22. Luke 22.19 1 Cor. 11.23.

Christs actions in the administration of the Sacrament were four:

Matth. 26.26. Verbum à Christo usurpatum est λαμβάνειν, quod propriè de manu accipitur: Unde & λαβὴ Græcis dicitur, id quo res manu prehenditur, ut ansa, manubrium. Wendelini Christiana Theol. Systema Maius. l. 1. c. 23.

First, He took Bread into his hand, and so likewise Wine, which signifies the purpose of God decreeing to give Jesus Christ in the flesh to work out our Redemption.

Secondly, Christ blessed it, and gave thanks, and sanctified it to that use by his own prayer to God, which as it is effective to make the elements now fit for a spiritual use, so it is significative, representing the action of God, wherein he fitted Christs manhood in the fulnesse of his Spirit and power, to work out our Redemption.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, He brake the Bread, which ſignifies the action of God ſatisfying his juſtice in Chriſts manhood for the ſins of all the Elect by breaking him in the Garden, and on the Croſſe eſpecially, beſides other ſufferings throughout his life, and by rending his ſoul and body aſunder.

Fourthly, Chriſt gave it to every one, ſignifying that God doth offer particularly to every one, and give to the Elect the body and bloud of Chriſt, with the merit of it, and power to blot out their ſins, and free them more and more from the ſame.

Conſecratio vocabulum eſt ſolenne ſignificans id quod fit, ut hæc ſigna viſibilia quæ per ſe profana ſunt, & aliena à myſteriis religioſis, ſint Sacramenta corporis & ſanguinis Chriſti, ſive ſint corpus & ſanguis Chriſti. Conſecrationem diſtinguimus à forma Sacramenti, ut totum à parte, conſecrationem dicimus eſſe in tota Chriſti inſtitutione. Ut quicquid ille fecerit ad eum pertinens, noſq; juſſerit facere, eo ipſo conſecrari credamus Sacramentum, ne excluſis quidem Eccleſiæ precibus, quibus id ipſum à Deo poſtulatur fieri, quod ea inſtitutione continetur. Chamier. de Sac. l. 1. c. 5. Credunt Patres panem corpus Chriſti, & vinum ſanguinem Chriſti fieri. 1. Vi ſermonis Domini Jeſu. 2. Omnipotentia verbi. 3. A Sacerdote inviſibili. 4. Operatione, ſanctificatione, perfectione, & ſuperventu Spiritus Sancti & gratiæ cœleſtis. 5. Conſecratione, invocatione, & prece. Jonſtoni Syntagma de commun. vet. Eccleſ. cap. 3.

The Text ſaith of the Bread, He bleſſed it, and of the Cup, When he had given thanks. By the which word Bleſſing he implieth a conſecration of this Sacrament. The Papiſts attribute it to the repetition of theſe words, Hoc eſt enim corpus meum, For this is my Body, For this is my Blood. Hence they call them Verba operatoria, and ſay, There is ſuch a power and operation in them, that by them the Bread is turned into the body of Chriſt. The Elements of which the Sacrament is compoſed are natural, the things having nothing of themſelves whereby they may be Sacraments, and therefore an inſtitution is neceſſary, whereby they may be made what they are not. Now we ſay this is done by reciting the Inſtitution of Chriſt, and by prayer. Matth. 26. 26. In which action it muſt be ſuppoſed, That Chriſt had more than a general deſign of ſaying Grace, as ſome phraſe it; for thoſe elements as creatures ordained for common nutriment, viz. an intention of invocating Gods bleſſing upon them, in reference to thoſe ends, for which he meant by his Inſtitution to ſeparate and depute them. L'Eſtrange of the Liturgies, Chap. 7.

Mr Geree in his Catechiſm in reference to the Sacrament, ſaith, Conſecration conſiſts partly in Chriſts firſt Inſtitution of ſuch Elements for ſuch uſe, partly in the Miniſters declaring Chriſts Inſtitution, bleſſing God for our Redemption, and theſe ſeals of it, praying to him to bleſſe the Elements to that holy uſe to which himſelf hath ordained them.

The Papiſts order that the Prieſt ſhould reade all the other words with a loud voice, yet when he comes to this, For this is my body, he ſpeaks it ſecretly, ſo that none can hear him, and this is one of their reaſons, becauſe Chriſt prayed alone; What is this to the conſecration? Did he ſo at the Sacrament time?

2. The Miniſter or Prieſt ſpeaks it ſecretly, becauſe if he ſpeak aloud, he cannot be ſo intent to what is ſaid; why then do they command ſuch loud noiſe by their Organs in ſinging? How can they be attentive then?

3. Leaſt that form of words ſhould be vilified, Why not then in Baptiſm?

It is moſt expedient,

1. For the receiver to receive the Bread and Cup into his hand: This cuſtom (ſaith Voſſius) was long in the ancient Church. It is unſeemly to have the Bread put, or the Wine poured into the mouth by the Miniſter; this cuſtom came from a ſuperſtitious worſhipping of the ſigns.

2. The receiver muſt eat the Bread and drink the Wine, which ſignifies the particular applying of Jeſus Chriſt with all the benefits of his mediation to ones own ſoul.

Whether Chriſt be corporally preſent with the Symboles in the Euchariſt?

Si quis negaverit in ſanctiſſima Euchariſtia contineri verè, realiter ſubſtantialiter corpus & ſanguinem Chriſti Anathema ſit. Concil. Trid. Seſſ. 23. Can. 1. Nos dicimus Dominum Chriſtum corporaliter ſub ſpecie panis contineri. Greg. de Valent. Tom. 4. Diſp. 6. q. 3.

Corpore de Chriſti lis eſt, de ſanguine lis eſt.
Lis eſt de modo, non habitura modum.

Chriſt

Christ is ascended into Heaven, and he is contained there, Acts 3.21. till he come to Judgment, therefore he is not there under the shape of Bread and Wine See *Mat.*26.11. John 16.7. Acts 3.21.

2. All the circumstances about the first Institution of the Sacrament do declare, that Christ was not bodily there, especially Christ eating and drinking of it himself, which Cloppenburg [a], Peter du Moulin [b], and Dr Featley [c] hold, urging Matth. 26.29. & Mark 14.25. for that purpose. Those words (say they) necessarily imply, that before he uttered them he had drunk of the Cup which he gave to them. Aquinas [d] also holds this, and the Fathers likewise, saith Peter du Moulin.

[a] Compend. Socin. confutat. cap. 10. Vide plura ibid.

[b] Of the Eucharist, chap. 6. pag. 68, 260. and chap. 11. pag. 141.

[c] Strictura in Lyndomastigem concerning the seven Sacraments.

[d] Parte tertia Quæst. 81. Art. 1,

The nature of the action (saith Peter du Moulin in the place last quoted) required that Christ should communicate to shew the communion he had with us, as also he did partake of our Baptism, Matth. 3.16. from whence cometh the custome of the Church, that the Pastor first communicates, and the people afterwards.

We say that Christs body is in the Sacrament really, but spiritually; The Papists say it is there really, but spiritually. For so Bellarmine is bold to say, that the word may be allowed in this Question, Where now is the difference? Here, by (spiritually) they mean present after the manner a spirit: by (spiritually) we mean, present to our spirits only, by blessing and grace. Dr Jer Taylors Collection of Polemical and Moral Discourses of the reall presence of Christ in the holy Sacrament.

When the publick Authority of this Land was for the Papists, subscription was not urged upon such violent and bloudy terms unto any Articles of their Religion, as unto that of the real presence. Dr Jack. Epist. to the Reader.

The same Christ was not visibly at the Table and spake, and yet invisibly under the Bread and Wine, he did not eat and drink himself.

The end of the Sacrament is a remembrance of Christs death, Do this in remembrance of me, and You shew forth his death till he come. Now how can there be any remembring of him when he is present?

His corporal presence and eating is made unprofitable, John 6. though Christ said, His flesh was meat indeed, yet he did not mean that it should be eaten and drunk corporally: The flesh profiteth nothing, but his words are Spirit and Life.

Our union and conjunction with Christ is inward and spiritual, which consists in Faith and Love; it is true, we are united to his body, but not after a bodily manner.

It is against reason and sense:

We believe Christ to be present spiritually in the hearts of the Communicants, sacramentally in the Elements, but not corporally.

Qui transubstantiationem damnavit Lutherus optimè, tamen inauxit consubstantiationem non benè, & ab hoc non laudabili initio, Brentius ejus Discipulus ad ubiquitatem delatus est, pessimè. Anabaptista in oppositum lapsi extremum, signa sunt imaginati vacua & inania, quasi nudas professionis tesseras Christianis & Infidelibus distinguendis. Chamierus lib 10. De Eucharistia, cap. 7.

Real is, 1. Opposed to that which is imaginary, and importeth as much as truly.

2. To that which is meerly figurative and barely representative, and importeth as much as effectually.

3. To that which is spiritual, and importeth as much as corporally or materially.

The presence of Christ in the Sacrament is real in the two former acceptions of real, but not in the last, for he is truly there present and effectually, though not carnally or locally. Dr Featleys Transubstantiation Exploded.

Really

Really and corporally are not all one, that which is ſpiritually preſent is really preſent, unleſſe we will ſay that a Spirit is nothing. The bloud of Chriſt is really preſent in Baptiſm to the waſhing away of ſinne. Chriſt is really preſent to the faith of every true believer, even out of the Sacrament. Downs Defence againſt the Reply of M. N.

We deny that Chriſt is ſo preſent in the Sacrament under the forms of Bread and Wine, as that whoſoever receive the Sacrament, do truly receive Chriſt himſelf.

The Papiſts ſay, Chriſts natural body is preſent; we, that the merit and vertue of his body broken upon the Croſs, and of his bloud ſhed upon the Croſſe is preſent to the believing ſoul in the Sacrament. The body of the Sun is in Heaven in its ſphere locally and circumſcriptively, but the beams are on the earth. And when the Sun beams ſhine into our houſe, we ſay, here's the Sun, though it be the beams not the body of the Sun. So the Scripture ſaith of the Sacrament, This is my body; Chriſt aſcended up into Heaven: as for that exception, he is viſibly in Heaven, but inviſibly here, it anſwereth not thoſe teſtimonies which prove he is ſo there that he is not here, Matth. 28. 6. q.d. he could not be in both places at once, an angelical argument. Aquinas ſaith, It is not poſſible by any miracle, that the body of Chriſt ſhould be locally in many places at once, becauſe it includeth a contradiction by making it not one, for one is that which is not divided from it ſelf. It is impoſſible (ſay the Papiſts) according to the courſe of nature, but not abſolutely impoſſible, by divine miracle it may be.

Hyperbolicum præſentiæ modum exigunt curioſi homines, quem Scriptura nuſquam oſtendit. Calvin. Inſtit. l. 4. c. 17.

Corpus unum non poteſt eſſe in pluribus locis ſimul, non enim repletivè, at is modus proprius eſt Deitati qua omnia cum replet, tamen neque ſpatium occupat, cum ſit Spiritus: neque terminis ullis definitur, cum ſit infinita: nec definitivè, quia quacunque ſic ſunt in uno loco non poſſunt eſſe alibi. Nec tertiò occupativè, quia quicquid ita eſt in loco eſt etiam definitivè, ac proinde non poteſt eſſe alibi. Chamierus Tom. 2. lib. 6. cap. 11. Scholaſtici tametſi contendunt ineptiſſimè, idem corpus poſſe eſſe in uno loco modo ſuo naturali ſeu circumſcriptivo, & in multis aliis modo Sacramentali: negant tamen poſſe eſſe modo naturali vel per divinam potentiam abſolutam ſimul in pluribus locis. Ames. Bellarm. Enerv. Tom. 3. cap. 12.

Conſubſtantiation overthroweth the grounds,

Firſt, Of reaſon, the body of one and the ſame man cannot be preſent in many places all together, but muſt needs remain in ſome definite and certain place.

Secondly, Religion, becauſe Chriſt was taken up into Heaven, there to abide till the end of the world.

It was above a hundred years before Tranſubſtantiation.

They did adore Chriſt as co-exiſtent with the Bread, which perhaps gave occaſion to Averroes to ſay, That Chriſtians did adore their God, and then eat him. Averroes his reſolution was, Quandoquidem Chriſtiani adorant quod comedunt, ſit anima mea cum Philoſophis.

Lutherus principio ad Sacramenta converſus, videbat non eſſe ſeptem, putabat tamen adhuc plura eſſe quam duo; poſt in catechiſmo majore, re diligentius expenſa, duo tantum ſtatuit. In negotio cœnæ primo videbatur illi, licet panis ineſſet, tamen corpus Domini una etiam per Conſubſtantiationem adeſſe; ſed paulò ante mortem agens cum Philippo Melanchthone, fatetur in negotio cœnæ nimium eſſe factum. Rainold. de lib. Apoc. Tom. 10. Prælect. 4. Nobis unicum ſolatium in eo Sacramento eſt præſentia corporis Chriſti in ſacrâ cœnâ. Sed negamus eſſe id, in, cum, ſub pane; niſi ille modus loquendi ſic accipiatur, quòd ſit in, cum, ſub pane ut ſigno corporis in cœna præſentis: ita enim unionis & pacis ſtudio haud difficulter etiam in eum modum loquendi porrò condeſcendemus. Vedel. Rationale Theolog. l. 3. c. 20.

The quarrel between Luther and Zuinglius was about Chriſts preſence in the Sacrament, which Luther held to be by way of Conſubſtantiation, which how it could be unleſſe the body of Chriſt were every where, Zuinglius and others could not conceive. Luther being preſſed therewith, he and his followers not being able to avoid it, maintained that alſo. But how? By reaſon of the hypoſtatical Union and Conjunction thereof with the Word. For the Word being every where, and the Humane Nature being no where ſevered from it, How can it be, ſay they, but every Certe fundi Eccleſiaſtici unica calamitas eſt ubiquitas & oralitas. Wendel. Exercit. Theol. Exercit. 54.

Proper ſubſiſtence of its own, and in it ſelf it hath none, only the ſubſiſtence of the Son of God is communicated unto it, which is infinite and unlimited. Ex hoc loco Cinglio-Calviniani, canes impuriſſimi, blaſphemè argumentantur, corpus Chriſti in S. cœna ore corporis non accipi, niſi (inquiunt) ſtatuere velimus & illud in alvum abire, & (increpet te Dominus Satan) per ſeceſſum ejici. Bertram. in Mat. 15.

where?

where? The humanity of Chriſt according to its Eſſence or natural Being is contained in one place, but according to its ſubſiſtence or perſonal being may rightly be ſaid to be every where. Zanch. Miſc. Jud. de Diſſid. Cœn. Dom. and Dr Field, l. 3 c. 35. of the Church.

The Papiſts conſtant Doctrine is, That in worſhipping the Sacrament they ſhould give unto it Latriæ cultum qui vero Deo debetur, as the Council of Trent hath determined, that kind of ſervice which is due to the true God, determining their worſhip in that very thing which the Prieſt doth hold betwixt his hands.

This is artolatry, an idolatrous worſhip of the bread, becauſe they adore the hoſt even as the very Perſon of the Sonne of God. It is true, they conceive it not bread, but the body of Chriſt, yet that doth not free them from bread-worſhip, for then if the Heathen did take his ſtone to be a god, it did free him from Idolatry. Hence, ſaith a * Jeſuite, If the Bread be not turned into the body of Chriſt, we are the greateſt and worſt Idolaters that ever were, as upon my ſoul, ſaith he, it is not.

* Coſter. Dr Burgeſſe of kneeling, pag. 113.

Deus non juſſit vel adorari Sacramentum, vel etiam nos adorare coram Sacramento, vel in Sacramento. Nolumus tamen atro carbone notare eos, qui nobiſcum alias ſentientes, & eandem fidem profitentes, neque Sacramentis divinos honores deferre intendentes, ea flexis genibus accipiunt, adoratione ad inſtitutorem directa, & ad eum qui ſe nobis communicat. Quia tamen mos ille ab iis profluxit, qui ex Sacramento Deum fecerunt, quod directè adorant, multo magis nobis conſuetudo probatur eorum, qui quantum poſſunt abſtinent ab iis ex quibus vel ſuſpicior, vel occaſio idololatriæ, vel ſuperſtitionis orti poſſet. Riveti Inſtruct. Prapar. ad cœnam Domini, cap. 13. Vide plura ibid.

Adoration is not commanded in the Inſtitution of it.

2. Nothing is to be worſhipt with Divine Worſhip but God.

Of Tranſubſtantiation.

The Queſtion is not, Whether the Symbols be changed into Chriſts body and bloud, or no? For it is granted on all ſides: But whether this converſion be ſacramental and figurative? Or whether it be natural and bodily? Nor is it, whether Chriſt be really taken, but whether he be taken in a ſpiritual or in a natural manner? We ſay the converſion is figurative, myſterious and ſacramental; they ſay, it is proper, natural and corporal? We affirm that Chriſt is really taken by faith, by the Spirit, to all real effects of his paſſion; they ſay he is taken by the mouth. Dr J. Taylor of the real preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament. See more there.

Tranſubſtantiation is, Commentum quo nihil vidit orbis abſurdius. Chamier.

The word Tranſubſtantiation (as the Papiſts grant) was not uſed of any ancient Fathers, and it was not ſo named among them before the Council of Laterane, which was 1215 years after. Vocabulum ante Concilium Lateranenſe inauditum.

Biſhop Morton of the Maſſe, lib. 3. cap. 1. Sect. 3.

The Jeſuites (which call Proteſtants in ſcorn Tropiſts, becauſe they defend a tropical and figurative ſenſe in that ſpeech of Chriſt, This is my body) are yet themſelves conſtrained to acknowledge ſix tropes in the words of Chriſts Inſtitution of this Sacrament, a figure in the word Bread, another in Eat, a third in Given, a fourth in Shed, a fifth in Cup, a ſixth in Teſtament. B. Morton of the Maſſe, l. 6. c. 2. Sect. 4.

Si quis negaverit mirabilem & Angelicam converſionem totius ſubſtantiæ panis & vini in corpus & ſanguinem, Anathema ſit. Concil. Trident. Can. 3. Nullum exemplum dari poteſt, vel ordinarium, vel extra ordinem per miraculum, totalis converſionis alicujus ſubſtantiæ individualis, in aliam ſubſtantiam individualem præexiſtentem & manentem. Hac igitur tranſubſtantiatio (qua res eſt ordinatiæ procurationis ſecundum Pontificios) tale quid eſt, quale ſimile nihil Deus unquam per hominem aut Angelum effecit, id eſt, commentum ſine exemplo. Ames. Bellarm. Enervat. Tomo tertio cap. 3. Cùm conſentiant omnes adverſarij ad finem prolationis verborum, Hoc eſt corpus meum, corpus Chriſti filii præſens ſub accidentibus panis, quatuorque verba (ſecundum illos id teſtantia) aptiſſima eſſe affirment, ubi tamen devenitur ad particularem eorum expoſitionem, quid ſignificet verbum eſt, quid Corpus, ac præſertim pro nomen Hoc, inter ſe valde diſſentiunt, nec modo diſſentiunt, ſed etiam acerrime diſceptant, unoq; alterius ſententiam deſtruente ad inſtar ædificatorum turris Babel. Albertin. De Sacr. Euchar. l. 1. c. 8. Vide plura ibid. & c. 9.

See Mr Carw. Anſw. to the Marqueſſe of Worceſt. Reply, from pag. 122, to 146. and Gages New Survey of the Weſt-Indies, chap. 21.

The Papiſts to avoid one ſign run into many ſtrange ones; by the demonſtrative Hoc, they underſtand they know not what, neither this Body nor this Bread, but an

an individuum vagum, ſomething contained under the accidents of Bread, which when the Prieſt ſaith Hoc, it is Bread; but when he hath muttered out Meum, it is Chriſts body. By the copulative Eſt, is, they underſtand either ſhall be as ſoon as the words are ſpoken, or is converted unto; or by Body, they underſtand ſuch a Body as indeed is no body, without extenſion of parts, without faculty, ſenſe or motion.

The very term Matth. 26.26. manifeſtly evinceth the truth, This, What? That which he took, viz. Bread, therefore it muſt needs be a figurative ſpeech, 1 Cor. 10.4.

The Apoſtle ſpeaking of the Bread being conſecrated, ſtill calleth it [a] Bread, ſix times at leaſt. He calleth it indeed the Bread, and this Bread, to ſhew the difference of it from other Bread, and the excellency of it above other bread, but yet bread. Therefore it is ſtill bread of the ſame ſubſtance as other bread is, though in reſpect of uſe incomparably better. And ſo for the Wine, Mat. 26 29. after conſecration, he ſaith, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the Vine He doth not ſay in general, Of the fruit of the Vine, but particularly with a demonſtrative pronoun, Of this fruit of the Vine, viz. that which he had bleſt and delivered to the Apoſtles.

Tranſubſtantiation was firſt occaſioned by the unwary ſpeeches [b] of Damaſcene and Theophylact, they were hyperbolical in their expreſſions about the real preſence of Chriſt in the Sacrament.

Some of the ancient Fathers ſpeaking of the ſacramental Elements after conſecration, being then ſet apart from common uſe, called it a mutation, ſaying, that the Elements were changed into another nature, but withall they expreſſe their meaning to be, not the changing of their ſubſtance, but their uſe, from being common Bread and Wine to become ſacramental or ſacred. 1 Cor. 11.27. The Apoſtle diſtinguiſheth theſe four things, Bread, Body, Cup and Bloud, the Bread and Wine therefore receive no other change, but that of uſe, ſignification and relation, 1 Cor. 10.16. He diſtinguiſheth alſo Bread from the Body; Bread is the ſubject of the propoſition, and the Communion of his Body the predicate.

There hath been more written upon thoſe ſix ſyllables, but five in Engliſh, This is my Body, then would contain a juſt and large Commentary upon the whole Bible. Mr Vines of the Sacr. of the L. Sup. c. 1.

Nous deffions tous nos adverſaires de produire un ſeul Docteur, mille ans apres Jeſus Chriſt, qui ait dit que ce pronom Cecy demonſtre autre choſe: que du pain. Troſieme Partie De La Conference Entre Bochart. & Veron. Ch. 24. De La Cene.

Reaſons againſt Tranſubſtantiation:

Firſt, Then Chriſt muſt hold himſelf in his own hands, eat and drink his own

[a] 1 Cor 10.16. & 11. 26,27. Fictitia illa tranſubſtantiatio pro qua hodiè acrius depugnant quam pro omnibus aliis fidei ſuæ capitibus. Calv. Inſtit. l. 4. c. 17. Vide plura ibid.

[b] Dr Fulk on 1 Cor. 11.24. The Lamb dreſt in the Paſchal Supper, and ſet upon the Table as a feſtival ſacrifice, was wont to be called the Body of the Paſſover, to which phraſe Chriſt may probably allude, when he ſaith, This is my Body. Dr Hammond on Mat. 26.26. See more there. Atterſol hath twenty ſix reaſons againſt Tranſubſtantiation. l 3. of the Sacrament, c. 5. See Dr Primroſe on the Sacrament, p. 127. to 158. and Dr Halls No peace with Rome, pag. 65. Dr Featleys Vertum. Rom. pag. 63. Dr Chaloner on Matth. 13.27. p. 279, to 283. Dr Jer. Taylor in his Treatiſe of the real preſence of Chriſt in the holy Sacrament, proves Tranſubſtantiation to be againſt Scripture, Reaſon, Senſe and Tradition. Sect. 2,3,4,5,6,7,8,9,10,11,12. To make bread to be fleſh while it is bread, is a contradiction in it ſelf, and as much as to ſay, Bread is no bread, and therefore impoſſible. Dr Morton. The preſence of Gods omnipotency hath been anciently Aſylum hæreticorum, the Sanctuary of hereticks. Caſaub. Exercit. 3. Vide Amyraut. de l'elevation de la Foy & de l'abaiſement de la raiſon, ch 3,4,8,9,10. & Theſ Theol. Salmur. part 3. de tranſ. Vobis (ut multi ſentiunt) præſtitiſſet, vertiginoſam hanc de Tranſubſtantiatione opinionem non attigiſſe. Nam ex quo Helenam hanc veſtram in Chriſtianiſmum advexiſtis, tot vos, tot Scholam veſtram quotidiè exercent, tam ſpinoſæ, tam nodoſæ quæſtiones (tam id autem triſti ſucceſſu:) De quantitate Chriſti ſub pane, An ſit ubi Chriſtus ſub ſuâ, an ſub panis quantitate? Et ſi ſub ſuâ, an ſub quantitate ſine modo quantitativo? An ſit ibi Chriſti ſubſtantia ſub accedentibus, remotâ tamen inhærentiâ? contra Logicam. In iis verbis, Quod pro vobis frangitur, cùm frangi jam corpus non poſſit, quippe nec pati: an frangi non ſit ibi verbum paſſivum, contra Grammaticam? An ex accidentibus mures nutriantur, an ex iis vermes generentur? contra Phyſicam? Epiſc. Andr ad Bellarm. Apol. Reſp. c. 1. Vide plura ibid. Nullum exemplum dari poteſt, ubi omnes ſenſus omnium hominum (organo, medio, objecto bene diſpoſito) adhibitis omnibus mediis explorandi veritatem, circa objectum ſenſibile fallatur. 2. Nullum Sacramentum inſtituit ita Deus ut fundamentum ſuam habeat in ſenſuum deluſione. Ames-Bellarm Enerv. Tom. 3. de Tranſub. See Moulins Anatomie de la Meſſe l. 1 ch. 18. & Albertins Book, De Sacramento Euchariſtiæ per tot. Mr Baxter againſt Popery, p. 153, to 161. and Broch. De cœna Domin. c. 9. Quæſt. 4. & Carpent. Decad. 1. Exerc. 1. and nine Reaſons againſt Tranſubſtantiation in Bradfords Sermon of the Lords Supper: He ſaith there, It is an errour: whereupon in a manner, dependeth all Popery. Quarentibus quibuſdam, cùm nos etiam in ſpirituali communione Chriſti excuſanda, ad omnipotentiam Dei confugiamus, cur non liceret ipſis eadem uti ſolutione, millies reſponſum eſt, ſi audire vellent, non ad evertendos ſed ſtabiliendos fidei articulos, omnipotentiam ſuam Deum exerere. Urſini Status controverſiæ De cœna Domini c. 3. Vide plura ibid.

fleſh and bloud; for the Papiſts ſay, He did eat the Sacrament with his Diſciples.

Secondly, Chriſt muſt needs have two Bodies, the one broken and having the bloud ſeparated from it in the Cup, the other whole and having the bloud in it which holds the Cup.

Thirdly, Chriſts bloud then ſhould be ſhed before his crucifying, and ſo a propitiatory Sacrifice offered to God before the Sacrifice of Chriſt upon the Croſſe.

Fourthly, One body ſhould be now in a thouſand places at a time.

Fifthly, A true body ſhould be without bigneſſe, void of all dimenſions. Corpus non quantum.

Sixthly, Accidents ſhould be without a ſubject, but Ariſtotle ſaith, Accidents are entis rather than entia. Accidentis eſſe eſt ineſſe, the very eſſence of an Accident as it is an Accident, is to be in ſome ſubject. Vide Aquin. 1a, 1æ. Queſt. 90. Art. 2. See Moulins Anatomie De La Meſſe, lib. 1. ch. 19 & Albertin. De Sacramento Euchariſtiæ l. 1. c. 20.

Seventhly, The ſame thing ſhould be and not be at the ſame time, or ſhould be before it was.

Eighthly, This is an inhumane thing; none eat mans fleſh but Cannibals.

Ninthly, Then the ſenſes ſhould be deceived, we ſee bread, we ſmell bread, we touch bread, and taſte bread. Vide Albertinum De Sacramento Euchariſtiæ, l. 1. cap. 18.

Tenthly, There is no alteration in the ſign of Baptiſm, and there is the ſame uſe of thh ſign of the Lords Supper.

That the bodily ſubſtance of Bread and Wine is not aboliſhed, nor ceaſeth in this Sacrament, by vertue of the conſecration of it, the manifeſt words of the Scripture, whereſoever there is mention of this Sacrament, are evidence enough, Mark 14. 24,25. Luke 22. 17,20. 1 Cor. 10. 16,17,18. & 11. 23,32. Mr Thorndike of the Laws of the Church, *ch.*2. See *ch.*3,4.

It hath been argued, that, if we deny Tranſubſtantiation or Conſubſtantiation as contradictory to reaſon, there can be no cauſe why we ſhould beleeve the Trinity, which every man ſees to be no leſſe contradictory to humane reaſon, than either of both, I do no wayes admit this conſequence, becauſe it is evident, that the nature of bodily ſubſtance is farre better comprehended by mans underſtanding, than the incomprehenſible nature of God, which, it is impoſſible to apprehend any thing of, but under the reſemblance of ſomething belonging to ſenſible ſubſtance. Id. ibid. ch. 3.

Matth. 26. 26. Jeſus took bread, and bleſſed, and brake it, and gave it to his Diſciples, and ſaid, Take, Eat, This is my Body. See v 29. What our Saviour took, that he bleſſed; what he bleſſed that he brake; what he brake, he delivered to the Diſciples; what he delivered to them, of that he ſaid, This is my Body But it was Bread that he took, the Evangeliſt ſo ſaith, and Bread therefore that he bleſſed, Bread that he brake, Bread that he delivered, and Bread conſequently of which he ſaid, This is my Body.

In illis orationibus Petra erat Chriſtus, Semen erat verbum Dei, ego ſum oſtium,

The univerſal cuſtom of the Scripture in all places where like kind of ſpeaking is uſed, plainly leads us to a figure, ſee 1 Cor. 10.4. The Hebrews wanting a proper word to ſet forth that which we mean by ſignifying, do ever inſtead of that uſe the Verbum ſubſtantivum eſt interpretandum pro ſignificat aut figurat Salmeron Tom 9. Tract 15. Rogant Dominum quæ eſſet Parabola jam dicta, hoc eſt, quid illa ſignificaret. Eſt enim hic ponitur pro ſignificat, quemadmodum & ibi, Petra autem erat Chriſtus. Janſen concord c.51. Reprobata Cornelio à Lapide nuſſet audacia Maldonati, negantis verbum ſubſtantivum aut Latinè, aut Græcè, aut Ebraicè, aut ulla proſus in lingua aut apud ullum autorem pro verbo ſignificat accipi ſolere, aut etiam poſſe, hominesque imperitiſſimos qui id dicunt, eſſe affirmantis. Sic inſolentiſſimus Hiſpanus in Mat. 25. 26. Rivet. in c. 45 Gen. Manifeſtum eſt, eſt accipi ordinariè pro ſignificat: ut amare eſt diligere, id eſt, ſignificat. Petra erat Chriſtus, id eſt, in Petra erat ſignificans Chriſtum. Septem boves ſunt ſeptem anni, Gen. 41. Semen eſt verbum Dei, Mat. 12. Hoc eſt fœdus meum, id eſt, ſignificat. Chamier. de Euchar. l. 10. c 7. Vide Mornaum de ſac. Euch. l. 4. c 3,4,5,6,7,8,9. La verité de la Religion Reformee. Par. de Croi. p. 543,544,545, &c. Nullus Patrum affirmat ſubſtantiam panis, effici ſubſtantiam corporis Chriſti, proſer vel unum, & monſtrum illud admittam & amplectar Tranſubſtantiarionis. Loquuntur ſcio Patres eo modo, ut dicant tranſmutari, tranſire, tranſelementari, in aliam naturam cedere, & quæ ſunt alia ejus generis. Bontac. Orig. Eccleſ. Tom. prior. part. poſter. p. 264.

word

word is. When Joseph had heard Pharaohs dream, he saith, The seven ears of good corn are seven years of plenty, and the seven thin ears seven years of dearth, Gen 41. 26 27. so the seven fat kine are seven years, that is, by way of signification and representation. So Ezek 37. 11. & Dan. 2. 38. & 7. 17. whence it comes that in the New Testament where the manner of speaking by the Hebrews is imitated, the word is in matter of signs, is used for the word signifie. So in the Parable, That which is sowed upon stony ground is he that heareth; and after, The seed is the Word, Luk. 8. 11. the Reapers, the Angels; so, I am the Vine, Rev. 17. 12. The ten Kings are ten horns. Hagar is mount Sinai in Arabia. 2. The Apostle Paul clearly goes before us in this interpretation, for he saith, The bread which we break is the communion of the body of Christ, because it was appointed for a certain means of making us partakers of his body.

Our Saviour said long before, viz. Joh. 6. 63. That the flesh profiteth nothing, that is, the flesh by eating of it profits nothing, for in no other sense can it be said to profit nothing. See 2 Cor. 5. 16, 17.

Their Legend tels us, that some Boyes getting by heart, and pronouncing the words of Consecration, Hoc est Corpus meum, turned all the Bakers bread in the street into flesh.

In the Book of the Conformities of S^t Francis, there is a miracle recorded for Transubstantiation; that on a time Frier Francis saying Masse, did find a Spider in the Chalice, which he would not cast out, but drink it up with the bloud. Afterward rubbing his thigh and scratching where it itched, the Spider came whole out of his thigh without any harm to either. See the world of wonders, part 2. ch. 35.

It is a spiritual eating because it is wrought by the aid of the holy Ghost, and this mystery is perceived by faith, which the Spirit of God works in our minds, and this excellent nourishment belongs to a spiritual and eternal life. Sadeel de Spirit. manducat. corp. Christ. c. 1.

A conjunction includes a presence, and as the conjunction between Christ and us is spiritual, so also is his presence.

Of the keeping of the Eucharist.

We grant that in antiquity there was a custom of breaking of some pieces of Bread which was blest, and sending of it home to some that were sick, or to other Parishes as a testimony of Communion; but this is nothing to that reservation of it in the pix, and to carry it up and down for Adoration. Now we say contrary, that the Sacraments are no longer than the meer use of them, that they are not absolute and permanent things, but relative and transient. Now that all such reservation is unlawfull, appeareth,

1. By the expresse precept even for the eating as well as the taking of it, so that if it be not taken it is no Sacrament.

2. A promise is not to be separated from the precept; now the sacramental promise is only to the Bread in the use of it, Take, Eat, This is my Body, that is, this Bread so blest, so distributed, so eaten.

3. The Bread is called a Body in reference to us; now as a stone which is a Bound-mark, removed remaineth a stone, but ceaseth to be a Bound-mark: So here.

4. As the water in Baptism is not an actual Sacrament till sprinkled; so neither Bread and Wine unlesse used.

In Ecclesia veteri reservabatur Eucharist a & ad agrotum deferebatur: sed utrumque fiebat, ut sumeretur & manducaretur. At in Romana Ecclesia circumgestatio fit ad ostentationem & pompam, aut ad incendia, tempestates, aliaq; mala averruncanda; etiam in adoratione ejus peculiaris cultus est institutus: quæ commenta veteris Ecclesiæ sapientiam fugerunt. Voss. in Thesibus. Sacramentum non est, nisi quatenus institutio Domini in eo observatur, sed Dominus instituit usum præsentem Eucharistiæ, non Hostiam in pixide conservandam: Ergo Hostia in pixide conservata, non est Sacramentum. Jussit Dominus Discipulos suos facere quod fecerunt. Jussit nos etiam facere quod prima cœna factum est. Jussit manducationem conjungi cum benedictione, fractione, & acceptione. Nihil de reservatione jussit, aut judicavit. Amesius Bellarm. Enervat. Tomo tertio cap. 14.

The reserving of the Eucharist which the primitive Christians used for the benefit of those who either by sickness or persecutions were withheld from the meetings of Dr Reynolds medit. on the L. Supper, c. 12.

of the Christians (as in those dayes saith Justin Martyr many were) is by the Papists now turned into an idolatrous circumgestation, that at the sight of the Bread the people might direct unto it the worship that is due only to the person whose passion it represents.

Of the Circumgestation of the Sacrament, and the Popish Processions.

An nova negabunt Romani in Eucharistiæ Sacramento, elevationem, ostensionem, adorationem, circumgestationem, detractionem calicis? Quam aliena hæc omnia ab ipsa Christi institutione & primæva Ecclesiæ praxi? Recentissima quidem ista, & ab his quinq; aut sex sæculis introducta. Salmas. Apparat. ad Primatum Papæ. p. 190.

For the solemn Circumgestation of this Sacrament, Cassander hath confessed, that seeing it is but a late invention, it may well be omitted without any detriment unto the Church, yea with emolument.

Polyd. Virgil. de rerum Invent. l. 6. c. 11.

Some among our Adversaries have noted these pompous processions to have proceeded from an imitation of Heathenish Rites and Ceremonies, and to be most ridiculous and sottish as they use them.

The ancient Fathers concealed heretofore, as carefully as they could, the matter and the Rites used in the celebration of the holy Sacrament, the Papists shew it now openly, and carry it publickly abroad every day through the streets, and sometimes also go in solemn Procession with it: which custom of theirs is of very late standing among Christians, and heretofore would have been accounted rather prophane and unlawfull. Daillé of the right use of the Fathers, lib. 2. cap. 6.

Chap. X.

Of the Masse.

See Book of Martyrs, vol. 3. pag. 1. about the word Masse, and Mayern in Philol. Sac. and Drus. ad difficiliora loca Deut. 42.

THe Papists call the Lords Supper by this name, which implies horrible Idolatry. The Fathers using of the word was the occasion of that dangerous errour, if we would keep out the errour we must likewise keep out the name.

Their Masse is nothing like the Institution of Christ, nor used to that end for which he appointed his last Supper to be continued, but a meer shew with many Vide Casaub. Exercit. 6. Sect. 58. & Martynij Etymol. in voce missa. & Picherelli Dissertat. de missa. cap. 1. Maldonat. apud Mat. de miss. l. 1. c. 1. Sect. 2. It was called missa a Masse or sending (say the Papists) because an offering is sent to God by the Priest, or from sending of gifts to the Deacons for the publick use, rather from the dismissing of the people, either of the Catechumeni and Pœnitentes before the Sacrament, or after that was done, of the whole people and Congregation in these words, Ite, missa est. The phrase missam facere, (used in some of the Fathers) doth not signifie to say the Popish Masse, but to dismisse some out of the Assembly. The Assembly of the Church, being first by a Synecdoche called in Latine missa, from the dismissing of it which it ends with, (as in Greek συναξις, in Latine Collecta, for the Assembling of it,) the word missa in Latine, as συναξις in Greek, is now come to signifie: the Sacrament of the Eucharist which came after the dismissing of Learners, (but went afore the dismissing of believers,) being the principal office for which the Assemblies of the Church were held. Mr Thorndike of the Covenant of Grace, chap. 2. Ad missam vetus, quod nomen tantùm non adoratur à Papistis, à nobis non lubenter usurpatur, cum quia non à Scriptura, ut quidem à prima antiquitate, tum quia nihil habeat, quo pars ulla aut efficacia Sacramenti denotetur: ac ne apud Papistas quidem Sacramento proprium sit. Missam Latinum nomen Latina Etymologia dictum à mittendo nemo dubitat, origo nominis est à dimittendo populo: quod ita fiebat, primùm enim dimittebantur Catechumeni, & quibusdam, non liceret intereſſe ſacris myſterijs: poſtea iterum univerſus populus omnibus perfectis Chamier. de Sac. l. 5. c. 2. See Peter du Moulins Anatomie de la Messe in 15. Books, and about the name his 3d Book and 2d Chapter. Vide Wendelini Christ. Theol. Systema Maius, l. 1. c. 23. p. 1005, 1006, 1007, 1008, 1009, 1010, 1011, 1012, 1013, 1014. Matthew Bochart a French Minister hath written also a Treatise in French against the Masse. He speaks of the word Masse in the first Chapter of the first Part.

ridicu'ous

ridiculous geſtures, motions, actions, with Lamps burning in the day, Copes and Garments in imitation of the Jews, which make it unlike the primitive ſimplicity of Chriſtians, which was without them many hundreds of years. Mr Tombes his Romaniſm Diſcuſſed, Artic. 6. Sect. 5.

The very name of Maſſe is againſt private Maſſe, and quite overthrows it. For miſſa is as much as miſſio, or dimiſſio, à dimittendis Catechumenis antequam Sacrificium inchoaretur. It ſignifies as much as dimiſſion or ſending away of ſuch out of the Church, as were not prepared and fit to receive, before the Sacrament began to be celebrated. Probabiliſſima eſt Bellarm. eorum ſententia qui miſſam dici volunt à miſſione ſeu dimiſſione populi. D. Prid. de miſſa Sacrificio. Rhenanus in Tertul. l. 4. adverſ. Marcion.

Picherellus and Sadeel think it is a Latine word, which ſignifies as much as miſſio, ſo remiſſa is uſed for remiſſion both by Tertullian and Cyprian.

Chemnitius in parte ſecunda Exam. derives it from the Chaldaical ſignification of the word miſſa, for the ſufficiency of the Papiſts is from the Maſſe. Una & potiſſima quæſtura regni Pontificij eſt canponatio & nundinatio privatarum miſſarum. Chemnit. ubi ſupra, Vide Druſ. in Deut. 6. 16. Some diſpute hard to derive the word Maſſe from an Hebrew root, either Gnaſah to do, and ſometimes to ſacrifice, or from Miſbeach an Altar; others fetch it from Mas a Tribute. But the learned Papiſts, as Bellarmine and others, do wholly reject this, for this reaſon, if it had been an Hebrew word, the Apoſtles and Grecians afterward would have retained it, as they have done Amen, Halelujah, and Hoſaunah, but they did not.

Dr Tho. Taylor ſaith, The word is neither Hebrew, Greek nor Latine, not taken from any other language of any Nation, but raked out of the bottomleſſe pit without all ſignification, unleſſe it agree with our Engliſh word (Maſſe) that is, an heap, a lump, a chaos of blaſphemies and abominations. With him agrees Br Abbot in his Mirrour of Popiſh Subtilties.

Quæſitum toto orbe diu vox ante Latina
Anne Paleſtina, an Græcula, Miſſa foret;
Quæſivere diu docti: nec quærere ceſſant
Inventum in Latio, in Græcia, & in Syria.
Inventum, ac commentum, & nunquam rite repertum
In terra, aut Cœlo, miſſane miſſa Erebo?
Andreæ Melvini Epigramata.

The Maſſe is like a beggars cloak patcht up with many pieces, whereof ſome were put in at one time, ſome at another: one Pope puts in one patch, another another: and it was not fully patcht up as now it is, till twelve hundred years after Chriſt. Acts and Monum. p. 1274.

Chriſt hath ordained the holy Communion in remembrance of himſelf. Men do neither retain any remembrance of Chriſt nor yet Communion, but have changed all the whole matter into a gay ſhew, and almoſt a ſtage-play. Paul ſaith, That Chriſt hath once entred into the holy place, and hath with one only Sacrifice, and with one oblation made perfect all things: Men ſay, that they can ſacrifice Chriſt himſelf again every day in very deed, and that in infinite places. Br Jewel on 1 Pet. 4. 11.

For the thing it ſelf.

It is a work in which the Prieſt in whiſpering over thoſe five words, Hoc eſt enim Corpus meum, makes Chriſt of the Bread (as the Papiſts ſuppoſe) and offers him to the Father, as a Sacrifice for the expiating of the ſinnes of the living and the dead. Firſt, As ſoon as he hath rehearſed the words of conſecration, and by the uttering of them made his Maker, as they conceive, he preſently bowing his knees adores the hoſt conſecrated by him, and likewiſe the Cup. After he hath worſhipped it he riſeth up, and turning from the people with great reverence, lifts up the Hoſt with both his hands over his head, and ſhews it to the peoples view, that they may worſhip it as Chriſt himſelf, and in the like manner after alſo the Cup. While the Sacrament is elevated a little Bell rings, by which as by a ſign given, the people with great veneration worſhip the Sacrament as Chriſt himſelf.

See Maſter Cartw. Rejoynder, page 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295. By the reſolved Doctrine and definition of the Romane Church, a Maſſe is the principal part, if not the whole worſhip of God, the Maſſe only is ſtrictly commanded, and hearing of Gods Word Preached, is but conditionally adviſed. Craſhaw his Fiſcus Papalis, chap. 2.

We

Down. Diatrib. de Antichriſto, l. 5. c. 3. Genebrardus celeberrimus ille Ebraicarum literarum apud Pariſienſes Doctor primam miſſam ab Apoſtolo Jacobo ipſo die Pentecoſtes cantatam aſſerit. Amama Antibarb. Bibl. Patres Euchariſtiam Sacrificij nomine appellarunt, Primo, Quia Euchariſtia eſt gratiarum actio qua Sacrificium eſt Deo gratiſſimum. Secundo, Quoniam qui ad Euchariſtiam rectè accedunt ſe totos Deo in Sacrificium offerunt. Tertio, Quia memoriam illius ſummi & diviniſſimi Sacrificij recolit, quod Chriſtus in cruce fecit. Whitak. ad Sanderi. Demonſt. reſp.

We acknowledge that in the Sacrament there is a ſolemn praiſing of God which ſometimes is called a Sacrifice, as likewiſe that the believers did offer up charitable alms which ſometimes is called a Sacrifice, as likewiſe that there is a repreſentation and commemoration of Chriſt who was our Sacrifice: But to hold that here by the Prieſt is offered up again the body and blood of Chriſt, though after an unbloody manner, is a falſhood, and many that ſwear by the Maſſe know not the horrible impiety of it. They hold that the offering up of this to God is efficacious for the quick and dead, and thoſe in Purgatory.

In ſuch ſort as the ancient Fathers did call this action a Sacrifice by a Metonymy, becauſe it is a remembrance of the onely Sacrifice of Chriſts death, and by a Synecdoche, becauſe the Sacrifice of praiſe is offered to God for the redemption of the world in the celebration of this action, in this ſort we do not deny the term of Sacrifice. Fulk on Matth. 26. 6.

Les Antiens taſchans d' attirer à la foi Chreſtienne les Payens, qui eſtimoyent qu' il ny a point de religion ſans ſacrifice, & les Juifs, deſquels la religion ſous l' Ancien Teſtament Conſiſtoit principalement en ſacrifice ont appellé la ſaincte Cene ſacrifice, & la table ſacree autel, & ceux qui ſervent à ceſte table Levites. Anatomie de la Meſſe Par Pierre du Moulin, lib. 1. chap. 35.

The Fathers oft term the Lords Supper a Sacrifice, partly in regard of the ſpiritual Sacrifice therein offered; and partly becauſe it is a lively repreſentation and commemoration of Chriſts Sacrifice once offered on the Croſſe; and partly alſo becauſe it ſucceedeth in the room of the Paſſeover, and thoſe other Sacrifices that in the Old Teſtament were offered. But that they ever dreamed of any other Sacrifice diſtinct from the Sacrament, no Papiſt ſhall ever be able to prove. Mr Gatak. of Tranſub. p. 113.

In Sacrificiis offerimus, in Sacramentis accipimus. Beza.

A Sacrifice and a Sacrament cannot ſtand together, for by a Sacrifice ſomething is offered to God, but by a Sacrament ſomething is received from God. Therefore the Paſchal Lamb was not a Sacrifice, as the offering up of Bullocks and Lambs, but only a Sacrament and ſign of our redemption by Chriſt, Heb. 7. 10. there needs no other expiatory oblation, Why ſhould I offer then to expiate ſin when it is expiated already?

Si quis dixerit non offerri verum & propriè ſacrificium, aut non eſſe propitiatorium, Anathema ſit. Concil. Trident Seſſ. 33. Can. 1. & 3.

The Papiſts ſay, It is a Sacrifice properly ſo called. The whole eſſence of a Sacrifice depends upon the inſtitution of Chriſt, ſay Suarez and Salmeron, if any Sacrifice had been inſtituted, it muſt have appeared by ſome word or act of Chriſt, neither of which can be found, 1 Cor. 11. after the words, Do this, Paul ver. 25. immediately expounds what was meant by doing, expreſſing the acts of doing, As often as you ſhall eat, which was ſpoken generally to all the faithful in Corinth, not to the ſacrificing Prieſts. They prove it from Virgils Calf, Cum faciam vitulâ pro frugibus ipſe venito.

See Janſen Concord. c. 13. p. 904. And Rhemiſts on Luk. 22. 20.

Neque enim Patres Euchariſtiam cum ſacrificium appellant, reale ac verum propriéq; ſic dictum ſacrificium propitiatorium intelligunt, ſed ob alias cauſas viſtimam, ſacrificium, oblationem, appellant. Vedel. exercit. in Ignat. Epiſt. ad Smyrnenſes, c. 4. Ibi etiam ſeptem cauſas aſſignat, ob quas Euchariſtia ſacrificium vocatur à Patribus.

Vide Cameron. Myroth. ad Heb. 9. 26.

Object. Almoſt all things are by the Law purged by blood: and without ſhedding of blood is no remiſſion, Heb. 9 22. But in the Sacrificce of the Maſſe there is no effuſion of blood, therefore there is no remiſſion made for ſins, and by conſequent it is not a propitiatory Sacrifice.

1. Nothing therein is properly ſacrificed, not the Bread and Wine, for they are tranſubſtantiated (ſay they) before the Sacrifice; not Chriſts body, for no living thing can properly be ſacrificed unleſſe it be ſlain, but Chriſt being once dead dieth no more.

2. The

2. The Papiſts ſay, it is an external Sacrament, yet Chriſt there appears to no ſenſe, but is concealed under the accidents of Bread and Wine.

3. They ſay it is Sacrificium incruentum, an unbloody Sacrifice, yet Chriſts blood is there truely and really ſhed and drunk by the Communicants with the mouth.

4. It is a perfect and all-ſufficient Sacrifice, yet they repeat it daily.

Propitiatory is either that which pacifieth the wrath of God, and pleaſeth him by its own virtue and efficacy, which is only the Sacrifice of Chriſt in his own ſelf, or elſe by Gods gracious acceptance and indulgence, Rom. 12. 1. Heb. 13. 16. Phil. 4. 18. Heb. 9, & 10. the Apoſtle from the iteration of Sacrifices doth conclude the inſufficiency of them, for if Chriſt be offered again and again, he is an imperfect Sacrifice, and we need ſomething elſe. The Apoſtle alſo in thoſe Chapters doth often inculcate the once offering and once oblation, by Chriſt offering up of himſelf once, we are free from the guilt of our ſins, Heb. 3. 9 The entrance of Chriſt into the heavens is compared with the old High-prieſts entrance into the holieſt of holies, and therefore as none but the High-prieſt might go in there, ſo none could offer this Sacrifice but Chriſt himſelf, and withall it implyeth that to the perfection of Chriſts Sacrifice is required his continual appearing in heaven for us.

D. Featley. Si occiſio ſit de eſſentia ſacrificii, illud quod appellant incruentum ſacrificium, nihil aliud erit quam repræſentatio veri & realis ſacrificii; ac proinde haud reale ſacrificium. Nam ſi ſæpe offerat ſeipſum, Chriſtus, oportet eum ſæpe pati, cum oblatio Chriſti à paſſione ejus ſine morte diſtincta, ſit figmentum ſibi ipſi contradictorium. Epiſc. Daven. Determ. Quæſt. 13. Hoc & poſtrema ſua voce, & inter ultimos Spiritus edita Chriſtus ſignificavit, quum dixit, Conſummatum eſt Solemus extremas morientium voces pro oraculo obſervare. Chriſtus moriens teſtatur uno ſuo ſacrificio perfectum eſſe & impletum quicquid in ſalutem noſtram erat. Calvin. Inſtit. lib. 4. cap. 18.

Mal. 1. 11. uſeth the word offering, which was properly a part of the ſervice uſed in the Church in his time, to ſignifie the Goſpel-ſervice which ſucceeds in the New Teſtament, and to expreſſe it more particularly, he cals it a pure offering, no longer carnal and groſſe, but wholly ſpiritual.

Irenæus by the pure offering in Mal. 1. 11. underſtandeth the Euchariſt now in uſe, and many of the Antients ſuppoſe it reſembled in that action of Melchiſedech, Gen. 14. 18. And they call it the Chriſtians Sacrifice ſucceeding in the room of the Jewiſh Sacrifices; the Sacrifice, I ſay, of the Euchariſt, not their Sacrifice of the Maſſe. Mr Gatak. of Tranſub.

La Foy fondee ſur les ſainctes Eſcritures. Par Daillé 2. partie. Vide plura ibid. Cum in Scriptura ſacra preces & eleemoſynæ, & erumnæ piorum, & quælibet ſanctæ actiones ſacrificia appellentur, facilè patimur ſacram cœnam vocari ſacrificium: Nec imus inficias quin hoc ſenſu ſit ſacrificium. Quo ſenſu veteres eam vocaverint ſacrificium, hinc liquet, quod paſſim ſacram cœnam vocant Euchariſtiam & Sacrificium Euchariſticum, id eſt actionis gratiarum, ſeu ſacrificium laudis, ut habetur in Canone Miſſæ. Molinæi Hyperaſpiſt. l. 2. c. 5.

The pure prayers and worſhip of God that ſhould be in all Churches under the Goſpel, as Tertullian, Euſebius, Jerom and Auguſtine expound it. Mr Shep. Reply to Mr Ball. Vide Grot. in loc.

There was a Controverſie of late years fomented by ſome through Popiſh compliances, That the Lords Supper might be ſtiled a Sacrifice, the Table an Altar, which produced in the diſcuſſion of it (as all Controverſies do in the iſſue ſome further truth) the diſcovery of this true deciſion of it: That it was not a ſacrifice, but a feaſt after and upon Chriſts ſacrificing of himſelf. Participatio Sacrificij, as Tertullian cals it, a ſacrificial feaſt commemorating and confirming all thoſe ends for which the only true and proper Sacrifice of Chriſt was offered up.

Mr T. Goodwins Chriſt the univerſal Peace-maker, par. 2. Sect. 2.

Georg. di Ataide a Portugal Divine in the Councel of Trent, made a Speech to prove, That it could not be demonſtrated out of the Scripture, that this Sacrament is a Sacrifice, but onely out of the ancient Fathers: and he anſwered all the Arguments to the contrary ſo ſtrongly, and the Proteſtants Arguments afterwards ſo weakly, that the moſt intelligent were of opinion, that he did not ſatisfie himſelf. Mr Patricks Menſa Myſtica.

Private Maſſing, or the alone communicating of the Prieſt, is not according

1. To the inſtitution of Chriſt, ſaying in the plural to them, Drink ye all of this.

2. To the practice of the Apoſtles, Act. 2. 46.

The

The Councel of Trent ſaith, We commend the Prieſts communicating alone, which is as good as conferring or covenanting alone.

The Apoſtle 1 Cor. 11 28. requires that every man firſt examine himſelf, and then eat, and he teſtifies verſ. 23. That what he delivered he received alſo of the Lord. And ſo we know that the Lord himſelf gave unto all which were preſent with him, and ſuffered none only to be by and look on.

2. It is againſt the nature of the Sacrament, for it is a ſpiritual Feaſt.

3. It is againſt the name of the Sacrament, for it is commonly called a Communion, which name ſeems to be fetched from 1 Cor. 10. 16, 17. but what Communion is there when one alone receiveth and not them which are preſent with him.

4. Againſt the Canon of the Maſſe, the Prieſt ever ſpeaks in the Plural number.

Tolle traditiones incertas, & Apocryphas, actum erit de miſſis ſolitarijs & angularibus: de ſacris ignotis; precibus exoticis & ignoratis, corporali præſentia, manducatione orali in Eucharirtia: & illa monſtrorum hydra, puncto nimirum cum omnibus dimenſionibus, Tranſubſtantiatione. Montac. Antidiat. Certiſſimum eſt ſacram cœnam non niſi in Communi aliquo fidelium & communicantium cœtu eſſe uſurpandum: quo ſpectant varia nomina quibus deſignatur tum in Scripturis, tum in Patribus. Appellatur enim Synaxis, Cœna Domini, Communicatio. Vide 1 Cor. 10. 17. & 11, 18, 20, 22. Hinc jure merito improbata nobis miſſæ privatæ & abſque Communicantibus, quæ ſunt in uſu apud Pontificios Quæſt. aliquot Theol. Deciſio Authore Mareſſo, q. 3.

D. Featleys Strictura in Lyndomaſtigem p. 43.

See Dr Willet on Exo. 29. 14. controverſ.

The words of our Saviour, Take, Eate, this is my body, Matth. 26. 26. were ſpoken to all future Communicants, as well as to the Apoſtles then preſent, for they contain in them an inſtitution of a Sacrament to be celebrated in all Chriſtian Churches, till the end of the world, as the Apoſtle teacheth us from 1 Cor. 11. from verſ. 23, to 28. eſpecially at the 26. verſ. as often as ye eat this Bread, and drink this Cup, ye ſhew the Lords death till he come. This the Apoſtles in their perſons could not fulfill, for they lived not till Chriſts ſecond coming: they muſt of neceſſity therefore be extended to all that in ſucceeding ages ſhould be preſent at the Lords Supper, who are as much bound by this precept of Chriſt to communicate with the Miniſter, or diſpenſer of the Sacrament, as the Apoſtles were to communicate with Chriſt himſelf, when he firſt in his own perſon adminiſtred it; otherwiſe if the precepts, Take, Eate, Do this in remembrance of me, appertained to the Apoſtles only, What warrant hath any Miniſter now to conſecrate the elements or adminiſter the Sacrament? Nay, what command have any faithfull at all to receive the Communion?

See Dr Hal's no peace with Rome, p. 658. In Eccleſia Romana communi proverbio dicitur, Campana bene palſata dimidium miſſæ eſſe peractum. Domitius Calderinus ne miſſam quidem volebat audire, cum quum ab amicis eò duceretur, dixiſſe ſertur, eamus ad communem errorem.

The Sacrifice of the Maſſe being idolatrous, it is not lawfull to be preſent at it. 1 Cor. 10. 20. In their Maſſe-book they call the Croſſe it ſelf our only hope.

Thoſe Texts are againſt going to Maſſe, Pſal. 26. 4. 1 Cor. 10. 7, 14. 2 Cor. 6. 14, 16, 17. 1 Joh. 5. 21.

Many will ſay, They keep their hearts to God, though they be preſent at Maſſe. This is as if a man ſhould catch his wife in the act of adultery, and ſhe apologize, that the other had her body, but he her heart, 1 Cor. 6. 27. Rom. 11. 4. Gods people have their knees for God as well as their hearts, 1 King. 19. Origen ſaid, he could not bend the knees of his body to God, and the knees of his heart to Satan. See Bp Daven. Determ. 7. Rev. 7. 3. They have a mark in the fore-head, becauſe they muſt not be aſhamed of their profeſſion, that mark is obvious to all the world. Our Saviour by this policy might have over-reacht the Devil himſelf, who required only external bowing, keeping his heart ſtill unto God, Mat. 4. 10. Vide Wendilini Chriſtiana Theol. Syſtema maius, l. 1. c. 24 p. 1089, 1090.

Lodov. Viv. de veritate fidei Chriſtiana, l. 2. c. 7. Nobiliſſimus Cunradus à Rechenberg, ſuperſtitionum oſor, de miſſatici ſacrificij non obſcurus hoſtis, qui aliquando viſitatoribus, ut miſſam celebraret, hortantibus, reſpondit: Si verè Chriſtus eſt in hoſtia, indignus ſum qui illum intuear, indignior qui Patri offeram. Si non eſt in hoſtia, va mihi, ſi panem pro Deo populo adorandum propono. Scultet. Annal. Dec. 1 p. 76.

In ſome caſe a man may be preſent at Maſſe and not ſin: As

1. When he is there by violent compulſion, this is not his ſin but theirs.

2. If in travil a man be in a fit place to ſee and obſerve their folly, ſo as he ſhews no reverence at all or approbation by bending his knee, uncovering his head, or otherwiſe.

King

King Edward the 6th would not ſuffer the Lady Mary to have Maſſe in her houſe. Foxes Vol. 2. p. 653.

Aderam ſed non adorarunt. Pet. Mart. D. Featleys Vertumnus Romanus. p. 18. Vide Grot. in Luc. 4. 27. See Down. Sum of Div. on the 1. Com.

The bowing of Naaman ſpoken of in 2 King. 5. 8. was genuflexio obſequij, not imitativa, a bowing to the King, not to the Idol.

2. Eliſha's words do not neceſſarily import an approbation or permiſſion of that which was propounded, but a meer form of malediction, as if he had ſaid in our language, Adieu or Farewell, or there may be an Enallage temporis very uſual in the Hebrew, and have relation to the time paſt.

Of private Receiving of the Lords Supper.

The Paſſeover was to be eaten in ſuch a Family, Exod. 12. 46. to ſignifie that the Church was then but a handfull or houſhold, in reſpect of the fulneſſe of the Gentiles which were to follow: but the Lords Supper was not to be eaten in a private ſeparated Family, but the Church was to come together, and to ſtay one for another, 1 Cor. 11. 33. that in the confluence of the people and publickneſſe of the action, the increaſe and multitude of the Church might be expreſſed.

Dr Reynolds Meditat. on the Lords Supper.

1 Cor. 11. 22. Paul oppoſeth the Congregation wherein the Lords Supper ſhould be taken, unto a private houſe, where men ſatisfie their hunger.

It is noted of a Chriſtian Jew, deſperately ſick of the Palſie, that he was with his bed carried to the place of Baptiſm.

Cartw. Reſt of the 2d Reply againſt Biſhop Whitgift, pag. 116, 119. He quotes there alſo P. Mart. on Rom. 6. Beza in his Queſtions of the Sac. 151.

The pureſt and beſt reformed Churches this day, in Savoy, Germany, France, and divers others, adminiſter the Sacraments only in the ordinary meetings.

In my judgement (ſaith Mr Cartwright) it is unmeet to adminiſter either of the Sacraments in private houſes, and it is leſſe tolerable in the holy Supper, which hath a ſpecial mark and repreſentation of brotherly Communion, more than Baptiſm.

Quid ſibi volunt appellationes cœna, συναξεις, Liturgia, niſi ſolùm ritè celebrari Sacramentum iſtud, cum in publico conventu in unum coactis adminiſtratur. Didoclav. Alt. Damaſc. c. 11.

It is a Queſtion (ſaith Wendeline Chriſt. Theol. Syſtem. Mai. l. 1. c. 23.) An ægrotis, qui publicis intereſſe cœtibus non poſſunt, privatim porrigenda ſit cœna. He ſubcribes to the affirmative opinion, certain conditions being uſed, which he there mentions. He alſo determines there that Queſtion, An duellam aggreſſuris porrigenda ſit ſacra cœna, and determines it negatively, if it be undertaken for private revenge.

The Neceſſity of the Euchariſt.

The adminiſtring of the Communion to Infants is a Rite as ancient as Cyprians time; and a Rite that did continue in the Church above 600 years.

Auguſtinus de peccat. merit. & remiſ. l. 1. c. 24. & 26. defendit, infantes non poſſe vitam ac ſalutem æternam conſequi, niſi Euchariſtiam participent, putans aquè obligari iſtius verbis Joh. 6. 35. ac iſtis, niſi quis natus fuerit, &c. Auguſtini & Innocentij primi ſententia ſexcentos circiter annos viguit in Eccleſia, Euchariſtiam etiam infantibus eſſe neceſſariam. Nunc apud omnes qui Chriſtianum nomen profitentur is mos obſolevit, qui obtinuerat tempore Cypriani, Auguſtini & Innocentij primi Romani Epiſcopi, ut Euchariſtiæ cum panem intinctum præberent infantibus, ut ex eorum ſcriptis apparet. Rivet. Inſtruct. Præpar. ad cœnam Dom. c. 6.

Inocentius the firſt and Auguſtine concluded a neceſſity of childrens receiving this Sacrament from John 6. 53. it may well conclude for thoſe which are of years, and capable of that myſtery, for though it ſpeaketh rather of a ſpiritual eating and drinking, yet becauſe the ſacramental is a ſign and pledge of that, and whoſoever doth indeed ſpiritually eat the fleſh of Chriſt, and drink his blood, cannot chooſe but alſo be willing and forward to do it ſacramentally when opportunity is offered, and there is no impediment to hinder.

Chriſt requireth in all perſons about to communicate three principal acts of reaſon, one is before, and two are at the time of receiving; The firſt is 1 Cor. 11. Let Biſhop Morton of the Maſſe, l. 1. c. 2. Sect. 11.

Si quis dixerit parvulos antequam ad annos diſcretionis pervenerint neceſſariam eſſe Euchariſtiæ Communionem, Anathema ſit. Concil. Trident. Sect. 3. Canon. 4.

a man examine himself; The second, to discern the Lords body; The third is, to remember the Lords death untill his coming again. All which three being acts of judgement cannot agree unto Infants, being persons void of judgment.

The Ends for which God hath instituted the Sacrament of the Lords Supper.

Johnston in his Syntagma de Communione Veteris Ecclesiæ, cap. 5. reckons up six principal ends, for which the Sacrament was instituted by Christ, and is celebrated by all Christians.

We should often renew our Covenant,

1. When we stand in need of some special favour, *Gen.*28.20,21.
2. When we look for special mercy.
3. When the state of Religion is collapsed, when our hearts are warping from God.
4. When we draw nigh to God in the use of the Seals.

We should call to mind affectionately and with application the occasion of Christs death, our sinnes, the cause of his death, Gods love, John 3. 16. the manner how, and the fruits of it, he is the propitiation for our sins through faith in his blood.

The ends are four:

First, The remembrance of the death of Christ, Luk. 22. 19. This do in remembrance of me, 1 Cor. 11. 26. See Gal. 3. 1.

1. Christs person, Phil. 3. 8, 9. we can have no interest in his benefits till we be united to him, Cant. 5. 10, to the end.
2. His actions and sufferings, 1 Cor. 11. 24.
3. The benefits that flow from these, all that Christ did and suffered, was not only satisfactory but meritorious, Luk. 22. 20.
4. With what affection Christ instituted this Sacrament, his bowels were then full of compassion to his people, it was the last solemn act of his life.

Secondly, It is a strengthning Ordinance, the Lord hath appointed it onely for those that are new-born, the elements there are our greatest matter of nourishment.

Thirdly, It is a sealing Ordinance, The New Testament in my blood.

Fourthly, An Ordinance of the Communion of Saints, whereby that should be renewed, all are one bread and one body, Joh. 6. 54. 1 Cor. 10. 16, 17.

The Lords Supper is

1. A badg of a Christians profession; As the Jews were distinguished from all Nations by Circumcision and the Passeover, Rom. 2. 26. Gen. 17. 11. compared with Rom. 4. 11. Matth. 26. 29. in the midst of the Supper Christ talks to his Disciples of a Kingdom, Luk. 22. 30. The receiving of the Sacrament rightly, is a receiving of Christ, and here the soul is united to her Lord, and this Feast is the Supper of the Lamb, and the Lamb is the Bridegroom, and every faithfull soul is the Bride; and all this is but the image of the state of blessednesse in heaven.
2. A seal of the Covenant of grace.
3. A Map of Heaven.
4. A means and pledge of our Communion with Christ, 1 Cor. 10. 16.

The Supper promotes this Communion:

1. Because it is a visible profession of our union with Christ.
2. A lively resemblance of it, meat and drink are converted into our substance, made a part of us, there are significant rites invested with a promise, and the assurance of a blessing.
3. It is a pledg and seal, Christ is there conveyed over to a believers use, This is my Body, a pledg whereby whole Christ with all his merits, and all that he is, is made over to a believer.
4. A means of exhibiting Christ to the soul. The Sacraments are Instrumenta

As the Eucharist is by the venerable Fathers of the Church called the Queen of Mysteries; so the worthy communicating in this is the most princely conjugation of Grace in the whole Roman of Christian Religion. Dr Taylors Epist. Dedicat. to his Worthy Communicant.

quadantenus

quadantenus moralia, they are accompanied with the power and virtue of the holy Ghost.

We must therefore receive the Sacrament:

To confirm our faith, Communion with Christ, and all saving graces in us, to keep in * remembrance the Lords death untill he come again, and to testifie our love one towards another.

* It must be a remembrance, 1. Of Faith, 1. In reference to remission of sinnes, Matth. 26. 22. 2. To sanctification, there is bread to strengthen the heart, and wine to make Firist, Our Faith. God is able and willing to save us:

1. Able to save to the utmost, look upon him 1. In his Natures, God-man, Man that he might suffer, God that he might satisfie. 2. In his Offices, he is a Prophet, Priest and King, Mat. 8. 2.

2. Willing, he died to save humble and penitent sinners, Rom. 8. 34. & Rom. 4. ult. if he spared not his life for us, he will spare nothing else. There is merit and grace enough in him (what ever my sins are or have been) for pardon of them and salvation.

' it chearful, Isa. 25. 6. 2. Of Love, Cant 1. 4. His love appeared in all his doings, sufferings. Psal. 6, 8. 4. Of Mourning; Psal. 42. 4. We should consider we had a hand in Christs death. 5. Of Thankfulnes, 1 Cor. 10. 16. it is called the Cup of blessing, and by the Ancients the Eucharist. 6. Of resolution to abhor those sins that formerly provoked God, Hos. 14. 3.

Secondly, Communion with Christ and all saving graces in us. Gods end in instituting of Ordinances is that we might meet him there, and have Communion with him, Exod. 20. 24. It should be our end in frequenting Ordinances. Gods eye is specially on our end in all religious duties, Matth. 11. 7, 8. Hosea 7. 14. Zech. 7. 5.

1. He pondereth the heart.

2. He judgeth of our actions by the end.

3. The answer will be suitable to our end. The Sacrament is the nearest and visiblest Communion with Christ on earth. We come to God by Christ in prayer, as our Intercessour, in the Word as our Teacher, in the Supper as the Master of the Feast, Rom. 6. 11.

Thirdly, To keep in remembrance the Lords death untill he come again, 1 Cor. 11. 26. that is,

1. The Doctrine of it; the bread represents his body, the wine his blood, we shew our belief of this Doctrine.

2. The Necessity of his death, we hereby testifie to God our consciences, fellow-Christians, the world, our need of Christ, as bread is necessary for our bodies.

3. The Sufficiency of Christs death, no two creatures are more universally sufficient for all sorts of men than bread and wine, therefore God made choice of them for this purpose.

4. The Application of Christs death; it is the receiving of bread and wine into our stomacks that nourisheth us, when the conscience beginneth to be oppressed with the hainousnesse of sin, and the fear of Gods vengeance, we should consider Christ bare the curse for our sins upon his body, that we might be delivered from them, and made perfect satisfaction to his Fathers justice, that he might be received into favour. Rom. 8. 34, 35.

Fourthly, To testifie our love one toward another, that I shall speak of afterward,

Of due Preparation for the Sacrament.

We must labour to perform all holy duties in a right manner. God requires preparation to every service, to the Sabbath, Sacrament.

See Secretary Morice in his cœna quasi KOINH Defence. Sect. 12. and Diatribe,

Some say the scope of the first Commandment is, that Jehovah alone must be our God whom we must worship; of the second, that he must be worshipt alone

Sect. 4. and Defence, Sect. 13. He saith confession of sins is as necessary as examination. He saith there also, for my part, I professe, I had rather, all to the Sacrament, than any to schism and separation.

with his own worſhip; of the third, that he muſt be worſhipt after his own manner.

Pſalm 26. 6. I will waſh my hands in innocency, and ſo will I compaſſe thine Altar. 1 Cor. 11. 28. The bread muſt be eaten, and the Cup drunk ſo.

God is more delighted with Adverbs than Nouns. None might approach to the holy things of God having his uncleanneſſe upon him. Nadab and Abihu through careleſneſſe, or haſt, brought common kitchin fire, whereas it ſhould have been heavenly fire, therefore God puniſht them.

God makes admirable promiſes to prayer, yet if we perform it not in that manner which God requires, he abhors it, *Pſal.*109.8. The Word is the power of God to convert and ſtrengthen us, 2 Cor. 2. 16. The Sacrament is a ſeal of the Covenant, yet if it be received unworthily it is a ſeal to a blank. Judas took the Paſſeover at leaſt, and the Devil entred into him. See 1 *Cor.*11.18,20. ſo the great duty of faſting if not rightly performed is unacceptable, Iſa. 14. 12. See 2 Chron. 25. 2. and prayer *Prov.*15,8.

Reaſons.

Bonum ex cauſa integra, malum ex quolibet defectu. Exod.12.3,6. Joh.19.14,31. and 11. 55.

1. Becauſe the Lord requires and orders the manner as well as the matter, our obedience muſt have Goſpel-perfection, ſincerity and integrity. In the Paſſeover the Lamb muſt be perfect, of the firſt year, the man and the Lamb prepared, and it offered in the appointed time. See Exod. 12. 9. 2 *Chron.*30.18,19. There were four dayes preparation for the Paſſeover, the Lords Supper both ſucceeds and exceeds it.

The Ark was to be carried on the Prieſts ſhoulders, 1 Chron. 15.13. God made a breach on them becauſe they ſought him not after the due order.

* That which is good per ſe groweth evil per accidens, if it be not duly circumſtantionatum. Cajet.in Thom. 1, 2. Queſt. 9. An alms, though good in it ſelf, yet groweth to be evil, if it be faulty in the circumſtances of due time, meaſure, manner, and of fit perſons upon whom it is beſtowed.

2. The manner of performing the duty is the moſt ſpiritual part of it, Non tantum conſiderandum eſt id quod agimus, ſed etiam quibus * circumſtantijs.

This ſhews the true cauſe why our attending upon God proves ſo unprofitable and uncomfortable to us, becauſe we reſt in the work done.

Secondly, We ſhould labour to perform the Ordinances aright, and that we may do ſo

The ſecond Covenant begins with acceptation of perſons and then of ſervices. There muſt be an acceptation of the perſon in reference to his ſervice as well as ſtate. The ſervice muſt

1. The perſon muſt be accepted, God had regard to Abel and his offering. Cains Sacrifice for the matter was as good as Abels, the perſon is only accepted in Chriſt, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well-pleaſed, in him with us.

2. Ever bring God the beſt thou haſt, in thy approaches to God bring the beſt devotion, affection, Curſed is the deceiver that hath a whole one, and brings a blemiſht one, Mal. be troubled thou canſt bring no better.

3. Come in faith, reſt upon the promiſe of Chriſt that thy ſervices ſhall be accepted, mingle faith with hearing, prayer.

4. Bring an humble Spirit. Let thy ſoul be rightly poſſeſt with the majeſty and holineſſe of that God to whom the duty is tendred, *Rev.*4.3. The Lord is to be lookt on as a King in his Glory, in his Throne; we have a principle of envy in us, whom we envy we undervalue.

1. Flow from a regenerate nature and act, John 3. 6. 2. Muſt be agreeable to a rule preſcribed. 3. The matter of it muſt be good: to give almes is good, but they muſt be of our own, Epheſ. 4. 28. 4. The means muſt be good, it was ill done of Jacob to get the bleſſing by a lye. 5. The ground of undertaking it muſt be good, Jer. 23. 21.

* The holy ends of ſervice are mainly three, 1. To pleaſe God, *Col.*1.5. 2. To glorifie him, John 17. 4. 3. To enjoy Communion with him, Heb. 10. 22.

5. Bring a right eſtimation of the excellency and ends * of the Ordinance, Iſai. 2.3. Hear and thy ſoul ſhall live: Take heed how you hear, with what meaſure you mete it ſhall be meaſured to you again, according to your diligence in the duty will God meaſure out his bleſſing.

6. There muſt be a ſerious meditation before-hand of the ſpiritual manner of performing the duty, *Heb.*12.28. Do not utter indigeſted prayers, a Miniſter ſhould ſpeak as the Oracles of God.

7. One

7. One ſhould labour to ſtir up the graces ſutable to the duty, and keep down the ſins oppoſite thereto, 1 Pet. 2. 1, 2. Jam. 1. 18, 19.

It is the duty of Chriſtians in a ſpecial manner to examine themſelves, that they may come prepared to the Lords Supper.

1 Cor. 11. 20. to the end, the Apoſtle proves the neceſſity of preparation, both from the nature of the Ordinance, or the inſtitution of it, the benefit that we reap by coming prepared, and the miſchief that befals thoſe that come unworthily, and the ſcandal given to others. Our hearts are deceitful, Jer. 17. 9. ſin is deceitful. Satan is full of Stratagems. The holy Ghoſt often warns us, Be not deceived, Let no man deceive you, James 1. 26. Of all deceit ſelf-deceit is the worſt.

One ſhould be equally prepared for the Lords Supper as for death. Sacramentum & articulus mortis æquiparantur, ſay the Caſuiſts. Downam. in loc.

Verſ. 28. Examine himſelf] δοκιμαζέτω is borrowed from civil affairs. For among the Athenians before any were admitted to any office or place of Magiſtracy, they were examined whether they were fit or no.

Try how thou ſtandeſt in the grace of God. Calvin.

The word is taken from the triers of gold, which is tried by the touchſtone; and in great caſes, is tryed by the fire. And in this ſenſe S^t Paul might relate to the preſent condition of the Chriſtians, who were often under a fiery trial. D^r Jeremy Taylors Worthy Communicant, chap. 2. Sect. 1.

Judge thy life exactly. Theod.

The word ſignifies to examine himſelf, ſo that he be approved, Rom. 14. 22. It is to judg righteous judgment after due examination. See v. 31. of 1 Cor. 11. Id. ibid.

Bring all things to the rule. Morton.

And ſo let him, &c] Do it in Chriſts manner, and to his end, Eccl. 5. 1. 1 Sam. 16. 5. 2 Chron. 35. 6. that is, let it be done ſo as it may be done throughly.

Hoc dicit quia per ſchiſmata proſtrata erat Eccleſia diſciplina.

The Church of Chriſt in all ages hath required ſolemn preparation for the Sacrament, as the Lyturgies and Directories of Reformed Churches ſhew.

Ne credite, inquit, etiamſi Eccleſiæ judicia eſſent, impune vos laturos contemptum myſteriorum. Grot.

In the Primitive Church there was rather an exceſſe than defect. Zanchy obſerves that it was the occaſion of inſtituting of Lent, becauſe of their coming to the Sacrament at Eaſter.

The ancient Fathers and primitive Chriſtians the night before they received ſate up and prayed, which they called their vigilia.

Examination is neceſſary, 1. That we may know our eſtate. 2. Our intereſt in Chriſt, Job 8. 20. We muſt try whether we have ſpiritual life before we look after ſpiritual nouriſhment. Theſe words 1 Cor. 11. 28. are ſpoken, 1. To thoſe who before were admitted to the Sacrament. 2. Examine himſelf eſpecially, not truſt in the examination of others, as Rom. 14. 12. We ſhould every day examine our ſelves, at the ſhutting in of the day, or at our going to bed; for ſo Baſil, Chryſoſtome, Auſten and others do adviſe.

Reaſons.

Firſt, Becauſe of God the Lord and Maſter of the Feaſt, Job 13. 11. Prov. 23. 1.

Obſerve five things in that Parable, Mat. 22.

1. The King comes to ſee his gueſts, God obſerves what hearts we come with into his preſence.

2. He makes diligent inquiry, takes notice of every one perſonally; there was but one without the wedding garment, and he could not lye hid.

3. Mark his impartiality, as ſoon as he ſpies him, he ſaith, Friend, how cameſt thou in hither?

4. How inexcuſable thoſe are that abuſe the Ordinance: when he was charged that had not the wedding garment, he was ſilent.

5. The rigour and indiſpenſableneſſe of the ſentence, v. 13.

The Jews had their preparation for the Sabbath and the Paſſeover, the Heathens waſht themſelves, and put on white garments before they performed their ſacred Rites, Heb. 10. 22.

Secondly, Becauſe of the Feaſt it ſelf, being heavenly and for the ſoul. At this Ordinance we have the higheſt and moſt ſolemn intercourſe with God that we have in any Ordinance, we renew not the Covenant in prayer and reading the Word.

Thirdly, Chriſts practice before his inſtitution doth teach as much, in that he waſhed his Diſciples feet, Joh. 13.

Fourthly, Our hearts are naturally prophane and wicked and indiſpoſed to this duty

Isai.1.16. Jer.17.9. No man can come so worthily as he ought, nor so fit as he ought, 2 Chron. 30. 18, 19, 20.21. The benefit of the Sacrament is pro ratione fidei communicantium. Origen. Tous les Theologiens Scholastiques sont d' accord que C' est assez d' avoir la conscience nette de peché mortel, & de l' avoir effacé par la Confession Sacramentalle : & que celuy qui S' est mis en cet estat, à satisfait au Commendement que Dieu nous fait par S. Paul, 1 Cor.11.28. Que chacun esprenue sa Conscience, avant que de se repaistre de cette viande celeste. Perav. de la Penitence publique. l.4.c.1. See l.5.c.1.

duty, if we were so perfectly holy as we should be, we should be ever ready for holy performances, but our hearts gather soil exceedingly. Purge out the old leaven before you come to eat Christ our Passeover that was sacrificed for us, 1 *Cor.*5.7. What he meaneth by the old leaven he telleth you in the next Verse, it is the leaven of malice especially that we must be carefull to purge out. According to our preparation will our profit be, if one come fitly it is a means of a great deal of good, Communion with God, sealing the Covenant, the Lord and we are made friends under seal, partaking the body and blood of Christ. It is like our evidences in the time of trial, when our Land is questioned, 2 Chron. 30. 3. our hope in the Resurrection lies in this, *Joh.*6.54. it seals our initiation and exhibits our growth in Christ. A Sermon will confirm but one particular grace, as patience or the like, but the Sacrament confirms the body of graces, and a man receives an influence of grace into his whole soul.

The Apostle in the Conclusion of the 1 Cor. 11. appoints this as a great remedy to prevent the judgment of God for their abuses about the Sacrament, to judg our selves,

1. Self-abasing will follow self-judging.
2. Justifying God, *Rom.*3.4.
3. Sin will be bitter to such an one.
4. He will not judg others, *Rom.*14.3,4.

A child of God may receive unworthily:

1. By coming carelesly and negligently to the Sacrament.
2. By coming in the guilt of any one sin unrepented of.

Quicquid recipitur recipitur ad modum recipientis. Corruptio optimi pessima : mors est malis, vita bonis. Aquin.

Fifthly, Because of the danger of coming unprepared, *Mat.*22.the Devil will enter into us as into Judas, Luk.22.3.compar'd with *Joh.*13.27.If we receive not Christ we receive Satan. Cyprian saith of the Lords Supper, Petro remedium, Judæ venenum, 1 Cor.11.17,27,29,36.

The staying away will not prevent the danger, Matth. 22. those that would not come to the Supper when invited, were destroyed as well as those that came without the wedding garment. Not to come is to starve our souls, to come unworthily is to poison them. Thou sinst against the Commandment of Christ, and his redeeming mercy.

An unworthy receiver is guilty of a threefold murder. 1. Of the murther of Christ. 2. Of his own soul, 1 Cor. v. 29. 3. Of his body, 1 *Cor.*11.30. The Church of Corinth was visited with some grievous mortality,

One is said to be guilty of the blood of Christ, 1 *Cor.*11.27. that is, a murtherer of Christ, divers wayes.

1. Christ is really present, though not corporally and locally, he looks upon the injury done to the Elements as done to himself, if one wrong insignia majestatis, the Kings Coin, or the like, it is Treason.

2. The same bent and disposition of heart that carries a man to prophane the Elements, would carry him to crucifie Christ : Christ is sacramentally united to the bread and wine.

3. In the Sacrament Christ is set forth as crucified, *Gal.*3.1. *Isai.*53.6. our sins crucified him ; he whose heart is not affected with such an object allows the deed of the Jews, is an accessary post factum.

4. There is a great resemblance between Judas his acts and yours.

1. He was a Disciple, so thou a Christian.

when the Apostle wrote this Epistle, some say the plague. Reus erit corporis & sanguinis Christi violati. Jerom. Par fecit quasi Christum trucidaret. Heb. 6. 6, 10, 19. Grotius. Dicitur teneri reus corporis Domini, qui illud est aspernatus, ut Apostolus ipse explicat, versu 29. Beza. Betray Christ as Judas. Theodoret. Guilty of murthering him as the Jewes. Aquinas. Judas betrayed, and the Jewes murthered Christs body when he was abased, we abuse it now he is glorified. 2. They did it ignorantly, we wilfully. This sinne of unworthy receiving is Peccatum contra remedium universale, contra medicinam animarum unicam, contra consolationem & vitam animarum.

2. The

2. He did betray Christ for a small matter, Zech. 11.10, 11. so thou prefetrest a base lust before him.

3. He betrayed him with a kisse, thou at the Sacrament. He betrayed him but once, thou often.

5. Thou wouldst make Christ die in vain, Christs death is usefull for satisfaction and sanctification; satisfaction of Gods wrath and sanctification of our hearts, we trample his blood under our feet as unholy, that is, common.

Vers. 29. He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation, or judgment to himself. Damnation if he be a reprobate and impenitent hypocrite, judgment though he be regenerate and a true believer. M^r Hilders.

God punisheth this sin in his children with inward and outward chastisements. The Lord abhors the like offence in the Sacrifices, Mal. 1.7.

There is an unworthinesse which ariseth from want of knowledg, and an unworthinesse which ariseth from weakenesse of knowledge, if thou hast a competent knowledg, God for Christs sake will accept of thee. So we may distinguish between a total want of grace, and weakenesse of grace, and between the regarding of sin and the having of it, if I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear my prayer, between an evil and a wounded conscience.

This worthy receiving is not a legal worthinesse, Secundum absolutam dignitatem, wherein one can plead that the thing he doth deserves the thing he would have, but an Evangelical worthinesse, Secundum divinam dignationem. The original of all our worthinesse is the change of the Covenant, Exod. 12. 43. Every man by nature is under the Covenant of works, he that was uncircumcised might not partake of the Jewish Passeover. Circumcision notes two things, 1. A change of the Covenant. 2. Sanctification of a mans nature, Col. 2. 11. He that was uncircumcised was out of Abrahams Covenant and unregenerate. This change of the Covenant comes by the change of your Head, your union with Christ, Gal. 3. ult. Corpus Christi non edunt qui de corpore Christi non sunt.

There is a double right to the Sacrament, 1. A Church-right, this visible Saintship gives, 2. A real-right, true Sonship gives this.

Id est, edendo ac bibendo damnationem in se accersit. Quod per se salutare est in venenum ipsi vertitur. Grot. Matth. 3. 8. Matth. 10. 11. and 22. 8. Ephes. 4. 1. Indignè, id est, aliter quam dignum est tanta mysteria tractari. Beza. Certain Donatists (saith Optatus lib. 2.) casting the holy Sacrament to dogs, were themselves devoured as dogs.

A Bachelour of Arts being Popishly affected, at the time of the Communion took the consecrated bread, and forbearing to eat it, conveyed and kept it closely for a time, and afterwards threw it over the wall of the Colledge, but a short time after, not enduring the torment of his guilty conscience, he threw himself headlong over the battlements of the Chappel, and some few hours after ended his life. Bishop Morton lib. 5. of the Masse, cap. 3. Sect. 6. He saith there he saw it, it was one Sir Booth of S^t John Colledge in Cambridge. Cyprian Serm. 5. de lapsis, hath two Stories of some that came to the Sacrament, and did latenter accipere, secretly receive, to one the Minister gave the bread, he took it, but it stuck in his throat, Gladium sibi sumens non cibum. The other took it, but when he came to eat it, he had ashes in his hand, Alius qui & ipse maculatus, sacrificio à sacerdote celebrato, partem cum cæteris ausus est latenter accipere, sanctum Domini edere, & contrectare non potuit, cinerem ferre se apertis manibus invenit. See Doctor Jer. Taylors Worthy Communicant, chap. 1. Sect. 4. pag. 84, 85.

Many men rush upon the Sacrament without due preparation:

1. Out of grosse ignorance, they know not the danger.
2. Horrible prophaneneſse.
3. From careleſneſse and supine negligence.
4. From soul-delusions.

There are good English Treatises on the Sacrament, written by D^r Preston, D^r Reynolds, D^r Jeremy Taylor, D^r Bolton, M^r Patricks Mensa Mystica, M^r Pemble, M^r Dike, Bradshew and Hildersam, M^r Lyford, M^r Vines, M^r Angell. M^r Dod.

There are also in one Volume in French a Recollection of many Preparations for the Sacrament.

Esprenue du fidele, pour se preparer à la Saincte Cene, Par Samuel Durant, Tableau du Sacrement de la Saincte Cene, Par Jean Mestrezat.

Prieres & Meditations pour se preparer à la Communion, Par Charles Drelincourt, and other little Tracts.

We must seriously examine our state, whether we be in the state of grace, 2 Cor. 12.5. The Children of God mistrust their own searching, and desire God to search them, them, Pſal. 139. lat. end. Thou muſt be a new creature cut off from the old ſtock, and ingraffed into a new, thou muſt cloſe with Chriſt and accept of him, and then virtue will come from him, Gal. 2. 20. Bread and Wine are turned into the ſubſtance.

When the Sacrament is received without due and diligent preparation, it is received unworthily, verſ. 28. The Apoſtle preſcribes this remedy againſt unworthy receiving; we ſhould diligently prepare for every religious duty. We ſhould be much in examination, the ſtrongeſt acts of grace are reflex acts, this is a Goſpel-command, therefore carries with it a Goſpel-promiſe, it is a duty at all times. Our examination is a ſetting our ſelves in the preſence of God, and paſſing ſentence on our wayes, as God would have us.

Wendeline in his Chriſtiana Theologiæ Syſtema maius, lib. 1. cap. 23. ſaith, That a twofold preparation is neceſſary, internal and external, both which he there handleth. The Papiſts rigidly exact of all that communicate a private and ſpecial confeſſion (which they call auricular, becauſe it is made into the Prieſts ears) under a commination of denying abſolution, if the very leaſt be concealed which they may remember.

In the Rubrick, none muſt be admitted to the Communion that cannot ſay the Catechiſm. Therefore Curates ſhould examine Communicants, and ſeclude them that be found wanting in knowledg. In the Biſhops Canons 61. Church-wardens ſhould be choſen by the Miniſter and People, they ſhould admoniſh and warn any (noble or unnoble) that offend others by adultery, drunkennеſſe, much ſwearing, bandery, uſury, and other wickedneſſe of life. And if they will not hear the Church-wardens, they ſhould ſhew the fault to the Parſon or Curate, who ſhould moſt ſharply and vehemently reprove them.

There is a twofold preparation required,

1. Habitual, ſtanding in the having of all ſuch diſpoſitions and graces as qualifie a man for the work of receiving, knowledg, faith and repentance, love, obedience, this is at our firſt converſion, Eph. 2. 10. & 6. 14.

2. Actual, or Ornamental, as Dr Taylor cals it, ſee his Worthy Communicant, Chap. 6. Sect. 1, 2, 3. which ſtands in the exciting and awakening of thoſe graces and diſpoſitions, and renewing of them when one is to receive. Both theſe muſt be in him that will receive in due order.

Actual preparation conſiſts

1. In the ſolemn ſequeſtration of a mans ſelf.
2. In examination of our ſins and graces.
3. In being humbled for our ſins, and in renewing and quickning the former graces.
4. In raiſing and ſtirring up in our ſelves ſtrong deſires after Chriſt.
5. In ſtirring up in our ſelves a ſtrong expectation of the benefit of the Sacrament.
6. In ſeeking God in ſpecial, and more than ordinary manner by prayer.

1. A ſolemn ſequeſtration of the ſoul from all other avocations whatſoever. There muſt be ſome fitting of a mans ſelf for the duty, from the time that a man hath notice of the Sacrament to be adminiſtred. But at the day before, a man ſhould at the leaſt toward the end of the day ſeparate himſelf from all other thoughts and occaſions, and minde wholly the work of preparation to the Sacrament.

This ſequeſtration of a mans ſelf ſtands in two things,

Gen. 22. 4, 5. Num. 9. 10, 13. Pſal. 103. 1.

1. In ſetting aſide all lawfull thoughts, occaſions and buſineſſes of our callings.

2. In ſumming, calling and collecting together all the powers and faculties of the ſoul to attend upon the buſineſſe now in hand.

Examination of our ſins and graces, of the multitude and hainouſneſſe of our ſins, of the truth of our graces, the growth of them, and our wants.

See in Mr Dod on the Sacrament a Catalogue of the ſinnes againſt every Commandment, and Doctor Wilkins his Diſcourſe concerning the gift of prayer, chap. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, & 13.

I ſhall lay down the rules of examination, and the things to be examined:

1. The

1. The rules whereby we are to examine our ſelves are the Law and Goſpel.
1. For finding out the number of our ſins.
2. The uſes of them for finding out the meaſure of them.

The things to be examined, are our ſins and graces.

I. Of the Rules.

The Law, it is

1. A broad Law, Pſal. 119. 96.
2. A ſpiritual Law, Rom. 7. 14.
3. A pure and holy Law, which condemns the leaſt impurity, Pſalm 19. 8, 9.
4. A fiery and terrible Law, Heb. 12. 20. Deut. 5. 25, 26.

The Summe of the Law is ſet down in the ten Commandments, and they are divided into two Tables.

The Commandments of the firſt Table are the four firſt, and they teach us our duty which we owe unto God immediately. The Commandments of the ſecond Table are the ſix laſt, and they teach us our duty which we owe unto our Neighbour.

God makes uſe of three Glaſſes to make us ſee our ſinnes in.

1. The Glaſſe of the Law.
2. Of Chriſts blood.
3. Of our own blood, Gen. 42. 20, 21.

Our duty to God is to love him with all our hearts, with all our ſtrength, with all our might, with all our thoughts. Our duty to our Neighbour is to love him as our ſelves both in ſoul and body, goods, good name, perſon, chaſtity.

The firſt Commandment is, Thou ſhalt have no other gods but me, or, before me.

The general duty of it is to make God my God, by yielding unto him all ſuch reſpect as appertaineth to him in regard of his being our Creator, and the firſt fountain of all being. This is a total and general ſubjection of the whole man unto him.

Duties required herein, are

1. Of Dependance, whereby we make God the chief and principal object of all the powers of our whole man, ſo far as they are capable of him.

The ſoul and all the powers of it muſt be given to God, and that with preheminence above all other things, and in all fulneſſe of perfection. So farre as he may be their object, God is not to be hated.

2. Of Conformity, whereby we order all our powers toward other things in that manner and meaſure that he doth require, and ſo become ſubject to that authority, power and command that he hath over us as a Creator.

1. Duties of Dependance.

We muſt ſet all the powers of the ſoul principally upon him.

1. The Underſtanding.
1. To know him as as he hath revealed himſelf in his Word and Works.
2. Faith to believe him, that is, to think things true, becauſe he ſaith them.
3. Humility, acknowledg him to be the firſt and beſt Eſſence, rightly diſcern the infinite diſtance and difference between him and us, and confeſſe his unſpeakable excellencies above us, and our moſt vile baſeneſſe in compariſon of him.

2. The will, willing his glory above all things, and then chooſing his favour and grace.

3. The imagination or thinking power, to be thinking of God more plentifully, largely, conſtantly, than of all other things.

4. Memory, perpetually to remember him, and to ſet him at my right hand, as David ſaith.

5. The affections of Love, Fear, Joy, Confidence, muſt be ſet upon him with all their ſtrength.

We ſhould alſo ſpeak more abundantly of God and his Excellencies, than of all things elſe beſides.

2. Duties of Conformity.

All the powers of man are to be ſet on other things according to his direction and appointment.

1. The Understanding.
   1. To know his will.
   2. To believe his promises and threats.
   3. To make use of the things we know.
   4. To esteem of heavenly things above earthly.

2. Conscience, or a knowing with God, in which 1. The acts it is to perform. 2. The rule which it must follow in performing those acts.

The acts it is to perform are two-fold:

1. In regard of our state to acquit and condemn.
2. In regard of our actions.
   I. Before the doing, if need be to admonish me to them.
   2. If sinful, to restrain me from them.
   3. If indifferent, to leave them to our wils.
   II. After the doing.
   1. To comfort in them if commanded.
   2. To check for them if forbidden.

The Rule which it must follow in performing these acts is the revealed will of God.

III. In the manner of doing.
   1. Sincerely, in checking for one sin as well as another.
   2. Tenderly, for a little thing.
   3. Effectually, so as not to suffer corruption to gain-say.
   4. Peaceably, to drive to God not from him.
3. The will to be flexible to Gods will.
   1. Obedience, a full purpose to do all that God requires, and leave all that he forbiddeth for his sake.
   2. For good things received, thankfulnesse; for evil, patience.
4. The thinking power, Memory, Speech, Senses and Affections to be exercised more abundantly on heavenly things than earthly.

The general Duty of the second Commandment is, to perform such solemn worship to God as he requires in his Word, to worship him in spirit and truth.

Divine Service must be according to Gods command:

1. For Matter of it, in regard
   1. Of the Person worshipped, the living God alone, conceived of in the pure apprehension of the mind, without any sensible representation.
   2. The parts or kinds of worship, that they be by him appointed; which are
      1. Ordinary, such as are to be done constantly, and in a setled course, which are three-fold,
         1. Publick.
         2. Private.
         3. Both publick and private.
         1. Publick.
            1. Preaching of the Word.
            2. The administration of the Sacraments, Baptism and the Lords Supper.
         2. Private
            1. Conference.
            2. Meditation.
         3. Both publick and private.
            1. Prayer.
            2. Reading the Scriptures or other good Books.
            3. Catechizing.
            4. Singing of Psalms.
      2. Extraordinary, such services as are to be done now and then upon special occasions.
         1. Fasting.
         2. Feasting.
         3. Vows.

2. The

2. The Manner of the performance of Divine Service is three-fold,
   1. A due preparation before.
   2. A right carriage in them: doing them
      1. Truly and sincerely, upon the right Motives, Causes, Gods Commandment and Will, and our own duty and need; and for the right ends, viz. the pleasing of God, and procuring of Grace and increase of virtue in our souls.
      2. Reverently, with a special apprehension of Gods presence and greatnesse.
      3. Faithfully, with a believing of Gods truth therein, and promising to our selves the blessing he hath promised.
      4. Devoutly, that is, with a diligent attention of the mind to the words and matter, and whole work in hand.
   3. A right making Use thereof after.

The third Commandment enjoyns the common worship of God, that is, the right carriage of our selves to his honour in all our common affairs, so far forth as we have any thing to do with him therein.

The general duty of it is to live holily.

To sanctifie God,

1. Inwardly, by seeing him in his works,
   1. Of chastisement; to be patient, penitent.
   2. Of mercy, to be thankful and obedient.
2. Outwardly,
   1. In word, by the lawfull use of an Oath, by a reverent meniton of Gods Titles and Attributes upon any occasion, by good conference, and making confesslon of his truth.
   2. In our Deeds and Actions,
      1. In General, to aim at his glory in all our works, and live to him and not to our selves.
      2. More Particularly, in two things,
         1. In suffering Persecution cheerfully for Righteousnesse sake.
         2. By a sanctified use of Gods creatures, of any thing whatsoever we do: whereto four things are required,
            1. Knowledg out of the word of God concerning the lawfulnesse of our doing such things.
            2. Craving Gods blessing in the use of Meat, Drink, Marriage.
            3. Returning Thanks to God for his goodnesse.
            4. Moderation in the use of them.

The fourth Commandment appoints the consecrating of a special time, viz. every seventh day after six of labour to holy and religious exercises.

The full Summe of it, is, After thou hast bestowed six dayes in ordinary and common businesses, thou shalt bestow the seventh day in exercises of piety and religion.

The things commanded in this precept are two

1. Preparation to the Sabbath, in the word Remember, which is done two wayes,
   1. All the week long by diligence, fore-sight, moderation in the labours of our calling.
   2. On the sixth day towards the end of it by a seasonable breaking off our labours, and making all things ready for the Sabbath.
2. Celebration of the Sabbath, not only observing and keeping it our selves, but preserving it; and looking that our Inferiours and others under us at the least outwardly keep it.

We must

1. Rest from thoughts, words and deeds that concern worldly things, but only for necessity and mercy.
2. Sanctifie it by bestowing it in the exercises of Religion, which for the manner are to be done cheerfully, conſecrating the Sabbath unto the Lord as a delight.

The fifth Commandment enjoyns the performance of all ſuch duties as appertain to men in regard of their place, that we ſhew due reſpect to our Superiours, Equals and Inferiours.

Our duty to our Governours, is to honour and reverence their perſons willingly, to obey all their lawful commandments, to bear their reproofs and chaſtiſements ſubmiſſively, patiently, and fruitfully.

The particular Duty of Children to their Parents, beſides theſe common duties, is

1. To love them very much, to maintain them if need be in ſickneſſe and age, and to be guided by them in marriage.

The particular Duty of Servants, is to be truſty and painful in the buſineſſe committed to them by their Governours, as well in their abſence as preſence.

The particular Duty of Subjects to their Kings and inferiour Magiſtrates, is to defend their perſons againſt all violence offered to them by any according to their places, and to render them willingly all due ſervices and paiments.

The Duty of People to their Teachers and ſpiritual Paſtors, is to ſubmit to their Miniſtery, and to reward them with plentiful maintenance.

The Duty of the younger to their betters in age, is to behave themſelves toward them reverently, and to take their good advice.

Our Duty towards our betters in gifts, is to take notice of their gifts and to reſpect them accordingly.

The common duty of all Governours towards thoſe that are under them, is to rule them wiſely, mildly, and equally, taking care by their authority to plant true Religion among them.

The particular Duty of Parents toward their children, is to give them fit inſtruction and correction, to help them to ſome honeſt Calling, to diſpoſe of them fitly in marriage, and to lay up for them according to their means.

The particular Duty of Maſters toward their ſervants, is to uſe them juſtly and mildly for work, diet, reward and chaſtiſement.

The Duties of man and wife each towards other, are theſe;

Both muſt love each other above all other perſons; he muſt cheriſh her as his own body, and ſhe muſt be an helper to him, and yield to him as her Head.

The particular Duty of Kings and other Magiſtrates, is to make fit Lawes, and to ſee them duly executed for the maintaining of peace, honeſty and godlineſſe.

The Duty of Miniſters toward their people, is to guide them in the right way by life and doctrine, to overſee their carriage, and to adminiſter the Sacraments duly to them.

The Duty of the ancienter toward their younger, is to further them in goodneſſe, by grave carriage and good counſel.

Their duty that have better gifts than others, is to uſe the ſame readily and humbly for the help of ſuch as want them.

The Duty of Equals is,

1. To think better of their Equals than themſelves, and to eſteem of them above themſelves.

2. In giving honour to go one before another.

3. To be glad and well-ſatisfied at the raiſing and advancement of their equals to places above themſelves.

The ſixth Commandment enjoyns all due care of our own and neighbours ſafety, Temporal and Spiritual.

For our own temporal ſafety we muſt ſhun all diſtempered paſſions and needleſſe perils, uſing food, reſt, and other means of health and ſtrength, cheerfully and moderately.

For

For our ſpiritual ſafety, we muſt carefully flee all ſins, and the occaſions of them, and uſe of all means of getting grace and ſalvation.

For our neighbours natural ſafety, we muſt keep wrath, malice and hatred out of our hearts, heartily loving all men, even our enemies. We muſt alſo pity and help the diſtreſſed, ſhew kindneſſe and meekneſſe to all, even thoſe that hurt us, not revenging our ſelves, nor hurting or grieving any by evil deeds or ſpeeches.

For our neighbours ſpiritual ſafety, we muſt exhort, comfort and admoniſh one another with all meekneſſe, and muſt pray one for another.

The ſeventh Commandment requires all care to preſerve our own and our neighbours chaſtity.

To preſerve our own chaſtity we muſt abhorre all impure deſires, behaviours, ſpeeches and deeds with all occaſions provoking thereto, and muſt uſe temperance and ſobriety with faſting and praying at fit times, and diligence in our calling.

We muſt preſerve our neighbours chaſtity by modeſty and ſhame-fac'dneſſe in attire, words, countenance and geſture.

The eighth Commandment requires a right carriage of our ſelves in regard of our own and our neighbours goods.

In reſpect of our own goods, we muſt get them juſtly, and keeping them thriftily from evil and idle expences, uſe them liberally for good purpoſes, and not ſet our hearts upon them.

For our neighbours goods, we muſt neither take nor keep any thing from any man (whoſe own it is) by force, fraud or unequal bargains, we muſt ſeek the profit of our neighbours as our own profit.

2. We muſt do to them as we would have them do to us, and not corrupt juſtice and equity by partiality and ſelf-love.

The ninth Commandment requires all due care of maintaining our own and our neigbours good name and credit:

1. Our own by lowlineſſe and eſteeming meanly of our ſelves, accounting others better than our ſelves, by being true, ſparing and holy in our ſpeeches, innocent and humble in our carriage, flying ill company and all appearances of wickedneſſe, and abounding in good works.

2. Our neighbours by judging and ſpeaking the beſt of them, their words and deeds, praiſing their vertues and defending their innocency.

The tenth Commandment requires that we be fully contented with our own condition, and keep out all inclinations and motions after the things that pertain to others.

II. The Goſpel.

The Law holds forth the holineſſe and purity of God, the Goſpel holds forth the grace and favour of God, Rom. 2.4.

The Law was given as a rule of duty, the Goſpel is the offer of grace.

Whatſoever the Law required, that doth the Goſpel require, and much more; a patience more conſtant, a meekneſſe more ſuffering.

The Goſpel in a ſtrict ſenſe is verbum promiſſionis. Luther. A declaration of the will of God to ſave men by Chriſt. Dr Sanderſon in his 4th Lecture, De Obligatione Conſcientiæ, ſaith, it contains the myſteries of Faith to be believed, under which he comprehends both the free promiſes of God, the holy ceremonial and eccleſiaſtical Inſtitutions, and moral precepts. The Law was a Schoolmaſter to bring us to Chriſt, Gal. 3.24. The Goſpel a Schoolmaſter in Chriſt.

It is called the grace of God, Titus 2. 11. and the word of his grace, Acts 20 32.

It conſiſts of rules of duty as well as promiſes of mercy, Titus 2.11,12.

It is great grace to juſtifie the ungodly, Rom. 5.20. to ſet free captives, Eſay 61.1. to make ſuch as were ſlaves of Satan the ſons of God, John 1. 12. 1 John 3. 1. We were,

1. Undeſerving; whatſoever we do is debt.

2. It's

2. Ill deſerving, we deſerved wrath, death.
3. Unwilling to receive this grace, *Pſa.*110.3. God overcomes our wils, *Joh.*7.40.
4. We oppoſed and reſiſted the good offered, the offer of mercy, Eſay 65.2.
5. We were perſonal enemies to God, Chriſt, *Rom.*5.10. *Col.*1.21.

The Excellency of the Goſpel appears in theſe particulars:

1. In the plenitude of the matter revealed, Acts 5.20. & 20.27. John 15.5. & 14.26. & 16.3. 2 *Cor.*3.12. *Heb.*7.19. *Eph.*4.11.

2. The clearneſſe, evidence and perſpicuity of the things delivered. It is a myſtery, becauſe againſt corrupt reaſon, and above carnal reaſon, and matter of wonder to the Angels, yet it is plainly now revealed to the Church, *Matth.*11.25. 2 *Cor.*3.12,13,18. *Eph.*3.10.

3. The heavenlineſſe, ſpiritualneſſe, majeſty and grace of the Goſpel, *Heb.*7. 16. John 1.14. *Heb.*12.25. Evangelical Doctrines are by an emphaſis called heavenly things, *Heb.*8.5. & 9.23.

4. In the energy and power of it, reaching to the conſcience, *Mat.*7.29. John 5.25. Eſay 29.23.

5. In the ſweetneſſe and gentleneſſe of it, *Mat.*12.19.

6. Its duration and unchangeableneſſe, 2 Cor. 6. 2. Heb. 7. from verſ. 16, to 24.

There are two great ends of the Goſpel and the Miniſtry of it:

1. Union with Chriſt, 2 *Cor.*11.2.

2. Reconciliation with God, 2 Cor. 5.20. The Angels ſang (when Chriſt was born) on earth peace, and good will toward men.

There is a large commendation of the Goſpel, Eſay 52. 7. it is called good tidings, and good tidings of good peace, Rom. 1. 16,17. Heb. 2.3. & 10. 39. Salvation, *Eph.*1.13. 1 *Pet.*1.9.

The Goſpel hath two parts, as ſome ſay,

Firſt, All are curſed and damnable ſinners. This muſt be believed ſo firmly, as that we aſſent to the particular, comprehended under the general, bringing it home to my ſelf, and ſaying to my ſelf, I am a curſed and damnable ſinner.

Secondly, Jeſus Chriſt is a perfect and all-ſufficient Saviour, he can and will ſave all penitent ſinners, and me alſo among the reſt upon my turning to him. He hath ſealed this to me in Baptiſme, which is the Baptiſm of repentance for remiſſion of ſinnes, which doth aſſure me, that I upon repentance ſhall by the bloud of Chriſt attain full remiſſion of all my ſinnes; this is to believe the Goſpel.

We have gone aſtray like loſt ſheep, but he hath laid upon him the iniquities of us all.

*Rom.*3.23,24. For all have ſinned, and come ſhort of the glory of God. Being juſtified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Jeſus Chriſt.

The Goſpel preacheth two things moſt evidently:

Firſt, A perſpicuous knowledge of God, viz. That the true God is the Father, Sonne and holy Ghoſt, and that theſe three are He, which revealed himſelf in the Old Teſtament, by the name of Jehovah, Mat.28.19. Mark 16.15,16.

Secondly, It publiſheth the grace of this God, Father, Sonne and holy Ghoſt, manifeſted in the man Jeſus. For ſo the Law taught two things:

Firſt, Who was the true God, viz. that Jehovah which brought the people out of Egypt, and which made all things, *Exod.*20.2.

Secondly, It taught what worſhip and what works that God would require of his people. Thou ſhalt have no other Gods but me, and in the Commandments following. Zanchius de Natura Dei l.3.c.3.Quæſt.3.

The terms of the Goſpel are three:

1. To chooſe Chriſt as he is there offered, John 6.40.
2. To receive the Goſpel with readineſſe, Acts 17.17. *Mat.*13.44.
3. That we ſhould give up all for Chriſt, and to him, Rom. 12. 1.

It is the reſult of Gods eternal counſel, We ſhould live up to Goſpel-principles, and Goſpel-priviledges.

In

In the Goſpel is,

1. Gods love to the utmoſt.
2. The Goſpel is the wiſdom of God, 1 Cor. 1.24.
3. It was ſolemnly delivered by Chriſt in perſon, Heb. 3.1. called his voice, Heb. 3.7,8. & 2.2,3.
4. Strongly confirmed, Acts 5.32.
5. Importunately urged, Deut. 5.29. Pſalm 85.29.

Some ſay, theſe three are the terms:

1. Part with the love of all worldly intereſts.
2. Throw away all your own works, your own righteouſneſſe.
3. Be out of the love and practice of all unrighteouſneſſe.

It requires three things eſpecially of us, Epiſc. Daven. de juſtitia actuali.

1. True Repentance for ſins committed.
2. True Faith in the Mediator, which expiates ſins.
3. A ſincere Deſire to obey God which hath pardoned us our ſins.

Impenitency, unbelief and diſobedience then are ſins againſt the Goſpel.

Sins againſt the Goſpel are greater than ſins againſt the Law, Heb. 2.3. & 10.28, 29. becauſe committed againſt greater light and greater love; the love of the Father in ſending of Chriſt, of Chriſt in coming, of the Spirit in manifeſting, therefore the curſes and puniſhment of the Goſpel are grievous, Matth. 3.10. Mark 16.16. He that loveth not the Lord Jeſus, let him be Anathema Maranatha. See Matth. 21.31. Luk. 13.3,5. John 3.36.

Pſalm 2.12. Chriſt is the beſt friend and worſt enemy. His wrath is,

1. The wrath of a Mediator and Deliverer, Who then ſhall ſpeak a good word for you? Pſalm 50.22.
2. He is able to execute his wrath, he hath all power in his hand as well as all love in his heart.

Two ſorts of ſins ripen men for wrath:

1. Sinning againſt Ordinances, Ezekiel 10.2. Amos 8,1.
2. Sinning againſt the Goſpel, Mat. 3.10.

Deſpiſing the Goſpel is a great ſinne, Acts 13.41. oppoſing and reſiſting it is worſe, Acts 7.51. & 13.8. Not to receive it, John 1,11. or to receive it in vain is bad, 2 Cor. 6.1. not to adorn it, Titus 2.10. Phil. 1.29. nor highly to prize it, Mat. 13.45. See 22,5.

As the ten Commandments are eminently Gods Commandments, ſo there are ſome commands which had a ſpecial ſanction ſince Chriſt came.

1. That of love is a ſpecial Commandment, John 15.17. it was commanded before, but Chriſt gives it out more fully and vigorouſly, to love one another, becauſe it is commanded by Chriſt, is an act of obedience. The Goſpel commands us not only to love one another, but to love our enemies, Mat. 5.44.
2. Faith, 1 John 3.23.
3. Repentance, Acts 17.30.
4. Goſpel-obedience, Matth. 5.19. & 16.24. There are two other Goſpel commands alſo, viz. Self-denial, and taking up our Croſſe, to be willing to ſuffer.
5. To do as we would be done by, Matth. 7.12.

Having laid down the rule, viz. the Law and Goſpel for the finding out the number of our ſins; I ſhall now ſhew the uſes of them for finding out the meaſure of them.

Firſt, For the Law, we muſt not be content to rip up our ſins by the Law, but aggravate them.

1. By the greatneſſe of the Commander, the great God of all the world, that gave the Law with thunder and lightening is offended. He is glorious in his Eſſence, Subſiſtence; working ſinne provokes the eyes of his glory, Eſay 3.8.
2. By the latitude and extent of every Commandment, Pſalm 119.96. it binds the conſcience and commands the heart, forbids all ſins at all times, together with their cauſes, occaſions, provocations, ſigns

3. Conſi-

3. Consider the filthinesse and sinfulnesse of sin*, it is called filthinesse it self, and is worse than hell, for that is of Gods ordaining. Persons and things are termed evil from it, evil Angels, men, times.

4. Consider the price of the bloud of Christ, and the greatnesse of his punishment; sin was such a hainous and notorious thing that nothing else could satisfie God, all the Angels in Heaven could not expiate one sin.

5. Aggravate sin by the person sinning, from the evil circumstances and unprofitable ends, by the effects, giving scandal, 2 Samuel 12.14. by the manner of committing it, wilfully and with a high hand.

* Rom.7.13. It comes from the Devil, it is called his work, and wicked men are termed the children of Belial. See John 6.44.

Sins may be aggravated many wayes:

1. The more grosse and open sins are the worse, Ezekiel 36.20.
2. Sins against light and knowledge, James 4.25. Psalm 95.10.
3. Against love, *Rom.*2.4. John 6.67.
4. Against Vows and Covenants, Acts 5.4.
5. Relapses, Psalm 87.40.
6. When there is but a small temptation, Amos 2.7.
7. When we have helps and experiences to the contrary, Numbers 14.11. Matth. 16.9.

Secondly, We should labour especially to mourn for Gospel-sins,

1. Because the sins of the Gospel carry the greatest guilt:

1. They are against the second Covenant; the Heathens perish under the guilt and curse of the first Covenant; the second Covenant was never offered to the Devils; when they fell from God they had never a second offer of mercy.

2. They are against the bloud of the Son of God, Heb 6.6. & 10 29. To sin against God in his Son, is a greater sin than to sin against the Law, the Law is subservient to Christ in the Gospel.

2. No man lies under such fierce wrath, 2 Cor. 2. 15,16. no condemnation is confirmed by an oath but theirs, *Heb.*3.11,12. There was never a final extirpation of the Jews till they despised the Gospel.

3. That which should have been for your welfare becomes your snare, Acts 26. 18. *Heb.*6.10. Esay 28.13. The Gospel is like Paracelsian Physick, if it do not cure it will kill.

4. None do lose such high services, *Mat.*7.22,23. they do not the work of the Gospel with a Gospel-spirit, and out of a Gospel-principle.

5. Satan will insult and triumph over none so much as Gospel-sinners, *Matth.*12.43,44.

6. The worm of conscience will not feed so fiercely on any, Mark 9.43. when he compares his former hopes with his present irrecoverable condition, because no sinners had those helps, nor were raised to those hopes.

We should be especially humbled for original corruption, Psal.51.5. Jam.1.14.

Ponder on your own sins what they are, and what they have deserved. Look on original corruption, the foul sea of all wickedness, which is called a body of sinne, Rom.6.6. A Law in our members, Rom.7.23. Consider that thou hast a naughty nature, whereby thou art averse from God and goodnesse, and extreamly prone to all sin, Psalm 51.5. Esay 48.8. all men in every part are under the guilt and power of it, *Rom.*3.16,23.

All humiliation ariseth out of a sense of our own vileness and Gods displeasure; the Law discovers that as well as actual sinne. Consider, 1. The greatnesse of the sinne, Ratione quidditatis & formalitatis, ratione causalitatis, it is the cause of all actual sinnes, Ratione virtualitatis & potentialitatis, ratione eminentiæ, it is the first of that kinde. 2. Think of David and Paul, how they were troubled with it, we have as great cause to be humbled as they. 3. Think of the holinesse of God, he is essentially holy as we are naturally sinfull. 4. Take some time to view thy self in the glasse of the Law, *Rom.*5.20. that is a copy of Gods holinesse, go from Commandment to Commandment.

2. Humble thy self; Labour to be base for this, though thou hast not committed such foul sins as others, yet if God should leave thee to thy self and thine own evil heart thou wouldst soon be as bad as the worst.

3. Call to mind likewise the grosse actual sins thou hast committed before or since thy thy calling: Wast thou not given to all manner of pollution before the Lord gave thee knowledge of him, and since thy calling?

4. Consider thy continual daily slips and infirmities, thy sins of omission and commission, how apt thou art to be angry, impatient, thy carnalnesse in good duties, and distraction in the performance of them, thy forgetfulnesse of God and thy later end.

5. Consider also whether there be not some unknown secret fault that thou hast not yet repented of, and pray to God to discover it to thee.

Lastly, Call to mind what sins thou hast committed since the last Sacrament, and bewail them.

Meditate also on the sufferings of Christ for these grosse sins and daily iniquities. His great abasement, Psalm 22.6,7,14, to 19. v. Esay 53.3,4,5,6,7. to the 11. v. He was born like a beggar, lived like a beggar, the Devil tempted him, he was falsly accused, betrayed by one of his Disciples, denied by another, forsaken by the rest. He was amazed with fear, and incompassed with sorrow, Mark 14.34. two of the most tormentfull passions; was in an agony, and did sweat drops of cloddy bloud, in such abundance as it fell to the ground; was condemned, mocked, spit upon, whipped with rods after the manner of the Romans *, crowned with thorns, laden with the Crosse, nailed on it, stretched and retched in all his joynts.

The end of the Sacrament is to keep in memory the great things Christ hath suffered for us, 1 Cor. 11. 24. See Exod. 12. 17. 26.

Not a notional but powerfull practical and applicatory meditation. Not barely to go over the History of his passion, as the Monks on Good-Friday, so as to enrage us against Judas and the Jews, but to get our hearts affected with his sufferings, Lam. 1.12. Zech. 12.10. We must not leave meditating on Christs love, till he be Totus fixus in corde qui totus fixus fuit in cruce. There is, 1. An historical remembrance of Christ, when we look upon the death of Christ as of an innocent person, and not on Gods design in it, Luke 23.28. 2. Doctrinal or dogmatical; this onely rests in generals. 3. Applicative, Phil. 3.8,10. not onely look on Christ crucified, but finde our selves crucified with him. The historical remembrance is an act of fancy, the doctrinal of reason, this of faith. 1. We should remember what Christ endured we deserved, Isa. 53.5. 2. There is no sinne light that was so heavy on Christ, Mat. 27.46. he mourned for our sins, and shall not we our selves mourn, and throw away those sins that stabbed him to the heart? Certè patientem Christum nemo luget verius, quàm qui ea, ob quæ passus est Christus, odisse incipit. Drexel. Æstern. prod. c. 2. Sect. 23. 3. It is a great matter to recover a lost sinner. 4. We should love our own souls, and the souls of others, since Christ manifested such love to our souls. 5. We should not crosse the ends of Christs suffering: 1. He died to redeem you from this present evil world. 2. To destroy the works of Satan. We should live to him. * Licet plagarum numerum in Christi flagellatione excesserint ministri, quem Hebræi ex lege servabant, ut ob id non Hebræorum more, sed Romanorum flagellatum Christum plerique dixerint; quod tamen columna fuerit alligatus, etiam Hebræorum morem consuetudinemque redolet, quod miror posse in dubium revocari. Novar. Sched. Sac prophan. l. 1. c. 21.

He suffered much in his body, but his chief sufferings were in his soul, Esay 53.10, 11, 12. He took our soul as well as body, and came to redeem it, that being the chief part, Quicquid induit Christus, obtulit. He suffered

First, As a publick person, as the second Adam, Rom. 5.14.

Secondly, For our sakes and benefit, Esay 53. he is said six times to bear our iniquities.

Thirdly, Not only for our good, but in our room, Heb. 7.22. not only nostro bono, but nostro loco, 1 Tim. 2.6. Mat. 20.28. for otherwise he should have suffered no more than other men; the Martyrs suffered for the good of the Church, Col. 1. 24. 2 Tim. 2.10.

Fourthly, He took upon him the burden of our sins by way of imputation, 1 Peter 2.24. 2 Cor. 5.21.

One professed that he profited much in godlinesse by reading a book with three leafs, one a black leaf, wherein was written Death and Judgment; another a white leaf, wherein were written the Joyes of Heaven; the third a red leaf, wherein was written the Passion of Christ.

Smite on your brests, and say, For my worldlinesse, anger, all these evils befell my Saviour: Lord, for thy mercy sake in Christ pardon and heal me, Shall I pollute my body with uncleanesse, when Christ suffered so bitter things? Shall I ever be angry again? O Lord by thy grace I will not: Let me have thy power to kill these sins.

See the strictnesse of divine justice, and the dreadfulnesse of Gods wrath; God ſpared not his own Son, and when his Fathers wrath lighted on his ſoul, he was much troubled, and the great evil of ſinne, it cauſed Chriſts humane Nature to be afraid, Matth. 26.38.

The deſert of ſin is ſeen in Chriſts ſuffering,

1. In reſpect of the Perſon who ſuffered for it, Gods only Son who never provoked him, John 3.16. Rom. 8.31.

2. In reſpect of the penalties he underwent for ſin, it made him to cry, ſweat and pour out ſtrong ſupplications, Eſay 53.10.

The Law ſhewed the filthineſſe and evil of ſinne by the many Sacrifices and aſperſions of bloud which it required, but they were of beaſts and their bloud; but the Goſpel ſhews the demerit of ſinne more fully, and how odious it is to God, ſince Chriſt muſt die to expiate it, and alſo the abundant love both of the Father in delivering his own Son to death for the ſalvation of ſinners, John 3.16. 1 John 4.9,10. Rom. 8.32. and of Chriſt in taking upon him our nature, and in expoſing himſelf to ſo much miſery here on earth, and at laſt to an accurſed death for us Phil. 2.7,8.

Conſider his great love to us, John 15.9. Epheſ. 3.18,19. Quanto pro te vilior Chriſtus, tanto tibi charior.

We are to remember Chriſt in the Sacrament:

1. Becauſe the Lord will have in the Sacrament of the New Teſtament, the great end of the Paſſeover to be accompliſht, Exodus 12.14.

2. That we may anſwer the goodneſſe of Chriſt to us, he hath us always actually in remembrance, Exodus 28.21,29.

3. Becauſe if we have any benefit by this Sacrament, God muſt remember Chriſt for us.

His love is made a patern of our love, Eph. 5.24,25.

4. Upon our actual and affectionate remembrance of Chriſt, depends all our benefit by this Sacrament.

We have diſpatched the examination of our ſins; in the next place our graces are to be examined.

* Some think it is an irregular way to put people upon ſigns and trials.

The graces that muſt be tried *and examined, are our Knowledge, Faith, Repentance, Love, and hungring after Chriſt, the truth, growth or wants of them, all muſt be examined.

There are ſome particular caſes, wherein it is not ſafe for ſome particular perſons at that time, and in that caſe to put them to try themſelves by ſigns. But for the general it is neceſſary, and the duty of all people to look to ſigns, and to try themſelves by them. Mr Hooker on Rom. 8.10.

The truth of them:

A two-fold knowledge is required of every receiver, 1. A diſcerning of the body and bloud of Chriſt,

1. Knowledge: The words examine, ſhew forth, diſcern and judge, all betoken knowledge.

We muſt get Knowledge:

1. Of the Law of God.
2. Of the Doctrine of Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt.
3. Of the Nature, Neceſſity and Uſe of the Lords Supper.

he muſt be able in ſome competent meaſure to underſtand the Doctrine, Nature, Uſe and End of a Sacrament, by whom it was inſtituted, and why, and for what end, 1 Cor. 11 29. they were to inſtruct their children what this and that action ſignified in the Paſſeover. 2. Of himſelf, implied in the duty commanded of examining our ſelves.

We muſt know our eſtate by nature and by grace:

1. Becauſe otherwiſe we cannot be thankfull to God for his benefits as we ought.

2. In the Sacrament Chriſt is offered, and the Covenant ſealed. By nature we are dead in ſin and bondſlaves of Satan, by grace we come to be children of God, and heirs of ſalvation.

We muſt know what the elements and actions in the Sacrament ſignifie. That the Bread ſignifies the Body of Chriſt, and the Wine his Bloud, that the breaking of Bread betokens the crucifying of Chriſt, that the giving of the Bread and Wine notes the action of God the Father offering Chriſt to all, and beſtowing him effectually upon every worthy receiver; the receiving of the Bread and Wine ſignifies our receiving and feeding upon Chriſt by faith.

Secondly;

Secondly, Faith is required in thoſe that come worthily to the Supper of the Lord.

There muſt be an active and lively faith in the Sacrament to take Chriſt by an act of confidence, and give up our ſelves by an act of reſignation.

The great ſpiritual graces of the Goſpel are Faith and Love, 2 Theſſ. 1. 11. & 2 Theſſ. 3. 5. or Faith and Repentance, Acts 20. 21.

First, Faith is the great command of the Goſpel, Believe in the Lord Jeſus.

Fides eſt fundamentum & radix pietatis, baſis ſpiritualis ædificij.

Secondly, It is the great promiſe of the Goſpel, Epheſ. 2. 8.

Thirdly, It is the great condition on which all the promiſes hang, Eſay 7. 9. Heb. 11. 6.

Faith empties the ſoul more of it ſelf than all other graces; it gives all the glory to God, Rom. 4. 20. and often beſides in that Chapter. It is the eye of the ſoul whereby we diſcern Chriſt, Heb. 11. 1. 2 Cor. 4. ult. it is the ſtomack of the ſoul. Chriſt deſcribes believing by hungring and thirſting; it is the foot of the ſoul whereby we approach unto Chriſt, Heb. 10. 22. He that comes unto me ſhall never hunger, and he that believes in me ſhall never thirſt. It is our hand to imbrace the promiſes, Heb. 11. 30. therefore believing is often called eating and drinking, John 6. He that eats my fleſh and drinks my blood hath eternal life, Gal. 2. 20.

Faith makes Chriſt precious, 1 Peter 2. 7. and the ſoul alſo to Chriſt, 2 Peter 1. 2. Faith is an aſſent to all truths revealed, yet the ſpecial act of juſtifying faith is our cloſing with Chriſt, our rolling our ſelves on him. It is a cleaving to the whole word of God, and an obediential reſting upon Chriſt alone for ſalvation. This is the only grace that juſtifieth, Whom he hath ſet forth for our propitiation through faith in his blood. No grace brings ſo much comfort to the ſoul; The juſt ſhall live by his faith.

Faith is in theſe reſpects greater than Charity, conſidered,

1. In regard of its peculiar office, a ſoul-tranſplanting grace, the grace which unites us to Chriſt.

2. It is the foundation of all our comfort in life and death.

1. It brings in all good, becauſe it brings in Jeſus Chriſt.

2. It maintains all good, 1. It defends all graces, Eph. 6. it was a Roman ſhield which covered all the body and armour too.

2. It increaſeth all graces, love, joy, hope.

3. Quickens all graces, Gal. 2. 20.

It looks upon Chriſt,

1. In his fulneſſe, Col. 1. 19.

2. In his holineſſe.

3. In point of ſatisfaction.

4. In point of Interceſſion.

Reaſons why we muſt bring faith to the Sacrament:

1. It is the Table of the Lord, therefore none muſt be admitted, but thoſe which are of his family, Gal. 6. 16. Chriſt hath inſtituted it that he might give himſelf by it, he gives himſelf only to his members, true believers.

Edere Chriſtum eſt credere in Chriſtum. Quid paras dentem & ventrem? Crede tantùm & manducaſti. Auguſt.

2. It is a ſeal of the Covenant of grace, therefore belongs to none but ſuch as are in Covenant, none are in Covenant with God and Chriſt but believers, 1 John 3. 24.

He that comes without faith receives Sacramentum, not rem Sacramenti.

3. Becauſe the Sacrament was inſtituted for the confirming and further ſtrengthening of our faith, it begets not faith but preſuppoſeth it, Rom. 10. 14, 17. & 4. 11. In both Sacraments there is a profeſſion of our faith; we profeſſe ſuch a God for our God, in whoſe name we are baptized. In the Supper we profeſſe that we have no hopes of pardon of ſinne, but in the death of Chriſt, John 6. 53. Gal. 2. 20.

Jeſus Chriſtus, iſque crucifixus, debet eſſe proprium fidei noſtræ objectum. Rivet. Inſtruct. Præpar. ad Cœnam Domini, c. 10. Mr Pryn and Secretary Morice make it a converting Ordinance.

Prayer profits not without faith, Rom. 10.13,14. Mark 11.24. Luke 18.lat. end. Mark 9.23.

4. The Word profits not without faith in them that hear it, Heb. 4. 2. the ſame thing is held forth in both. Chriſt is held forth in the Word ſounding to the ear, and offered in the Sacrament by the promiſe, there he is viſible to the eye of faith, John 3.14,15. and is offered for ſpiritual nouriſhment. Faith is the hand and mouth of the ſoul, whereby we receive and feed on Chriſt, John 1.12 John 6.19.

Faith onely makes up the union between Chriſt and us, John 6. 56.

In bodily feeding there is, 1. Senſe of want, ſo in ſpiritual of the want of Chriſt. 2. Apprehenſion of the ſutableneſſe of the food to ones condition, ſo here. 3. Appetite, earneſt deſire in the ſoul after Chriſt. 4. Taking of food, ſo the ſoul of Chriſt. 5. Eating. 6. Digeſting. 7. Diſtribution of the nouriſhment.

5. No benefit is to be expected from any Ordinance but by faith, Chriſt himſelf profits not unbelievers, Titus 1.15. we cannot receive the Sacrament to our comfort without it.

The people of God have a four-fold glorious ſight in this life, John 14.20. 2 Cor. 5.19. in themſelves. 1. They ſee God in Chriſt. 2. They ſee Chriſt in God. 3. They ſee Chriſt 4. They ſee themſelves in Chriſt. See Rom. 8.9,10.

2 Cor. 13.5. Of all Texts in the Scripture there is none ſo full for the trial of this grace as this, here are three ſeveral words to preſſe this duty. Interpreters generally ſay, the meaning is, whether you have faith or not, but this is a higher expreſſion, Acts 8.33. Rom. 8.8,9. We ſay of a very malicious man, ſuch a one is in malice; and of one that is drunk, ſuch a one is in drink.

1 Peter 1.7. The trial of Faith is precious:

1. By this trial we attain to a certainty.

2. By this it attains purity: God tries it by affliction, men by examination, by both it is refined.

3. The trial of gold is but for a little time, By faith you lay hold on eternal life; the purer the faith, the ſurer the hold.

4. By trying it hath a higher eſteem, Revel. 3.18. The trial of gold makes it the more precious in your eſteem, and the trial of Faith makes it more precious in Gods eſteem.

Marks of Faith:

Common people ſay, they have believed as long as they can remember, and they thank God they never doubted. While men are in their natural condition they think it is nothing to believe in Chriſt, though they walk contrary to him; but when ſinne is fully diſcovered, and one ſees the ſeverity of Gods juſtice, it is then hard to believe.

Firſt, Know whence we had Faith, God gives it, and whether we have received it in the ordinary way by which God works it; the Word James 1.18. Faith comes by hearing, and it is increaſed by the ſame means by which it is begotten; Doſt thou highly prize the Word? Hath it wrought faith in thee?

Secondly, Try by what ſteps and degrees Faith hath been wrought in thee.

1. Such ſee their miſery by ſinne, and their inability to help themſelves, Acts 2.37.

2. God reveals to ſuch the excellency of Chriſt. He is held forth to us as every way able to do us good, Eſay 55. 1. hereby one is brought to deny himſelf and his duties, and to have recourſe to him, and reſt on him for comfort.

Thirdly, From the effects; where Faith is it will ſhew it ſelf.

1. It purifieth the heart, he is clean in heart and life, 2 Cor. 7.1. Acts 26. 9, & 18.

2. Overcomes our ſpiritual enemies, the world, This is the victory whereby we overcome the world, viz. our Faith, 1 John 5.4. Satan, 1 John 2.18. & 5.18. Gal. 5.6

3. It works by love, Eph. 1.15.

Rom. 1.17. 2 Theſſ. 1.3.

Fourthly, True faith is ever growing, a true faith may be weak, but all living things grow though one do not perceive it. Do you truſt God now the better for for the many experiences you have of him? Art thou ſenſible of thy doubting and unbelief?

I think they do but overwhelm the ſpirits of Gods people, who do uſe to propoſe ſo many ſigns of Faith. For when they read or hear of very many, and they feel very few, they come to have full heavy hearts. Capel of Tentations, part 4. Chap. 1.

Motives to perſwade men to believe:

Conſider, 1. Who offers Chriſt, God, how will he take it if he be refuſed?

2. The gift, the greatneſſe of the good offered in the Goſpel, Hebrews 2. 2, 3. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

3. The excellencies of faith, but that I have ſhewed before.

4. The hainouſneſſe of infidelity, 1 John 5. 10. a ſin both againſt the Law and Goſpel. The firſt Commandment commands us to believe whatever God ſhall reveal; it is the condemnation with a witneſſe, John 3. 19. it expoſeth us,

1. To the temptations of Satan, Heb. 3. 12.

2. To the fearfull judgments of God, John 3. ult. to his diſpleaſure, Prov. 15. 8. Heb 11. 7. to eternal wrath, John 3. 17. Mark 16. 16.

3. It makes all the Ordinances of God ineffectual; the Word, Heb. 3. 2. Afflictions, the Sacrament, 1 Cor. 11. 29.

Conſider,
1. Thy naturall eſtate is a ſtate of death and damnation, John 3. 18. Gal. 3. 23.
2. So long as thou abideſt out of Chriſt thou abideſt in death, John 3. 36. 1 John 3. 14. All ſins de merito, are damnable, they deſerve death, but not de facto, no ſin neceſſarily brings death but unbelief, becauſe it keeps a man off from Chriſt the fountain of life, Joh. 6. 5, 7. 3. Thou canſt not be the fountain of thine own life. 4. Life is to be had in no other but Chriſt, Joh. 5. 40. 5. There is no way of having life from him, but by union with him, 1 John 5. 12. the firſt thing that grace puts forth in the ſoul, is an inſtinct after union. Faith is an inſtinct put in by the teaching of the Father after union with Chriſt.

5. The willingneſſe of God to receive a poor ſinner.

1. God alone provided the medicine that ſhould cure us, Rom. 3. 24.

2. He wrote it in the Goſpel; this is a true ſaying.

3. Propounds Chriſt, hath ſet him forth.

4. Invites ſinners, Mat. 11. 1 Cor. 5. 20. He commands you to believe, 1 John 3. 23. threatens if you refuſe, John 3. ult.

6. Chriſt conſented to all this; he voluntarily came into the world to ſave ſinners, he hath paid the ranſome, hath promiſed that thoſe which come to him he will in no wiſe caſt away.

The ſole way to get this ſupernatural grace, is with hearty lamenting of its abſence

Means to get and improve or ſtrengthen faith:

1. To get it.

and weakneſſe to beg it of him who is able to worke it in the heart, and to feed and nouriſh it by a continual meditation of his greatneſſe and great workes which he hath formerly wrought for our confirmation.

1. Labour to ſee your ſelves in a loſt condition.

2. Know that there is no way in the world to ſave you but by Chriſt.

3. Bewail your condition to God, tell him that you are a loſt creature, and ſay, Lord, help me to believe.

4. Plead the promiſes, there are promiſes of grace as well as to grace, ſay, Lord, thou haſt ſaid thou wilt be mercifull, and why not to me?

5. Wait upon God in the uſe of the means, hearing and the like, Rom. 10 Acts 10. 44.

2. To improve and ſtrengthen it.

You that have faith, labour to improve it, 2 Theſſ. 1. 3, 4.

I ſhall premiſe four Cautions:

1. There is a common, dead faith, an ungrounded preſumption gotten by the Devil, and mens falſe hearts, which is rather to be deſtroyed than increaſed. When men put all their confidence in Chriſt, and yet can live in all kind of ungodlineſſe, whereas true faith is wrought by the Spirit of God, and brings forth a holy life.

2. Among

2. Among true believers there are ſeveral ſizes as it were of faith, ſome are ſtrong and ſome weak in the faith.

3. The weakeſt faith, if true, will certainly ſave the ſoul, the weakeſt believer is united to Chriſt, adopted, reconciled, juſtified, hath the Spirit; all promiſes belong to him, and ſhall partake of glory.

4. There is none of Gods ſervants in this world do attain ſo much faith as they might, the Apoſtles Luke 17.5. make this their joynt Petition, Lord increaſe our faith.

1. It increaſeth in the uſe of it, To him that hath ſhall be given. Spiritual things increaſe by exerciſe.

2. Diligently attend on all the Ordinances, and treaſure up experiences.

3. Study thy ſelf daily; ſee what a wretched, worthleſſe creature thou art, what a dead barren heart thou haſt, real ſelf-abhorring makes a man to hang on Chriſt.

4. The more thou knoweſt Chriſt, the more thou wilt believe in him, Pſalm 9.9. ſtudy to know Chriſts Perſon, Offices, the tenour and indulgence of the Covenant of Grace.

5. Labour to get ſome evidence of the work of faith in thee, that thou art in a league of love with Chriſt: if the wayes of Chriſt be ſutable to thy Spirit, and the bent of thy heart be againſt all ſins, and eſpecially thy boſome ſinne, it is a good ſign.

6. Remove all impediments.

We ſhould look to the acts of faith:

Firſt, The uniting acts,

1. Of Choice.

2. Reſignation. Be frequent in theſe.

Secondly, Juſtifying, thoſe by which we go to Chriſt for daily pardon. The recumbency on Chriſts righteouſneſſe and ſatisfaction, Rom. 3.25.

Thirdly, Attractive, by which we derive vertue and influence from Chriſt our Head in order to holineſſe:

1. Eying Chriſt our Head as our Head and Fountain of Holineſſe, Epheſ. 1. ult.

2. Actually depend on Chriſt for all grace, John 5.26. This is call'd abiding in him.

II. Repentance.

Pœnitentia eſt dolor de peccato cum adjuncto propoſito melioris vitæ. Luth. in loc. commun. de pœnitentia. All the Sermons of the Prophets and Apoſtles run on this, Chriſt commanded his Diſciples to preach it. It is one of the two parts of the Goſpel; the ſumme of the Goſpel is Faith and Repentance.

It is taken ſometimes largely, and ſo it comprehends all the three parts of Converſion, Contrition, Faith and new Obedience.

2. Strictly for Contrition alone, Acts 13.24.

In General; it is a turning from ſin to God: Or thus,

It is a ſupernatural work of Gods Spirit, whereby the humbled converted ſinner doth turn from all ſin with grief and deteſtation of it, becauſe thereby God is offended, and to the wayes of God, loving and imbracing them, and reſolving to walk in them for the time to come.

First, The efficient cauſe or authour of repentance is Gods Spirit, Acts 1.51. & 11. 18. 2 Timothy 2. 18. it is a ſupernatural work, ſuch a work as never is nor can be wrought in any but by the almighty work of Gods Spirit in a way above corrupt nature, Jeremy 31. 18, 19. A man can do ſomething toward legal duties, but one hath no principle for evangelical duties, but ſomething againſt them.

Secondly, The Subject in whom this grace of repentance is found (ſay ſome) is an humbled and converted ſinner:

1. Humbled, that is, legally ſenſible of the miſery it is brought to by ſin.

2. Converted, that is, by God, one whoſe inward man is changed, Ezek. 25.26. Repentance ſeems rather to precede converſion, Acts 3.19. though full Repentance be Converſion.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, The general nature of it, a turning with the terms from which and to which, an aversion from sinne, and a conversion to God, Joel 2.12. Ezekiel 16. later end.

Fourthly, The manner of it, with detestation of sin, with delight in Gods will and wayes, Hoseah 14.8. Surely, shall one say, in the Lord I shall finde righteousnesse and peace. It is a mourning for sin as sin, as it is offensivum Dei, aversivum à Deo, as it is an act of disobedience, an act of unkindnesse.

It is Praterita peccata plangere, & plangenda non committere. Aug. It's secunda tabula post naufragium, medicina est spiritualis animi vitiorum, say others. See Mr Calamy on Act. 17.30. and Cameron on Mark 1.15. and Mr Gataker 29, & 30. Chapters of his Adversaria Miscellanea. And the 22th Sermon preacht at Giles in the Fields on Act. 5.21. And Mr Baxters on Ezek. 36.31. preached before the House of Commons. Dr Walsals Sacrifice of a Broken Heart on Psal. 51.17.

There are several kinds of Repentance:

1. Antecedent, which goes before Remission and Justification, Acts 2.38. & 3. 19. & 8. 22.
2. Consequent, Repentance, melting of the heart toward God after assurance of pardon, Luke 7.47. 1 Tim. 1.12,13,14. Ezekiel 16. ult.

Two things set this awork:

1. Gods property in us, and soveraignty over us, 1 John 4.3.
2. His mercies to us, Rom. 12.1.

Initial Repentance when one is converted, Acts 8. 22.

2. Continual, Rom. 7.24. John 13.10.
3. Personal or Ecclesiastical.

Some say the parts of Repentance are to eschew evil and do good, Psalm 34.15. Esay 1.15,16. & 55.7. Amos 5.15. Rom. 12.9.

1. In sin there is an aversion from God, and a conversion to the creature.

2. In repentance there must be an aversion from the pleasures of sin, and a returning to Communion with God. The vertue and grace of Christ is not only to mortify but vivifie, Rom. 6.11. Sin must be mortified before the Image of God can be superinduced into the soul, Col. 1.13. In renouncing of sin four affections are to be exercised, true humiliation is begun in fear, continued in shame, carried on in sorrow, and ends in indignation.

1. Fear ariseth from application of the curse to the provocation, we compare the sins we have committed with the threatnings of the Word, Iob 22.23. Heb. 12.28. Shame ariseth from comparing filthinesse, Psalm 73.22. Ezra 9.6. Rom. 6.21. Sorrow ariseth from thoughts of Gods goodnesse and our own unkindnesse, Zech. 12.10. Ezekiel 36.31. Luke 7.47. Indignation (the highest act of hatred) ariseth from the unsuitableness of it to our interest in Christ, Esay 30.22. Hoseah 14. 8. Rom. 6. 2. Fear looks on sin as damning, shame looks on it as defiling, sorrow looks on it as offensive to God, indignation looks on it as misbecoming our profession.

In turning to the Lord:

1. There is a serious and solemn consideration of our state and danger out of Christ, Psalm 22.27. & 119.59. Hab. 1.5.
2. A firm resolution, Luke 15.18. Psalm 32.5. & 119.106.
3. A mutual exercise of holy affections, desire, hope and delight, Psalm 119.49.
4. A consecration or resignation of our selves to God, Rom. 12.1. 2 Cor. 5.16.
5. A constant care of making good our engagement, Proverbs 23.26. Hoseah 5.4.

Doctor Twisse against Corvinus saith, There are three parts of Repentance, the Confession of the mouth, Contrition of the heart, and Amendment of life.

Mr Calamy on Acts 17.3. *p.*37. saith, It consists in five things:

1. There must be a true and right sense of sin, as to Gospel-faith there must be a true sight of Christ, John 6.36. so to Gospel-repentance there must be a right sense of sinne.
2. Sorrow for sinne, a spirit of mourning goes along with Gospel-repentance, Zechary

Zechary 12.10. Ezekiel 7.16. Hoseah 11.12. a sorrow according to God 2 Cor. 7.10.

Our sorrow for sinne should be our chiefest sorrow, because sinne is the greatest evil; and it is so in respect of the intellectual part, and in respect of the displacency of the will, wherein the strength of repentance lieth.

3. A self-judging, Psalm 51.4. condemning his acts, and judging himself worthy of all the curses of the Law.

4. A turning from sin to the Lord; Hoseah 14.8. Daniel 4.27.

5. It must be grounded upon the apprehension and hope of mercy, Esay 55.7. Pœnitentia non est sola contritio, sed fides. Luther. Therefore the Lutherans commonly make faith a part of repentance, it is the foundation of it, Non pars sed principium. P. Martyr.

One saith, True Repentance consists in four things:

1. In a humble lamenting and bewailing of our sins, our sinfull nature and wicked lives, whereby we are subject to Gods wrath and eternal death, even a giving our selves so to consider and feel the cursed effects of sin, in that it angers God, and enforceth his justice to punish us, till it makes our hearts to ake and be troubled, perplexed and disquieted, 1 Samuel 7.6. Psalm 38.18. Joel 2.12. James 4.9. so David and Peter wept for their sins.

Have you wept for your sin so that you were indeed sorrowfull and afflicted in spirit? Are you so sorrowfull that you hate it, that you have left it? And have you so left it, that you have left it all, and will you do it for ever? These are particulars worth the enquiring after. Dr Taylors Worthy Communicant, ch. 2. Sect. 3.

2. A confessing the same to God particularly, Prov. 28.13. Psalm 32.3,5. judging our selves worthy to be destroyed therefore, and to perish eternally. David saith, I will confesse mine iniquity, and be sorry for my sin: And John, If we confesse our sins he is faithfull and just to forgive us our sins.

According to the multitude of thy mercies blot out all my offences, and create in me a new heart, and a right spirit. Lord do away the sin of thy servant. Peter.

3. An earnest crying to God for pardon of sin, and for power against it in the name of Christ. David, Psalm 51. saith, Sprinkle me with hyssop, that is, forgive me for his bloud sake whom that hyssop represented. We must take words and beseech the Lord to receive us graciously.

4. A hearty and sincere purpose to reform our heart and life, to cast away all our transgressions, to resist and forbear the practice of sin in all things, and to exercise our selves in all righteousnesse, &c. A firm purpose to leave all the evil that I know condemned, and to do all the good that I know required, a fixed resolution of heart so to do in consideration of Gods goodnesse and grace that hath sent Christ to save the penitent.

There is a similitude between our initial and daily repentance:

1. At our first conversion, we were humbled for our original corruption; so when we renew our conversion, Psalm 51.5.

2. At our first conversion we are sensible of the wrath of God, and the threatnings and curses due to us for our sins; so when we renew our repentance, 1 Cor. 11.31. Mat. 18.3.

3. At our first conversion we are full of grief, shame and self-loathing; so when we renew our repentance, Psalm 6.6. Davids heart melted like wax within him, Ezra 9.6. They shall loath themselves for their abominations, Ezek.

The Antinomians say, The Saints of God once justified and in Christ, need not repentance, they cry down this as an un-gospel-like practice, and dislike mourning for sinne, they would have nothing but faith in Christ, and rejoycing in him.

To be troubled for sin (they say) is a dishonour to the grace of God and satisfaction of Christ, our repentance and humiliation indeed cannot satisfie God; Christ hath done that, laid down a price answerable to the debt, but the Lord hath inseparably annexed repentance and remission. Acts 2.38. & 3.19. & 8.22. and he requires not only an initial repentance in reference to a mans state, but a daily repentance in reference to the acts of sin, he must daily wash his feet. See Gal. 5.31. The sin against the holy Ghost is therefore unpardonable, because the Lord will not give repentance, Heb. 6.

Repentance is Evangelical, and a Duty in regenerate persons:

First, Because it is a fruit of the holy Ghost, Acts 11.18.

Secondly,

Secondly, Becauſe none but regenerate perſons can perform it, to bewail ſinne, and aggravate it, juſtifying God, condemning themſelves, and laying hold on Chriſt.

Thirdly, The Goſpel enjoyns it, and threatens the neglect of it. Some places joyn Repentance and pardon together, Acts 5.31. Luke 24.47. Some it and faith, Mark 1.15. Acts 20.21.

Fourthly, Chriſt, John Baptiſt and all the Apoſtles preacht repentance, Mat. 3.2. & 4.17. Mark 6.12.

Fifthly, Becauſe it may and doth work moſt kindly in and with faith, when they look upon Chriſt whom they have pierced, and conſider that they have crucified him.

Sixthly, Becauſe it conforms us to God and Chriſt, in hating and ſubduing ſinne in us, it breedeth in us a loathing of ſinne, and gives us a victory over it. What the Pump is to the Ship, Repentance is to the ſoul, it keeps it clean.

Seventhly, Becauſe we have ſtill fleſh in us to be awed, as well as the Spirit in us to be cheriſhed.

Object. Juſtification is but one indiviſible act of grace pardoning all ſins paſt, preſent and to come.

There is a two-fold forgiveneſſe:

1. In foro poli, in the Court of God, ſo all ſins paſt, preſent and to come are actually pardoned at the firſt act of believing and repenting.

2. In foro ſoli, in the Court of Conſcience, ſo they are not pardoned; we ſhall have no comfort or aſſurance of their pardon, till we actually repent of them.

Repentance is a part of the exerciſe of our whole Chriſtian converſation, and a work to be ordinarily practiſed, though there be one great and univerſal repentance for the change of our ſtate. In Revel. 2. & 3. chap. among the duties God requires of the ſeven Churches which were all converted, of four of them he requires the exerciſe of repentance, Revel 2.5. & 3.13,19.

But there are ſome ſpecial ſeaſons wherein God in a more ſpecial manner cals his people to repent, when he would have the practice of it more full and extraordinary, 2 Cor. 7.11. when we ſhould more ſtrictly examine our ſelves, and our ſorrow ſhould be much inlarged, 1 Samuel 7.6. Judges 2.

There are five ſpecial times for renewing of Repentance:

Firſt, The time when Gods hand is upon us in any ſpecial correction.

1. God expects and requires it then, Eſay 22. the firſt fifteen verſes. Zeph. 2. begin.

2. The ſervants of God have ordinarily practiſed it then, Jeremiah, Job, David, Lam 3.39,40.

3. God hath ſeverely threatned them when they have not repented at ſuch times, 2 Chron. 28.22. Jer. 5.3. Amos 4. The reaſon is, becauſe the Lord hath appointed this exerciſe of repentance as the only means to remove the rod, or turn it to a bleſſing.

Secondly, Another ſpecial time when God would have his ſervants to renew their repentance, is upon their fall, when they have committed any groſſe ſin, as David after defiling Urijahs wife, Pſalm 51. and when he had fallen into the ſin of numbring the people, 2 Samuel 24. So Ezra 9. when the people had married with ſtrange wives, they wept exceedingly. So when the Church of Corinth had wrapt themſelves in the guilt of the inceſtuous perſons ſinne, 2 Cor. 7. Peter when he had denied his Maſter. Our ſorrow doth not make God amends, or pacifie his wrath when it is kindled; it is only a condition of the Covenant of Grace; the exerciſe of repentance, ſatisfieth not God but the Church; it is a help to our own ſouls, whereby our ſins are ſubdued.

Thirdly, When the Lord cals any of his people to any ſpecial ſervice that he would have them do for him and the Church, then they ought to renew their repentance: When God called his people to renew their Covenant, there was a ſpecial humiliation before, Ezra 8.21. Eſay 6. When Joſhua was called to build the Temple, and be an high-Priest to God, *Zech.*3. When they were to come to the Sacrament they were to examine themselves thorowly and judge themselves; so *Exod.*19. 14. else our unworthinesse may stand as a bar that we shall not comfortably go on in the work of the Lord, Gen 35. begin.

It is not onely among the promiſes and precepts but priviledges of the Goſpel, Act. 9.18. Da prius pœnitentiam, poſtea indulgentiam. Fulgentius. They are therefore Miniſters of the Goſpel not legal preachers which preach repentance. See Durham on Revel. 3. p. 248.

There is one act of faith to be done once for all, to lay hold on Chriſt, and be united to him, and juſtified by him, yet I muſt live by it, and do every duty by it; ſo for repentance.

Iſa. 27.9. Jer. 2.19. Heb. 12.11.

Before the Supper and the offering of a childe in Baptism, then Christs death is represented. Rom. 6.4. Gal.3.1.

Fourthly, When we look to receive any special mercy, when we either need or expect by vertue of a promise, that God will do some great thing for us, as Isaac when he lookt for his Fathers servant to return with a wife. *Dan.*9. the whole Chapter is the humblest exercise of repentance that we read of; the occasion was, he expected that the Lord would now break the Babylonian yoke. Moses called the people to deep humiliation and repentance, when they were to possesse the Land of Canaan.

Fifthly, The time of death, when we expect our change, then is a special time for the exercise of the duty of repentance, that is a fitter time to finish than begin repentance*, then we should specially look to our hearts and examine our wayes. It was the commendation of the Church of Thyatira, that their last works were best; and it is the last time that we shall have to do with repentance; we carry love and joy to Heaven, and most of the Graces except Faith and Hope, there shall be no use of them; when we goe hence we goe to the greatest Communion with God that the creature is capable of. Esther the night or two before she went to lie with Ahashuerus, was most carefull to have her body perfumed and oiled.

* On a mans death-bed the day of repentance is past: for repentance being the renewing of a holy life, the living the life of grace, it is a contradiction to say, that a man can live a holy life upon his death-bed. Dr Taylors Rule of holy living, chap.4. Sect.4. That place Ezek. 33. 14. is it which is so often mistaken for that common saying, At what time soever a sinner repents him of his sinnes from the bottome of his heart, I will put all his wickednesse out of my remembrance, saith the Lord. Let not that be made a colour to countenance a death-bed penitent. Dr Taylor on Jer. 13. 16. Serm.2. See more there, and in his Great Exemplar, or History of the Life and Death of Christ, part 2. Sect. 12. of Repentance, part 3. Sect. 5. of Death, and the due preparation to it, pag. 560, 563. One may repent on his death-bed as well as the thief on the Crosse, but it is dangerous to put off repentance till then, it will be harder to come in. Its a rare sight (saith one) to find a young man godly, and an old man penitent. We acknowledge that as God calls some at the first hour, so may some be called at the last hour of the day, yea inter pontem & fontem. Dr Jackson indeed hath an opinion, that a man may proceed so farre in sinne in this life that the door of repentance may be shut upon him, none of our Divines deny the possibility of any mans Salvation while he lives in this world. Dr Twiss against Hoard. p.45.

There is a Gospel-command to repent, Mat.9.13. Act. 17.30. 2. The very space of repentance is a mercy, and given you that you may repent, Rev.2.21. 3. It is the natural fruit of a regenerate heart, Ezek. 11.19. 4. It is repentance to salvation, 1 Cor.7. 10.

Motives to provoke us to the practice of Repentance, two especially, which are the great Motives to any duty.

1. The Necessity of it.
2. The Utility of it.

I. The Necessity of it.

Repentance is necessary to remission:

1. Necessitate præcepti, Ezek.18.30.

2. Necessitate medij, one must condemn his sin, and loath himself, and prize a pardon afore he obtain it, Ezekiel 20. 43. Luke 7.47.

The Schoolmen demand, Why repentance should not make God satisfaction, because it hath God for its object as well as sin? 2 *Cor.*7.10. The offence takes its measure from the object, the good duty from the subject, therefore Christ only could make satisfaction.

It is necessary, because every man must appear before the judgment seat of Christ, and receive an everlasting doom, and our plea must then be either that we have not sinned, or else that we have repented, Except ye repent ye shall all perish; while one remains impenitent, his person and services are abominable in the sight of God, *Isa.*1. & *Isa.*66. liable to all the curses written in the Book of God. The Jews have a Proverb (saith Drusius) Uno die ante mortem pœnitentiam agas, Repent one day before death, that is, every day, because thou maist die to morrow.

There is an absolute necessity of Repentance for a fruitfull and worthy receiving of the Sacrament.

First, Without this there can be no true desire to come to this Supper; Faith is the hand, Repentance the stomack; by a sight of sinne we see our want and need of Christ.

Secondly,

Secondly, Without it there can be no fitneſſe to receive Chriſt. We muſt eat this Paſſeover with bitter herbs.

Thirdly, All ſhould labour to have aſſurance of the pardon of their ſins, This Cup is the New Teſtament in my blond for the remiſſion of ſins; Without repentance there is no remiſſion, Act. 5. 31.

Fourthly, Becauſe ſinne is of a ſoiling nature, and doth defile Gods Ordinance to a mans ſoul, and if we come in ſinne we cannot profit by the Lords Ordinance.

II. The Utility of it. The Neceſſity of it ſhould work on our fear, the Utility of it on our love; the two great paſſions of the ſoul.

First, It is infinitely pleaſing to Almighty God, Luke 15. per totum. the intent of three Parables there is to ſhew what content it is to God to ſee a ſinner to turn from his evil wayes, him that had loſt his Groat, his Sheep, and the Prodigal Sonne. There is more joy in Heaven for one ſinner that repents then for ninety nine that need no repentance, as if he had aimed at the Antinomians.

Secondly, The benefit of it is unſpeakable to thine own ſoul.

1. It will remove all evil:

1. Spiritual, all the guilt of ſinne, and the defilement of it, 1 John 1. lat. end. Eſay 1. 16, 17, 18. no more prejudice lies againſt thee than if thou hadſt never ſinned againſt him. Mary Magdalen was infamous for her uncleanneſſe, yet Chriſt firſt appeared to her after he roſe from the dead, all the curſes due to ſin are laid on Chriſt.

2. Outward Evil, When I ſpeak concerning a Nation, if they repent I will repent of all the evil I thought to do. See Joel 2.

2. Bring all Good, it brings Gods favour, that flows on the ſoul; God hath promiſed grace and means of grace to ſuch, Ieremy 3. 13, 14, 15. Prov. 1. 23. Temporal bleſſing, Iob 22. Everlaſting life is their portion; it is called Repentance unto life, Act. 11. 18. Unto Salvation, 2 Cor. 11. 10. It is a means conducing to that end.

Means of Repentance:

1. Diligently ſtudy to know how miſerable your ſtate is without it, read over thy doings that have not been good every day. See the evil and danger of ſin, Acts 2. 21. & 3. 17, 18. & 26. 18. Ier. 31. 18. 2 Tim. 2. 25.

2. Repentance is the gift of God*, he granted alſo repentance to the Gentiles; beg earneſtly at Gods hand that he would make ſinne bitter to thee, and cauſe thee to hate it, Zech. 12. they mourned apart, then God poured on the houſe of David the Spirit of ſupplication, Ier. 3. 18. Turn me Lord, and I ſhall be turned. * Act. 5. 31. & 11. 18. 2 Tim. 2. 12.

3. Attend upon the Miniſtry of the Word, the preaching of the Word is called the word of Repentance, the preaching of the Law, Gods word is a hammer to break the hard heart, eſpecially the preaching of the Goſpel, the diſcovery of Chriſt, They ſhall look on him whom they have pierced, Rom. 2. The goodneſſe of God ſhould lead thee to repentance.

4. Faith in the blond of Chriſt; when thou ſeeſt thy ſelf loſt and undone, venture thy ſelf upon the free grace of God revealed in the Goſpel; faith in Chriſt will purifie the heart, Acts 15. that is, inſtrumentally, the holy Ghoſt is the principal agent, You have received the Spirit by the preaching of faith.

Three things are required in Repentance:

1. The ſight of ſin by the Law.

2. Hearty and continual ſorrow for ſinne by conſidering the filthineſſe and deſert of it, Gods judgements due for ſinne, his mercies beſtowed on us, Chriſts ſuffering for our ſins, our own unthankfulneſſe notwithſtanding Gods benefits.

3. Amendment, an utter and well-adviſed forſaking of all ſin in affection, and of groſſe ſin in life and converſation.

Renewing of Repentance, lies

1. In renewing a mans humiliation and godly ſorrow.

2. In renewing his obligation to duty.

The consideration of our Saviours death for our sinnes should be unto us a most powerful motive to repentance. Two things are necessary in the point of repentance, for sinnes past to confesse and lament them before God, humbly craving pardon, and for the time to come to reforme and amend our lives, casting away all our transgressions, and applying our selves to all holinesse and righteousnesse.

One of the Popish Priests preaching of Christs Passion, and having caused the people to weep abundantly, by setting forth the cruel death and sufferings of Christ, in the end seeing the time past, he bid them not weep, for peradventure it was not true; whence it grew into a Proverb, N' en pleurez pas: peut-estre n' est il pas vrai Traitté. Preparatif à l' Apologie pour Herodote, l. 1. c. 23. Par Henry Estienne.

Now to the performance of this duty the death of Christ must needs be to him that considers of it, the most effectuall argument and mighty motive in the world. Do we not here see that the sins we have lived in are most loathsome to God, for had he not hated them with infinite hatred, would he have inflicted such horrible punishments upon our Saviour his only Son by them? Do we not see that they are most dangerous to our selves, exposing us to the suffering of intollerable evils, unlesse by vertue of Christs death we be freed from them, which can never be but upon our Repentance. God hath in the death of Christ discovered such infinite abomination of sin, and withall such infinite grace to the sinner, that this should prevail with us. Paul saith, All we which are baptized into Christ are baptized into his death, and we are buried with him by baptisme into his death, and we are crucified together with him, that the body of sinne may be abolished. We must be made partakers of the death of Christ, if ever we will be made partakers of his resurrection; we must be made conformable to his death, if ever we will live and reign with him.

Marks to know whether our repentance be right:

Whosoever hath truly repented, is
1. Low in his own eyes, so Paul.
2. Fears sinne ever after, Eccl. 9. 2.
3. Is pitifull to others in their fals, Galatians 6. 1.

1. If it be speedy and without delay, Satan alwayes saith, it is either too soon to repent, as in youth; or too late, as in old-age.
2. Constant, not cast it aside, because we repented at our first conversion.
3. Voluntary, and so a filial not a forced repentance, voluntary repentance speaks love to God, forced love to our selves.
4. It must be deep and thorow repentance sutable to our sins: the greatest sinners if gracious, have the greatest sorrow, and their joy is the more full after, Psal. 32. 4. 2 Sam. 14. 14.

4. There will be a growth in the contrary grace, Jeremy 4. 14. Daniel 4. 27. Matthew 3. 9.

III. Love, or Charity.

This is a speciall grace of the Gospel, it is a longing desire for the good of our brethren, or a willing that good to one which is proper to him; or as some describe it, a grace, whereby we love God above all, and our neighbour as our selves.

The offices and generall duties of Charity are three:
1. Doing good.
2. Speaking good.
3. Forgiving evil. Dr Taylors Worthy Communicant, chap. 4. Sect. 1. See Sect. 2, 3, 4.

There is a double Union:
First, Mysticall with Christ the Head by faith, and with one another by love.
Secondly, Moral, an agreement in judgment and affection, Joh. 17. 11. See 21, 22, 23. Act. 4. 32.

Christ was,
1. Incarnate for this end, that his people might be one, Eph. 1. 10.
2. This is often inculcated in Christs Sermons, Joh. 15. 17. He came from heaven on purpose to propound to us a patern of charity, Eph. 5. 2. Unity is the beauty,

See of Christian love, Doctor Gouge on Heb. 6. 9. Sect. 67, 68, 69, 71, 72. And of Brotherly-love, Heb. 13. 1. Sect. 2, 3, 4, 5, 9, 10, 11. There are two principal acts of love. 1. Desiring Gods presence and communion with him, the light of his countenance, Psa. 26. 8. 2. Delight in him, Psal. 91. 14.

strength

ſtrength and ſafety of the Church, Act. 1.14. See Iſa. 11.6.

3. Chriſt died for this end, Iſa. 2.15,16.

4. Chriſt aimed at this in his Aſcention and pouring out of his Spirit, Eph. 4.5.

5. It is the end of Chriſts Ordinances in the Church, of Baptiſm, 1 Cor. 12.13. and of the Lords Supper, 1 Cor. 10.17.

Love is excellent:

Firſt, Comparatively, it

1. Excels all gifts, 1 Cor. 12.31. all graces, 1 Cor. 13.13.

2. It is excellent in it ſelf, predicated of God himſelf, 1 Joh. 4.8.

3. The exerciſe of it is ſweet, Pſal. 133.1. 1 Joh. 4.18. and it makes all other things pleaſant, Prov. 15.17.

4. It is an uniting grace, makes us like God, he is the moſt holy one. That is a great promiſe, Ezek. 11.19.

There is a three-fold oneneſſe:

1. Of mind or judgment, Act. 2.1.

2. In practice, a uniformity.

3. In affection, this may be where the other two are wanting.

5. It's a ſtrengthening and ſafe-keeping grace, Act. 2.3.

6. The exerciſe of it, gives much growth to all other graces, and much luſtre to holineſſe, 1 Cor. 4.1. Eph. 4.14.

Præcipit Apoſtolus ut habeatur charitas, corripit, quia non habetur charitas, orat ut abundet charitas. O homo in preceptione cognoſce quid debeas habere: in correptione cognoſce, tuo te vitio non habere: in oratione cognoſce, unde accipias quod vis habere. Aug. de correptione & gratia.

Every one is bound to love four things, ſaith Auguſtine.

Firſt, God who is the chiefeſt good, and therefore deſerves the chiefeſt love.

Secondly, Himſelf, God gives no commandment for one to love himſelf, becauſe he commands one to love God as the chiefeſt good, and ſo to love him as to enjoy him, which one cannot do without love of himſelf.

Thirdly, To love man as man, 1 Theſſ. 3.12.

Fourthly, To love all the * Saints, the brotherhood, 1 Pet. 3.17. thoſe which love Saints as Saints, or becauſe Saints, muſt needs love them all, Eph. 1.15. Col. 1.4. Philem. 5.

* 1 Theſſ. 4.10. 1 John 3.14.

Our love muſt be,

1. Sincere or without hypocriſie, Rom. 12.9. it is ſo when we cleave to what ever is good in him, and abhor what is evil in him.

2. Fervent, 1 Pet. 1.22.

3. Conſtant, a friend loveth at all times.

We muſt alſo love our enemies, Matth. 5.44,45.

It is reported of John, that in his old-age being unable by weakneſſe to ſpeak long unto the Congregation, he would ſtand up, and inſtead of a long Sermon ingeminate this precept, Diligite filioli, diligite, Little children love, love one another. The ſubject of his Epiſtle is love, 1 Joh. 3.18. He is called the beloved Diſciple, becauſe he was ſo full of it himſelf.

Mandatum novum dicitur, quia excellentiſſimum, & quod nunquam antiquari debet. Rivet. Rom 13.10. See 1 Joh. 4. 20. & 3. 17. Matth. 7. 12

Theſe are my fixed reſolutions and deſires, even to be Catholick in my eſtimation and reſpect to all, loving all Chriſtians of what ſort ſoever, that may be truely called Chriſtians; but not partaking of the errours or ſinnes of all that I thus love; and therefore not to imitate all in their way of worſhip or converſation; but with this Catholick charity, to have the converſation of ſuch as the world hath long called Puritans, and in this ſtate I deſire to dye. Mr Baxters Preface to his Gro. Relig.

Chriſt cals it the new Commandment, becauſe excellent, or becauſe ſolemnly renewed by him, Joh. 13.34. Theſe are my Commandments that ye love one another. This is the great grace which diſtinguiſheth the children of light from the children of darkneſſe, Joh. 13.35. He that loves not is not of God.

There are high Elogies of it, 1 Cor. 13. There are eight things delivered negatively, and five affirmatively, concerning the exerciſe of love.

We muſt love our neighbour as our ſelves, Jam. 2.8. We muſt neither wiſh nor do them them any more hurt than we would wiſh or do to our ſelves.

2. We ſhould really promote his good as our own, 1 *Cor.*10.24.

We are,

Firſt, To pray for them, *Heb.*13.3.

1. For our enemies, *Matth.*5.44. ſo did Chriſt and Steven for their enemies.

2. For our friends, Rom. 15. 30. Epheſ. 6. 18, 19. *Col.*4 3. Actis 12. 5. Phil. 1. 3, 4.

Secondly, Counſel them, *Heb.*3.13.

Thirdly, Relieve them in their wants, *Matth.*25.lat.end.

Fourthly, Comfort the ſad, 1 *Theſſ.*4.18. & 5.14. See 1 *Cor.*10.17.

Fifthly, Reprove them when they ſin, *Lev.*19 17.*Gal.*6.1.

The Sacrament is a Seal of our Communion, that we are all one bread and one body.

The holy Symbols of the Euchariſt were intended to be an union of Chriſtian ſocieties to God, and with one another; the evil taking of it diſunites us from God, and the evil underſtanding it, divides us from each other. Dr Taylor of Chriſts Real preſence in the Sacrament.

Non eſt aliud peccatum aquæ huic Sacramento adverſum, atq; diſcordia. Contrarium eſt enim & nomini, & rei hujus Sacramenti, nomen eſt communio, res unitas cordium. Luther. de præparatione cordis pro ſuſcipienda ſacra Euchariſtia.

It is evident that Chriſt upon his death inſtituted that Supper; As, to be a ſeal of that Covenant of grace between God and us, ratified thereby; So alſo to be a communion, the higheſt outward pledge, ratification and teſtimony of love and amity among his members themſelves. Dr Goodwins Chriſt the univerſal Peace-maker, par.2. Sect.2.

Yet the great wall of ſeparation between the Papiſts and us, is the Sacrament of the Altar. (The great Queſtion propounded by them, was, What ſay you to the Sacrament of the Altar?) and thoſe that are called Lutherans and Calviniſts the Lords Supper, and alſo between Preſbyterians and Independents.

And this is a grace preſſed with the like neceſſity toward man, that faith is toward God.

Ex conſuevandi ritu in locis ſacris ἀγάπας Chriſtianorum traxerunt originem: quarum non apud Apoſtolos ſolos, ſed patrum etiam eruditiſſimos crebra fit mentio. Cœna noſtra de nomine rationem ſui oſtendit. Vocatur ἀγάπη, id quod dilectio penes Græcos eſt. Tertul. Apolog. Dilher. Elect.l.1. c.12. Cùm ex charitate diligatur proximus propter Deum, quanto aliquis magis diligat Deum, tanto etiam magis ad proximum dilectionem oſtendit, nulla inimicitia impediente. Sicut ſi aliquis multum diligeret aliquem hominem, amore ipſius, filios ejus amaret, etiam inimicos ſibi. Aquin.2a,2æ.Q.25.Art.8.

The Chriſtians in the Primitive Church did kiſſe each other at the Sacrament; this was called Oſculum pacis, the kiſſe of peace in ſign of love. Dr Clerk.

Some keep themſelves from the Sacrament, becauſe they are not in charity.

Theſe men ſhew manifeſt contempt to Chriſt and his bleſſed Ordinance, that rather than they will forſake their malice, they will want it.

2. Such profeſſe they will live ſtill in malice, and have no deſire to be reconciled, for if they had they need not refuſe to receive, 2 *Cor.*8.12.

Communia convivia erant, quæ Apoſtolorum tempore in Congregationibus celebrabantur, & poſt illa Euchariſtiam ſumebant. Jonſtoni *Syntag.de Communione veteris Eccleſia cap.*1. *Artic.*2. Vide plura ibid. Mountag. Def. of Tithes againſt Mr Selden,cap.2.

The Love-feaſts were appointed to ſignifie their mutual love one to another, they were immediately before the receiving of the Sacrament, 1 Cor 11. 21. St Chryſoſtome makes the love-feaſts to be after the taking of the Euchariſt. They were uſed to have a great Feaſt, to which all the poor people were invited on the charges of the rich. This they did partly in imitation of our Saviour, who inſtituted the Sacrament after a full Supper, and partly in expreſſion of their perfect love towards all men.

Theſe Agapæ, or Love-feaſts of the ancient Chriſtians, were ſo called of their end and purpoſe, or effect. Albeit they had divine Tolerarion, yet they had not divine Inſtitution and Introduction. For it is not ſhewed out of holy Writ, or conſent of Antiquity, that they were commanded by Chriſt or his Apoſtles warrant. We may well ſay they had: for without check or controlment of their uſe, without alteration for their being, they were in the Apoſtles times, and there is mention of them in Scripture; only they are taxed that did abuſe them, and made themſelves unworthy of ſuch holy meetings. St Paul is commonly underſtood of theſe Feaſts, 1 Cor. 11. 18. which were concomitant unto the holy Sacrament then, but St Jude in expreſſe words doth name them, verſ. 12. Maculæ in Agapis veſtris. Both prove but a practice abuſed, and reformed again by S^t Paul, not an Ordination from God or the Apoſtles. Theſe Love-feaſts were general meetings of the whole Church, at leaſt repreſentative of as many as did communicate, unleſſe ſome great occaſion did withhold them.

in

Charity and brotherly kindneſſe differ,

1. In the object; charity is due to men as men, Eſay 58. 7. Acts 7. 26. a love of juſtice not to defraud them, and of compaſſion pitty their perſons, but brotherly love is due to men as Saints, 1 Pet. 2. 17.

2. In the ground; becauſe of the Image of God in them, Luk. 10. 27, 28.

3. In the cauſe, one is from nature; the other from the ſpirit, Gal. 5. 22. 1 John 5. 22.

4. It is a love of another kind and degree, 1 John 3. 16. See Gal. 6. 10.

Brotherly love is a grace wrought in us by the Spirit, inclining us to love all thoſe which have the ſame grace with us.

It is worthy our notice, that the firſt perſon that ever received this holy Sacrament, was (in all likelihood) S^t John the beloved Diſciple, he whoſe heart was ſo full of love to the brethren, that he breathed little elſe in the whole diſcourſe which he left to his little children.

IV. Hungring after Chriſt, and deſire of Gods favour.

We muſt come poor and hungry to the Lords Table, Pſal. 132. 15. Luk. 14. 12. Rev. 3. 17, 18. The promiſes are made to the hungry, Iſa. 55. 1. & 45. 19. Prov. 21. 21. Luk. 1. 50. Mat. 5. 3. Jer. 31. 25. Joh. 6. 44. Heb. 7. 25.

See Pſal. 27. 4. & 41. 1, 2, 3, & 44. 23. & 84. 2. Eſay 41, 16.

Luthers paradox is, None come worthy, but thoſe that come unworthy, that is, in their own ſenſe and feeling.

Lutherus quadam concione ait eum ad cœnam, Domini optimè diſpoſitum venire, qui perſpicuè fuerit diſpoſitus, eum dignè manducare, qui indignitatem ſuam agnoverit.

See D^r Taylors Worthy Communicant, Chap. 2. Sect. 2. He ſaith there, It is worth obſerving, that there being in the Old Teſtament thirteen types and umbrages of this holy Sacrament; eleven of them are of meat and drink, which he mentions there

Hunger and thirſt imply,

1. A want of thoſe things which ſhould ſupport our bodily life.
2. An afflicting ſenſe of the want.
3. An eager deſire of the ſupply of it.

So we muſt apprehend:

1. Our own emptineſſe, our loſt condition.
2. We muſt be ſenſible of the wrath of God due to us for our ſins.
3. We muſt earneſtly deſire Gods favour, to be reconciled to him.

Hunger and thirſt are both expreſſed, Joh. 6. 44. to ſhew the thorowneſſe of the apprehenſion and ſupply.

Theſe longings of the ſoul bring in,

Firſt, The manifeſtations of God to the ſoul and the light of his countenance, Dan. 10. 11.

Secondly, Much quickening grace, Pſal. 119. David praies often for this, Eſay 41. 16.

Thirdly, Much ſtrength and incouragement in the wayes of God, Pſal. 59. 32. & 68. ult.

Fourthly, A large ſtock of all ſpiritual good.

Reaſons:

1. Theſe onely can reliſh Chriſt; he is ſweet to hungry ſouls, Matth. 11. 28. Thoſe that are affected with the ſenſe of their ſins can beſt taſte of Gods mercy.

2. Theſe only ſuit with Chriſt; Follow me, for I am lowly and meek.

3. This will awake deſires: the hunger-bitten beggar will be importunate with God.

4. This will make you welcome to God; He fils the hungry with good things. Open thy mouth wide and he will fill it, Iſa. 44. 3. Pſal. 145. 15, compared with the 19.

We muſt deſire Gods favour heartily and continually, becauſe

I. It is neceſſary; for it were better for one not to be, than to be out of God favour.

II. Becauſe it is excellent; for Gods favour and the light of his countenance is better than life it ſelf.

That we may ſtir up this deſire in us, we muſt conſider

1. Our need of Chriſt his fulneſſe and perfection.
2. The neceſſity and excellency of the Sacrament.
3. The benefits we have therein, and the helps thereby to quicken and confirm our faith.

Having diſpatched the conſideration of the truth of certain graces we are to examine before we come to the Lords Table; I ſhall in the next place ſpeak of the growth or wants of our graces.

I. Of the growth of our Graces.

We muſt bring a fit faith and repentance. 2 Tim. 2. 1.

As we ought to examine our ſelves of the truth of our graces when we go to the Lords Supper, ſo likewiſe of their growth and ſtrength: true grace will grow.

The Lords Supper is a ſealing and ſtrengthening Ordinance, therefore preſuppoſeth life; we ſhould then know the degree and ſtrength of our graces.

Grace is a ſupernatural and peculiar quality wrought in the people of God by his Spirit, whereby they are inabled to pleaſe God in all things.

Grace is an inſtinct put into the ſoul after union with Chriſt, and with God by him.

1. A quality in us, ſometimes it ſignifieth grace in God, Being juſtified freely by his grace.

2. Supernatural, inableth us to do things above nature.

3. Peculiar, to diſtinguiſh it from common graces in reprobates which are ſupernatural, as the grace of God working miracles.

The Familiſts ſay, Grace is Chriſt himſelf working in us, that there are no habits of grace, we do not believe and repent, but Chriſt in us, there is a ſeed in a man, 1 John 3. 9. Grace is called the new-creature, the inward man, the Spirit and Grace are diſtinguiſhed, Gal. 5. 22. 2 Peter 3. 18. This duty ſuits with our preſent ſtate, we are in a ſtate of progreſſe and edifying, 1 Theſſ. 4. 1. Prov. 4. 18. We ſhall be continually aſſaulted,

4. Wrought in us by the Spirit; it is not in us by nature or education, it is the grace of God, he is the God of all grace.

5. To pleaſe God in all things, we muſt have reſpect to all his Commandments.

The Scripture ſpeaks much of abounding and growing in grace, Pſal. 92. 12. 1 Cor. 15. 58. 2 Pet. 3. ult. See Dr Manton on the 2d Verſe of the Epiſtle of Jude.

The word abounding is taken from Rivers, the other from all ſorts of vitals or plants. See 2 Peter 1. 5, 6. The Apoſtle cals upon the Corinthians to be ſtrong, and upon Timothy to be ſtrong in the grace which is in Chriſt Jeſus, and upon the Epheſians, to be ſtrong in Chriſt, and in the power of his might. Paul praies for the Epheſians, that according to the riches of his grace the Lord would ſtrengthen them by his Spirit with all might in the inward man. Bodily ſtrength is a natural gift common to man with beaſt, yet many brag of it, ſpiritual ſtrength is far more excellent. See Heb. 10. 29. Eph. 4. 15.

There is alwayes a furthermore in Chriſtianity, 1 Theſſ. 4. 1. Ubi incipis nolle fieri melior, ibi etiam deſinis eſſe bonus. Bern. Epiſt. 91.

Reaſons why Chriſtians ſhould ſtrive to grow in grace.

Firſt, God commands it, Phil. 1. 12. Epheſ. 3. 19. Coloſ. 2. 19. 2 Pet. 1. 10. Heb. 6. 1.

Secondly, God commends it, O woman great is thy faith. Stephen was full of the holy Ghoſt, Acts 9. 36. they have Gods promiſes that they ſhall grow, ſee Hoſea 14. 4, 5, 6.

Thirdly, The Saints of God have practiſed it, 1. Prayed for the increaſe of grace, Phil. 2, 11. 2. Laboured for the increaſe of it, 3. They have means to grow, the Miniſtry, Lords Supper, Communion of Saints.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, From the ſimilitudes to which a child of God is compared in Scripture: to trees, Pſal. 1.2. & 91.12. Iſa. 61.3. Hoſ. 14.5. Plants grow till they dye, whence they are called vegetables.

Fifthly, From the nature of grace, where there is truth of grace it will grow, Mat. 13.8. becauſe it puts a man into Chriſt, whoſoever is in him, muſt needs be fruitful, Joh. 15.5. if the body of Chriſt did not grow as well as the head, it would be a monſtrous body, Col. 2.19. Eph. 2.10.

Sixthly, According to the meaſure of your grace ſhall be the degree of your glory, 2 Pet. 1.10. He that ſoweth liberally ſhall reap liberally.

They ſhould grow,

1. In all the kinds of grace, knowledg, faith, love, obedience; in knowledg, Col. 1.9. Phil. 1.9. faith, love to God, his people, Ordinances, in obedience, Luke 15.6,7.

2. In the degrees of grace, Prov. 4.18.

There is a ſpiritual ſtrength,

Firſt, To bear burdens with patience.

Secondly, To performe duties with cheerfulneſſe.

Thirdly, To reſiſt temptation, and conquer enemies with ſucceſſe.

There is ſome ſtrength in a renewed man, he hath habitual grace, Ezek. 36.27. but yet he can do nothing throughly and with ſucceſſe, without the Spirit, Gal. 5.17. See John 15.4. 2 Cor. 3.5. The Spirit works upon the unregenerate as objects, by the regenerate as inſtruments.

Motives to get ſtrength and grow in grace:

1. We need more ſtrength, Rev. 3.9. Grace is the elevation of the ſoul.

2. It is more honourable to have a great meaſure of grace, Rev. 2.19. Chriſt checks his Diſciples for their little faith.

3. If we grow not in grace we decreaſe, Heb. 6.1. compared with ver. 4. All Chriſtians (ſaith Jerome) are like the Angels in Jacobs ladder, they all aſcended or deſcended, Qui dixit ſufficit deficit, 1 Joh. 3.3.

4. Fruitfull Chriſtians are in a happy condition, Heb. 6.7. God is much honoured by them, Joh. 15.5,8. Phil. 1.11. he will delight to dwell with them, at the day of judgement they ſhall receive publick approbation and remuneration, Mat. 25.23.

We ſhould grow,

1. Habitually, the graces of knowledge, faith and love, ſhould be confirmed and rooted in us.

2. Effectively, in all the fruits of grace.

3. Subjectively, in all the powers of the ſoul; there ſhould be light in the underſtanding, ſubmiſſion in the will.

Marks of the growth of grace:

Firſt, It is a proportionable growth, a growth in all the parts, our faith is ſuitable to our knowledg, our love to our faith, and practice to both.

Secondly, Conſtant, at leaſt in our deſires and endeavours.

Thirdly, It will grow againſt all hinderances.

The infallible Sings of growth in grace, are theſe

1. When we grow more ſpiritual:

1. In our aims, when we have pure intentions in every action.

2. In our duties, when the mind is more enlightened to mind ſpiritual duties, and to reſiſt ſpiritual temptations, when we oppoſe thoughts and luſts, not onely morally but ſpiritually evil, and when we reliſh the more ſpiritual part of the Word, 1 Cor. 10.6.

3. In our motives, when we reſiſt ſin, not becauſe it will damn us, but becauſe it is againſt Gods Law, purity, and defiles us.

2. When we grow more ſolid and judicious, 1 Cor. 13.11. Phil. 1.9. Growth is not to be meaſured by the intenſneſſe and vigour of the affections, that is more in young Chriſtians.

3. When we grow more humble, by long experience reflexive ſight is increaſed, one is more able to look into conſcience, and ſee his own defects, Prov. 30.2.

The loweſt degree of growth in grace may be diſcerned by two Marks:

1. By longing for food, 1 *Pet.*2.2.

2. By being humbled for want of growth, Mark 9.24. It is a good degree of our growth in grace to ſee how much we want.

There is difference between growth in gifts and graces, 1 Cor. 1. 5, 7. Many in theſe dayes grow in gifts: gifts are for others, and but for this life: growth in gifts often puffeth up, but growth in grace humbleth.

A Chriſtian may grow either quoad amplitudinem ſcientiæ, or efficaciam ſcientiæ, the inlargement of his knowledge may be both in reſpect of the matter, he may know more things than he did; as alſo in the manner, more clearly, evidently and firmly than he did; or elſe in the efficacy of his knowledg, he knoweth them more practically.

2. Means of our ſpiritual growth:

1. General, 1. Prayer, *Ezek.*36.37. Open thy mouth wide and I will fill it, James 1.5. 2. The Word, 1 *Pet.*2.2. it is compared to rain, *Deut.*32.2. and ſuch things as will further growth, *Iſa.*55.5,11. milk; Children never grow ſo much in ſo ſhort a time, as when they are fed with milk, ſincere milk, not mixed with error, 2 *Cor.*2. ult.

The word helps on,

Firſt, The mortification of ſinne.

1. By diſcovering the ſpirituality of the commands.
2. By revealing the filthy nature of ſin.
3. By laying open the danger of ſin.
4. By giving us promiſes for the mortification of ſin, 2 *Cor.*7.1.
5. By revealing Chriſt the purchaſer and the Spirit, the applier of theſe Promiſes, theſe are the great deſtroyers of ſin, *Rom.*8.13.
6. By acquainting us with ſuch outward helps and means, whereby the work is carried on.
   1. By avoiding the occaſions and appearances of ſin.
   2. By keeping under the body.

Secondly, It helps on the vivification or increaſe of all the graces of the Spirit.

1. By revealing the nature, acts, and degrees of every grace.
2. By revealing the proper time for the exerciſe of every grace.
3. By revealing Chriſt the fountain of all grace.
4. By ſetting forth the examples of the Saints, and the manner of their lives.

2. Particular Helps:

1. We ſhould labour to live under the means of growth and prize them, *Zech.*4. 12. the * Sacrament is a ſtrengthening Ordinance.

2. We ſhould overcome our luſts, *Jam.*1.21. 1 Pet 2.2,3. The good ground hears the word with a good and honeſt heart.

3. We ſhould be daily queſtioning our ſelves how we do grow, 1 Cor. 12. ult. *Heb.*6.1.

4. Be often in the uſe and exerciſe of that grace wherein we deſire to grow, 1 *Tim.*4.14,15. the right hand and foot are ſtronger, becauſe they are more uſed; improve thy knowledg by teaching others, and zeal when the name of God is diſhonoured, and faith by depending on God in all occurrences, by applying the promiſes, exerciſe repentance, 2 *Cor.*7.7. humility, God gives grace to the humble, ſelf-denial, love, that ſets obedience on work, 2 *Cor.*5.

5. Conſtant prayer for Gods bleſſing on the Word, and all other means, Jude v. 20. The Diſciples ſaid, Lord, increaſe our faith, Luk. 17.5. Praying Chriſtians will certainly be growing Chriſtians.

* There are four helps to grow in grace by coming to the Sacrament.

1. Be ſure you bring truth of grace with you. God will ſpie you out if you want the wedding garment.

2. Act your graces, your faith, repentance, love to God, thankfulneſſe. 3. Look upon Chriſt ſacramentally, eye him in the elements, ſee him there crucified before thee, that thou maiſt receive out of his fulneſſe. 4. Urge God with that promiſe, *Hoſ.*4. 5. pray him to let the dew of his grace fall on thy heart.

Strength of grace is diſcovered by two things:

1. When [illegible] *Rom.*15.20.

2. When

2. When crosses are light, bonds and afflictions abide me where ever I come, saith Paul, yet none of these move me.

We should constantly depend on God for strength, man in innocency was soon overcome by the Devil, much more when corrupted; Gods children after grace received have fallen, 2 Chron. 32. 33. they have many subtil and malicious enemies, 1 Pet. 5. 8. they have great and difficult services to perform, to suffer wrongs without revenge, to perform duties well for principle, manner and end.

Strength is an ability of working powerfully, we must have it from Christ, Isaiah 45.24. Col. 1. ult.

Christians should labour to be strong, Phil. 4. 12. They have a strong Saviour, Isa. 9.6. mighty to save, able to save to the utmost, a strong Gospel, Isa. 53.1. Rom. 1.16. a strong spirit to assist them, Eph. 6.10.

All graces shew their virtue and efficacy two wayes:

1. When they strongly and lively produce their own acts, as a strong assent, and most firm and fixed acknowledgment of any truth shews a strong faith.

2. By a laborious and earnest resisting their contrarys, as a strong casting away, and loathing, and abhorring doubting conceits, shews faith also to be strong.

Christ by his Spirit,

1. Increaseth graces in us, faith, love, humility, self-denial.

2. Acts the graces received, Cant. 4.16. Rom. 7.18.

3. Brings to our mindes the truths of God and former works of God, Heb. 12.5.

4. Renews our comforts, and freshly imprints the love of God upon the soul, Rom. 5.5. 1 Joh. 2.6. Obedience flows from love, so he strengthens us.

We should labour to grow,

First, In knowledge, Hos. 6.3. Grace increaseth by the knowledge of God, Isa. 11.18. 2 Pet. 1.2. & 2 Pet. 3.10. our fairest portion in heaven is the satisfaction of our understanding in the knowledge of God, Psal. 17.15. Knowledge is the great promise of the New Covenant, Jer. 31.34. We should grow in the knowledge of the truths of Christian Religion, of God, Christ, the Sacraments, Justification, Sanctification, and labour to get a powerful, practical, experimental knowledge of these truths, know the power of Christs death and resurrection, Phil. 3. 10. Knowledge is the first and chief part of Gods Image, Col. 3. 10. See Chap. 1.10. Growth in knowledg is rather to be reckoned by the degrees of knowledg than by the objects and matters known, Prov. 4. 18. I know God and Christ more practically, savingly, the Covenant more distinctly, Heb. 6. 14. We must not from an expectation of new light be hindred from being establisht in the present principles.

Secondly, In faith, Matth. 9.24. Luke 17. 5. Rom. 1. 17. because faith of all graces is most defective (things in Religion are so rare and excellent) and most assaulted by Satan, and growth in all other graces depends on the increase of faith. See Luke 17.5. We should labour to grow in the assurance of faith, Heb. 6.14. in the exercise of it, Heb. 10.38. Gal. 2.20.

1. The people of God here must live a life of holiness, as our faith is, so is our conversation.

2. Must bear Christs Crosse, as our faith is, so will our carriage be under the Crosse, Joh. 11.14.

3. They should be full of peace and joy, this will be according to our faith.

Lastly, We should search and find out what our wants are that we would fain have supplied there, what we stand in need of, we partake of the body and bloud of Christ for the supply and augmentation of those graces we stand in need of, Luke 18. 40. The Sacrament is a Grace-increasing Ordinance, consider what graces therefore are most defective in you, and come to Christ for a supply of them.

Quest. Whether the Communicants ought to come fasting?

Doctor Taylor in his Great Exemplar Part 3. Sect. 15. saith, Before any other meat

Aquinas part. 3. Quæst. 80. Artic. 8. resolves this Question.

Utrum cibus vel potus præassumptus impediat sumptionem hujus Sacramenti?

meat or drink receive the blood of thy Saviour with pure hands. See his Worthy Communicant, cap. 7. Sect. 1.

It is superstitious to think it irrevent receiving if a man have eaten any thing before, Christ instituted it after Supper.

See Mr Vines 2d Sermon of the Sac. p. 28, 29.

II. Directions for our carriage in the Duty.

See Mr Patricks Mensa Mystica, cap. 14.

By faith we come to see that the Sacraments are the Lords Ordinances, and that those things which he promiseth in the Covenant of Grace, and sealeth in the Sacrament, are far better than all profits and pleasures in this world. By it we come to be stirred up to desire and long after these benefits, and so to covet them, that nothing in this world will satisfie us without them.

We should

1. Meditate,

1. Of the great work of the Incarnation of Christ; this was the first part of his humiliation.

2. Of the other passages of his humiliation, how he was made under the Law, liv'd a poor afflicted life.

3. Of his Death, and the circumstances about it, his hanging on the Crosse, Gal. 3. 13.

4. Christs soul-sufferings, Matth. 26. 8.

2. Contemplate the mystery of the Death and sufferings of Christ: That consists in three things:

1. It was the Fathers will and desire that Christ should die, Heb. 10. 5.

2. Christ consented to his Fathers will, to die and suffer, Heb. 10. 9.

3. It was the compact and agreement between the Father and the Son, that the Death of Christ should be a full ransome for all the sinnes of the Elect, Esay 53. 11.

We should exercise faith at the Lords Table, view the arguments the Ordinance it self affords.

Here is a real, though a spiritual presence of Christ.

1. Here is Christ crucified before thine eyes, and he clearly offers it to thy soul in particular, he applies it to thee, This is my body which was broken for thee, and my blood which was shed for thee. Run over the sad story of Christs agony, and say, This was done by my Lord for my poor soul.

2. The Lord cals thee hither on purpose, because thou art weak. He will cherish weak beginnings, Matth. 12. 20.

Sacramental, 1 Love, Cant. 1. 4. call to mind the highest act of Christs love in dying for us when enemies 2. Sorrow in considering how our sins wound Christ. Hope, long for sweet communion with Christ in heaven, the Supper doth not only seal comfort but glory. There is a union of mysteries.

For our affections we must behave our selves with joy, comfort and reverence. See 2 Chron. 30. 21. & Matth. 26. 30.

Thy heart should be cheerfull in God and thankfull, praise him. Thankfulnesse and joy are the effects of faith, the Ordinances are often compared to feasts and banquets, because of the spirituri delight and rejoycing which the soul ought to take in them. Hence the very Sacrament is called εὐλογία and εὐχαριστία, because of the giving thanks unto God for his mercies. The outward duty is comfortable, Circumcision was a bloudy Rite, yet this is nothing to the inward sweetnesse, John 4. 32. In one of the Evangelists it is said, Christ blest the Bread; in another it is said, Christ gave thankes; Christ when he instituted this Sacrament gave thanks to God the Father that he was pleased to send him into the world to die for poor souls.

Fear is proper to the duty of the Supper, because of those excellent mysteries. Chrysostome cals this Table, Horribilis mystica mensa, Psalm 68. 35. mixt affections do best in a mixt state in the whole worship of God, Psalm 2. 11. Hoseah 3. 7.

For our thoughts:

We must meditate,

1. On the outward signs, and what they signifie.

2. On the dainties prepared.

3. The

3. The love of him that prepared them.
4. On our Communion with Chriſt, his graces and faithfull people.

The want of a ſenſible reliſh in the Sacrament may proceed from divers cauſes. See Dr Taylors Worthy Communicant, *ch.*1. *Sect.*5. *p.*102,103.

The effect of theſe affections and thoughts will be ſtirring up the heart to thankſgiving.

When we taſte the Wine we ſhould conſider its properties, Pſalm 104.15. Judg. 9.13. ſo there is ſatisfaction to God and comfort to the creature in the bloud of Chriſt; wine ingenders new ſpirits, warns and refines them; the bloud of Chriſt infuſeth a new vigour into the ſoul.

Our Communion with Chriſt in the Supper is not onely with his gifts and graces, but with his Perſon, whole Chriſt. There are two Elements to ſignifie this, Bread his Body, and Wine his Bloud. Our Communion is with his whole Perſon, with Chriſt inveſted with all kinde of Offices to do us good, and furniſhed with rich graces and comforts, 1 John 5. 16. We partake of his wiſdome as a Prophet, righteouſneſſe as a Prieſt, grace and glory as a King.

The Elements ſpecially repreſent his humane nature, but the Sacrament gives us a right to his whole perſon Act. 20.28.

What muſt be done after the Sacrament?

We muſt endeavour to find an increaſe of faith, love, and all ſaving graces in us, abounding more and more in well-doing.

Look on him as a compleat Saviour, Iſa. 44.24. *Col.*2.9. and come with your whole hearts to whol Chriſt, Acts 8. 47. *Jam.*1.9.

It is grown even to a Proverb (as *Joſeph. Acoſta de procur. Ind. Sal. l.*6. relates) among the poor Indians that have entertained the faith, that Qui Euchariſtiam ſemel ſuſceperit, nullum amplius crimen debet committere. He muſt never be guilty more of any crime, who hath once received the Euchariſt.

We ſhould ſpeak of the ſweetneſſe of Chriſt to others, Pſalm 34.8.

Some Diſciples have gone from this Supper triumphing, and trampling upon Satan as Lions breathing fire (ſaith Chryſoſtom ad pop. Antioch. Hom. 61.) terrible to the Devils themſelves.

There is a deſertion in point of ſanctification, as well as conſolation, when God leaves us in the duties we perform.

If we finde not the fruit of this Ordinance preſently, either it may come from want of preparation, or from truſting in our own preparation, 2 Chron. 26. 15,16. or want of thankfulneſſe for our preparation, 1 Chron. 29. 14. or from want of ſtirring up the graces we have received in that duty, Eſay 57.8. 2 Tim. 1. 6. Or, Becauſe we were not humbled for former neglects, Pſalm 32.4,5.

God may deny us the preſent ſenſe of our benefit:

1. To train us up to live by faith, 2 Cor. 5. 7.
2. To try our graces.
3. That we may more diligently ſearch into our own ſouls, Pſalm 77.6.

How oft ought the Sacrament to be received?

Amongſt the Papiſts the people communicate only once a year, viz. at Eaſter, which ſuperſtitious cuſtom many of our ignorant people follow.

Calvin 4. *Inſtit.*43,& 46. roundly profeſſeth, that it behoveth that the Euchariſt be celebrated at leaſt once a week.

Vide Ames. *de conſc. l.*4. *c.*28. Poſt Sermonem celebranda S. Cœna locu, præſertim dum fervebat primus ille Chriſtianorum zelus, ſingulis hebdomadis, interdum etiam diebus communicantium: nec enim unquam explicabantur Sacramenta ſuper menſam Dominicam, quin multi ad eam accederent. Mornayus de ſacra Euchariſtia lib. 1. cap. 4. Nunquam in Primitiva Eccleſia Euchariſtiæ Sacramentum celebrabatur, quin omnes qui adeſſent eidem communicarent. Si quis nollet communicare eo die quo conventus fidelium agebatur, quod propria conſcientia nondum ſatis examinata & probata eum à communione prohiberet, aut quod ſibi odij aut ſimultatis adverſus fratrem conſcius eſſet, ſi aliam quamcunque cauſam non communicandi haberet, non ſolebat cum alijs ad Synaxim convenire. Simpl. Verin. Epiſt. de libro poſtumo Grot. pag. 108.

The Chriſtians in ſome parts of the Primitive * Church took the Sacrament every day, because they did look to die every day. Hierom. contr. Jovin, and Austin. Epist. ad Lucin. say, That even till their dayes the custom of receiving every day remained in the Churches of Rome and Spain; and all the ancient Fathers exhort to a frequent Communion. Austin. Epist. 180. cals it, Quotidianum ministerium Dominici corporis. Now in many places it is administred every moneth.

* In Primitiva Eccleſia Apoſtolica vicina, flagrante perſecutionum incendio ſingulis diebus Chriſtiani communicabant. Geth. *loc. commun. de ſacra Cœna c.*24. Tempus communicandi eſſe debet frequentiſſimum & plane quotidianum. Baptiſmus autem non iteratur, quia generationi quæ unica eſt reſpondet. Euchariſtia verò ſæpius iteranda eſt; quia cibo & alimonia (cujus frequens uſus reperitur) reſpondet. Maldonati *Summula Quæſt.*24. *Art.*1. *Conſtat ipſos Apoſtolos & Chriſtianos quotidiè communicaſſe, Art.*2. quotidiè communicabant ſicut orabant paulò poſt ubi crevit Chriſtianorum negligentia cœptum eſt ſolis diebus Dominicis communicare. Id. ibid. *Art.*2.

day

1 Cor. 11. 25. As often as you do it, implies a doing it often ὁσάκις includes a μετρίως, and doth not leave it at large to our will and pleasure, as an arbitrary thing, to be taken up when our discretion shall appoint the time. Mr Farindons Sermon on that Text.

In those first times they generally communicated daily, at length constantly on the Lords day, as appears by Justins Apology, and others of the Ancients.

Dr Jer. Taylor in his Worthy Communicant, Chap. 5. Sect. 4. Question first, propounding this Question, Whether is it better to communicate seldom or frequently? Answers, It is without peradventure very much better to receive it every day, than every week; and better every week than every moneth. Question 2. He saith, In the Primitive Church it was accounted scandalous and criminal to be present at the holy Offices, and to go out at the celebration of the mysteries. Question 3. For such who are members of the visible Church, but not discernibly in the state of grace, the Church hath made Laws for the set times of their Communion. Christmas, Easter and Whitsontide were appointed for all Christians that were not scandalous and openly criminal by P. Fabianus. This constitution is imitated by the Church of England, and the Lutheran Churches. See his Great Exemplar part 3. Sect. 15. of the Institution and Reception of the Sacrament, p. 531, 532, 533, 534.

A piis Cœna frequentari debet propter mandatum Christi: deinde ut frequens ac celebris sit commemoratio mortis Christi: ut edant singuli confessionem se esse membra Christi: ut fides in ipsis confirmetur & augeantur dona. Ursini Theses De Cœna Domini.

Object. The Passeover unto which the Lords Supper succeedeth was celebrated once a year, and therefore once only for this Sacrament is sufficient.

Answ. God ordained that the Passeover should be celebrated but once only in the year, and on a certain moneth and day; the Jewes had many other visible signes to represent Christ and his benefits, they had Sacrifices every day, and legal washings; but he hath appointed that this Feast of the Lords Supper should be often solemnized, and that we should come often unto it, 1 Cor. 11. 25, 26. That the frequent celebration of the Sacrament is a duty, is inferred from this Text by Peter Martyr, Calvin, Musculus, Aretius, Hyperius, Tossanus, Paraus, Piscator, Dickson and Mr Pemble. See Johnsons Christian Plea, Chap. 14.

In the time of the Apostles the purest age of the Church, they solemnized it every Lords-day, Acts 20. 7. yea it was their daily exercise, as often almost as they had any publick meeting for the service of God, Acts 2. 42. And this custom long continued in the Primitive Church after the Apostles times, not only in the dayes of Justin Martyr and Tertullian, but also of Chrysostom and Augustine, as appeareth by their writings: untill by mans corruption and Satans malice, the commonnesse of the action exposed it to contempt.

Our verie Ecclesia credidit unumquemque fidelem omne die communicare debere,

We should come often to the Sacrament, there is no exception, but want of occasion or some just impediment.

We feed upon Christ there. The Fathers call this Sacrament, The Body and Bloud of Christ, Life, Benediction.

quod ubique decimum saeculum videmus durasse, hodierna autem ac Romana putat sufficere, si semel in anno communicatum fuerit? Quia nimirum illa nullum usum, nec ullum fructum Sacramentorum constituit in videnda & audienda eorum actione, sed totum posuit in participatione veri corporis & sanguinis, hac vero contrarium sumit. Simplicii Verimi Epist. de libro Posthumo Grotii. Il est certain, que si nous parlons en general, il est meilleur de s'en approcher souvent, que de s'en retirer. Ce qui communement les Theologiens nous enseignent, & principalement ceux de l'Eglise, escrivans sur le Maistre des Sentences. Peter. De La Penitence Publique l. 3. c. 3.

There

There was in old time a custom there should be a Communion every Lords-day every one receiving without lawfull excuse, not being excommunicated, which Charls the Great in some sort renewed, and which Bucer advised K. Edward in this Land to restore again. Parker of the Crosse, part 1. chap. 3.

The great pretence is our unworthinesse. The man that came not was punished, as well as he that came without his wedding-garment. Not only acts, but omissions are evil. It is a sinne to contemn the Sacrament, and 'tis a sin not to receive it, and the one leads to the other.

Some raise these Questions,

Whether if an Ordinance, and namely the Sacrament of the Lords Supper (though there seems to be the like reason in other Ordinances) cannot be so administred, but that by some which partake of it, it will notoriously be prophaned, that be a sufficient reason for the non-administration of it? Or, Whether for want of Order and Government to keep off such as are notoriously unworthy, the administration of the Sacrament may and ought to be suspended?

Again, Whether a Minister may lawfully and with a good conscience continue there in the exercise of his Ministry (having a pastoral charge) where he hath not power to administer the Sacrament of the Lords Supper?

There is a Treatise lately published by one Mr Jeanes, entituled, The want of Church-Government no warrant for a total omission of the Lords Supper.

He saith there pag. 18. Next unto God and Christs glory, the good of the Saints was the main end of this Sacrament: it was principally intended for the godly, for their use, comfort and edification, and therefore they are not to be deprived, although it is much against their wils accidentally prejudicial unto wilfull and presumptuous intruders.

Pag. 35. That which gives a right in foro Dei, is faith, but in foro Ecclesiastico, profession of the faith. Now where Church-Government is not setled, there are many who are Believers and Professours of the Faith: Ergò, Many that have right unto the Lords Supper. And we may argue from the right to the administration.

Pag. 48, 49. Some think that the supposed sin of giving the Lords Supper unto unworthy persons, is easily avoided, if the Minister give not the sacramental Elements to each Communicant out of his own hand; but the Communicants divide the Elements among themselves. Gillesp. In his Aarons Rod Bloss. Book 3. ch. 8. pag. 437, 438.

There is not in either the Evangelists, or the 1 Cor. 11. any the least mention of our Saviours distributing the sacramental Elements particularly and severally out of his own hand to each Communicant: Nay, the contrary rather is probable, because he speaks unto these whom he gave the Supper unto, only joyntly and in general, Take, Eat, Drink. Mr Bowles de Pastore Evangelico, l. 4. c. 5. Burth. in his Gospel-wor. p. 264, 265.

Pag. 51. Only such Dogs and Swine are to be denied the Lords Supper who are such juridically. For though (saith Mr Ball) in course of life they may be Dogs, yet in publick esteem they are not to be reputed Dogs, nor used as Dogs till the Church have so pronounced of them.

Pag. 61. Breaches of the Command and Rule of Christ in the administration of the Lords Supper are of two sorts, Material or Personal.

1. Material, when the worship it self is corrupted, as in the Popish Masse, where there is but one Element,

2. Personal, when the worship it self is in every respect pure, but the Persons communicating, wanting in requisite qualifications; the former are chargeable upon the Minister administring the Lords Supper, not the later, so he prevent them so far as in him lieth.

Pag. 67. He quotes this passage out of Mr Ball, In coming to Gods Ordinance we have Communion with Christ principally who hath called us thither, is there present by his Grace and Spirit to blesse his Ordinance, and with the faithfull, who are there met together at Gods Commandment, in the Name and by the Authority of Jesus Christ: with the wicked we have no Communion, unlesse it be External and by Accident, because they are not, or cannot be cast out. Internal and Essential Communion we have with Christ and the faithfull onely; See Sr William Mericc his Common-right to the Lords Supper, per tot.

External,

External, with the wicked. Our Communion with Christ and his faithfull people is not free and voluntary, but necessary, enjoyned by God, not left to our will or pleasure. Our Communion with the wicked in the Ordinances is unwilling on our part, suffered not affected, if we knew how to hinder it lawfully.

Whether it be meet upon one and the same day to have a solemn Fast, together with the celebration of the Lords Supper?

No, since the nature of them is so different one from the other. The one is a Fast, the other a Feast. The one is a sign of solemn testification of sorrow, the other of joy, Jud. 20.26. Esther 4.16. compared with Mat. 26.26,29. Luke 22.17,20. 1 Cor. 5 6,7,8.

They were wont in the Primitive Churches to have Love-feasts with the Lords Supper, as may appear 1 Cor. 11.20,34. & Jude v. 12. Tertul. Apol. c. 39.

Of the Gesture at the Sacrament.

Some have written Books for [a] kneeling at the Sacrament, others against [b] it.

Calvin [c] speaking of the reverence of kneeling, saith, It is lawfull if it be directed not to the sign, but to Christ himself in Heaven, which was the resolute profession of our English Church in the use of this gesture.

[a] B. Buckeridg. Mr Paibody.
[b] Sr William Temple. Dighton.
[c] Instit. l. 4. Sect. 37.

Dr Burgesse saith, The gesture of kneeling in the act of receiving was never any instituted Ceremony of the Church of Rome, nor is it at this day. Bellar. lib. 2. de Missa, c. 14,15. saith, It was only for the conveniency of putting the Hoast into the mouth of the receiver, and not for adoration of the Eucharist. Vide Brochm. De Cœna Dominica Sect. 8.

Some much urge our Saviour Christs example, and a Table-gesture for sitting.

Christs example hath not the force of a Commandment: For First, It is not certainly expressed what gesture be used in the act of receiving.

Secondly, It hath not the force of a Commandment in any other part of his service, as preaching, praying, therefore neither in this.

Thirdly, It hath not the force of a Commandment in other circumstances of this action, therefore neither in this.

Fourthly, It is apparent that the gesture was taken up occasionally, therefore the example of Christ therein doth not tie us.

Bishop Hall to Struther in his Remaining Works pleads for it. See Mr Vines of the Sac. of the L. Supper, ch. 5. p. 102.

Bishop Usher was for kneeling.

Mr More a pious Justice of Peace of Shropshire in his true Relation of Enoch ap Evan, saith, If our Church had left the gesture to be used in the Sacrament indetermined, he would have made choice of that gesture of Kneeling before all others, as the most reverend, and fittest to be used in that holy action, wherein we come so near unto our God. I have heard Mr Wheatley say something to that purpose.

Dr Taylor's Worthy Communicant, chap. 7. Sect. 1. saith, This reverence was practis'd by the Churches of the East, and West, and South; by the Christians of India, by all the Lutheran Churches.

Didoclav. in Alt. Damasc. cap. 11. pag. 735, &c. opposeth it; so doth Mr Baxter in his Catholick Unity, p. 363,364.

Mr Chancie in his Retractation against Railing in Altars, and Mr Gillespie in his English Popish Ceremonies much dislike it; and the Ministers in their Proposals to his Majesty give their reasons against it.

We receive not the Sacrament with our meals, as Christ and the Apostles at first did, therefore we are not tied to the gesture of meals.

Vide Diher. Elect. l. 2. c. 4. Mr Down of sitting or kneeling at the Communion.

Respondeo nos Dei gratia melius ac sanctius in Christi schola fuisse instituros, quàm ut putemus aliquam esse religionem Eucharistiam de geniculis sumere. Ita sumunt vicini in Anglia fratres; neq; nos, si quando cum ijs communicamus, eodem ritu sumere piget; totaq; res apud nos ita libera censetur, ut quamquam stantes sacro epulo vescamur ipsi, pro fratribus tamen & habeamus & colamus etiam qui vel sedentes, vel ingeniculati Eucharistiam accipiant. Itaq; si nihil à nobis aliud Latini postulassent, quam ut Sacramentum de geniculis simpliciter sumeremus; fatear nullam posse ab his discedendi fuisse causam satis idoneam; quando quod postularent id, hujusmodi est quod à nobis integra nec illæsa conscientia fieri posset. Dallæi Apologia pro Eccles. Refor. c. 12. Existimant nonnulli genua flectere præceptum de vitanda idololatria multis modis violare: neq; stare esse ritum convenientissimum, quia non est ordinarius convivarum gestus: sedere vero convenientissimum: quia dignitatem & familiaritatem, ad quam vocati sumus, exprimit melius. Wendel. Christ. Theol. System. Marb. l. 1. c. 23. Vide plura ibid. & D. Sanders De obligat. Conscient. Prælect. 3. Sect. 16, &c.

It

It was the manner of those times, and long before at meals to lie on their beds, leaning on their elbows, and supporting themselves with pillows, so the Evangelists words signifie.

CHAP. XI.

Of Extraordinary Religious Duties, Fasting, Feasting and Vows.

I. Of Fasting.

SInce God in the Old Testament by Moses commanded the Jews a solemn and anniversary Fast in the tenth day of the seventh moneth, Numb. 24. 7. Levit. 16. 31. & 22. 27, 29. since there are examples of many pious persons fasting in the Scripture, and since in the New Testament there is a frequent commendation of fasting, Mat. 9. 14. & 6. 16. & 17. 21. 1 Cor. 7. 5. & 2 Cor. 6. 5. Acts 9. 9. & 13. 2. & 14. 23. It is plain that the Doctrine of Fasting doth belong to Religion and Piety, and the worship of God. See Act. 13. 2.

In it self it is not any worship of God, but only as it tends to some holy end, to pray the better, to humble our soules the better; so it is often joyned with prayer, Mat. 17. 20. Acts 13. 3. & 14. 22. 1 Cor. 7. 5. for though it pleaseth God, yet every thing that pleaseth him is not presently worship.

Jejunium propriè dictum Græcis Novi Testamenti scriptoribus νηστεία vocatur, & νηστεύειν jejunare, μετὰ τὸ μὴ ἐσθίειν à non comedendo dicitur, est enim quædam à cibo abstinentia.

The phrase which S^t Luke useth, Chap. 2. 37. doth no more urge us to make Fasting worship, than S^t Pauls phrase Acts 20. 19. doth make temptations a special kind of worship. Fasting may be called worship by a trope, as being a special adjunct of some extraordinary worship. D^r Ames against D^r Burgesse part 1. pag. 145. Vide Dallæum De Jejun. & Quad. l. 1. c. 10.

Hebræis afflictio dicitur, Esdr. 9. 5. quia ex Scripturæ phrasi affligere animam est jejunare, Num. 29. 7. & Levit. 16. 3. & 22. 27. Eò nempè pertinet & spectat jejunium ut corporis afflictione anima humilietur ac dejiciatur. Thes. Salm. pars ultima. Religiosum jejunium à naturali & civili, in eo differt, quòd à religione imperatur: id est, directè & immediatè, ad cultum & honorem Dei refertur. 2. Non tamen ita refertur ad Dei honorem ut pars cultus, sed tantum ut medium, quo verus cultus promovetur. 3. In Testamento Novo, non est propriè medium cultus, vel qua efficit aliquid, vel ex institutione significat, vel coram Deo, vel coram hominibus, sed quatenus disponit ad extraordinarium exercitium cultus. 4. Disponit autem præcipuè impedimenta illa removendo, quæ extraordinariæ Dei invocationi repugnant. Amef. Cas. consc. l. 4. c. 21.

Bellarmine lib. 2. de bon. oper. cap. 1. defines fasting to be Cibi abstinentiam secundam Ecclesiæ regulam assumptam, making no mention of the end of Fasting, though it be especially to be judged of by the end; and it is meer hypocrisie if it be only undertaken to satisfie the Commandment of the Church, as it is usual among the Papists, who think they have fasted well when they have abstained from meat or flesh on such dayes as it is forbidden without any consideration of a just end.

There are several sorts of Fasts, Natural, Civil and Metaphorical. But a holy or religious Fast is a voluntary abstinence from all our lawfull refreshments to some religious end.

Jejunia sunt vel stata, vel ex hominum arbitrio agenda, mandata olim fuerunt ex aliqua Ecclesiasticæ solicitudinis causa. Medium inter hæc mandata jejunia & stata locum obtinent, quæ apud Græcos observabantur, cum agerentur Concilia. Conventus illi stationibus prius & jejuniationibus operati. Tertul. lib. de jejun.

Mr Fenner and Mr Ball thus define it.

Jejunium eſt abſtinentia ad tempus, ab omnibus vitæ adjumentis, quoad naturæ imbecillitas & vitæ decus ſive honeſtas ſert, ad preces efficaciores reddendas & humilitatem teſtandam. Dudlei Fenneri Theol. Sac. lib. 5. cap. 10. Jejunium religioſum eſt voluntaria abſtinentia à cibo & potu religionis cauſa. Hommius Diſput. 69. Faſting is an abſtinence commanded of the Lord thereby to make ſolemn profeſſion of our repentance. Cartw. Deſcript. of a true Faſt. Bellarmine ſaith, Jejunium pars eſt cultus divini, non ideo quod referatur ad cultum divinum ut finem, ſed quod in ſe ſit ipſe cultus divinus. Poteſt quidem jejunium nos aptiores reddere ad Deum colendum, ſed non poteſt eſſe pars cultus illius, non magis quam lachrymæ & fletus. Cameron. Myroth. ad Matth. 17. 21.

A holy Faſt is a religious abſtinence from all the labours of our calling, and comforts of this life, ſo far as comlineſſe and neceſſity will permit, that we may be more ſeriouſly humbled before God, and more fervent in prayer, 1 Cor. 7. 5. Joel 2. 14, 15, 16. Dan. 9. 1, 2, 3. & 10. 1, 2, 3. Ezra 8. 21.

God often cals for humiliation, Micah 6. 8. James 4. 10. 1 Peter 2. 6. the neglect of it is reproved, Daniel 5. 22. the performance of it encouraged, Lev. 26, 42. 2 Chron. 7. 13.

The benefit of humbling our ſelves is great:

1. It empties the heart of all ſelf-confidence.
2. It fits and prepares us for approach to God, Job 9. 15.
3. It is a ſpecial diſpoſition to confeſſion of ſin, Pſalm 51. 3.
4. It gives ſpecial glory to God, Daniel 9. 7, 8, 9.
5. Opens the heart for entertainment of mercy, Eſay 57. 15. Acts 17. 30. Col. 1. 28.
6. Makes way for forſaking of ſin.

Humiliation is two-fold:

1. Paſſive, when God breaks the heart of man by his Word, Jer. 23. 29. afflictions, as Manaſſeh.
2. Active, when we humble our ſelves, Levit. 16. 29.

It is two-fold:

Legal, when there is perplexity on the Spirit, as in Ahab, Felix, Acts 16. 29.

Evangelical, when the heart is not onely broken with the ſenſe of wrath, but is kindly melted with the apprehenſion of Gods goodneſſe, Jeremy 26. 19. 2 Chron. 34. 27.

Two things will humble a man:

1. The conſideration of Gods greatneſſe, when God had manifeſted his greatneſs to Job 38, & 39 Chapters, then Chap. 40. verſ. 4. Job humbleth himſelf.
2. Of the creatures vanity, Eſay 40. 5, 6, 7.

We muſt abſtain.

Firſt, From bodily labours and worldly buſineſſe. For the time of the faſt hath the nature of a Sabbath. It is called by the Prophet Joel, a ſolemnity or day of prohibition, Joel 1. 4. & 2. 15. wherein men are forbidden to do any work, as the Lord expoundeth that word, Lev. 23. 36. Deut. 16. 8.

Secondly, Food, there muſt be a total abſtinence from meat and drink, ſo farre as our health will permit, 2 Samuel 3. 35. Ezra 9. 6. Eſther 4. 16. Jon. 3. 7. Acts 9. 9.

Thirdly, From ſleep in part, David lay upon the ground all night, 2 Sam. 12 26. See Eſth. 4. 3. Joel 1. 13.

Fourthly, From coſtly attire, Exodus 33. 5, 6. heretofore they wore ſackcloth and lay in aſhes, and uſed all thoſe actions which might humble them in Gods preſence.

Fifthly, Carnal delights, Joel 2, 16. 1 Cor. 7. 5. Ecce Chriſtiani jejunantes pacis oſculum non impertiebantur. Tertul. l. de Oratione.

Sixthly, The end muſt be religious, to be better fitted for prayer and ſeeking of God.

It is uſual in the Scripture to deſcribe a Faſt, to be an abſtinence from all food, 1 Sam. 14. 24. Jonah 3. 7. Hence he is ſaid to break his faſt, who eats any thing whether it be fleſh or fiſh.

The

The ends of a Faſt are two, Humiliation and Reconciliation, as appeareth Levit. 23. 26, to 33. The things in which the Faſt muſt be ſpent are exerciſes fitting theſe ends.

Cauſæ finales jejuniorum, 1. Ut per ſubſtractionem cibi & potus caro ſpiritui ſubjiciatur. 2. Ut animus ad ſerium pœnitentiæ exercitium excitetur. 3. Ut in luctu ac calamitatibus admoneamur de peccato, quod eſt cauſa omnium malorum. 4. Ut preces ſolennes eo ardentius à nobis peragantur. 5. Ut publici conventus Eccleſiaſtici majori cum animi devotione peragantur. Chemnit. in Harm. Evang. Sanctum ac legitimum jejunium tres habet fines. Eo enim utimur ad macerandam ac ſubigendam carnem, ne laſciviat, vel ut ad preces ac ſanctas meditationes melius ſimus comparati, vel ut teſtimonium ſit noſtræ coram Deo humiliationis, dum volumus reatum noſtrum coram ipſo confiteri. Calv. Inſtit. l. 4. de extern. med. ad ſalutem c. 12. De hominis jejuni ſaliva ita ſcribit. Plin. lib. 28. c. 4. Hominum verò in primis jejunam ſalivam contra ſerpentes præſidio eſſe docuimus. Etiam Satanico ſerpenti jejunium diſplicet, & contra ejus artes, ac vires præſidio eſt. Novar. Schediaſ. ſac. proph. l. 11. c. 15.

The Means, 1. Of Humiliation, are Natural or Spiritual.

The Natural are forbearance of food both meat and drink, ſo far as it may ſtand with our ability, and not hinder us from praying and good meditations, as alſo of work and labour, wherefore it is called ſanctifying a Faſt, Levit. 23. 28. Joel 1. 14. and all natural delights otherwiſe lawfull, Joel 2. 16. 1 Cor. 7. 5. and laſtly of coſtly attire, Jonah 3. 8. To appear in a mean habit is a natural help of abaſing our ſelves, but in private Faſting we are bid to anoint our ſelves, Matth. 6. that we may not appear to faſt.

Daniel and others when they faſted ſome dayes together, took but little refreſhment, the Diſciples of Chriſt are accuſed that they did eat and drink.

The Spiritual helps are chiefly four:

1. Examining our hearts and lives that we may finde out our manifold ſinnes, Lam. 3. 40.

2. The aggravation of our ſins by conſidering their hainouſneſſe in regard of the ill effects, and the like.

3. Confeſſing them, and judging our ſelves for them.

4. Praying for the Spirit to humble us, bemoaning our own hardneſſe.

Such an uſual companion of Faſting is the humiliation of the ſoul, that not only the faithfull in Scripture are ſaid to humble their ſoul by Faſting, but ſometimes alſo the outward Faſting is called the humbling of the ſoul, Pſal. 35. 13. Iſa. 58. 5. Levit. 23. 27, 32. 1 King. 21. 29.

Theſe are Means for Humiliation.

The Means ſecondly of Reconciliation are two.

1. To plant in our ſelves a firm purpoſe of leaving ſin, Eſay 1. 16, 18. by conſidering the neceſſity, profit and difficulty of leaving ſin; and Gods promiſes to help us, and by fervent prayers to him to encline our hearts to his teſtimonies, and to ſtrengthen us that ſin may not overcome us.

2. To ſettle our hearts in a ſtedfaſt confidence of his mercy in Chriſt, pardoning and accepting us. This may be wrought by conſidering the multitude of Gods mercies, the infiniteneſſe of Chriſts merits, the largeneſſe of Gods promiſes, and the examples of thoſe whom he hath pardoned, and then by crying earneſtly to him to ſtrengthen our faith, and ſeal up our adoption to us by his Spirit.

The uſual time of a Faſt is a natural day from Even to Even, or from Supper to Supper, Judg. 20. 26. 2 Sam. 1. 12. & 3. 35. Joſh. 7. 6.

An artificial day is the leaſt ſpace of time to be ſo beſtowed, from morning till night, till ſix of the clock in the afternoon, or Sun-ſetting. See Maſon of Faſting.

We reade of a three dayes Faſt in Nineveh, Jonah 3. 7. and in Eſther and her Maids, and in Paul, Acts 9. 9. and of ſeven dayes Faſt, 1 Samuel 12. 16, 17, 18. and of Daniels Faſt (abſtaining from all pleaſant bread and drink, and giving himſelf to prayer and humiliation) for three whole weeks, Daniel 10. 1, 2. And we reade of Faſting alone till Even, Judges 20. 23, 26. & 21. 2. 2 Sam. 1. 12. & 3. 36.

Such a Faſt may either be kept of many together, a whole Congregation publickly, or by a few, that is a Family or two privately, or elſe by one alone ſecretly, as we may perceive in the former examples. In private and ſolitary Faſting we ſhould carry the matter ſo, that it may be private, and we may not appear to Faſt. Some think it not therefore convenient for ſo many to meet in a private Faſt, as may make the face of a Congregation, and that go beyond the number of a uſual family or two; for this (ſay they) is to turn a private duty into a Publick.

The times for Faſting are,

Si privata eſt neceſſitas, privatum quoque eſto jejunium; ſi publica, publicum. Nam & ſæpe ea incidunt, quæ à tota Eccleſia vel magnum & ſingularem orationum conatum, vel inſigne pœnitentiæ teſtimonium requirunt; ut ſi quando Paſtores ordinandi ſint, nihil vetat eorum miniſterium, quod magni in Eccleſia momenti eſt, Deo totius populi precibus & jejunio commendari; item ſi fames, ſi peſtis, ſi publica aliqua calamitas immineat; ſi perſecutio, ſi hæreſis minetur; nemo non videt & miniſtrorum eſſe tali tempore preces & jejunia indicere, & plebis ſuſcipere atque obire. Dallæus de Jejun. & Quad. l. 1. c. 1.

1. When Gods judgements are ready to fall upon us, either perſonal or publick judgements, then there is reaſon for a private or publick Faſt; ſo Ezra's Faſt was, becauſe of the great deſolations upon the Church; and Eſthers, becauſe of the bloudy Proclamation to kill all the Jews.

2. When we deſire to obtain any publick or particular good, ſo Acts 13. when they deſired publick good on the Miniſtry, they faſted and prayed. So Hannah for her particular, ſhe faſted and prayed for a child. When we undertake any great and dangerous buſineſſe for which we need Gods help. See *Matth.*4.2. & 17.21. Acts 13.24. & 14.23.

3. When we are preſſed with ſome ſpecial ſin, 1 *Cor.*9.27. 2 *Cor.*12.8.

Publick faſts upon the Lords-day are contrary no leſſe to the determination of the Councils of the Evangelical Churches, than the practice of the Jewiſh. It would be unſeaſonable to rejoyce in a day of mourning: ſo muſt it needs be to mourn in a day of rejoycing. Biſhop Hall in his Remaining Works on *Eccleſ.*3.4.

Faſting before the holy Sacrament is a cuſtom of the Chriſtian Church, and deriv'd to us from great Antiquity. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar, part 2. Sect. 12. Diſcourſe xiij.

It is not unlawfull to faſt privately on the Lords-day, the ſervice of the ordinary Sabbath is not contrary but helpfull to the exerciſe of mourning and godly ſorrow; and when we conceive greateſt ſorrow for ſinne, it is not unlawfull to rejoyce in our Redemption by Jeſus Chriſt: Chriſt forbad it not on that day; it is not convenient for a publick Faſt, ſince it ſhould be conſecrated unto God only for that purpoſe. Mr Ball.

A man is not bound to an acknowledgment of all his particular ſins, when he comes ſolemnly to humble himſelf before God. He hath not ſuch clear light to diſcern ſin, not ſo faithfull a memory to retain it, nor is not ſo watchfull to conſider his wayes, Pſalm 19.12. & 40.12. Eccleſ. 1.15. A general repentance ſufficeth, becauſe he that truly repents of all known ſins repents of all ſins. After ſome ſcandalous fals we muſt be more particular, Pſalm 51. David chiefly ſpends his ſorrow on that great ſin. In deep diſtreſſe we muſt ſearch diligently to find out the ſin that provokes God, Pſalm 32.

We ſhould riſe early on a Faſt, 2 *Sam.*12.16. Ioel 1.13. It is probable that for this cauſe ſome lay on the ground, others in ſackcloth in the night of their Faſts, not only to expreſſe, but further their humiliation by keeping them from ſleeping overmuch or overſweetly.

Preaching was uſed by Gods people at their ſolemn Faſts, to quicken them to prayer, *Neh.*9.3. compared with 8.8. *Ier.*36 5,6. Mr Hilderſ. on Pſal. 51.7.

We ſhould remember the poor on that day, Eſay 58.17. Quod ventri ſubtrahitur illud pauperi detur.

The Popiſh Faſt is a mock faſt, worſe than the Phariſaical, which yet is condemned by Chriſt.

Firſt, Faſting is made in the Church of Rome a worſhip of God, and a work of righteouſneſſe. Junius had much ado to keep a poor woman from deſpair, becauſe ſhe did eat fleſh on ſome Faſt-day, it lay upon her as if ſhe had committed ſome grievous and unpardonable ſin.

Secondly, It is religiouſly tied to fixed and certain times and dayes, whereas true Faſting is pro temporibus & cauſis. Tertul. de jejun.

Thirdly, They think to performe it by forbearing onely fleſh, when wine and other delicates are not forbidden, which Jerome juſtly calleth a ſuperſtitious Faſt.

The

The fourty days Faſt, which Moſes, Elias and our Saviour Chriſt did faſt, were miraculous, and therefore not to be imitated. Neither did they faſt foury days every year, but once only in all their life.

B. Down. Chriſtian exerciſe of Faſting. The three who faſted fourty dayes apiece, were Moſes the giver of the Law, Elias the reſtorer of the Law, and Chriſt the fulfiller of it. Broughton.

The Lent Faſt is not a Tradition or Canon Apoſtolical. See Dr Taylors Ductor Dubitantium lib. 3. cap. 4. Rule 13.

Whitaker againſt Duraus ſaith, I deny it not to be moſt ancient, but not inſtituted by the Apoſtles; for Apollonius writeth, that Montanus firſt made Laws for ſet and certain Faſts; and Tertullian when he was become a Montaniſt, writeth as much in his book, wherein he defendeth the Faſts of Montanus.

Again, The Apoſtles never put any Religion in choiſe and change of meats, Rom. 14.17. *Col.*2 16. Titus 1.15. and ſo ordained not Lent.

Laſtly, The Churches of the Apoſtles differed much in this Faſt, both in their times and in their kinds of meat; as Euſebius and Socrates record; which would never have been if it had been Apoſtolical, at leaſt as Papiſts do affirm, who take it for a truth, that thoſe Churches would faithfully perſiſt in the Apoſtles Decrees.

Auguſtine doth ſometimes write of the fourty dayes Faſt, that it hath a Divine Authority, but meaneth not an Authority of Precept, but of Example, as Elias, Moſes and Chriſt. See Beza's firſt Homily in Hiſt. Paſſionis Ieſu Chriſti.

We obſerve Faſting-dayes, as we call them, by abſtinence from fleſh (indeed not Faſting-dayes, but Fiſh-dayes, as the Law doth rather call them) not with any opinion either for the day, or for the abſtinence of any holineſſe therein, or Religion toward God, but onely by way of obedience to politick Lawes, and duty to our Prince, the Law it ſelf profeſſing it ſelf to be politickly intended. Abbot againſt Biſhop.

In ſtead of Mundayes and Thurſdayes uſed in the Synrgogue, the Church appointed Wedneſdayes and Fridayes for that purpoſe, holding in them a convenient diſtance from the Lords-day, as theſe other did from the Sabbath. Mr Thornd. Service of God at Relig. Aſſem. *c.*8.

The Papiſts allow a Break-faſt, and they are allowed to eat all variety of Roots, Fruits, Fiſhes, and whatſoever junkets which have not any affinity with fleſh. They are licenſed to drink Wine without exception, ſo that they eat and drink without intemperate exceſſe. Proverbs 20. 1. Wine is luxurious, and in that reſpect it was called by the very Heathen ἀφροδίτης γάλα, the milk of Venus.

A childe partaking once of their delicate Faſt, not many dayes after longing for the former kinde of dainties, cryed to his mother, ſaying, Good Mother, when ſhall we faſt again? Biſhop Mortons Appeal *lib.*2. cap. 24. See Dr Fulk on Rhem. Teſt. *Col.*2.23.

*Bellarmine l.*2. *de bonis operibus c.*9. reports a ſtory which makes much againſt him, of Spiridion a godly man, who had a gueſt come to him on a Faſting-day, and he ſet fleſh before him having nothing elſe, I will not eat, ſaith the gueſt, becauſe I am a Chriſtian; Nay therefore (ſaid he) eat, and make no difference, becauſe thou art a Chriſtian.

CHAP. XII.

II. Holy Feaſting or Religious Thanksgiving.

AN holy Feaſt is an extraordinary Thankſgiving for ſome notable deliverance out of ſome deſperate danger, teſtified with feaſting before God, with joy and gladneſſe, ſending Preſents to our friends, and Portions to the needy.

Hilarisſolennitas, eſt ſolennitas, qua Dei beneficia cũ gaudio & latitia coram Deo, & nobis ſumentes, & alijs tribuentes, Dei laudes prædicamus. Zec. 8.19. Pſ. 116.23. *Fenneri Sac. Theol. l.*5. *c.*2.

Or

Or thus:

It is the bestowing of an artificial day in the exercise of rejoycing, for the testifying and increasing of thankfulnesse for some special benefit.

There were three Feasts every year, and at least two of them to continue seven dayes apiece; but only one time of Fasting, and that but for one day. God would have us to abound more in joy than sorrow, therefore he saith, Rejoyce alwayes, Phil. 4.4. but not so of mourning. This our Saviour may seem to mean in Luke, when he saith, No man when he hath drunk old wine presently drinks new, for the old is better. Fasting is new wine, not so good, nor comfortable, not wholsom, as old. Godly joy is good of it self, and the end whereat godly sorrow aimeth; godly sorrow is good alone by accident, as it prepares the way and fits the soul for godly joy. Godly sorrow is the medicine of a Christian soul, godly joy the food, and food is better than physick.

A day of Fasting and Prayer is a sweet day: A Thanksgiving day sweeter: For in a day of Fasting and Prayer we deal with the anger, wrath and displeasure of God. In a day of Thanksgiving with the love and mercy of God. In a day of Fasting and Prayer we exercise grief: but in a day of Thanksgiving we exercise love and joy. In a day of Fasting and Prayer our eye is upon our sinnes, in a day of Thanksgiving upon our graces, to be thankfull for them. Mr Bridges on 1 Thess. 5. 18.

Not only publick Feasts of the Church, but private feasts of some Family were in use in the Church of Israel, and are very lawfull, 1 Samuel 20. 6,29. 2 Samuel 6. 18,19. Esther 9. 18,19. 1 Kings 19. 20, 21. Zech. 8. 19. In the New Testament they had also their Love-feasts, Jude vers. 12. See Luke 15. 23, 24, 25, 31. Acts 2. 46.

We are daily to give God thanks for his mercies, Colos. 3. 17. & 4. 2. Phil. 4. 6. yet there are special seasons for this duty.

That we may improve deliverances, we must

1. Labour to remember them, and the greatnesse of them.

2. Labour to relish Christ and taste Gods mercy in them, Psalm 130. 7. Psalm 136. in the works of Creation, and their deliverances out of Ægypt from their enemies, Pharaoh, Sihon, Og, mercy appeared in all, 1 Cor. 1. 30.

3. Live in expectation of future troubles, and labour for the same frame of heart after mercies that you had in the danger and exigent.

4. Trust in God, and from temporal mercies labour to see Gods readinesse to deliver you from the guilt and power of sin, 2 Tim. 4. 17, 18.

The Exercises which must help our Thanksgiving on such dayes are partly Natural, partly Spiritual.

The Natural are, 1. To eat the fat and drink the sweet, that is, to fare of the best, and that liberally, as Nehem. 8. 10. at which time the rest should be sent to the poor.

2. To have helps to mirth and cheerfulnesse.

The Spiritual are singing of Psalms, meditating and talking of Gods benefits, and prayers to God, consisting most of praises, and the like.

As no abuse of Idolaters can make it unlawfull to fast, even in those times when they did fast superstitiously: So neither can any abuse of Idolaters make it unlawfull to use such Feasts; only provided that we take heed of surfetting, drunkennesse and superstition.

CHAP. XIII.

III. Of a Religious Vow.

THe word Vow is uſed ambiguouſly, ſometimes for the Matter vowed; and ſometimes formally, for the Promiſe it ſelf, and ſometimes again for Prayers which did accompany their Vow.

A Vow made to God is either General, and common to all, as that in Baptiſm; or Special and Singular, proper to this or or that man; by which he alone is bound which hath made the Vow.

The Matter of a Vow, or the thing vowed, ought not to be evil* and unlawful; but either good, juſt, and holy, or at leaſt indifferent, which is not repugnant to the Law of God, in our power.

* As that Act. 23.12,13. That ſome Vows are unlawfull, and bind not conſcience. See Mr Bonner of conſcience, *pag.*315,316. See Dr Gouges Saints Sacrif. *p.*181, to 199, & *p.*248. And Mr Wheatlies Prototypes on Jacobs Vow. Dr Sclater on *Pſal.*116.114. Mr Downe of Vows.

The Papiſts hold, that nothing can be matter of a Vow, which was due before the Vow was made; but that is falſe. Gen 28. 20. Jacob was bound to have God for his God before; our Baptiſme is a Vow, though the Matter contained in it be a Duty before. Some ſay, ſuch things as come ſub præcepto, are not to be vowed: but ſuch onely as are left to our choice, to do or not to do them, as we will. Gregory Nazianzene made a Vow unto God, That he would never ſwear all his life long; which Vow he kept all his dayes, as writeth Gregory Preſbyter in his life. Auguſtine in Pſalm 75. ſaith we may Vow moral eternal Duties.

Vowing is an extraordinary part of Gods Worſhip, whereby a man doth firmly and ſolemnly bind his conſcience unto God, to the performing or not performing of ſomething otherwiſe indifferent, for his help and furtherance in Godlineſſe.

It is a promiſe made unto God of things lawful, by ſuch as have power ſo to do, and thereby to teſtifie their affection and duty towards him. Maſter Down of Vows.

Vota ſunt promiſſiones ſolennes Deo facta de ijs quæ in noſtra ſunt poteſtate, & Deo grata ad fidem in precibus confirmandam, Dud. Fen. Theol. Sac. *l.*15.*c.*9. Per hoc diſtinguitur juramentum à voto. In voto tranſigitur cum Deo ipſo, ut cum parte cui votum immediatè nuncupatur: aſt in juramento tranſigitur cum homine. Deus autem adducitur non ut pars, ſed ut teſtis. Sanderſonus de Juramenti promiſſorij obligatione. Prælect.1.Sect.3.

A binding of ones ſelf to God by a ſolemn Promiſe, or rather Oath, to do or not to do ſomething lawful, poſſible, and uſeful for our increaſe in godlineſſe.

To Vow, ſwear, and to covenant, ſay ſome, are in Scripture equivalent, importing the ſame thing, Numb 30.2. 1 *Sam.*22.16,17.

It is called a Covenant, 2 Kings 23.2. an Oath, *Numb.*30.2 though there be ſome difference between a Vow and an Oath, an Oath is properly by God to men, for it is to end a controverſie among men: but a Vow is a promiſe immediately to God.

Vota ſiunt Deo, juramenta hominibus per Deum, Bellarm. lib.2.de Monachis cap.14. Mr Perkins Caſe of Conſc.

A Vow is more than a ſingle purpoſe: For in it there is, 1. A purpoſe to do a thing. 2. A binding our ſelves to do that we purpoſe, and to the Lord, *Deut.*23.21.

It is a part of Gods Worſhip, becauſe it immediately and directly tends to expreſs our homage unto God, even as the Word and Sacraments, as being a means effectual to further, help, ſtrengthen, confirm, and increaſe our inward conformity with his will, ſpecially in the matter of thankfulneſſe, and Nature it ſelf dictates it for that purpoſe; for Heathen men would uſe this as a means of ſhewing their thankfulneſſe and confidence in their God.

Some make it not a part of Gods Worſhip, but a help to the parts of Gods Worſhip; but theſe things may be called helps and furtherances to Worſhip, which tend to the ſame end that Worſhip doth, but indirectly, as the circumſtances of the the action adjoyned and annexed to them, but a Vow tends in the ſame manner; that is, directly; and to the ſame end; that is, the increaſe of virtue in our hearts, that the Word and Sacraments do; onely it is an extraordinary part of Gods Worſhip, as Faſting, Feaſting.

Baptiſme is our Sacramentum militare, 1 Peter 3. 2. we alſo ſolemnly ingaged in the Lords Supper.

It hath been the practice of Gods people, 2 Chron. 15. 12, 13, 14. & 34. 31.

It is convenient ſo to do,

1. To anſwer Gods love to us, Heb. 6. 18.
2. To teſtifie our affection to his ſervice.

It is alſo profitable,

1. In regard of our backwardneſſe.
   1. There is Gods natural right, by creation, preſervation, redemption, we were not free before.
   2. The bond of voluntary conſent, and that made in a ſolemn way of Oath and Covenant.
2. Becauſe of our fickleneſſe and inconſtancy.

2. It is a firm binding of the conſcience unto God, Numb. 30. 3. It is a ſwearing by God unto God, and ſo contains implicitely a prayer unto God, to puniſh us ſeverely and ſharply if we fail to perform it, Deut. 23. 23.

In every ſolemn ingagement,

First, There is an atteſtation or calling to God to bear witneſſe.

Secondly, An imprecation or calling on him to puniſh, if we do contrary.

There are affirmative and negative Vows. Abraham lifted up his hand unto God, that is, vowed and ſware unto him by himſelf, That he would not take ſo much as a ſhooe-latchet of the Sodomites goods; and Jacob vowed to offer the tenth at Bethel, and there ſolemnely and publickly to ſerve God. But evermore the thing muſt be in it ſelf indifferent; therefore the Lord commanded that none ſhould by Vow dedicate the firſt-born, becauſe it was Gods before.

The end of a Vow muſt be furtherance in godlineſſe. It muſt be made to the Lord, he is the Object of it, Judges 11. 30, 31. Abraham lifted up his hand to him, David vowed and performed to him, Deut. 23. 21. Pſal. 50. 14.

Where the Scripture ſpeaks of Vowes it mentions Him, Pſal. 76. 11. & 116. 14.

Reaſons:

1. It is an act of Religious Worſhip; therefore God only muſt be the immediate Object.

2. There is no example in Scripture of any that vowed to Saints.

Vide Brochm. de Votis, cap. 2. Queſt. 2. Cum ſcriberentur Scripturæ ſacræ nondum caperat uſus vovendi Sanctis. Bellarm. de cultu Sanctorum, cap. 9.

Bellarmine therefore might well ſay, there is no doubt but the Hereticks (by which he means Proteſtants) do judg us Idolatrous, becauſe we make ſolemn Vows to the Saints; and indeed, acknowledging Vows to be Religious Worſhip, they are much troubled to free their actions from Idolatry. At laſt they pitch on this, That ſince Saints are Gods by participation, and have his Image, therefore we may Vow to them: But then we might Vow to Magiſtrates, for they are Gods ſo; and then we might alſo ſacrifice to the Saints, which yet they allow not.

A Vow hath theſe ſpecial Uſes:

1. To be a confirmation of our faith and confidence in God in the time of need, chiefly in afflictions and temptations.

2. To reſtrain corruption of nature, by avoding things lawful, if inticements to ſinne.

3. To provoke our ſelves to the performance of ſuch Duties as we find our ſelves naturally ſlack unto.

Rules to be obſerved in making a Vow:

1. For the Matter of the Vow, That we vow nothing but things lawful in, them-

David Pſalm 119. 106. ſpeaks not from a preſumption of his owne ſtrength, but a ſenſe of his duty.

Vows muſt be made in a ſenſe of the Covenant of Grace, Lex jubet gratia juvat, 2 Cor. 3. 8. Sr Francis vowed to gather all the Piſmires in the way, that Travellers might not tread them to death. The Arch-Dutcheſs ſwore ſhe would not ſhift her ſmock untill Oſtend were taken; but the long continuance of the Siege (holding out three years and three moneths againſt Spinola) did not only enforce her to break her raſh Vow, but to the loſſe of 78184 men. Cluverius Introduct. to Geog. p. 90.

ſelves, ſelves, and to us in reſpect of our condition. That was a wicked Vow, Acts 23. 21.

2. A thing of ſome weight and moment, either in it ſelf, or at leaſt to the party vowing; therefore the Lord forbade the price of a Dog, becauſe it is a vile and baſe creature; it had alſo a myſtery, for he was a type of a backſlider, from which God will accept of nothing.

3. It muſt be a thing poſſible, and in our power to do or not to do, qui vovet muſt be ſui juris, Numb. 30. 3, 4, 6, 7.

The manner of vowing:

1. It muſt be done with underſtanding and adviſedly, which was Jephtha's failing. Eccleſ. 5. 6.

2. With Humiliation, that we have ſo often dealt perfidiouſly with God; and with joy alſo, that God will take us to him again, though we have denied him, Neh. 9. 10. 2 Chron. 29. 36.

3. With full purpoſe of heart to perform, Pſalm 76. 11. Eccleſ. 5. 6. The very end of Vows and Promiſes, is to bind our unſtable hearts, and to knit our ſouls more cloſely to God. The ſame Motives which incline us to vow, ſhould perſwade us to keep it. See Pſalm 55. 20. Jeremiah 34. 16, 17, 18. Joſhuah 9. 19, 20.

4. In Faith, being reconciled with God. The Vows of Poverty and Continency in the Popiſh Church are to be condemned, becauſe they are not done in faith, but to the overthrow of it, for hereby they think they do a more meritorious act, and that by theſe Vows as they pleaſe God the more, ſo God is more obliged to beſtow Heaven upon them.

5. We muſt not be over often in vowing, it is an extraordinary Duty.

6. We muſt not make perpetual Vows; therefore in the Vow of the Nazariteſhip, God would not have them make a perpetual Vow, but rather for a time. Certain Ceremonies were appointed to be accompliſht by thoſe that were ordinary at the end of their Vow, by which he doth not only preſuppoſe, but injoyn a ſet time. We read of no perpetual Nazarites, but extraordinary two, Sampſon and Samuel.

Popiſh Votaries in all reſpects abuſe this Sacred Ordinance; they vow to Saints, vow things unlawful and trivial, to go in gray, things not in the compaſſe of mens power, to be perpetually continent, hope to merit by vowing, and imagine a perfection to themſelves from it. They make children to vow which cannot deliberate, and bind them to keep it whether their Parents will or no.

That the vows of the Monks concerning poverty and perpetual continency are unlawful, ſee Dr Willet on Gen. 20. 20. Greguti Revelator Arcanorum, cap. 12. Sumptum eſt vocabulum conſilij ex 1 Cor. 7. 4, 25. vocabulum ſupererogationis ex allegoria Samaritani Luc. 10. 15. Chemnit. They urge Matth. 19. 21. to prove theſe Counſels. Conſilium perfectionis vocamus opus bonum à Chriſto nobis non imperatum, ſed demonſtratum; non mandatum, ſed commendatum. Bellarm. de Monachis, lib. 2. cap. 7. Theſe are called Monaſtical Vows, becauſe they are common to all that profeſſe a Monaſtical life. Ipſum vocabulum duo has includit, unum, ut qui ſupererogare ſtatuntur, totum legis ſenſum abſolvat, ne minimo quidem apice prætermiſſo: Alterum, ut legem tranſvolet & tranſcendat, faciendo actiones non ſolum indebitas & minimè imperatas (quod quivis facere poteſt) ſed faciendo actiones meliores, perfectiores, Deo gratiores, quam ſunt iſtæ quæ in lege præcipiuntur. Epiſc. Dav. de juſtitia actuali, cap. 42. Lex Dei attemperata eſt ultimis viribus naturæ integræ & primitus inſtitutæ: non igitur hanc legem tranſcendere poteſt, natura corrupta, & nondum plene renovata. Apoſtolus hoc indicavit ad Rom. 7. 14. quando legem Dei agnoſcit ſpiritualem, & ſe carnalem, & c. 8. 3. Eſt itaque inſana ſuperbia ſimul & ſtultitia, putare ſe poſſe facere opera ſupererogationis, hoc eſt (ipſis papiſtis authoribus) opera quadam indebita, meliora, & ſanctiora operibus legis. In clauſtrum ſe compingere, à carnium eſu abſtinere, preces ad certum numerum & certas horas indies demurmurare, non uti conjugio, regulæ humanitus inventa ſe ſubjicere, proprietati bonorum ſuorum renuntiare, ſunt opera ſupererogationis ſolummodo ſenſu prophetico, Iſai. 1. 12. non ſenſu papiſtico, quia opera à Deo in lege requiſita vincunt & perfectione tranſcendunt. Id. ib. vide plura ibid.

They call them one while Evangelical Counsels, because they are not commanded in the Law of Moses, but only commended in the Gospel of Christ; another while Counsels of Perfection, because they place a most perfect state and degree of Christian life in the observation of them; Supererrogatory works are good works done over and above enjoyned duty.

They mention three principal and substantial Counsels, Continence or single life, voluntary Poverty, and blind Obedience. Now they say, God doth not command these things at all, but he counsels them as the best. Hence those only that do thus are called religious men, spiritual men, and perfect men; and those that do these things, they say do better and more things than God doth command. This Doctrine is suitable to flesh and bloud, which would have God to be a debtor to it.

Appellant Pontificij opera ista indebita quæ quis sponte, sine mandato ex talibus, ut vocant, consilijs præstat, nova ac vanâ voce, Opera Supererogationis, (rectiùs Superarrogantiæ appellarent) & docent ea coram Deo excellenter esse meritoria, non tantum pro ipsis qui ea præstant, sed etiam pro aliis, quibus per Indulgentias Papales, aut alia ratione applicantur, Hommij Disputat. Theol. adversus Pontificios, Disp. 29.

A thing may be indifferent as a Counsel in the general nature of it, yet in particular to this or that man, it is a precept: as Marriage is not a command to all, yet in particular to him that thinks the not marrying is a greater advancement to Gods glory, and he hath the gift to do it, then it is a command to him; so Paul though he took nothing for the preaching of the Gospel, as yet he might have done, yet because of that particular case he was in, he was bound to do it.

2. When God hath appointed one end, and hath left divers wayes or instruments to attain that end, it is left then to a mans choice to take which he will, only he is bound to strive to attain the end.

3. In good actions there is the inward work of the heart, and the outward circumstances, which being singular are not commanded, we cannot do more than the Word of God requireth for the inward, and for the outward the number is not determined, as to pray three or four times, to give so much or so much.

These Vows are not lawful, because they are not in our power, and because they are repugnant to Christian Liberty and the common vocation of all Christians. Continence is not in our power, but is a singular gift of God: To submit ones self to any mortal man by a certain blind obedience, as the Monks do, is repugnant to Christian liberty. To live by begging and the labours of others, doing nothing, is repugnant to the common vocation of men, to whom this ought to be a certain rule, He that doth not labour, let him not eat. Therefore it is not lawful to vow such things.

2. They are not profitable, much less necessary (as they are used by the Papists) but pernicious to the Christian Church. From the Vow of Continence arose abominable filthinesses of all kinds in the Monks Cloysters. From the Vow of feigned Poverty arose so many kinds of unprofitable drones, which devour the honey of the sedulous Bees. From the Vow of blind and absolute obedience, flow such execrable insolencies against the lives of Princes, and such horrible treasons as have frequently been perpetrated by the Jesuites.

Of the Vow of Continence.

Vide Hasen-Mulleri Histor. Jesuit. Ord. cap. 6. Jerome doth immoderately commend Virginity.

The Papists much prefer a single life before a wedded estate, holding that the very indifferent actions of a Votary, viz. to eat or drink, are to be preferred before the best actions of the conjugal estate, as to pray, hear, or receive Sacraments, and that the entring into this estate is as good as Baptism; so that whosoever should die immediately

Nuptiæ terram replent, virginitas paradisum, lib. 1. contra Jovin. And he reasons thus from those words of the Apostle, It is good for a man not to touch a woman; if it be good not to touch, therefore it is evil to touch. The Papists urge 2 Tim. 2. 3, 4. for the single life of Priests, and we alledge 1 Tim. 3. 24. and Heb. 13. 4. for the lawfulnesse of Ministers Marriage. Doctrina quæ in concilio Tridentino obtinuit, in quo Matrimonia parentibus invitis à filiis familias contracta, fuerunt validata, non minus est Doctrina Dæmoniorum; quam alia, quæ prohibent matrimonium personis Ecclesiasticis. Rivetus in cap. 24. Gen. 57. Exercit. 111.

immediately after that Vow, ſhould certainly be ſaved.

The vowed ſingle life among the Papiſts, is ſo far from being a ſtate of perfection or ſupererogation, as that it is for the moſt part a ſinful eſtate in reſpect of making the Vow. For it is a ſin to vow that which a man doth not know to be lawful, or not in his own power, Mat. 19. 11.

The Vow of Continence, whereby a man promiſeth to God to keep chaſtity alwayes in ſingle life; that is, out of a ſtate of wedlock. Againſt this Vow makes that 1 Cor. 7. 9. Cardinal Campegius doubted not to ſay, That it is a greater ſin for Prieſts to be married, than to keep many Harlots at home. Abbot againſt Biſhop.

Abraham was twice married, the reſt of the Patriarchs were married men, and ſo the Prieſts, the Prophets and Apoſtles, and almoſt all the Scripture ſetteth before us, as examples of perfection. Id. Ib.

Religious ſingle life is Angelical, Rhem. on Matth. 22. 30. It is a ſlender praiſe to be like unto the Angels in that they neither marry nor are married. For ſince the Angels have no aptneſs nor ability unto the company of women, as thoſe which have no bodies, it can be ſmall praiſe unto them to abſtain. Married perſons have not been inferiour unto Virgins in their prompt obedience unto Gods will, wherein the Angels are ſet up for patterns unto us, as Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, Moſes, David, Hezekiah, Peter. Cartwright on Rhem. Teſt. Vide Spanhem. de Dub. Evang. Dub. 28.

The Papiſts hold marriage an unclean thing, and yet make it a Sacrament. If marriage be unclean, Adam ſinned in his perfect eſtate, he ſinned before the fall, he ſinned before he ſinned. Dr Clark.

The Pope and Prieſts in deteſtation of the marriage of Miniſters, do for this cauſe brand Proteſtants with the terms of carnal, fleſhly, and beaſtly Miniſters.

John Haymond our Epigrammatiſt, told Queen Mary her Clergy was ſaucy, if they had not their Wives they would have Lemmans. In a Synod at London Anſelme forbad Prieſts Marriage in England, and in the next year were diſcovered a great company of Sodomites among them.

The Popiſh Votaries, according to the French Proverb, have a Law not to marry, and a Cuſtome not to live chaſte, Dr Taylor, that couragious Martyr, ſaid at his parting, Bleſſed be God for holy Matrimony. That Proverb, Si non caſtè ſaltem cautè, came firſt from the Papiſts.

The Greek Church ſaith, He cannot be in holy Orders that is married: The Reformed Church ſaith, He may be in holy Orders that is married, and convertibly.

Veteres Patres Cyprianus, Epiphanius, Hieronymus, ſi quis fortè voverit ſe velle vivere vitam cælibem, & poſtea vivat impurè, nec poſſit incendia cupiditatum cohibere, ſatius eſſe dicunt, ut ducat uxorem, & ſeſe caſtè gerat in Matrimonio, atque illud ipſum Matrimonium, vetus pater Auguſtinus, ratum & firmum eſſe judicat, nec oportere revocari: Iſti, eum qui ſe voto ſemel obſtrinxerit, quantumvis uratur poſtea, quantumvis ſcortetur, quantumvis flagitiosè, & perditè contaminetur, tamen illum non ſinunt uxorem ducere: aut ſi fortè duxerit, tamen negant illud eſſe Matrimonium: & ſatius multo & ſanctius eſſe docent, concubinam aut ſcortum alere, quam ita vivere. Mocket. Apol. Eccleſ. Anglic.

II. Of the Vow of Poverty.

It is a bleſſing of God to be in a ſtate to give rather than to receive, Pſal. 109. 10. Therefore to renounce that ſtate wherein God hath made one able to give, is wilfully to renounce the bleſſing of God. That place is unanſwerable, Eccl. 7. 11. becauſe hereby more good may be done.

The perſon vowing poverty is either rich or poor; if poor, he voweth to leave all, when he hath nothing at all to leave; if rich, and voweth to give away all for merits ſake, he ſins againſt faith, becauſe he ſets up his own merits as if Chriſts were not fully enough.

2. Poverty is in it ſelf an evil, therefore Agur praies againſt it, Prov. 31. becauſe of the temptations that are in it. It is unlawful for a man to put himſelf willingly into that condition in which there are many dangers of ſinning.

3. This hinders a greater Good, as the Offices of Charity and Liberality, and therefore may not be vowed.

For the blind obedience of Superiours, I have touched upon that before, and the mentioning of it is a sufficient confutation. The Jesuites vow to their Generals and Superiours, not only an obedience of will, but also of judgment, which they call a blind obedience.

I find the Polander had reason when he said that the Society of the Jesuites was a Sword, whose Seabbert was in France, but the handle of it in Spain, or at Rome, where the General of the Jesuites abides; for the first motion to draw this Sword comes from thence. A Refut. of Cotton's Letter to the Queen Regent.

They are a kind of Regulars, professing obedience to the Pope and their General, at whose sending they must of free cost preach wheresoever they be sent. They may rather be called Jebusites.

Mr Ball in his larger Catechisme, after the handling of the Ordinances, before he treats of the Commandments, speaks of the spiritual Combate, and two other fruits of Faith; which Method I shall here the rather follow, because I have not yet discussed that Subject.

The first Question then to be resolved, is, What follows the purifying of the heart by faith?

Answ. A fighting and combating against sin and corruption, *Rom.*7.*ult.Gal.*5.17. a Law in the Flesh and in the Spirit; there is alwaies bellum, though not alwaies praelium betwixt the Flesh and the Spirit.

In the state of Nature men are wholly in the Flesh, and not in the Spirit; in the state of Glory they are wholly in the Spirit, and not in the flesh; in the state of Grace there is both Flesh and Spirit.

As long as there is a mixture of Principles, there will be a mixture of our actions, a Christians life is nothing but a checker-work of light and darkness.

The Flesh resists Divine Admonition before, and in, and after conversion; but though it may resist God exhorting, yet it cannot resist God regenerating, as dead flesh cannot resist God raising it from the dead. In the first moment of conversion the Flesh cannot lust against the Spirit, since that is filled up by introducing the Spirit and regenerating the man.

The nature of this Fight,

First, It is the contrary renitency between the Flesh and the Spirit, in the whole course of a mans life.

1. There is an habitual enmity of one against the other in the bent of ones spirit, he is disposed both wayes all the dayes of his life, the Will doth will and nill sin, and Grace, loveth God and sin, there is a proneness to both sides.

See Mr Balls Power of Godlinesse, lib. 4. cap. 1, 2, 3.

2. An actual Opposition, when the faculties of the soul are to act on any thing that fals under a Rule, they both close with it in all holy actions or sinnes. Both these have their seconds to joyn with them, Grace hath its second, and Corruption its second, the Devil and the World side with the one, and the Spirit of God and holy Angels side with the other. The Devil by suggesting to the Flesh sinful thoughts, presenting objects and taking all advantages. The world joynes with it, 1. All wicked men. 2. Things and state of the world, prosperity and adversity, 1 Joh. 2.15,16. they feed these Lusts, Riches, Honours, Pleasures. The Power of God, the Intercession of Christ, the in-dwelling virtue of the Holy Ghost joyn with Grace, the Holy Ghost by his exciting and assisting grace, by chasing the Devil away.

A natural conscience may fight against sin as well as a renewed, when a mans conscience is tempted to sin often, and Satan and corruption will take no denial (when conscience yet resists) this is properly a fight, this may be in natural conscience, *Numb.*22.13. *Dav.Psal.*73.13.

The difference between the fighting of the natural conscience, and of the renewed conscience with sin:

1. The conflict in a natural man is between Conscience and the Will and Affections, the Will carries the soul one way, Conscience another, 2 Pet. 2.15. In a regenerate man the fight is in the same faculty between Conscience and Conscience, there is Sin and Grace in every faculty, a party in the Will for Grace, and another for Sin, this is properly the fight between the Flesh and Spirit in the regenerate, nerate, id patiebar invitus quod faciebam volens Aug. The Angels and Saints in Heaven are all for good, the Devils and damned all for evil. One ſaith it is an apparent errour to affirm, that a godly man cannot ſin with a full conſent of will, Gal. 5. 17. Sanctification is in every faculty, 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. 1 Joh. 5. 4. Two things will make it plain, 1. An antecedent and concommitant willingneſs and unwillingneſs; before the ſin one may ſeem very unwilling while the luſt and objects are kept aſunder, but bring them together, the natural conſcience preſently ſins. 2. There is a willingneſs per ſe, and per accidens, a wicked man loves ſin but for Hell.

Vide Amef l. 2. de conſc. c. 11. de lucta Spiritus & carnis. See alſo Doctor Manton on James 4. 7. p. 419, & 426.

2. The fight in a natural conſcience never puts ſin out of dominion, Rom. 6. 12, 14. There may be in a natural man an oppoſition of fleſh againſt fleſh, corruption againſt corruption; he may ſtrive againſt all ſin from the dictates of his underſtanding and his conſcience, but his will is never troubled at it. This oppoſition is but weak and treacherous, he hath no will to any good, but a kind of woulding that is but now and then; the oppoſition of the Spirit to the fleſh is everlaſting and irreconcileable.

Why doth not the prevailing party keep the other under when it hath gotten the victory.

A good man hath a twofold ſtrength:

1. Habitual, a readineſs to that which is good and againſt evil, by the work of Regeneration which gives him a Will.

2. Actual ſtrength, the aſſiſting power of the Holy Ghoſt, which calleth out the graces that are in us, ſtrengthens them; God is a free Agent, when his aſſiſtance is withdrawn ſin prevaileth.

Nature oppoſeth ſin with worldly weapons, carnal conſiderations, I ſhall loſe my credit; the Spirit with heavenly weapons, the Word of God; I ſhall offend God, grieve the Spirit.

The Fleſh gets the better of nature, and at laſt prevails; the Fleſh is ſometimes alſo worſted by the Spirit.

Sanctification is an imperfect work in this world, we are adopted, reconciled, juſtified, as much at firſt as ever, but ſanctified by degrees. The imperfection of Sanctification ſtands in three things, 1. All the habits of Grace are weak. 2. There remaineth ſtill a whole body of corruption. 3. All the acts which they perform here are mixt.

Two things may bear up the ſpirit of a believer againſt the conflicts of the fleſh.

1. He is able to conclude with Paul, Rom. 7. 25. With the mind I my ſelf ſerve the Law of God, that is, with the ſpiritual or better part.

2. He may gather comfort from Rom. 8. 1. Who walk not after the fleſh, he ſaith not, who have no motions of the fleſh, theſe ſhall not be charged on him.

A wicked man may have fighting about corruption, as Pilat had a conflict with his own ſoul before he gave ſentence againſt Chriſt. There is a fivefold difference (ſay ſome) between the war in the godly and this in the wicked: In the regenerate man there is the fleſh againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh; in the unregenerate there is only fleſh contending with it ſelf on ſeveral conſiderations, on the one ſide fleſh luſting after a preſent content, and at the ſame time fleſh fearing an after-reckoning. 2. In the unregenerate the ſtrife is betwixt Reaſon and Conſcience inlightened, and the inordinate affection; but in the regenerate man faculty againſt faculty in the whole man, in the will ſomewhat which cloſeth with ſin, and ſomewhat which abominates it. 3. In the Matter, in the unregenerate the conteſt is onely about groſs ſins; the gracious heart is againſt ſin, as ſin, and conſequently againſt every ſin. 4. In the end they propound, the unregenerate man to ſtop the clamours of his conſcience, and ſecure his ſoul from the danger of Hell; the godly man, to deſtroy the body of ſin, and pleaſe God in all things. 5. In the effects, the unregenerate man is given up to walk in the wayes of ſin; but in Gods ſervants, the longer the war is continued, the more corruption is mortified, and Grace grows in him.

It ſeems their eſtate then in the ſecond Adam is not better than it was in the firſt Adam,

Adam, where there was no ſuch mixture; Adam's happineſs conſiſted in the perfection of his Sanctification, theirs in the perfection of their Juſtification, Epheſ. 5. 27. 2. His happineſs continued but a while, theirs ſhall laſt for ever. 3. This ſtate conduceth much to Gods glory and their own ſpiritual good. 1. They live in a continual dependance, flie to God ſtill, and rely on him. 2. They are kept humble, and long for a full fruition of Chriſt, Rom. 18. 23. & 7. 24. 2 Cor. 5. 2. Thoſe actions they perform are in ſome reſpect more acceptable than that of Adam in innocency, or the Angels in Heaven, becauſe done with conflict and ſelf-denial.

The other fruits of Faith are:

1. A renouncing of all evil in affection, and of groſs ſin in life and converſation, 1 Joh. 2. 1. Then in a Goſpel-ſenſe we are ſaid not to ſin, when we caſt off, and are free from all groſs and ſcandalous ſins, and do carefully avoid and make conſcience of the leaſt and moſt ſecret ſin, 1 Sam. 12. 3, 4, 5. Luk. 1. 16.

The Schoolmen and Caſuiſts agree with the Proteſtants in this, That converting Grace cannot ſtand with the voluntary practice of any one ſin. Every Saint lives in the practice of ſin through ignorance, and is often overtaken with known ſin: through the ſtrength of temptation, as David did often lie, ſome think it was the ſin of his nature, Remove from me the way of lying, but he makes not choice of a way of ſin. No godly man allows himſelf in the practice of any known ſin, 1 John 1. 6. Sinneth not] he means it not of acting ſin, ſee 1. 8. but alloweth not himſelf in the practice of known ſins; ſee chap. 3. 7, 8, & 9, verſes, & 2. 4. 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10. Gal. 5. 19, 21. Eph. 5. 5, 6. 1 Theſſ. 4. 6. Rev. 2. 8, ult. & 22. 15. Mark 8. 43, to the end of 48.

Reaſons,

1. Whoever is effectually called, is called to turn from all ſin, Ezek. 18. 30, 31.
2. He is called to turn to God, Jer. 4. 1.
3. The Authority of God is violated as well by the allowance and willing committing of one ſin as by all, Jam. 2. 10, 11. He that gave one command gave the reſt, Quod propter Deum ſit æqualiter ſit.
4. Chriſt denies ſalvation to thoſe that do not repent, and it is no repentance except we turn from all ſin, Rom. 11. 26. Tit. 2. 14.
2. There are many helps againſt outward groſs ſins, 2 Tim. 3. 5. God is much diſhonoured by ſuch ſins; men generally condemn ſuch as wicked; they ſay ſuch a man is a drunkard, a whoremaſter. Some Chriſtians have attained to that perfection, that after their repentance they have not deliberately committed any groſſe ſin, as Paul, Zachary, and Elizabeth, Luk. 1. 6. Job, and they may attain to it, yet it is not ſo neceſſary to repentance as it muſt be in all, then we ſhall ſhut out David, Noah, Jonah and Lot, becauſe God is pleaſed to ſhew the variety of his Grace.

II. A love and delight in that which is good, joyned with a ſincere deſire, purpoſe and indeavour, daily to amend whatſoever is amiſs, and to lead a life according to the Law of God, Thy teſtimonies are my delight, Pſal. 40 8. Iſa. 58. 13, 14. Cant. 1, 4. & 2. 4. Iſa. 26. 6, 9. Pſal. 73. 25.

Obedience to Chriſt flows from Faith, Rom. 1. 5. it is called the obedience of Faith, it flows from Faith three wayes:

1. Becauſe Faith joyns the ſoul to Chriſt, from whom alone we receive ſtrength for every good.
2. Becauſe it teacheth the ſoul to acquieſce and reſt conſtant with thoſe Arguments that the Lord uſeth to perſwade us.
3. Faith commands all other Graces, I believed, therefore I ſpake, and ſo, I believe, therefore I hear and meditate, Chriſt is my husband, therefore I muſt obey him. David a man after my own heart, he will fulfill all my will, Heb. 10. 7. Gods will ſhould not only be the rule, but reaſon of our actions. We may do the will of God, and yet not do it becauſe he will it.

1. The people of God are redeemed wholly from the Ceremonial Law, Col. 2. 14. When Chriſt the ſubſtance was come, theſe ſhadows ceaſed; it is a great mercy to be delivered from theſe Rites, burdenſome to the Jews, and impoſſible to the Gentiles, Acts 15. 18.

They

They are not delivered from the Law as a Rule, then

1. There would be no ſin or duty, but men might live as they liſt, Rom. 4. 17.

2. If the Law were blotted out, the Image of God might be blotted out, which conſiſts in holineſs and righteouſneſs, it is Gods immutable Image, Mat. 8. 10.

3. Chriſt died that we might have Grace to fulfill the Law, Rom. 8. 3, 4. Phil. 1. 21.

We are (notwithſtanding our defects) bound to ſtrive after perfection, the endeavour is required, Phil. 2. 11, 12. that is, our ſtate after the reſurrection. 2. We are obliged to bemoan every defect and failing. 3. Theſe weakneſſes thus bewailed (where there is ſincerity) ſhall not hurt us. God ſpeaks of ſuch as are upright and ſincere, as if they had ſatisfied the Law, 1 Kings 4. 18. 2 Kings 23. 20. 4. Then are we ſincere, when we have conſtant care to love and pleaſe God, and our weakneſſes not allowed but reſiſted, and bewailed if we fall, Jer. 8. 4.

Faith doth not ſingle out its Object, nor Obedience its Command, Pſal. 119. 6. Faith believes all promiſes, all truths, and obedience reſpects every precept.

The End of the eighth Book.

THE

THE NINTH BOOK OF THE Moral Law.

CHAP. I.

Some things of the Commandments in general.

Cùm Deus in Monte Sinai legem populo exhiberet, de medio ignis illam exhibuit. Cur ita? ut statim legis violatores deterreret, sciretque acriter puniendos, qui Dei legem reciperent, nec observarent. Novar. Sched. Sac. prophan. lib. 10. cap. 30. Papista, Anabaptista, Antinomi, Libertini, alij que pernicioſos errores finxerunt, de lege & Evangelio; qui accuratè diſcerni & refutari non poſſunt, niſi legis termino rite explicato. Appollonius De Lege Dei, Theſ. 1.

THE Law was delivered with thunder and lightening, Exod. 19.18. Heb. 12.18,19,20,21. ſo that the mountain quaked, and Moſes alſo trembled, to ſhew that thoſe which break it ſhould be terribly puniſhed, whether it was delivered by God immediately or by the Miniſtery of Angels. Vide Grotium in Exod. 20. See alſo L' Eſtrange of the Sabbath, pag. 35, &c.

The Latine word for Law is Lex, ſo called, either à Legendo, becauſe the Laws were wont publickly to be read, or à Ligando, becauſe the Law binds all thoſe to obedience to whom it is delivered, or à deligendo, becauſe it makes a choice of things to be done and omitted, to be fought and avoided, Vide Brochon. Syſtem. Theol. Tom. 2. De Lege cap. 1. Sect. 1, 11. Et D. Sanderſ. De obligat. Conſc. Prælect. 3. Sect. 3, 4.

The Hebrew word תּוֹרָה Torah comes from יָרָה Jarah, which ſignifieth firſt to teach; the Law is a Doctrine, commanding every one his duty. Secondly, Jaculari, to caſt a Dart, to ſignifie, that the Law ought to be as a mark to all, to which we ſhould aim in all our actions.

The Greek word νόμος, becauſe it gives every one his own, of which ſee Dr Hammond on Matth. 5.

The Moral Law is ſet down in Exod. 20. from the beginning of verſ. 1, to the end of the 17. Deut. 5. v. 6,7,10 22. Gerh. loc. commun. Tom. 3. Maveſij Collegium Theolog. Scitum illud Rabbinorum: Non eſt Iota in Thorah, à quo non pendeant mille montes doctrinarum. Dict. Antiq. Bibl. part. 1. Lex eſt ſanctio ſancta jubens honeſta & prohibens contraria, The Moral Law is, 1. A good and a holy Law, Rom. 12.22. 2. A perfect Law, Jam. 1. 25. commanding all good, and forbidding all evil. 3. An eternal Law.

The

The Law in the largeſt ſignification is nothing but the rule of mans obedience, eſt norma faciendorum & fugiendorum.

A Law is a certain rule of life preſcribed by a ſupream Governour to thoſe which are under him for the well-ordering of their actions to their own, and the publick welfare.

Some deſcribe a Law to be an expreſſion of the Legiſlators will, determining and conſtituting the duty of the ſubject, the matter of it is the duty of the ſubject, the form the expreſſion of the Legiſlators will.

The word Law in Scripture is taken often for all that Doctrine which preceded Chriſt exhibited, which is called the Old Teſtament, and is divided into theſe three parts, Moſes, the Prophets, and Pſalms, Luke 24. 44. Often only for that part of the Old Teſtament which was written by Moſes. Often for the Decalogue alone. This was written in the year of the world 2454, or thereabout.

Maſter Cartwright in his Mellificium Hebraicum, lib. 4. cap. 7. ſhews the ſeveral acceptions of the Law; and Biſhop Wren againſt the Raccovian Catech. Sect. 49. of the word Commandment.

The Law requires a threefold righteouſneſſe of us:

1. Habitual, a conformity of our natures to the holineſs of the Law.
2. Practical, a conformity of our lives to the precepts of the Law.
3. Paſſive, a conformity of our ſufferings to the threatnings and curſe of the Law.

By reaſon of the efficient or the Authour ſome Laws are called Divine, ſome Humane; Divine, thoſe which were eſtabliſhed by God; Humane, thoſe which were eſtabliſhed by men.

Secondly, By reaſon of the matter, Divine Laws are divided into Moral, Ceremonial and Judicial, Deut. 4. 13, 14.

Firſt, Moral, which is a general rule of righteouſneſs for all Adams Children; in the Decalogue or Ten Commandments.

Secondly, The Ceremonial, which was a particular preſcript form of piety for the time of the Law.

Thirdly, Judicial, which was the rule of policy, for the Commonwealth of the Jews.

Maſter Hudſon in his Divine Right of Government, l. 1. c. 2. (if he were the Authour thereof) ſaith, the Ceremonial and Judicial Laws of Moſes are but Commentaries on that part of the firſt and ſecond Table of the Ten Commandments, which relates to outward actions, ſetting down more ample and particular rules of inſtruction, whereby to order and regulate the outward actions of publick Societies in matters concerning worſhip and policy, according as the Moral Law had done in brief and general terms, for regulating the external actions of every private man in particular in relation to the ſame end.

The Law of God is that rule of life which he hath enjoyned to man his reaſonable creature, for the ordering of his actions to his own and the common good, and the glory of the maker of all.

All creatures have a Law and rule, not meerly, becauſe it is Regula morum, a rule of humane actions, for ſo other Laws may be; but to diſtinguiſh it from Lex veteris fœderis ſive Teſtamenti triplex ſit.

1. Decem verba, eorumque expoſitio, quæ lex moralis vulgò appellari conſuevit, Ezek. 20. 10, 11.
2. Lex Ceremonialis, Heb. 9. 1, 10.
3. Judicia, quibus delicta caſtigabantur ea populus communione arcebatur, & lex forenſis appellatur. Cocceius de Fœdere, c. 11. Vide plura ibid. Hoc intereſt inter tres leges Moſaicas, Judicialis data eſt Hebræis quà corpori politico, Cæremonialis quâ Eccleſiæ, moralis quà hominibus. Doctoris Arrowſ. Tactica Sacra, l. 2. c. 4. Mal. 4. 4. Chriſtianorum quidem Theologi tres legis ſpecies inde concludunt, Moralem, Ceremonialem, & Forenſem ſeu Judicialem, hanc judicia iſtam ſtatuta illam doctrinam Malachiæ affirmantes Alting. Schol. l. 5. c. 4. Præcepta moralia ſunt de dictamine legis naturæ, Ceremoniæ ſunt determinationes cultus divini, judicialia ſunt determinationes juſtitiæ inter homines obſervandæ, unde cum Apoſtolus, Rom. 7. 12. dixiſſet, quod lex eſt ſancta; ſubjungit quòd mandatum eſt juſtum & bonum, & ſanctum, juſtum quidem quantum ad judicialia; ſanctum quantum ad ceremonialia (nam ſanctum dicitur quod Deo dicatum) bonum, id eſt, honeſtum quantum ad moralia. Aquin. 12, 2æ Quæſt. 99. Art. 4. c. 9. See Dr Willet on Exod. 20. 2. Quæſt. 2, & 3. Ideo moralis lex vocatur; quia de moribus, eſt omni hominum generi & ſemper communis. Zanch. Quàm eleganti ordine Deus præcepta Decalogi diſpoſuerit, non tantùm ex generali diſtributione in duas Tabulas, verùm etiam ex ſingulorum Præceptorum tum Cohærentiâ & nexu, tum conſequentiâ, maximè etiam ſexti & ſeptimi luculentiſſimè patet. Febrit. Conc in Decal. Nomen nuperum eſt Decalogus; Clemens Alexandrinus firſt uſed it.

Laws Positive, as Judicial and Ceremonial. See Mr Lawsons Body of Divinity, lib. 2. cap. 6.

It is called the Moral Law.

The Humane Nature of Christ taken into fellowship with God in the same person, is subject to a Law, Gal. 4. 4. The Angels also are subject to a Law, Psal 103. 20. they are not sui juris, the inanimate creatures, Psal. 148. 6. much more man, because he hath election and choice, can judg of things according to rule, Gal. 6. 16. Gods own act is his Law. God gave man a Law written in his own heart, this is not wholly blotted out by the fall, Rom. 2. 14. God also gave man a Law on Mount Sinai, Rom. 5. 20. it had a sanction, rewards and penalties were added to it, Gal. 3. 10.

The giving of the Law by Moses was not latio nova, but renovatio antiqua legis, Rom. 2. 4.

The Ten Commandments are a perfect platform of obedience, summarily delivering in Ten words the whole substance of all that duty to which the sons of men stand bound in conscience before God, if they be out of Christ, to do it without fail or else to be damned; if in Christ, to strive with all their main to perform it perfectly.

The Law is the whole will of God, and the whole duty of man. It was written by God upon [a] Tables of stone, Exod. 31. 18. to shew the perpetuity and stability of it; hereby also was signified, the hardness of the Jews heart, which could not easily receive that impression of the Law. It was after delivered to Moses to be kept in the Ark of testimony, as a figure of Christs accomplishing them for us.

[a] Materia tabularum in genere fuit lapidea. Hinc vocantur tabulæ lapidis, Exod. 24. 12. & ter tabulæ lapidum, Deut. 9. 9, 10, 11. & Deut. 10. 1.

The summe of the Moral Law is extant in the Decalogue, (so called by the Septuagint, because consisting of Ten words or commands,) [b] as the tenth number is most perfect and capacious, so also the Moral Law comprehended in Ten words by the most wise God is most perfect. Some say, they were so many according to the number of our fingers, the most familiar instrument of numbring. Peter Martyr well resembled the Decalogue to the Ten Predicaments, because as there is nothing hath a being in nature, but what may be reduced to one of those ten; so neither is there any Christian Duty, but what is comprehended in one of these. See Mr Boyles Considerations touching the style of the holy Scriptures, p. 129, 139, 140.

[b] Decalogus Græca vox est, Δεκαλογος, Græcis & Latinis scriptoribus usitata, genere tùm masculino, tùm fœminino. Buxtorfius de Decalogo. Nominatur Decalogus quia continet decem verba, Exod. 34. 28. Per verba autem hic intelliguntur non singulæ dictiones, sed sententia ex dictionibus composita, nempè præcepta. Piscat. exeg. Aphoris. de Lege Dei. Vide Bayi Instit. Relig. Christ. l. 3. c. 14.

It is called the Law, or a Law, Exod. 24. 12. by way of eminency, the Law of the Lord, or the Law of God, Jer. 31. 33. from the principal Author and Law-giver there of; a fiery Law, Deut. 33. 2. & 5. 22. from the manner of Gods promulging it, out of the midst of the fire. Commandment or Precept, Deut 6. 1.

The Commandment is holy, just and good, Rom. 7. 12. see 2. 18. 1 John 5. 3. 1. The Author of them is a rightful Lord, a just and wise Lord, and tender of our welfare. 2. The Commandments are not contrary to the first principles of our being, nor unsuitable to our estate, the form of them is the expression of Gods will, to write Gods Law in our hearts and to be renewed after God, is all one in Scripture; the end of them is to regulate us in our course, and so to bring us to blessedness, Psal. 19. 11.

* Cabbalistarum sententia est, quam cæteri Judæi amplectuntur, legem à Mose scriptam fuisse non modo sine punctis, accentibus, & distinctionibus versuum, sed etiam sine dictionum separatione & formatione, ita ut tota lex esset velut longissima dictio cujus distributio in varias dictiones ore tenus à Deo Mosi tradita est Morini Exercit. Bibl. l. 1. Exercit. 6. c. 2.

What could be more reasonable, or more holy and just, than that men should not steal, or murther one another, or live in adultery, or dishonour those that bare them, or abuse the name of him, whom they account for their God, and so of the rest of the Commandments.

The Jewish * Rabbins had so reverent an account of the Law, that they kept a note of all the Letters in it, and used this Proverb, There is not in the Law, no not one Letter on which do not hang great Mountains.

My Lord of Cherbury in his Book De veritate, raiseth this Question, An quæ in Decalogo, Continentur præcepta, sint notitiæ Communes, an verò veritates revelatæ? and Answers, A nobis quidem omninò tanquam notitiæ Communes habentur, cum nulla vel Religio, vel Lex non ita jusserit. He doth particularly there touch upon upon all the Commandments. See Regers his Faith of Proteſtants, profeſſed in all ages, chap. 4.

There were few of the Commandments of the two Tables which the Saxons did not aſſert by Laws, by them made, the Third and Tenth excepted, which latter commands the inward man only, and whereof God hath the ſole cogniſance. Maſter Bacon of the Government of England, part 1. chap. 40.

There is a twofold diviſion of the Decalogue laid down in Scripture. Firſt, Into two Tables. Secondly, Into ten words or precepts, Deut 4.13. *Mat.*22.37.

Firſt, The Decalogue is divided into two Tables, *Exod.*32.15,16,19. & 34.1,4. *Deut.*5.22. & 10.1,4. 1 Kings 8. 9. Epheſ. 6. 1,2. The firſt Table declareth our duty to God immediately, the ſecond declareth our duty to our neighbour for Gods ſake. The firſt Trble preſcribes offices of piety toward God, the ſecond offices of charity toward our neighbour. Chriſt himſelf teacheth this, *Mat.*22.37,38, 39,40. Holineſs and righteouſneſs are often joyned together, Luke 1.73,74. Epheſ. 4.24. In the former Table are the four firſt Commandments, in the latter the ſix laſt.

The reſpect betwixt the precepts of both Tables is this, that out of love to God in Chriſt we perform love, and the duties of love toward our neighbour.

The love of God is the ground of love to our neighbour, 1 John 4. 20. & 5. 1,2. and love to our neighbour is a teſtimony of our love to God, *Rom.*13. 8, 9, 10.

It is confeſſed by all that there are ten Commandments, and they divided into Tables [c]. But it is a Queſtion between us and the Papiſts, How many precepts are to be aſſigned to each Table? We aſſign four Precepts to the firſt Table, ſix to the ſecond, they three to the firſt Table and ſeven to the ſecond. Vide Aquin. 1a, 2æ. Quæſt. 100. Art. 4. See Biſhop And. large Expoſit. of the Command. Wendelini Chriſtiana Theol. Syſtema Maius, lib. 2. cap. 4. pag. 1467, 1470, 1471, 1472. Et exercitat. Theol. partem 2dam exercitat. 134. Piſcat. exeg. Aphoriſm. De lege Dei.

[c] Satis conſtat inter omnes Decalogi duas tabulas eſſe: quarum prior ad Deum referatur, altera ad proximum. Sed de præceptis, quæ iis in tabulis continentur, alia atque alia ſententia eſt. Ego in Ebræorum Commentariis reperio prima tabula præcepta quatuor; ſecunda ſex, viz. quæ ad Deum pertinent: Non habebis: Non facies. Non aſſumes. Memento, &c. quæ ad proximum, Honora. Non occides. Non Mæchaberis: Non teſtaberis falſum. Non concupiſces. Aliter tamen hæc ab aliis diſtinguuntur. Sunt enim qui prioris tabulæ tantùm tria agnoſcunt. Non habebis. Non aſſumes. Memento. Et ſecundæ ſeptem; ſeparantes ultimum, non concupiſces. Ut aliud præceptum ſit, non deſiderabis, quæ tamen apud Moſen omninò confunduntur. Nam pro eo quod in Exodo, non concupiſces domum, &c. Non deſiderabis uxorem in Deuteronomio: legitur, non deſiderabis uxorem, &c. Non concupiſces domum, Quare ſi vera ea diſtinctio, quid reſtat, niſi ut nonum præceptum ſit decimum, & contra, decimum nonum? Druſ. Miſcel. centuria 1. c. 1.

The Lutherans * follow them, they joyn together the Precept of not having other gods with that of not making graven Images, and they divide the laſt Commandment into two, ſo that one forbids the luſting after another mans wife, the other

* Vide Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Tom. 2. De Lege cap 6. Quæſt. 8.

Conſtat inter omnes Legem Domini in duas tabulas ab ipſo Domino diſtinctam. Id quod factum eſt tum memoriæ cauſa, quo facilius diſceretur ita breviter diſtincta: tum ipſarum rerum, de quibus agit, diſtinguendarum & animad vertendarum gratia. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 11. Vide plura ibid. Lex naturalis in duobus conſiſtit, bonum eſſe faciendum, malum fugiendum: ſicut omnia præcepta Decalogi ad unam Legem univerſalem, eamque bipertitam, reducuntur, illam ſc. quæ eſt de Dilectione Dei & proximi. D. Sanderſ. Prælect. 4. de obligat. Conſc. Præcepta moralia ſub notione triplici Scripturæ inveniuntur, ut unum, ut duo, ut decem, ſummatim, ſub ratione monadis, in compendio, 1 Tim. 1. 5. Rom. 15. 9. Dilectionis, deſtributivè, ſub ratione Dualitatis, juxta duas Legis Tabulas, Dilectionem Dei & proximi, Matth. 22. v. 38, 40. Extenſivè, ſub ratione Decadis, juxta partes integrantes, quæ ſunt Decem mandata. Omnes unanimi conſenſu decem mandata recipiunt. D. Holdſw. Lectio 25. partis primæ. Vide Buxtorf. de Decalog. Hæc quaternaria primæ tabulæ diſtinctio eſt Hebræa, ut docet Aben Eſra: eſt Græca, ut Athanaſius in Synopſi, Scripturarum, ut Origenes in Exodum, ut Chryſoſtomus in Matth. Homil. 49. ut Nazianzenus idem verſibus complexus eſt: eſt etiam Latina, ut Hieronymus & Ambroſius in Epiſtola ad Epheſios Capite 6. Rami Comment de Relig. Chriſt. lib 2. cap. 3. Primum præceptum ſubſtantiam & objectum divini cultus imperat, Deum ſolum: ſecundum verò præceptum imperat cultus divini modum ſpiritualem ſolum. Jun. Univerſus Dei cultus quoad ſubſtantiam ad reliqua tria primæ tabulæ præcepta referri poteſt, nec minus ad 4. pertinet, quatenus die Sabbati erat exhibendus. Eatonus De Sabbato. The firſt Table containeth four Commandments, the which diviſion doth Joſephus Antiq l. 6. c. 3. Origen. Homil. in Exod. 8. Ambroſe in cap. 6. Epiſt. ad Epheſ. approve: The tenth Commandment, Thou ſhalt not covet, is but one Commandment, as I have diligently ſearched all the Editions that we have in the Hebrew Tongue. With one point, period and ſentence he concludeth the whole tenth Commandment. In *Deut.*5. certain late Editions make the diviſion of the Text, but that is nothing to the purpoſe, there Moſes repeateth the words unto them that knew before the diviſion of the Tables, in the eldeſt Edition and Print that I have ſeen, the tenth Commandment in Deuteronomy is not divided, the which Edition Venice gave unto us. Onkelos the Chaldee Interpreter on Deuteronomy maketh but one Commandment of the tenth. Biſhop Hooper of the Commandments. See Dr Taylors Ductor Dubitantium, l. 2. c. 2. Rule 6. And Urſin de Lege Divina, p. 282, 283.

luſting after other things. Of this opinion was Auſtin, whom many others followed, but eſpecially the Papiſts, almoſt all, and thoſe which ſome call Lutherans. Vide Mareſij Colleg. Theol. Both thought that conjunction to be fit, that they might excuſe their ſacrilege, by which they are wont to raze out of their Books that Commandment of not making nor worſhipping religious Images, that ſo alſo the number of the ten Precepts may be manifeſt, even that Appendix, as they call it, being alſo taken away. Others would have four Commandments in the firſt Table, ſix in the ſecond, therefore they ſay thoſe two Commandments are different, that of not having other gods, and this of not making graven Images, and that the forbidding of the luſting after both wife and houſe is but one Commandment, which opinion our Churches commonly imbrace and confirm by reaſons drawn out of Scripture, and by the authority of many of the Ancients. The firſt Reaſon is taken out of the collation of thoſe places of Exod. 20. 17. & Deut. 5. 21. where the Commandment of not luſting is repeated, for when it is ſo uttered in the firſt place, Thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbours houſe, thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbours wife, nor his man-ſervant. In the ſecond the words are ſo inverted, that the wife is put in the firſt place, to whom the houſe, field, ſervant, are added; by which tranſlation of the words about coveting anothers wife and houſe, they rightly inferre the precepts were not diſtinct. The ſecond reaſon is derived from that, that theſe things are indifferent, who is to be worſhipped, and how he is to be worſhipped, therefore there is a double precept, one concerning the true object of worſhip, the other concerning the manner and reaſon how he ought or ought not to be worſhipped, therefore diſtinct kinds of Idolatry are forbidden, one more groſs by which we erre in the object, when the true God either is not worſhipped, or not alone worſhipped; the other, when he is not worſhipped in Spirit and truth, or in that manner which he hath preſcribed in his Law, which make diſtinct prohibitions. S^t Jerom and generally all the Ancients, as well Jews as Chriſtians before Auguſtine were of that opinion. Vide Muſc. loc. commun. in prec. 1. Zanch. Decalog. l. 1. c. 11. Theſ. 4. Thoſe which think otherwiſe here urge the word which is repeated, Thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbours houſe, thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbours wife; whence they infer that they are two diſtinct Precepts. But the Law concerning concupiſcence is one, which forbids thoughts and deſires contrary to ſound contentment: for the object of this Commandment is one, and the clauſe is general in theſe words, Nor Any thing that is his. If for the variety of things falling under deſire we ſhall make divers precepts, two will not ſuffice: The Apoſtle Rom 7. 7. citing the laſt Commandment, cals it the Commandment, not Commandments. Aug. Quæſt. 71. in Exod. fancied a myſtery, that the number of three Commandments touching God might betoken the Trinity.

This is not a new queſtion, it was in Calvins daies, and in the daies of ſome of the antient Fathers, Auguſtine wrote two Books, Contra adverſarios legis. Calvin wrote againſt the peſtilent Sect of Libertines.

There is a great Queſtion about the Moral Law, which was firſt written in mans heart in the time of his Creation, the Law that was proclaimed by Gods own mouth upon Mount Sinai, which we call the ten Commandments, whether it be in force in the Chriſtian Church?

First, Take the true ſtate of the Queſtion betwixt us and the Antinomians that deny the Law to be in force, in theſe diſtinctions:

The Papiſts calumniate us, as if we taught that men are freed from the Decalogue. Vide Bellarm. de juſtificat. l. 4. c. 5. David. à Mauden. Diſcurſ. moral. in decem Decalogi Precepta, Diſcurſum primum Decal. prævium. But that we urge the obedience of the Moral Law as well as they do, and upon better Arguments and reaſons than they do. See Br Down. of the Covenant of Grace, c. 7. He ſhews alſo there, c. 5. how our Saviour hath delivered us. 1. From the curſe of the Moral Law. 2. The rigour and exaction. 3. The terrour and coaction of it. And, 4. From the irritation of it. Vide Gentilecti Apol. pro Chriſtianis Gallis Relig. Refor. c. 5. See M^r Burgeſſe his Vindiciæ Legis, Lect. 17. & 22. Chriſt hath not freed us from obedience of the Law as it is a duty, but more ſtrongly ingageth us to it by the mercy of redemption, Rom. 6. 14. 1 Cor 6. 19, 20. 2 Cor. 5. 14. Titus 2. 11, 12. afore we were oblieged to it by that of Creation, and inableth us by his grace more fully to obedience, Job. 15. 4. Phil. 4. 13. It is a Queſtion diverſly diſputed by Divines both Popiſh and Proteſtant, (Bellarm. de Juſt. l. 4. c. 6. Zanch. de Redemp. l. 1. c. 11. Theſ. 1.) Whether the Moral Law bind Chriſtians, as it was delivered by Moſes and the Prophets, or onely as it was engraven in the hearts of all men by nature, and as it is renewed in the Goſpel by Chriſt and his Apoſtles. That opinion, that the Law as it was given by Moſes and the Prophets, and written in the Old Teſtament, doth bind Chriſtians, is better and more ſafe. The Moral Law of the Old Teſtament is pronounced ſpiritual, holy, good, juſt and eternal, Pſal. 19. 8, 9. Rom. 9. 10. Vide Apollonium de Lege Dei, c. 6. Theſ. 1.

1. You

1. You muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt the Law given to Adam in Paradiſe, as a Covenant of life and death, and as it is given in the hand of a Mediator, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

2. You muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt the things that are contained in the Law, and the binding power of the Law.

3. You muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt the principal Law giver, and the miniſterial Law-giver.

4. You muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt the Law given by God, even by the hand of Moſes in the true intent and meaning of it, and between the interpretation that the Jewiſh Doctors could make of it.

5. You muſt diſtinguiſh betwixt the Law it ſelf, and the ſanction of it.

The only Queſtion is about the binding power of the Law, that is, Whether the things contained in the ten Commandments are by the Lord (the great Law-giver) commanded now to Chriſtians?

The Antinomians hold the contrary, quid nobis cum Moſe? the only rule (ſay they) they are under, is the free Spirit of God, enclining them by a holy renewed nature to do that which is good in his ſight, they are acted by the Law of love, and they do the things of the Law, but not becauſe commanded in the Law, they urge Rom. 6. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 9. But on the other ſide, the Orthodox Divines ſay, That it is true, our light is only from Chriſt, and the Spirit of God dwelling in us is the fountain of all the good we do; but yet, ſay they, the Lord hath commanded his holy Law to be our Rule, which we muſt look to, which if we tranſgreſſe we ſinne, and are to account every tranſgreſſion of it a ſinne, and ſo are to be humbled for it, and to walk as thoſe which have offended a gracious God.

Vide Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Tom. 2. de Lege c. 6. Quæſt. 7. Qui ſit Antinomiorum circa Legis Moralis uſum & obſervationem error. Et Melancth. de Lege. Cum Scholijs Pezelij pag. 47, &c. Et Apollonium de Lege Dei, cap. 10. Theſ. 1. Et Doctoris Sanderſoni Prælectionem Quartam de obligatione Conſcientiæ, Sect. 31. Et Doctoris Holdſworth Prælect. Theol. à Lectione viceſima prima partis primæ ad Lectionem Triceſimam Quintam.

Reaſons to prove the Moral Law ſtill in force to believers:

Firſt, Some places of Scripture prove it, as Mal. 4. 12. Eccleſ. 13. 4. Matth. 5. 17. Think not (ſaith Chriſt) that I am come to deſtroy the Law, I am not come to deſtroy [d] but to fulfill it. So Matth. 22. 37. Rom. 3. 31. Rom. 7. 22. Rom. 13. 9. James 2. 8, 10, 11. Epheſ. 6. 2. Rev. 22. 14. which Scriptures make it clear that believers are under the Moral Law.

Secondly, If believers be not under the Law, then they do not ſin if they do contrary to the Law, or neglect the things commanded in the Law, For where there is no Law there is no tranſgreſſion.

Thirdly, Becauſe the Lord when he doth promiſe in the Old Teſtament the new Covenant, he doth in that Covenant promiſe to write his Law in their hearts; there ſhould be ſuch a ſutableneſſe between their ſpirits and the Law of God that they ſhould carry the counterpane of it in their hearts.

It is a preſumptuous ſpeech to ſay, Be in Chriſt and ſinne if thou canſt, for Davids murder after he was in Chriſt was a ſinne, 2 Sam. 12. 13. In many things we offend all, James 3. 2. 1 John 1. 8.

[d] The Antinomiſts interpret thoſe words of Chriſt in this ſenſe, He came not to deſtroy the Law but to fulfill it: that is, he came not to deſtroy it without fulfilling it in his own perſon, he hath deſtroyed it unto the perſon of every believer, Rom. 10. 4. One diſtinction well heeded and rightly applied, will clear the whole point concerning the abrogation and obligation of the Moral Law under the New Teſtament. The Law may be conſidered either as a rule, or as a Covenant. Chriſt hath freed all believers from the curſe and rigour of the Law, conſidered as a Covenant, Rom. 10. 4. but he hath not freed them from obedience to the Law, conſidered as a Rule. Doctor Sanderſ. on 1 Pet. 2. 16.

Some object and ſay, that this is an argument we are freed from it, Becauſe their heart is ſo willing to conform to Gods will, that they ſhall need no other rule to walk by but their own Spirit.

Anſw. If there be that conformity in them, yet the readineſſe of the child to obey his Fathers will doth not take off the command of the Father.

Fourthly, The Moral Law is in effect nothing but the Law of nature, we owe it to God as our Creator.

Believers

Believers are freed from the Law:

Believers are freed from whatsoever in the Law is hurtfull, unprofitable, burdensome; from those convictions which drive a poore sinner to despaire, not from such which cause self abhorring. See Dr Gouge on *Heb.*12. 26. Sect 129. of the severall uses of the Law. And Mr Hinde of the use of the Moral Law in the dayes of the Gospel, *p.*71,72,73,79.

1. As a Covenant of life, Do this and live, they have no need to look for life that way, they have it at a better hand and a cheaper rate, for eternal life to them is the gift of God, and the purchase of Jesus Christ.
2. From the rigour of the Law.
3. The irritation and coaction of it, it doth not exasperate and inrage us by its opposition.
4. From the condemning power, and the curses of it.

Vide Apollonium *De Lege Dei, cap.*8.*Thes.*1.

The Law is:

1. A glasse to reveal and make known unto us the holinesse of God, and the will of God; and secondly, to make our selves known to our selves, by the Law comes the knowledg of sin, *Rom.*3.20.
2. It is a foil to set off Christ, it drives them out of their own righteousnesse, and makes them highly prize Christ and the benefits by him, *Rom.*7.24,25.
3. It is a perfect Rule [c] of all our obedience.
4. The meditation of the terrours of the Law, and the threatnings and curses which the Lord hath denounced against them that break it, are one of the sanctified means of grace for the subduing and beating down of corruption, Luke 12.5. 1 *Cor.*9.29.

[c] Christ as Mediatour was subject to the Moral Law. Rom. 8.13. Gal. 2. 11. and 4. 4.

The Law requires as perfect obedience of us as of Adam in innocency under the danger of contracting guilt, though not of incurring death.

One saith, that in the Church of Christ since his death, the whole Law of Moses is wholly abrogated.

This opinion carries Libertinism and Familism in the womb of it, if the Law have nothing to do with me, whatever I do, I do not sinne, James 1. 23, 24.

The Antinomians cry Away with the Law, and what hath the Law to do with a Christian? and they say, that such a one who preacheth things out of the Moral Law is a legal Preacher; they say, the love of God shed abroad in our hearts, and the free Spirit is our rule.

None ought to be legal Preachers, that is, to Preach salvation by keeping of the Law; only the Papists are such. See *Rom.*6.14.*Col.*2.24. But the Law must be preached as a rule of obedience, and as a means to discover sin, and convince men of their misery out of Christ, *Gal.*3.23.

Our Lord Jesus in the Gospel, though he cals on men to be perfect; yet he still directs them to the Moral Law, Acts 26. 22. nothing in respect of duty is to be added to it, he that doth these things shall live: it is most perfect, *Psal.*19.7.*Rom.*7.12. Psal. 119. 96. therefore nothing can be added to it, otherwise Christs obedience had not been perfect, he did what he did in conformity thereto, *Gal.*4.4.

Vera explicatio doctrinæ de peccato, de libero arbitrio, de pœnis peccatorum, pendet ex genuino sensu doctrinæ legis. Articulus de justificatione, nec intelligi, nec recte usurpari, nec in puritate sua retineri potest, nisi diligenter & explicate retineatur doctrina legis Apollonius de Lege Dei, cap. 8. *Thes.*1.

Master Hinde in the Preface of the Office and Use of the Moral Law in the days of the Gospel, saith, The Moral Law as it was given by God to Moses, and by Moses to the Church of the Jews, is now in some circumstances, of time, place, persons, Tables, Testament, manner, measure, terror, rigor, and the like, altered in the Church of Christ since his death.

The Law habet rationem speculi, freni, regulæ. The Moral Law is a glasse to reveal sinne, and the danger of it, a glasse to discover it, and a Judge to condemn it.

1. A Glasse to reveal sin, *Psal.*19.*Rom.*5.20. See James 1.23.
2. A Bridle to restrain it.
3. A Rule both within and without.

First,

First, A Glasse to reveal sin.

It discovers,

1. Original sin, I had not known lust but by the Law, Rom. 7.7.

1. It sets before us the Primitive righteousnesse wherein we were created.

2. That there is something in us perfectly contrary to all this, Colos. 1. 21. Acts 13. 10.

3. It discovers to us the dominion that this sin hath over us, Rom. 6. 12, 14. & 7. begin.

4. Shews a man the filthinesse of this sin, 2 Cor. 5. 1. James 1. 21. Titus 1. 15. in regard of its extent, Psalm 119. 96. stain and pollution, 2 Cor. 7. 1. guilt and power.

5. Shews that this sin hath seminally all sins in it, James 1. 14. 1 John 2. 15.

6. It discovers the deceitfulnesse of this sin, Jer. 17. 19. James 3. 15. Acts 13. 10. Jude v. 11.

7. Shews a man the demerit and miserable effect of this sin, Rom. 8. 12.

2. Actual sinne.

It shews,

1. Every sin dishonours God, his glory is denied, abased.

2. The perfection of the Rule, Rom. 7. 12.

3. The harmony of the Rule, James 2. 10.

4. Its spirituality, it discovers the thoughts and intents of the heart.

5. The infection of sin to a mans selfe if it be inward, to others if outward, it is called rottennesse, plague, leprosie.

6. That one act of sin will destroy the whole world, as in the Angels, Adam, all sin is virtually in every sin.

It discovers,

I. Sinne in us, shews us that we are by nature and in the course of our lives sinful.

II. To us, and gives us a further conviction thereof.

The Law serves,

1. To make a more full discovery of sin.

2. To shew us our sin, 1 Kings 8. 68.

3. The curse due to us for it.

4. Our impotency to remove the curse.

It is also a Judge condemning sin, John 5. 41. Ezek 22 2. it passeth sentence on mens estates and actions, 1 Cor. 14. 24, 25. Heb. 4. 12, 13. & 10. 27. mortifies their corruptions, Titus 2. 13. 2 Cor. 7. 1. The Spirit mortifies sin, not only by infusing a new principle of grace, but by restraining the old principle of sin, Rom. 6. 12. Psalm 19. 13. It is compared in this respect to fire, a hammer, is called a killing letter, a Schoole-master.

The Law is a Judge by 1. Condemning the sinner, passeth the sentence of death upon a man, Rom. 7. 9. 2 Cor. 3. 8, 9. Hos. 6. 5. 2. By holding a man under this conviction and self-condemnation, Gal. 5. 22, 23. Lex est carcer spiritualis & verè infernus. See Rom. 8. 15. & 2 Tim. 1. 2. Job 13. 26.

It was,

1. Of use to have justified Adam in the state of innocency.

2. It is of use to provoke and condemn in the state of corruption.

3. Of use to correct in the state of grace. Dr Arrowsmith on John.

One must forsake sin not only in the practice, but purpose. The greatest work of a holy man is about his heart.

Secondly, The Law Habet rationem freni, hath the nature of a bridle to check and restrain sin.

There is a two-fold use of a bridle:

1. Of keeping a Horse in, that he may not run out.

2. Checking and curbing him, if he do run out.

So the Law is profitable,

1. To prevent us that we do not sin, Psalm 119. 11.

2. To draw us back if we do sin, Psalm 19. 8.

It

It doth this,

1. By ſetting before men its perfection, Pſalm 19.7,13. James 1.25.
2. By exalting in a mans heart its authority, James 2.8.
3. By ſhewing the danger of the curſes in it, Job 31.23.
4. By ſetting before men its preciouſneſſe, Pſalm 119.103,104.
5. By ſhewing us that God obſerves what reſpect we bear to his Law, Iſaiah 66.2,3.

Thirdly, The Law is a Rule.

There is a twofold uſe of a Rule, one to direct, the other to prove; before things are done the rule directs, after they are done, they are tryed by the Rule. The Law is uſefull both wayes, Pſalm 119.9. Rom. 12.2. Epheſ. 5.10. 1 Cor. 11.28.

It is, 1. A Rule within, ordering a mans inward diſpoſition. The Spirit of God in the work of Regeneration ſtamps the Law of God in the heart, and makes uſe of it to change the inward diſpoſition, Rom. 7.9. Pſalm 19.7. See Jer. 31.32. Acts 17.38. Grace is given by the Goſpel, but it makes uſe of the Law, Fides impetrat quod lex imperat. Aug.

2. It is a rule without to guide a mans way, a rule of all Goſpel-obedience,

1. Becauſe the Goſpel ſends us to it for a rule, Luke 16.29. James 1.25. and 2.8.

2. Chriſt hath left us an example of all obedience, Matth. 11.29. John 13.15.

3. So far as the beſt men come ſhort of the Law they ſin, 1 John 4.3.

Lex Moralis aterna eſt juſtitiæ regula in ſtatu innocentiæ; miſeriæ, gratiæ & gloriæ. Apollonius de Lege Dei, cap. 8. Theſ. 1.

4. It hath all the properties of a rule, it is: 1. Recta, Pſalm 19.7. 2. Promulgata, publiſhed, Hoſ. 8.12. 3. Adæquata, Pſalm 119.9. ſhall be our Judg hereafter, Rom. 2.14,15.

God requires not only abſtinence from evil, but the doing of the contrary good, Iſaiah 1.16,17. Pſalm 34.14. Rom. 12.9.

Reaſons.

1. In regard of God.
   1. He hates evil and delights in good.
   2. The divine mercies are privative and poſitive, Pſalm 84.11.
2. In regard of the principles of ſpiritual life, we muſt have communion with Chriſt both in his death and reſurrection, Rom. 6.11.

The Law as a Covenant of works is in all theſe reſpects a ſervant to the Goſpel and Goſpel-ends.

I. As a Glaſſe and a Judg:

Firſt, By exalting free grace: Paul and Luther being caſt down with their ſins exalted free grace, 1 Tim. 1.13,14.

Secondly, By exalting the bloud of Chriſt: the more one apprehends his ſin the more orient will the bloud of Chriſt be to the ſoul, Philip. 3.8,9. Rom. 7.24,25.

Thirdly, By qualifying the ſoul and preparing it for Chriſt, Luke 3.5. Matth. 11.28.

Fourthly, By making a man pliable to God ever after the diſcovery of our ſinne and miſery by the Law, and of free grace, works a childe-like obedience, Iſaiah 11.6.

Fiftly, By making a man fear ſin, ever after he hath been under the hammering of the Law, Pſalm 85.8. Hoſea 3.5.

Sixthly, By making one ſet a high price on the Spirit of Adoption, Res delicata Spiritus Chriſti. Tertul.

II. As a bridle, the Law is the Goſpels ſervant in reſtraining ſin, the Goſpel can uſe the Law above its nature, and contrary to the uſe that ſin makes of it. The Law cannot give grace to aſſiſt in duty, and to reſtrain in ſin.

Reſtraining grace ſerves the ends of the Goſpel:

1. In reſpect of wicked men, though the Law reſtraining kils not ſin in the ungodly, yet the very reſtraint of the action is a great mercy.
   1. It makes a man leſſe wicked.
   2. Keeps men from corrupting others.

3. Leſſeps

3. Leſſens their torments, the common graces of the Goſpel making uſe of the reſtraints of the Law, keep ſome wicked men from thoſe groſſe enormities that others run into.

2. In reſpect of the godly.

1. Preſerves them from ſin before their converſion.

2. It reſtrains their luſts, Acts 23. 1. and after their converſion keeps them from ſin, Pſalm 19. 13. by the reſtraints of the Law and the Goſpel.

I ſhall in the next place lay down certain general Rules, which may direct us in the right interpretation of the ten Commandments.

First, Becauſe the Law doth comprehend all our duties to be performed both to God and man, Luke 10. 26. therefore the interpretation of it muſt be ſought and fetcht out of the Sermons of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and the Doctrine of our Saviour.

Hæc Lex omni populo data eſt, quia qui eam promulgat, omnium gentium Deus eſt. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 5. Prohibitio peccati alicujus includit præceptionem contrariæ virtutis, & contra: præceptio alicujus virtutis includit prohibitionem contrarij peccati. Wendel. Chriſt. Theol. Syſtema Maius, l. 2. c. 4. Vide Alſted. Theol. Catechet. Sect. 3. c. 1.

All that is ſaid by the Prophets, Chriſt, or the Apoſtles, is reducible to the ten Commandments, either antecedenter or conſequenter.

Inſignis illa Chriſti Concio in Monte, quæ Matth. 5, 6, & 7. Capp. deſcribitur, quoad partem præcipuam conſiſtit in explicatione Legis Moralis, & præceptione officiorum in Lege Morali demandatorum ſic & variæ Apoſtolorum Scripta conſiſtunt in explicatione, preceptorum Legis Moralis paſſim in Epiſtolis: varia etiam Scripta & loca Prophetarum de Lege agunt Morali, in quibus etiam hortantur ad converſionem & reſipiſcentiam. Apollonius De Lege Dei, cap. 8. Theſ. 1.

Secondly. Whereas ſome Laws are laid down in the form of a command, and moſt of them (viz. eight) in the form of a prohibition, we muſt conceive that under every command there is implied a prohibition of whatſoever is contrary to what is commanded, and in every prohibition a command of all duties oppoſite to that which is forbidden. See Lev. 19. 18. For example; in the ſecond Commandment, which under the name of Images, forbids the inventing or uſing of any form of worſhip of mans deviſing, there is withal commanded the worſhip of God according to his own will, in the uſe of the Ordinances preſcribed, and warranted by his Word, as Prayer and hearing of the Word, receiving the Sacraments. And in the third Commandment, under the prohibition of taking Gods name in vain, is commanded the taking up of it with all holy reverence and fear: when God forbids to ſteal, he commands to do well. Thou ſhalt have no other Gods, that is, thou ſhalt have me for thy God. Keep holy the Sabbath, that is, do not break it. That we may know that we are taught not onely to abſtain from evil, but alſo to do good.

Thirdly, Every Commandment of God is ſpiritual [f], and doth bind the inward man as well as the outward, Rom. 7. 14. requires rectitude of thoughts, ſincerity of affections. Humana lex ligat manum & linguam, divina verò ligat animam. Original ſin is condemned in the whole Law, but it ſeemeth to be directly [g] condemned in the firſt and laſt Commandment; for theſe two concern properly the heart of man, the firſt reſpecting it ſo far as it concerneth God, the laſt ſo far as it concerns man, whether himſelf or others. It reacheth ad intima, to the inmoſt parts of the ſoul, Heb. 4. 12. and ad minima, forbids the leaſt ſinne, herein it differs from the Laws of men, Cogitationis pœnam nemo luat. De minimis non curat lex.

Eo pertingit hæc lex, ut abdita cordis humani ſcrutetur, & pravas illius cogitiones & concupiſcentias damnet. Id quod certè alia nulla lex præter hanc unam facit aut ſancit. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 17.

[f] The Lord for brevity and our infirmity ſake nameth only in every Commandment, either the moſt horrible ſin, forbidding it, or elſe the moſt ſingular virtue commanding it. Rom. 6. 17. & 7. 14. Pſal. 119. 167. 1 Chron. 29. 14. [g] Mr Perkins on Jude v. 1. He that keeps one Commandment becauſe God enjoyns it, will keep all the reſt, becauſe the ſame authority enjoyns all, Pſal. 119. 6. Integrity and ſincerity is the ſcope of the Law, Deut. 5. 27. The ſubſtantial duties of the firſt Table are greater than the ſubſtantial duties of the ſecond Table, as love of God than love of my neighbour and my father, but the ſubſtantial duties of the ſecond Table are greater than the ceremonial duties of the firſt, it is better to ſave the life of a beaſt than hear a Sermon.

Fourthly, In reſpect of the authority that commands, all the precepts are equal, James 2. 11.

In reſpect of the objects of the duties commanded, the Commandments of the firſt Table are of greateſt importance, Mat. 22.38. if equal proportion be obſerved and compariſon made, becauſe the ſervices therein required are more immediately directed unto God, and conſequently he is more immediately concerned in them than in the duties of the ſecond Table, 1 *Sam.*2.25. Iſaiah 7. 13.

Certe præcepta ſecundæ tabulæ ſemper cedere debent præceptis primæ tabulæ, ſi ſimul ſervari nequeant. Heydanus De Sabbato. Gravitas peccatorum ex objecto eſtimatur.

But there are greater helps for works of righteouſneſs than piety.

Firſt, The light of nature.

Secondly, The ſuperadded light of Scripture, 1 John 4 ult.

Thirdly, The preſence and familiar converſe we have here with men, 1 John 4. 20.

We ſhould perform all duties of the ſecond Table.

1. From an inward principle.
2. From a renewed principle.
3. So as to approve our ſelves in the ſight of God, Lev. 19.14.
4. By Gods help and aſſiſtance, and ſo as he may be exalted, *Coloſ.*4. 17. Titus 2. 9, 10.

[h] Præcepta affirmativa obligant ſemper ſed non ad ſemper, negativa ſemper & ad ſemper, ſay the Schoolmen. Ratio eſt, quia in præceptis affirmativis actus virtutum explicantur, qui non quolibet modo fieri debent, ſed obſervatis circumſtantiis rerum, locorum, temporum. In negativis actus peccatorum, & vitiorum continentur, qui ſemper ſunt cum malo conjuncti, & ideo fugiendi. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. lib. 2. c.3.

The negative Commandments [h] bind us more ſtrongly than the affirmative, for they oblige us alwayes and to all times; the affirmative although they bind us alwayes, yet they bind us not to all times. A man is not bound alwayes to worſhip God, but he is bound never to exhibit divine worſhip to a creature. He is not bound at all times, and in all places to profeſs his faith, but he is alwayes bound not to deny his faith and religion either by word or deed. A man is not bound alwayes to ſpeak the truth, but he is bound never to lye, feign or play the hypocrite. All the Commandments are delivered negatively, ſave the fourth and the fifth. Dr Taylor in his Ductor Dubitantium lib. 2. cap. 3. gives ſeveral reaſons why negative Commandments bind more ſtrongly.

In Negative precepts are included.

In negative precepts the Affirmatives are commanded, and in the Affirmative Commandments the Negatives

Joſh.6.4. Gen.22.1,2. 1 King. 20.27, 35. 1 King. 11.30. Iudg.3.20,21. & 11.1,2. Iſa.20.2.

Fifthly, The Lord that gave us his Law made none for himſelf, and being the Law-giver, he is above his own Law, and may diſpenſe with it upon his own will and pleaſure; as he did to Abraham, commanding him to offer up his onely Sonne in Sacrifice, which being commanded was to him juſt and honeſt by ſpecial prerogative, which in another had been diſhoneſt and unjuſt.

Fines mandatorum ſunt diligenter obſervandi, ex cauſis dicendi habenda eſt intelligentia dictorum. Hilarie. Matth. 5.33, 34,35,36.

Sixthly, The meaning of every precept muſt be taken from the main ſcope and end for which it was given, and all thoſe things to be included without which the precept cannot be performed, therefore one and the ſame work may be referred to divers precepts, as it pertaineth to divers ends. The glory of God is the end of all the duties which are expreſly or virtually contained in any precept of the Decalogue, and of all the actions pertaining thereto. God is to be worſhipped, parents to be honoured, neighbours to be loved, faith to be kept, juſtice, truth, chaſtity to be practiſed, and other duties of piety and charity to be performed for the honour and glory of God.

The end of every Commandment, ſaith the Apoſtle, is love out of a pure heart, the immediate end of the Commandments of the firſt Table, love to God, of the ſecond, love to my neighbour, 1 Cor. 13. per tot. The end of the fifth Commandment is preſervation of politick order. Therefore it comprehends the duties of Superiours toward Inferiours, and of Inferiours toward Superiours: becauſe without theſe politick order cannot be preſerved.

The Law by ſome one particular or part,

Seventhly, Under one vice expreſly forbidden all of the ſame kinde, and that neceſſarily depend thereon; as alſo the leaſt cauſe, occaſion or incitement thereunto unto, are likewiſe forbidden, Matth. 5. 21,22,27,28,29. 1 Theſſ. 5.22. Generally in the Commandments the greateſt ſinne of the kinde is forbidden, as not anger but murder, not defrauding but theft, not fornication but adultery; yet in ſome Commandments the loweſt degree of the ſinne is forbidden, as in the ſecond Commandment, and the third.

Under one duty expreſſed all of like nature are comprehended, as all means, effects, and whatſoever is neceſſarily required for the performance of that duty. The cauſe is commanded or forbidden in the effect, and the effect in the cauſe.

Eighthly, Where the more honourable perſon is expreſſed as the man, let the woman underſtand, that the precept concerns her; where the duty of one man ſtanding in relation to another is taught, there are taught the duties of all that ſtand in like relation one to another; as when the duty of one Inferiour toward his Superiour is taught, there is taught the general duty which all Superiours owe to thoſe that be under them, which Inferiours owe to thoſe that are over them, and which Equals owe one to another.

Ninthly, The Law forbids the doing of evil in our own perſons, and the helping or furtherance of others in evil, though but by ſilence, connivence, or ſlight reproof, and it commands not onely that we obſerve it our ſelves, but that we preſerve it, and what lieth in us, cauſe others to keep it. Thou, thy Sonne, and thy Daughter, muſt goe over all the reſt of the Commandments as well as the fourth.

Tenthly, The Law is ſet forth as a rule of life to them that be in Covenant with God in Jeſus Chriſt: God in Chriſt is the object of Chriſtian Religion, and of that obedience which is preſcribed in that Covenant.

The two Tables of the Commandments are ſaid to contain Laws teaching our duties toward God and toward our neighbour: which is not ſo to be underſtood, as if the four firſt Commandments adequately contained our duty to God, and the ſix laſt our duties toward man. For without doubt the ſix laſt contain our duty toward God alſo, and forbid the breach of it. Our heavenly Father is to be honoured, according to the fifth Commandment. Spiritual murder is forbidden, in the ſixth, and ſpiritual whoredom againſt God in the ſeventh Commandment. The Tables were written on both their ſides, Exodus 32. 15. Dr Gell on Numb. 5. 6, 7.

That immediate worſhip and ſervice which we owe to God, and muſt performe according to his preſcription, which is uſually called Piety or Godlineſſe, is taught in the Commandments of the firſt Table. Our Saviour reduceth the ſumme of theſe Commandments to this one Head, Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, ſoul, ſtrength and thought, that is, whatſoever is within thee, or without thee, even to the loſſe of thy life, goods and good name, all muſt yeeld to the Lords calling, whenſoever he will make trial of thy love towards him. This particular duty may well comprehend all the reſt: for, as is our love, ſo is our faith and obedience. God is loved above all things when in all that he promiſeth he is believed, and in all that he commandeth he is obeyed.

The generall ſins againſt the Commandments of the firſt Table, are

1. Impiety, which is a neglect or contempt of Gods true worſhip and ſervice, inward and outward, Eſay 43.22,23.

2. Idolatry, which is the worſhip of falſe gods, or of the true God after a deviſed manner of our own, Amos 5.26.

In Godlineſſe there are,

1. Graces, faith, fear, love.

2. Duties, to hold communion with God in all duties. Ungodlineſſe is not to think on God, not to love and fear him, not to call on his name.

That duty which we owe unto men by the Lords Commandment, and for his glory, which is uſually called honeſty or righteouſneſſe, is taught in the Commandments of the ſecond Table. Our Saviour bringeth them to one head, Mat. 19.19. Thou ſhalt love thy Neighbour as thy ſelf; that is, without fainting, coldneſſe, delay, meaneth the general and whole, as an Idol is put for any means of falſe worſhip, Parents for all betters, Killing, for any hindering of life; Thou, for every one or none. Eſtey upon the Command. Joſh.6.18 & 7. 1.& 22.13,14, 17,18. Pſal.34.3. Levit.19.17. 1 Sam. 15.28. 1 Sam. 3.13. 2 Sam. 13.28. 1 King. 21.19. Exod. 19.6,7, 8. & 20.1. Matth. 19. 17, 18,19. 1 Tim.4.7,8. & 2. 2. 2 Pet.3.11. Matth.22.37. Janſen. Harm. Evang. c.81. Chemnit. Har. Evang.c.105.

1 Cor.8.11.

lay, or feigning, from the heart, fervently, when and so long as occasion is given. By Neighbour is meant not only our Friend or Kinsman, but whosoever, and of what Countrey soever that wanteth our help, especially he that is of the household of faith.

Luk. 10.29. Gal.6.10.

We must love him as our selves:

1. In regard of the object, we must love his soul, as we should our own soules.

2. In regard of the ground, must love him in God and for God.

3. In regard of the properties: It must be

1. A sincere unfeigned love, *Rom.*12.9.
2. A tender love, accompanied with kindnesse.
3. A sympathizing love.
4. A fervent love.
5. A real and active love.

1. In duties of the second Table we have more light and help in nature, than we can have in the first, Love thy Neighbour as thy self.

2. That Rule Matth. 7. 12. is spiritual, and concernes the inward man as well as the outward, Matth. 22. 39. as spiritual as that Matth. 5. 28. It forbids not onely evil speaking and acting, but evil thoughts and surmises, 1 Cor. 13. 5.

3. We must doe all that we doe to our neighbour out of a principle of obedience, Galat. 5. 14. A Christian doth all to man out of love and fear to God.

The general sins against the Commandments of the second Table, are Mic.2.10. Rom. 1.29. 2 Pet.2.9. 1 Thess. 4.6.

1. Inhumanity and injustice, when we disregard our neighbour, or deal injuriously with him. Want of charity to him, James 5.4.

2. Partiality in affection, when we love our friends but hate our enemies; favour some for carnal respects, contemn others that are to be respected.

Ex decem praeceptis duo tantum sunt Affirmativa, octo sunt Negativa.

There is not any judgement threatned in any of the Commandments, save only the second and the third; Idolatry and the abuse of Gods name shall not escape unpunished.

Six Commandments are set down in many words, and four nakedly in bare words, as the sixth, seventh, eighth and ninth, because men will easily be brought to yeeld to them.

Greenham.

The Scripture shews to man two wayes of attaining happinesse one by his own works called the Law; the other by faith in Christ called the Gospel. The Law driveth us to Christ, and faith doth establish the Law, *Rom.*3.31.

The Sum of the Law is abridged in the ten Commandments which God delivered on Mount Sinai, and after wrote in two Tables.

This declareth our whole Duty,

1. To God immediately, which is in the first Table,
   1. Principal, to make him our God, Command. 1.
   2. Lesse principal, in regard of
      1. Sorts of worship to be performed unto him, which are two { 1. Solemn, *Command.*2. 2. Common, *Command.*3.
      2. The giving of a set time to him, *Command.*4.
2. To God mediately and immediately to man for Gods sake, in the second Table; here his duty is shew'd,
   1. Severally, to
      1. Some kind of persons specially, *Command.*5.
      2. To all generally, in regard of
         1. Their Persons, for { 1. Life, Command. 6. 2. Chastity, *Command.*7.
         2. The things of their Persons, both { Goods, *Command.*8. Good Name, *Command.*9.

2. Joynt-

2. Joyntly to all these in regard of the first motions of the mind and will, in Comvand. 10.

For the order of the Commandments, if we account from the first to the last, they are of greatest perfection which are last described, and he who is arrived to that severity and dominion of himself, as not to desire his neighbours goods, is free from actual injury; but vices are to take their estimate in the contrary order; he that prevaricates the first Commandment is the greatest sinner in the world, and the least is he that only covets without any actual injustice. Dr Taylor of the life and death of Christ, part 2. Disc. 9.

There needs a great deal of understanding to keep Gods Law, Psalm 119.34.

1. That we may know our way, Prov. 10.10. Col. 1.9,10.
2. To avoid the snares laid for us, 2 Cor. 2.11.
3. That we may respect things in their order and place, and give them precedency as they deserve. God is to be preferred before man, he hath the more antecedent right, Luke 14.26. Acts 5.29.
4. That we may judge aright of circumstances. Eccles. 7.16,17. Ezra 8.21.
5. Because according to our understanding are our affections; knowledge makes way for perswasion, perswasion for affections, and they for practice.

Omnes aliæ gentes approbaverunt quædam scelera contraria decalogo, ut cultus idolorum & vagas ac tetras libidines. Romani etiam approbaverunt homicidia gladiatorum. Melanct. De Lege. Ethnici apertè contraria legi divinæ docuerunt in primo & sexto præcepto. Finxerunt turbam Deorum, & concesserunt teterrimas confusiones libidinum, sicut & hodie Mahometistæ faciunt, nunc quoque Papistæ docent contraria primo & sexto præcepto: Quia defendunt invocationem hominum mortuorum, & prohibent conjugium. Perzelius in Melanct. De Lege. p. 3.

CHAP. II.

Of the first Commandment.

THou shalt have no other Gods before me. Exod. 20.3.

SOme Divines * judge, that those words, I am the Lord thy God which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, do contain the affirmative part of the first Precept, and the later, Thou shalt have no other Gods before my face, the negative. For these two sentences are elsewhere often joyned together as they be here; and our Saviour citing the first Commandment, rehearseth it thus, Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord. Besides (say they) if the words be not conceived as a form of Commandment, yet it must necessarily be understood to command the Worship of the true God, and it so pertains to the understanding of the Precept, that it cannot be separated from it.

Other Divines hold the first words to be a Preface to all the Commandments, Primo Decalogi præcepto præmittitur præfatio, seu exordium totius Decalogi. Wendel.

* Musc. loc. commun. Ford on the Covenant. Mr Ball. Deut. 4.35. & 6.4. Isa. 43.11. Vide Baronem de præstantia & dignitate divinæ legis, l. 1. cap. 30. & Cartw. in Exod. 20. Matth. 12. 29. Peter Martyr handling the division of the ten Commandments, how the number should be made up, makes that which is commonly called the Preface, (I am the Lord thy God, which are words of a Covenant) to be the first Commandment; and if so, then must justifying faith be enjoyned there. And thus did some of the Fathers, though those words are only enunciative, and not preceptive. Mr Burgesses vindication of the Moral Law, Lect. 1. Verba ista Ego sum Dominus Deus tuus, sunt generalia præfatio, alias tamen item non movemur qui statuunt hæc verba esse partem primi præcepti, quod Briarium proponatur, primum quidem affirmativè, quis sit pro vero Deo à nobis agnoscendus ac colendus, deinde negativè, quod nulli alij extra & præter hunc verum Deum divinus honor & cultus sit tribuendus. Gerh. loc. commun. tom. tertio. Vide Bodeni Conciones in Decalog. & Calvinum in Exod. 20 12. The matter of the Commandment is delivered in negative terms, by way of forbidding, under which the precept enjoyning the contrary is commanded.

Christ.

Christ. Theol. Systema Maius lib. 2. cap. 4. Vide Stephan. Fabrrit. Conciones in Decal. conc. 2. Et Bonfrerium in cap. 20. Exod. Hotting. Thes. Philol. lib. 2. c 3. Sect. 2. Et Gallasium in cap. 20. Exod. See Ursin. De Lege Divina in primum Praeceptum. p. 282.

Buxtorf de Decalogo saith, These words contain an Enunciative, not an Imperative speech, therefore they are not a Precept, but rather a general Preface to the whole Decalogue, in which reasons are brought why we are bound to obey him that commands. Wherefore (saith he) they may be added to the first Precept, yet so as they are not to be excluded from the other Precepts, but by an Ellipsis to be understood in every one of them. Other Divines say, These words are a perswasion to the keeping of the first Commandment, and that three-fold; the first taken from the Name and Sovereignty of God, He is Jehovah, an eternal Being in and of himself, who giveth being and continuance to all things, and mightily performeth whatsoever he hath promised. The second, From the right of Federation and Covenant, Thy God, He is in special manner the God of his Church, which he hath chosen to be his peculiar Treasure in regard of the Covenant of Grace made with them, Esay 43. 10,11. Jer. 12. 31,33. Esay 43.13. The third from a notable particular benefit lately conferred; Which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, which he mentions (saith Zanchy) 1. For the freshness of the mercy. 2. For the greatness of it. 3. Because that Egyptian bondage was a type and figure of our spiritual bondage. The like hath Alsted. Theol. Catechet. Sect. 3. cap. 2.

This that is here spoken (saith Grotius on the Decalogue) is not the Law, but the Preface of the Law. Seneca approves not of a Law with a Preface, because it should command, not perswade; the Philosophers (Plato, Philo) thought otherwise. Media via optima est (saith Grotius) ut breve sit quod praemittitur, auctoritatem non disputationem praferens.

Prafari Dominus quadam ad suam legem voluit, tum ut authoritatem Legi sua, tum etiam ut amorem & reverentiam conciliaret. Danæi Ethic. Christ. lib. 2. *cap.*4. Vide Alstedii Theol. Catech. Sect. 3. c. 1.

God by this his Preface maketh his auditors Attent, Docile and Benevolous.

Attent, in those words, I am the Lord.

Docile, in the brevity of his speech, and the order and distinction of the Precepts.

Benevolous, by his benefits,

1. Of Adoption, Thy God.
2. Of late deliverance, Which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.

The two first grounds of obedience are common to us with them, God is now as much the Lord as ever, and hath pleased to accept us into the same (or a better) Covenant with himself, than once he admitted them; and for the last, although in the thing it self it touch us not, yet in the spiritual meaning of it it concerns us as well as them. Egypt is Idolatry, Pharaoh Satan, bondage our servitude to sin, our deliverance is that redemption which Christ hath purchased for us. Magna beneficia auctoritatem conciliare debent pracipienti. Grotius in cap. 20. Exod. See *Deut.*6.20,24.

This Commandment is laid down in the first place,

Partly to meet with their sins; God is now giving a Law to an idolatrous Nation, *Josh.*24.14.

Partly, because this is the first Article of the Covenant; the first duty that we owe to God, is to take him for our God.

Partly, because this is the ground of all the rest; we must do all to God, out of love and fear of him. Primum praceptum est mensura reliquorum. Luther. Vide Bodium in cap. 5. ad Ephes. *v.*21. pag. 734. Primum praceptum docet quis sit verus Deus, & quis colendus. Danæi *Ethic. Christ. l.*2. c. 7.

לֹא יִהְיֶה לְךָ אֱלֹהִים אֲחֵרִים עַל פָּנָי panai gual acharim Elohim leka Jihieh Lo

There

There ſhall not be to thee other gods, or ſtrange gods before my face.

1. The ſtatute, or Law it ſelf, Thou ſhalt have no other gods.

2. The Argument by which it is enforced, before me. God takes notice of what you do, 1 Chron. 28. 9. Gen. 17. 1. Or it may be an aggravation of the hainouſneſſe of the offence, it is before God.

1. The perſon ſpoken to, Thou; every particular perſon for himſelf, be he of what ſtate or condition ſoever.

The word אַחֵר acher ſignifieth another God, rather than a ſtrange god, or the god of a ſtrange people, which are thought and called gods, when they are not. In truth there is but one true God; but in the opinion of men that erre and be deceiyed, there be many gods. 1 Cor. 8. 6. Pſalm 81. 9, 10. Exod. 34. 14. 1 Cor. 10. 20. Deut. 32. 17. Lev. 17. 7. Men may in conceit and imagination account ſomething a god which is not, and carry themſelves in ſuch ſort toward that which is not God, as if it were ſo.

Non erit tibi dij alij ſuper facies meas. Arias Montan. Ad verb. non erit; q. d. ne unus quidem Deus alius, &c. Cartw. in loc. Shall not be, for, it ought not to be, or may not be. Joſh. 24. 20. Dan. 11. 39. See 1 Sam. 8. 8. Exod. 34. 14. Iſa. 42. 8.

1 King. 4. 9. Vox Acherim ſignificat & alios & alienos. Et aliquis poteſt eſſe alius, ſed non alienus: omnis autem alienus, alius etiam eſt. Zanchius de primo præcepto. Vide Rivetum in Pſal. 16. v. 3. p. 80. Homo verus, alius eſt ab alio homine vero, ſed non alienus, hoc eſt, aliena & diverſa natura. Alienus autem, qui non ejuſdem eſt naturæ aut patriæ: ut homo depictus, aut mente conceptus, & alienus eſt à vero homine, & etiam alius. Alienos Deos habere coram Deo à Theologis dupliciter explicatur, ut nimirum vel ſignificet alienos Deos quaſi in Dei conſpectum producere, inq; illius oculis, ut illi ægrè à nobis fiat, colere: vel ita ut intelligatur præter me; ſenſuſque ſit, extra unum illum ſummum Deum, nulli alij divinitatem, quam ipſe Deus ei non conceſſerit, tribuendam, divinumque honorem deferendum eſſe; ſtatuaturque, hoc Deum voluiſſe dicere: Ita me colas ut omnes alios Deos valere jubeas. Wolkelius de vera religione l. 4. c. 8. Vide Cartw. in Exod. 20. 3. Habere Deos alienos nihil aliud ſignificat, quam non habere verum Deum, hoc eſt, aut nullum, aut plures, aut alium præter unum patefactum, Deum habere, agnoſcere, ei fidere, ab eoque auxilium & opem abſque vero, veri Dei timore petere ac ſperare. Fabrit. Conc. Sac. in Decal. Conc 7. Interpres Chaldæus, Non erit tibi Deus alius præter me. By having of gods here he means, Thou ſhalt worſhip no other gods but me, [Other gods] that is, beſides, or with the true Jehovah. [Gods] viz. Idols, to whom the opinion of Idolaters doth falſly attribute ſome Divinity, 1 Chron. 41. 5. Deodate on Exod. 20. 3. Hoc præcepto jubet Deus ſe unum duntaxat coli: & purum ab omni ſuperſtitione cultum requirit. Genuinum eſſe ergo ſenſum exiſtimo, nequos ſibi fingant Deos Iſraelitæ, quos vero & unico Deo opponant. Calvinus.

[a] To have another God, is to have any thing in opinion or affection for God that is not God, and to worſhip it as God, either alone or with the true God. For this is a work of the mind, to have or eſteem any for God, ſenſus eſt: non modo non pro vero Deo ſubſtituendos alios ſed nec aſſumendos ad eum alios, quod multi faciebant, ut 2 Reg 17. 33. Grotius.

Before my face] ſo the Hebrew. It is as much as againſt, before, or beſides me, coram me, id eſt, præter me, Grotius; as Moſes ſaith after, with me. The LXX render it πλὴν ἐμοῦ, præter me, ita Chald. Syr. Arab. Cyprian, abſque me. See Deut. 4. 35. It implieth all time and place: As, before the Sunne, Pſalm 72. 17. is ſo long as the Sunne endureth: ſo here, before me, is ſo long as I am, for ever and ever. So that firſt the Lord ſignifieth, that he would have no companion to be thruſt upon him, or to be placed in his ſight, who ſhould be worſhipped with him, Deut. 6. 4. Again, that in thought or ſecret affection we muſt not admit any ſtrange god, Pſalm 44. 20, 21. Laſtly, a thing is ſaid to be done in the ſight of God, which is done openly with contempt of God, and ſo here it ſeems to import the indignity [a] of the thing, and the peril adjoyned. We cannot have another God, but we provoke the true God to his face; as if a woman ſhould joyn her ſelf to another man in love, her husband looking on, which ſhould be moſt impudent and dangerous.

Pſal. 81. 8, 9. John 2. 9. 1 John 2. 23. Habere eſt intus eum agnoſcere in mente, eique corde adhærere amando, timendo, &c. & externè colere & venerari, ſenſus igitur eſt, cave ne quicquam vel mente agnoſcas vel corde amplectaris, vel corpore colas ut Deum, præter me Jehovam Deum tuum, &c. Calvin. Inſtit. Habebis, coles, credes, adorabis. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 7. Gen. 6. 11. & 13. 13. 1 Sam. 2. 17. Nehem. 9. 28. [a] Particula coram facie mea, indignitatem auget: quod Deus ad Zelotypiam provocatur quoties figmenta noſtra ſubſtituimus in ejus locum: quemadmodum ſi impudica mulier, produſto palam ante oculos mariti adultero, ejus animum magis ureret. Calvin. Inſtit. lib. 2. cap. 8. Alij vertunt, ante me, i. ſuperiorem potentioremque me alium neminem ſtatues, & exiſtimabis. Alij explicant quaſi parem & æqualem veteri, quum ipſe colitur admiſceri. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 6.

Our principal duty to God is enjoyned in the firſt Commandment, in which all the reſt of the Commandments are virtually contained, inſomuch that no man can tranſgreſſe transgresse any one of them, but withall he transgresseth that, neither can any of them be broken, if that bt observed.

The meaning then of this Commandment is:

That whereas other people and Nations frame and take to themselves innumerable [b] gods, as the Ammonites chose Molek, or Melcom, to be their god; the Zidonians, Ashteroth; the Philistims, Dagon; the Moabites, Chemosh; the Syrians, Rimmon; the Assyrians, Nisroch; the Ekronites, Baalzebub; the Babylonians, Bell; the Persians, the Fire; the barbarous Massagete, the Sunne; the Egyptians, almost all kinde of Beasts and Birds; the Grecians, dead men; the Romans, whom it pleased the Senate to consecrate of ancient times, and of late whom it pleased the Pope to canonize. Wherefore though other Nations had other [c] gods, the true Israelites chosen out of the world to be the Lords people, should acknowledge no Idol of any Nation to be their God, nor frame to themselves any Idol of their own devising, or any other thing to be their Helper and Redeemer, their Stay and Buckler, which they professe to be no god; but that they cleave to the Lord their God, who is the onely Lord that hath created all things, and adopted them to be his Sonnes, Deut. 6. 4. Our carriage to God-ward is in one word expressed, when we are commanded to give our selves unto God, Rom. 6. 13. & 12. 1. It standeth in a total and perfect subjecting of our whole souls and bodies to him.

[b] Ford of the Covenant. And Lakes Theological Probe.
Levit. 18.21.
1 King. 11.5.
2 King. 23.15.
Iudg. 2.13. & 16.23.
1 Sam. 5.2.
Numb. 21.29.
2 King. 5.18. & 19. 37.
2 King. 1.2.
Isa. 37.38. & 46.

[c] The summe of the first Commandment is, That we have God to be our God. Down. Summe of Divinity, 2 King. 17. 30, 31. 2 Chron. 25. 14. Deut. 7. 16. & 32. 17. 1 Sam. 26. 19. 1 King. 11. 4, 5. Cultus naturalis est qui ex ipsa natura Dei pendet, ita ut quamvis nullam legem haberemus divinitus revelatam & præscriptam, si tamen Dei naturam rectè haberemus perspectam ac notam, ex illius idonea contemplatione, omnia illa percipere possemus, Dei gratia auxiliante, quæ hac in parte ad officium nostrum spectant. Hic cultus hoc mandato præcipitur. Ames.

The general duty of this Commandment is, That in mind, will, affections, and the effects of all or any of them, we take the true God in Christ to be our God, Soveraign, Helper, Portion and Redeemer, Almighty, most Wise, Righteous, Just, True, Holy, Good, Gracious, Mercifull, Long-suffering and Patient. For God must be known, acknowledged and worshipped, according as he hath revealed himself in the Covenant of Grace, but he is our God in Jesus Christ. Also the formal consideration of the Object, to wit, Why such acts of Worship are and ought to be performed unto God; are the Wisdom, Goodnesse, Justice, Grace, Mercy and Power of God, specially in the face of Jesus Christ, and acts performed of him by them, and according to them.

2 Chron. 28.9.
Deut. 4.4. & 10. 12, 21. & 30.20.
Deut. 11.22.
Josh. 22.5.
Iob 19.25.
Exod. 15.11.
Psal. 86.10.
Job 9. 4, 5.
Psal. 77.13.
Isa. 57.15.
Job 37. 23.
Joel 2.17. & 3.16, 17.
Zech. 8.8. & 10.6.
Isa. 41.10, 13, 14. & 43.37.
Psal. 48.14.

To have him for our God, is rightly to know him, and both duly and truly to worship him. Lakes Theol. Probe.

The Promise implied in this Precept is, That God will be our God, King, Protector and Father; That he will use his Power, Wisdome, Goodnesse and Mercy, for the effecting of our salvation, the supply of our wants, the pardon of our sinnes, the defeating of our enemies, the perfecting of his graces in us, and the full accomplishment of happinesse in the Kingdome of Heaven.

One Reverend Divine (now with God) saith, The duties required more particularly, may be referred to two Heads: Some respect the Essence and Nature of God, some the Authority and Dominion of God, even as Subjects owe some things to their Prince in regard of his Person, some things in regard of his Power of Government; so do we the Creatures to our King and Creator.

The former may fitly be termed duties of dependance, because they do naturally flow from that total dependance upon God the first being, which must needs be found in all secondary beings, and because they be certain necessary acknowledgments of our such dependance. The later may be termed Duties of Conformity, because in and by them we do conform our selves unto the Will and Authority of God, and by both become perfectly subject unto him. Duties of dependance in general, are those by which we exercise all the powers of our souls upon God, principally and above all other things (so far as his excellent nature is fit to be their object) for seeing He is the most excellent of all things, and doth please to make known unto us his excellencies, we should labour to be wholly united to him that is

is ſo excellent. Duties of Conformity in general, are all thoſe by which we order the powers of our ſouls toward other things, according to his good will and pleaſure made manifeſt unto us. Our duty concerning God, is to know him and his will, to believe in him according to his Promiſes, to remember him alwayes, and to eſteem him above all things, to truſt wholly upon him, to love, deſire, fear and delight in him above all other things, and with all our hearts. Our duty in reſpect of good things Spiritual and Temporal, is to exerciſe our wils, affections, thoughts, ſpeeches, much more on Spiritual good things than Temporal, and to keep them very moderate towards earthly benefits. Our duty concerning ſin, is to hate it, flie from it, grieve for it, be aſhamed of it, and angry with it more than any natural evil thing.

The particular duties here required are:

1. Perfect knowledge of God in Chriſt, which is a conceiving and apprehending of him to be ſuch a one as he hath revealed himſelf in his Word and Works, ſpecially in the Covenant of Grace, and that for meaſure and degree fully. We cannot comprehend God as he is in himſelf, but as he hath manifeſted himſelf we ought to know him; for knowledge is the guide of the affections, the beginning of grace, the ground of Worſhip. When we know God as he hath manifeſted himſelf, than do we come to believe, deſire, fear and love him, and truſt in him, as he requireth. We cannot have God our God, till we come to know him in Chriſt, therefore it is promiſed to all the godly in the new Covenant, they ſhall all know me.

Iſa.19.21. Job 22. 21. John 17.3. 1 Tim. 2.4. Hoſ.6.6. 1 Chron.28.9. Ier.9.23. Hoſ.4.1,2,3. Rom.10.14. Deut.6.1. Pſal.9.10,11. Iam.3.17. Ier. 31.33. Deum colit qui novit, Seneca.

2. Acknowledgment, which is an effectual and affectionate perſwaſion of the heart, not only that God is, but that he is the only Lord, Eternal and Almighty, moſt Wiſe, moſt Holy, moſt Righteous, moſt Gracious and Mercifull, moſt Faithfull and True; the Creator, Governour and Preſerver of all things, the Supream Sovereign Judge of all the world, and peculiarly the God and Saviour of his people that he hath choſen unto himſelf, and with whom he hath entred Covenant of his free mercy in Jeſus Chriſt.

Deut. 32. 31. Pſal.87.4. & 89.6,7. Col.1.9,10. 1 Tim. 2. 4. 2 Tim.4. 25.

Deut. 4. 35,39. Iſa. 43. 10. Hoſeah 6. 3. Titus 1. 1. 2 Peter 3. 8. Epheſians 4. 13. 1 John 5. 20.

3. Eſtimation, which is a moſt high prizing of God according to his Worth and Dignity, as the chief Good, and our onely All-ſufficient portion: The eſtimation we have of any thing muſt be correſpondent to the goodneſſe of it. But God is good above meaſure, and our eſtimation of him ſhould know no meaſure.

Pſal.73.25. Pſal.4.6. Mat. 13.43. Phil 3.6. Cant. 1.2. & 8.7.

4. Faith, which is a lively motion of the heart, whereby the ſoul doth invincibly cleave and ſtick unto God in Chriſt, and unto the word of his Covenant, as containing the chief good of man. To believe is not barely to aſſent to the thing which is propounded, to be believed for the Authority of the Speakers, who cannot lie, as the aſſenter is perſwaded: but to adhere to the Word of Truth as certain, good, and ſweet, both ſimply and in compariſon. Two things are required in Faith: Something true and good to be believed; and a firm certain aſſent and adherence to it. Thus we are commanded to believe in God through Jeſus Chriſt; neither doth Faith reſpect the Promiſes, Narrations and Prophecies of the Word only, but the Commandments and Threatnings alſo, Pſalm 119.66. 2 *Chron.*34.19,21,27. John 3.5. By Faith we poſſeſſe the Lord as our own, and hold faſt unto him in whom all help and comfort is to be found.

Iob 28. 15,16. Pſalm 63.3. 1 Iohn 5. 10. Deut. 13.4. Acts 11.23. 1 Cor.7.35. Joſh. 23.8. Numb. 14 11. Iohn 14.1 1 Pet. 1.21. 1 Iohn 5. 10,11. Acts 16.31. Iſa.28.16. Rom.9.33. 1 Pet.2.6.

5. Confidence, or Affiance, whereby we truſt, lean, relie, or ſtay upon the Grace of God in Chriſt Jeſus, with aſſured ſecurity in the way of his Commandments for pardon of ſinne, deliverance from all evil, and the ſupply of all good Temporal and Spiritual, according to his faithfull and never-failing promiſe. This is ever joyned with the true knowledge of God, and in nature

Pſalm 4. 5. & 22.4.& 25.2. Pſalm 16.1. & 118.9. 1 Pet.3.5.

Epheſ 3.12. 1 Tim.6.17. *Zanch.de redempt.*l.1 c.13. Jer.17.5. Confidence is the vertue of reſting upon God wholly for the attaining of all good things according to his Word. Pſal. 9.10. 2 Chron.20.20. Pſal.4.5. 1 Pet. 4.19. & 5.7. Pſal.37.5. & 81.4. & 62.8. & 31.5. Pſal.11.1. & 135. Job 13.15. Pſal.56.3. & 57.1. Pſal.16.1.& 25. 1,2. Iſa.26.3.& 50.10. Pſal.20.7. 1 Sam.30.6.

is of great affinity, or rather all one with juſtifying Faith. Who ſo repoſeth all his confidence in God, he taketh him in ſo doing for his God. We are to truſt in God for the giving and maintaining of all our good both temporal and eternal, leaning on him for all defence and deliverance from evils ſpiritual, yea and corporal; caſting all our care on him, having no confidence in the fleſh; no duty is more frequently preſſed in Scripture, than this of confidence in God.

Hope in God is an inſeparable companion of Truſt, which is an aſſured quiet expectation of what good promiſed is not yet accompliſhed, grounded upon the free and undeſerved kindneſſe and grace of the Lord in Chriſt Jeſus, Pſalm 119. 166. Heb. 11. 1. Lament. 3. 24. Rom. 15. 4. Hope is commanded in many paſſages of Scripture, commended by many promiſes, Pſ. 27. 14. & 31. 14. & 34. 8. Lam. 3. 26. Pſalm 37. 7. & 131. 3. & 130. 5. Micah 7. 7. Eſay 8. 17. Pſalm 119. 43. Eſay 30. 18. Pſalm 146. 5. & 40. 4. & 84. 12. Eſay 6. 8. Pſalm 147. 11. Pſalm 33. 18, 19. Pſalm 31. 24. & 33. 20. Pſalm 25. 21. & 37. 9, 34. Pſ. 9. 18. Eſay 49. 23. & 40. 31.

Faith draws off the mind from men to God, from the providence to the Covenant, Heb. 11. 27. Pſalm 73. 17. from temporal things to eternal, 2 Cor. 4. 18. Pſalm 52. 8. Rom. 8. 18.

We ſhould truſt in God at all times, Pſalm 91. 9.

1. In proſperity, 2 Cor. 1.
2. In adverſity, Pſalm 112. 1.

We muſt truſt God with our bodies, ſouls, eſtates, children.

John 15. 9. 1 Tim. 1. 5. Gal. 5. 6. Deut. 4. 4. John 5. 42. John 2. 15. & 3. 17. Amor eſt unio amantis cum re amata. [d] Amor meus pondus meum. Aug. Pſal. 31. 23. Deut. 10. 12. & 11. 1. & 30. 16. Joſh. 23. 11. & 22. 5. Cauſa diligendi Deum, Deus eſt. Modus, ſine modo diligere. Bern. de diligendo Deo. Multum quippe meruit de nobis qui ſe immeritis dedit ſeipſum nobis. Ibid. 42. & 15. 9. & 16. 27. 1 Cor. 16. 22. Deut. 6. 5.

6. Love of God in Chriſt, which is a ſpiritual motion in the reaſonable part, preſuppoſing Knowledge and Affiance, whereby the ſoul goeth forth to imbrace and poſſeſſe God as the chief Good, and with moſt pure, earneſt, and conſtant affection to maintain communion with him. Love is an affection of union, it knits to the thing beloved, and would not want the poſſeſſion of it. Love (we ſee) makes man and woman one, and ſo doth couple us to God. The body is carried by weight into his proper place; ſo is the ſoul by love, which is the weight of the ſoul, [d] unto its proper object. Many promiſes are made to them that love the Lord, Pſalm 91. 14. & 145. 20. Pſalm 63. 8. 1 John 4. 7. John 16. 27. 1 John 4. 16. John 14. 23. & 16. 27. Rom. 8. 28. Pſalm 145. 20. Deut. 30. 19, 20. 1 Cor. 2. 9. 2 Tim. 4. 8. James 1. 12. & 2. 5. God is the proper object of Love, He is the chief good, abſolute, all-ſufficient, the reſt and ſtay of the mind, beyond which nothing can be deſired, in whom incredible joy and comfort is to be found and poſſeſſed for evermore. God by Covenant is our God, our Father, our Husband; He hath loved us, and we ought to love him again. His love to us is free and of meer grace; our love to him is debt, many wayes due from us, and deſerved by him. Adam was to love God his Creator and happineſſe: but Chriſtians muſt love God as he is become their God in Chriſt, in whom they are knit unto him. The object of Charity is God in Chriſt; God is to be loved in Chriſt, in whom he is well-pleaſed, and greatly delighted in us. Love of God muſt be moſt fervent and abundant, more for degree and meaſure than to our ſelves or all creatures; yea it muſt be with the whole power of our ſouls, it is the ſumme of the Law, Matth. 10. 37. Luke 14. 26.

Nimis durus eſt animus qui dilectionem eiſi non vult impendere, nolit rependere. John 14. 21. & 8.

We ought to love God above all in four reſpects:

1. Reſpectu objecti, becauſe his excellency is a diſtinct and peculiar excellency, therefore I ought to love him with a diſtinct and peculiar love; love him as God, love him for himſelf, for his own ſake.

2. Reſpectu graduum, I muſt love him in the higheſt degree, with a tranſcendent, ſuperlative love.

3. Secundum amoris appretiationem.

4. In reſpect of relinquiſhing, I muſt be ready to forſake my ſelf and all all other things to teſtifie my love to him.

7. Fear, which is a retiring or flying back from a thing, if good, becauſe it is too high and excellent, above the reach and without the extent of our power and condition; if evil, becauſe it is hard to be eſcaped. The fear of God is an affection of heart, ariſing from the apprehenſion of Gods infinite Majeſty and abſolute Sovereignty, both by Creation and Covenant, whereby we are drawne to behave our ſelves more reverently, dutifully, uprightly, reſpectively, before him, than before the greateſt Monarch in the world, and ſtand prepared to walk before him in holy manner, ſhunning his diſpleaſure, and avoiding whatſoever might procure it. God is to be feared in reſpect of his incomprehenſible greatneſſe, abſolute Sovereignty, as Lord and Father; and exact righteouſneſſe, whereby he judgeth every man without reſpect of perſons; great Power and tender Mercies, whereby he is ready to pardon them that humble themſelves, and intreat his favour. God is abſolutely called Fear, Eſay 8. 12, 13. as unto whom all fear and dread is due. Thus Jacob ſware by the fear of his Father Iſaac, Gen. 32. 42, 53.

Reverence differs from ſimple fear, which reſpecteth a thing as evil, and ſo we are not bound to have it working, but when we have occaſion to conceive of God as angry, and doth look to things as excellent, and therefore muſt move ſo often as we have occaſion to conceive of his Excellency, Heb. 12. 28.

Deut. 10. 12, 20. 1 Pet. 2. 17. Levit. 19. 14. Hag 1. 2. Ion. 1. 9. Mal. 2. 5. Deut. 28. 58. Prov. 1. 7. Timor cultus & timor culpæ. It is the grace of not daring to offend God. Mal. 1. 6. Deut. 10. 17. Pſal. 76. 7, 8. & 66. 4, 5. 2 Chron. 19. 7. Ioſh. 4. 24. Dan. 6. 25, 27. Deut. 13. 4. Prov. 3. 7. Pſalm 5. 7. Pſalm 130. 4.

& 2. 11. & 33. 8. & 76. 11. Eccleſ. 12. 13. Habak. 3. 16. Matth. 10. 28. Ier. 10. 7. & 5. 22. Pſalm 119. 120. Iob 31. 23.

8. Humility, when rightly diſcerning the infinite diſtance and difference that is betwixt God and us, acknowledging his unſpeakable excellency, and our moſt vile baſeneſſe in compariſon of him; his riches of Grace, and our poverty; his Power and our weakneſſe; his free undeſerved Mercy, and our miſery; we ſubmit our ſelves to the good pleaſure of his will, wholly depend upon his Grace, and aſcribe every bleſſing we receive to his meer favour, every good thing in us, or that is done by us, to his free goodneſſe.

Iſa. 40. 15, 16, 17. Humilitas propriè reſpicit ſubjectionem hominis ad Deum. Tho. Aquin. 2a, 2æ Quæſt. 162. See Gen. 18. 27.

Art. 5. & 161. Art. 1. ad Arg. 5. 2 Sam. 7. 18. 1 Chron. 29. 14, 15, 16. Geneſis 22. 10. 1 Cor. 12. 11.

9. Patience, which is a full purpoſe of heart, ariſing from the acknowledgment of Gods Wiſdom, Majeſty, Power, Goodneſſe, Providence and Mercy, with all quietnes, and without any pining, reluctation or fainting, revolting or tempting of God, though the ſenſes and appetite cannot but feel a repugnancy, to ſuſtain any evil that He will inflict upon us.

Rom. 12. 12. 1 Theſſ. 1. 3. Heb. 12. 1. Iam. 1. 2. & 5. 8. Rom. 5. 4.

Pſalm 38. 13, 14. & 39. 9. Ier. 14. 22. Matth. 11. 29.

10. Joy, whereby the ſoul doth receive comfort and content in a good thing, and is moved to imbrace and poſſeſſe the ſame. And becauſe God is the chief good, therefore ought the ſoul to be moved with more vehement and fervent motions of gladneſſe, for his Love, Favour, Good Will, and excellent Glory, than for any or all other things whatſoever. What we make our chiefeſt Joy, that is our God: for the heart reſteth principally in that with which it is moſt delighted, Iob 31. 25. It appears evidently by Gods word, that as a father would have his children to live cheerfully, ſo would God, and therefore doth he ſo much call upon them to rejoyce, Pſalm 60. 19. & 68. 3. Pſalm 33. 1. & 149. 1, 2.

Joy is put for Hope, Iſa 8. 6. Spes enim boni gaudium parit. Deut. 12. 12. & 16. 14. Pſal. 32. 11, John 3. 1. Phil. 4. 4. 1 Theſſ. 5. 16. Pſal. 97. 12. Jer. 9. 23.

1 Cor. 1. 31. 2 Cor. 10. 17. Pſal. 48. 11. Joy in God is that Grace whereby the ſoul doth reſt it ſelf contented and ſatisfied in God, as in its ſole and perfect happineſſe, Pſal. 4. 6, 7.

11. Zeal, or fervour of will, whereby the ſoul is moved and carried towards God with the ſtrongeſt, hotteſt, and moſt fiery inclinations, willing his Grace, Favour Pſal. 69. 9. & 119. 139.

Gal. 4.18. Exod. 32.19. Numb. 15.9. 2 Pet.2.8. 1 King. 19.10. Pſal. 119.136. Matth.4.14. John 2. 14, 15,16. Jer. 23.9,10, 11. Act.17.16,17.

and Glory, infinitely above all things, becauſe it is the higheſt of all things that are to be loved, willed, deſired, or cared for; and deteſting, loathing, abhorring whatſoever tendeth to his diſhonour. Examples of this zeal we have in Moſes, Phineas, Lot, Elias, David, John the Baptiſt, and Chriſt himſelf. In Jeremy, Paul, Peter, and many others.

12. An earneſt and conſtant deſire of Gods preſence in Heaven, Cant. 8. 14. Philip. 1. 23. Revel. 22. 20. Each thing by nature doth covet perfection in its kinde; and what nature hath taught every thing in its proper kinde, that Grace hath taught Chriſtians in the beſt kinde, viz. to deſire perfect Communion with God, in whoſe preſence is fullneſſe of joy for evermore. It cannot be that God ſhould be known to be good, clearly, diſtinctly, certainly, and not be deſired. And if we know God to be the chiefeſt of all good things, we cannot but ſet our affections upon him, and covet above all things in the world to dwell in his preſence.

Hitherto of thoſe particular duties whereby we take God to be our God in mind, will and affections: now let us hear what be the effects of theſe.

Mans imagination or thinking power is to be ſet upon God with moſt life, earneſtneſſe, and conſtancy, he is to frame in his ſoul thoughts of his excellency continually. Pſal.139. 17, 18. Pſal. 63. 6. Pſal. 119.44, & 139. 17.97. Mat.6.21. Mal.3.16. Pſalm 104.34. Pſalm 143.5. 105.2. Pſalm 63.6.

1. Meditation, which is a ſtaying of the minde in the ſerious thought and conſideration of Gods Power, Goodneſſe, Grace, Mercy, Love and Wiſdome, ſhining in the Word and Works of God, ſpecially in Jeſus Chriſt the brightneſſe of his glory, with an holy delight and admiration at that moſt perfect and Divine Excellency which caſteth forth the comfortable beams thereof, upon the ſoul of him that ſo thinketh upon them. Each particular duty before mentioned calleth for meditation; knowledge is not gotten without meditation, meditation kindleth love, and love carrieth the thoughts after it. Reverence is not raiſed without meditation, and being raiſed keepeth the heart within compaſſe, that it doth not ſtraggle up and down. The glory of God as it ſhineth in Jeſus Chriſt is moſt amiable and delightſome, that if once it be truly diſcerned, we ſhall take great pleaſure to behold and view it. What actual ſight is to the eye, that thought is to the mind: Glorious pleaſant objects draw the eye after them, and what is apprehended to be Divine, Excellent, Pleaſant, Beautifull and Comfortable, that will take up the mind. If all thoughts affect and profit according to the nature of the object about which they are exerciſed, then ſeeing God is the beſt, moſt excellent, moſt glorious object, the mind that is moſt ſerious in the meditation of his Grace, Power and Love in Jeſus Chriſt, is beſt refreſhed and moſt perfected. We ſhould think upon God in moſt ſerious manner, conſtantly upon all occaſions and opportunities with livelihood and power, being moſt affected and taken up with the thought of God in Jeſus Chriſt.

When I awake (ſaith David) I am ſtill with thee, that is, in my thoughts and meditations. None deſerve our thoughts more than God: He thought on us before the world was, and took care of us in our infancy; he made our hearts.

The thoughts are,

1. Real things, as the ſoul it ſelf is real, ſo its operations.
2. Nimble and active, can paſſe to Heaven ſpeedily.
3. They communicate to us the excellencies that are in God.

We muſt remember nothing ſo firmly nor ſo often as God. Pſalm 22.27. Eccleſ. 12. 1. Proverbs 2. 1.

2. Perpetual and continual remembrance of God, whereby we call back to mind what we know and have learned of God, his Power, Mercy, Love, Long-ſuffering, and repreſent him as preſent to the ſoul. The Name of the Lord is moſt ſweet, the remembrance of his Holineſſe, the prop of confidence, the ſolace of the heart in time of diſtreſſe. See 1 *Sam.*30.6.

Pſalm 77. 3. Pſalm 42. 6. & 78. 34, 35. Pſalm 63. 6. & 119. 55. Eſay 63. 7. & 64. 5. Pſalm 20. 7. Numbers 15. 39, 40.

1 Theſſ.5.13. Pſalm 147.2. Pſalm 33.1. Pſalm 145.5. Pſalm 147.13. & 97. 9. 1 Chron. 29. 12, 13. Pſalm 148. 1.

3. Reverent and faithfull Invocation, wherein we requeſt of God in the Name of Chriſt all good things whereof we ſtand in need, and that both in proſperity and adverſity, 1 Theſſ. 5. 17. Epheſ. 6. 16. James 5. 16. Pſalm 50. 15. & 38. 10. Matth. 7. 7.

4. Thankſ-

4. Thankſgiving or celebration of Gods Name, whereby we magnifie his Power, Goodneſſe, Wiſdome, Grace and Mercy, freely acknowledging every good and perfect gift to come from above. God is the higheſt Majeſty, who oweth nothing to any man, from whom we receive body, ſoul, life, and whatſoever we enjoy, unto whom we are unable to requite the leaſt kindneſſe vouchſafed. Our tongues ſhould be more plentifully buſied in ſpeaking of Gods Excellencies to his honour, than of any or of all other things. Mans ſpeech ſhould more readily, conſtantly, largely be ſet on work in talking of God to his glory, than of the whole world beſides.

He cals upon all creatures to praiſe God; meaning, men ſhould take occaſion from all theſe to praiſe him. Deut.6.13. & 10. 20.

5. Holy and religious ſwearing, which is a calling of God to witneſſe that we ſpeak as our mind conceiveth.

Eſay 19. 18. Eſay 65. 16. & 45. 23. Jeremy 12. 16. Pſalm 63. 11. Geneſis 14. 22. Revelat. 10. 5, 6.

6. Religious and Divine Adoration, Pſalm 95.6. The Greek word notes as much as to fall upon the knees, or to worſhip by falling down at the knees of another, *Mat.*2.11. Adoration is implied in this. One Evangeliſt ſaith, That the Leper worſhipped Chriſt; another reciting the ſame Hiſtory, That he kneeled down unto him; and a third, That he fell upon his face. In Hebrew there be divers words to expreſſe it, which ſignifie to bow the whole body, to kiſſe the mouth, to bend the knee, to fall proſtrate on the face. But in all three * Languages it noteth an outward reverence, ſhadowing the internal affection of the heart; Adoration implieth in it three Acts: Firſt, An apprehenſion of the excellency of that which is adored. Secondly, An act of the Will, deſiring to do ſomething to teſtifie our acknowledgement of this greatneſſe, and our ſubjection and inferiority. Thirdly, An outward expreſſing of the ſame.

Matth.8.2. Mark 1. 40. Luke 5. 12. Exodus 34. 8. 2 Chron. 20. 18. Exod.4.31. 1 Kings 19.18. * Προσκυνεῖν ſignificat ſeſe inſtar humilis catelli ad pedes alicujus ſui Domini provolvere ab ad & oro. Vide plura ibid.

atque proſternere, honoris ac reverentiæ cauſa, quaſi illius pedes deoſculaturum. Valla deducit Adoro Orare autem eſt ore precari: ſicut ſupplico eſt plicando caput aut genu aliquid petere. Zanch. de relig. Vide Jun. Theſ. Theol. de Adoratione.

7. Seeking the Lord and his favour, ſpecially if we have turned away from him. To ſeek the Lord, is to bend all our ſenſes and ſtrength to know God aright, have communion with him, enjoy his favour, and worſhip him purely according to his Ordinance, 2 *Chron.*31.21. Job 8.5. Ezra 6.21.

2 Chron.17.3 Acts 15.17. Iſa.55.6. Iſa.31.1. Pſalm 27.8. Zeph.2.3. Pſalm 83.16. & 78.34. Pſalm 10.4. & 14.2.& 69.6.

8. Offering and making Vows unto the Lord alone, Eſay 19.21. Pſalm 116.14. & 76.11. *Gen.*28.20. *Deut.*23.21.

9. Profeſſion of Gods Name, Deut. 26. 17. Eſay 44 5. & 43.7. Pſalm 22.23. & 119.46.

1 Pet.3.15. Mat.10.32,33. 2 Chron.25.3. James 4.12. Mat.23.9.

10. Free and voluntrry ſubmiſſion of mind and conſcience to the Lord alone, as the only Law-giver, King and Saviour of his people.

This Commandment is broken two wayes:

1. By failing to give God that honour which is due unto him, and that either for ſubſtance or degree, matter or meaſure, in whole or in part.

2. By giving his Divine Honour unto any other in whole or part, abſolutely or in degree, in profeſſion or truth.

The ſpecial ſins condemned are:

1. Atheiſm, when the heart denieth God in his Deity or Divine Attributes, as Wiſdom, Juſtice, Mercy, Omnipreſence. And this is ſecret or open: Open, when a man maintaineth that conceit expreſly in his mind: Secret and in the bud, when he is over-ruled with this vice, though he form not ſuch a propoſition in his mind. Atheiſm is an high tranſgreſſion of this Commandment; for he that denieth the Godhead cannot glorifie God in ſpirit and truth. Beſides, every Atheiſt maketh himſelf God, in that he thinketh he is of and by himſelf, and not of and for the Lord that made Heaven and Earth. All the commands are wrapt up in the firſt; all ſinne is a contempt of God, and ſo we cannot break any other commands, but we break the firſt. We muſt perform all the other Commandments from the true faith and love which we have to God.

Omnia præcepta ſunt in primo tanquam capite ſuo. Luther. Pſalm 10.4,11. & 14.1. Mal,3 14. Pſalm 94.7, Epheſ.2.12.

2. Ignorance

Esay 27.11. Psal.142.3. 1 Thess. 4.13.

2. Ignorance of God in Christ, under which dulnesse to conceive of him, and carelesnesse to seek after the knowledge of him, are comprehended. Ignorance of God, so far as He hath obscured himself from us, is no sin, *Prov.*30.1,2. *Rom.*11.34. Ignorance of the secrets of God is a holy ignorance, *Deut.*29.29. We must know all that we need, and all that we may, but must not presume above that which is meet to understand. That ignorance of God, so farre as he hath most clearly and carefully revealed himself in his Works and Word, is that which is here condemned. This ignorance is privative or corruptive: both sinfull in nature, though not equal in guilt or danger. Privative ignorance is the simple want of that knowledg of God and Christ that should be had: Corruptive is joyned with a perverse disposition, whereby the minde is not onely blinded, but become grossely careless of the knowledge of God and godlinesse, if not perverted with false and sinfull opinions.

Rom.12.3. 2 Cor. 12.4.

Ignorance of God himself, his being, *Heb.*11.6.

1. When we do not believe that there is a God, or know him not to be such a God as he is, John 17. 3.

2. Of his Omniscience, Ezekiel 8. 12.

3. Of his Majesty and Greatnesse, Job 9. from 4, to 11.

4. Of the infinite Purity of God, 1 John 1.5. 1 John 3 6. Psalm 50. 21.

Ignorance is ungodlinesse,

1. Because we cannot believe in God, unlesse we know him, *Rom.*10.14.

2. It hinders the love of God and goodnesse, John 4. 10. Ignoti nulla cupido.

3. It estrangeth a man from God, *Ephes.*4.18.

4. It is the way to all ungodlinesse, Hoseah 4.1. Esay 1.3. Psalm 14.4. Ephesians 4. 19.

5. It makes men liable to great punishments, *Hos.*4. 6. *Prov.*29.18. *Jer.*5.13. & 10.25. 2 Thess.1.8.

Deut.29.29. Acts 1.7. Luke 13.24.

3. Curiosity, when men busie themselves in prying into the secrets of Gods nature and works, or turn their search after him into meer disputes and idle speculations. This perverse desire of knowing the truth is a disease that hath endangered many. Our first Parents were bewitched with a desire of more knowledg than the Lord knew to be good for them, and so attempting to do what was forbidden, they fell from that good estate in which they were created. The Lord hath fully manifested himself in the face of Jesus Christ, so far as it is needfull or profitable for us to know him: and it is our duty to contain our selves within the bounds and limits prescribed of the Lord.

Iohn 21.22.

1 Iohn 2.22. & 5.10 Gal.5.20. Col. 2.18. 1 Tim.6.4,5. 2 Tim.3.8.

4. Errour or heresie concerning God and Christ, as when we conceive amisse of the Properties of God, his Covenant, the unity of Essence and Trinity of Persons, the Person and Office of Christ. Heresie is Idolatry, for it transformeth the Majesty of God, the Person or Office of Christ: Every lie of God is a kinde of Idolatry, but heresie ascribeth unto God devised Properties, turneth his glorious Essence into a lie.

Isa.1.3. Ier.2.8.&8.7. 1 Sam.2.12. 2 Peter 3.5. Psalm 28.5. Psalm 106.7. Deut. 29.4. Isa. 5.13. Psalm 92.6. Isa.53.3.& 5. 12. Mat.22.5. Heb.2.3. Luke 14. 18. Heb.12.25. Iam 1.8. Iohn 20.27. Luke 24.25. Mark 9. 24.

5. Want of acknowledgment, when God is known in a sort, but not with affection and effect, as he ought to be, and that either for substance or degree. The sons of Eli were sons of Belial, they knew not the Lord; we cannot think them to be utterly destitute of all knowledge of God: but they did not acknowledge his Power, Love and Sovereignty as they professed. It is noted as the sin of Israel, that they understood not the wonders of the Lord, that is, they did not wisely consider or acknowledge them.

6. Disesteem or contempt of God in Christ, when his favour is not esteemed, or not according to the worth and excellency. Contempt of God is discovered by contempt of his Word, Luke 16.16. & 10.16. Job 21.24. & 22.17. Psalm 50.17. Prov. 1.25. If we regard not instruction, cast behinde our backs, despise his threatnings, neglect his promises.

7. Incredulity, when the heart is dis-joyned from God by unbelief; Of this there be divers degrees. The first is, doubting through weaknesse, a disease which the weak Christian laments, and would fain have amended in himself.

ſelf. The ſecond, when explicitely and in act thoſe things be not firmly, diſtinctly manifeſted. The third is flat infidelity with misbelief, when the corrupt minde of man denying to yeeld aſſent to the truth of God, doth foſter falſe or preſumptuous conceits of Gods Majeſty contrary to that he hath revealed.

8. Diſtruſt, wavering or ſhaking out of fear of not obtaining what the Lord hath promiſed, whether it concern this life, or the life to come, and that either for want of the things themſelves, or of the cauſes which we judge neceſſary for the obtaining of what is promiſed. Zeph. 3.2.

9. Deſperation of Gods Power, Mercy, or both.

10. Preſumption and carnal ſecurity, when men raſhly hope that they ſhall obtain their deſire of God, but not according to his promiſe. Gen. 4.13. 1 Theſſ 4.13.

11. Defect or want of love, whether in reſpect of quantity, quality, act, or continuance, 1 Cor. 16. 22. Iſa. 28.15,17. Mat. 24 37.

12. Want of fear or reverence, when men live without reverence, care or fear of God and his judgments againſt ſinne, whether for ſubſtance or degree. Pſalm 30.6. Numb. 30.31. Iſa 32.9,11. Deut. 17.13.

& 13.11. Jeremy 5. 22. Zechary 1. 11. Deut. 28. 58, 59. Eccleſiaſtes 8.13.

13. Pride, being a lifting up of our ſelves above and againſt God, overvaluing our ſelves, and undervaluing him, 1 Timothy 3. 2. Pſalm 101.5. Eſay 16.6. Superbia eſt perverſæ celſitudinis appetitus.

14. Impatience, when we will not reſt in the will of God, nor expect his aid, and the accompliſhment of his promiſes, but miſlike the Lords doings, grudge under his croſſes, blame his government, and faint under the burden. Iſa. 2.11,12 & 9. 8,9. Ezek. 2.10. Exod. 5.21. & 14.11. & 17. 2, 3.

15. Carnal Joy, when men take more pleaſure in ſinne, wealth, friends, Lands, Wife, Children, Wit, and ſuch like, than in the favour of God; or at leaſt joy ſo in theſe things, as that their joy is in whole or part with-drawne from God. Iob 33. 13. 1 Cor. 3.2. Amos 6.3,4,5.

16. Lukewarmneſſe, when men receive and profeſſe the truth, but want the heat of love and zeal, Revel. 3.15. Hoſ. 9.1. Iſa. 22.13. Iohn 16.20.

17. Senſuality, when men eagerly purſue their contentment in earthly things, but regard not the love or favour of God, or at leaſt are willing to be ſtrangers from him for ever, ſo they may enjoy the deſires of their ſoules here below.

18. Looſneſſe, when the mind is carried from God, and doth range abroad in idle thoughts, or abundantly purſue, and follow thoughts of earthly and tranſitory things.

19. Forgetfulneſſe, when men put God out of minde, and careleſſy caſt away all remembrance of him, when it ſhould do us good. or we ſhould give him glory. Deut. 6.12. & 8.11. & 32. 18.

20. Neglect of prayer; he robs God of his glory that runs not unto him in all neceſſities by hearty ſupplication. 2 Kings 17.38. Pſalm 144.53.

21. Invocation of falſe gods, Wood, Stone, or Saints departed. Herein the Papiſts teach the breach of this Commandment, in that they perſwade and commend the Invocation of Saints departed, as Interceſſours to God by their prayers and merits. And not only ſo, but they pray to them that are no Saints, but rather hypocrites, to them that never were, and to the croſſe, ſaying to the dumb ſtock, Ariſe, it ſhall teach me. Iſa. 62.7. Pſal 42.20,21. Ezek. 18,12, 13. They call the Virgin Mary, the mother of mercy and compaſſion, the hope of our ſalvation. They pray unto the Croſſe, O Crux, ave ſpes unica, hoc paſſionis tempore, Auge piis juſtitiam Reiſque dona veniam.

22. Dulneſſe or hardneſſe of heart, when the ſoul is ſo ſtupid and ſenſleſſe, faſt locked up, that the mercies of God, and his ſweet promiſes do little or nothing effect. It is a ſpiritual ſottiſhneſſe or diſtemper, that neither the word nor works of God can kindly work upon us. Mark 16.14. & 10. 5. Mat. 19.8. Iob 17. 7. Mark 3. 5.

23. Unthank-

Rom. 1. 21. 23. Unthankfulneſſe, when men devour the bleſſings of God, and return no praiſe unto him for them.

Exod. 23. 13. Jerem. 5. 7. Zeph. 1. 5. Deut. 6. 13. 24. Idolatrous ſwearing by Idols or falſe gods, by the Saints departed, or any meer creature.

25. Divine Adoration of that which is no god. The Papiſts adore, 1. The Pope, to whom they attribute divine honour. 2. Images, with the ſame adoration with the ſamplar, appointing only a reſpective difference, viz. that the principal is worſhipped ſimply and for it ſelf; but the Image in regard of the ſimilitude and reference to the principal. 3. The Bread and Cup of the Euchariſt. 4. The Saints departed.

Zeph. 1. 6. Amos 4. 10. Jerem. 4. 1. Dan. 9. 13. 2 Chr. 16. 12. Deut. 12. 30. and 11. 16. 26. Neglect to ſeek God, or return unto him when we have gone aſtray, or be warned by his Prophets or corrections. And enquiring after, or ſeeking unto ſtrange gods.

Chap. III.

The ſecond Commandment.

Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf any graven Image, nor the likeneſſe of any thing that is in Heaven above, or in the Earth beneath, or in the waters under the Earth, thou ſhalt not bow down to them nor ſerve them. For I the LORD thy God am a jealous God, viſiting the ſins of the Fathers upon the Children to the third and fourth generation, of them that hate me, and ſhewing mercy to thouſands of them that love me and keep my Commandments.

Herein it differeth from the firſt Commandment, that commanded the worſhip of God which is natural, this the worſhip which is by divine inſtitution. Downams Sum of Divin. Cultus naturalis is that which Moſes himſelf explains this precept, Deut. 4. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19.

This Commandment hath two parts, a Prohibition and a Confirmation. The Prohibition hath two parts, forbidding two things. The firſt is propounded, Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf any graven Image, nor the likeneſſe of any thing.

Where is,

1. The perſon prohibited, Thou] any man whatſoever.

2. The thing forbidden, Making a graven Image] that is, an Image artificially carved with any tool. An Image is the picture or repreſentation of ſome other thing artificially made of any matter in any form.

The Papiſts ſay it ſhould be a graven Idol. There is a great deal of difference ſay they, between an Image and an Idol. They are all one originally, Imago is the nature directeth all people to, or which ariſeth from the nature of God. This belongs to all reaſonable creatures. He that acknowledgeth there is a God, will acknowledg that he is to be believed, feared, truſted, loved and prayed to: this was performed by Adam in Paradiſe, and by the Angels in Heaven, Iſa. 6. 3. Heb. 1. 6. This is required in the Firſt Commandment. Cultus inſtitutus, inſtituted worſhip depends on the revelation of the will of God, this is commanded in the Second Commandment. Natural worſhip is the chief, inſtituted worſhip may be interrupted. A time of worſhip is Juris naturalis, the ſeventh day Juris poſitivi. Some in theſe dayes ſay all inſtitutions are meer forms, and men may uſe or not uſe them at their pleaſure according to their light, Qui non eſt religioſus non eſt Chriſtianus. Cultus inſtitutus eſt medium ex Dei voluntate ordinatum, ad cultum naturalem exercendum & promovendum. Indicantur hujuſmodi media omnia à Deo inſtituta, in ſecundo præcepto per prohibitionem oppoſitorum mediorum omnium cultus ab hominibus excogitatorum, ſub titulo ſculptilis & imaginis, quæ cum precipua fuerunt olim hominum inventa, cultum Dei depravantia, aptiſſimè proponuntur (per Synecdochen in Decalogo præcipuam) loco omnium humani ingenij commentorum ad cultum ſpectantium. Ames. Medul. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 13.

Latine

Latine word, and Idolon the Greek; every repreſentation of any creature in Heaven above, or in the Earth beneath, or in the waters under the Earth, that is an Image, but if this be to the uſe of Religion, that is an Idol. Dr Weſtfield on Pſal. 106. 19, 20. Turretin and Bochart have written much about this Subject.

They leave out the 2d Commandment. Vide Aquin. Sum. 1a, 2æ Quæſt. 100. Art. 5. leaſt the very words ſhould deter the people from Image-worſhip. Maſter Stoughton in his Treatiſe againſt Popery, 2d Argument, ſaith, This is manifeſt by their Common Primmers. Veron ſaith, That the forbidding to make Images is not a diſtinct Commandment, but part of the firſt. To which Samuel Bochart (Premiere Partie de La Conference, p. 157.) Anſwers, That the Jewiſh Church hath alwayes diſtinguiſhed it from that Commandment which forbiddeth to have other Gods. This diſtinction (ſaith he) is expreſſe in the Chaldee Paraphraſe of Jonathan, which was before Chriſt. Philo and Joſephus make that the ſecond Commandment which forbids making of Images; The Greek Fathers, Origen, Athanaſius, Gregory Nazianzene, Heſychius, Procopius, and moſt of the Latin Fathers (Auſten excepted) go this way.

Likeneſſe of any thing] is more general, for though every Image be a likeneſſe, yet not contrarily, and the Lord doth deliver this Commandment ſo generally to prevent all miſtaking. No Image or picture nor any manner of likeneſſe muſt be made. Whether it be an Idol or Image, if it be a likeneſſe, it is forbidden here.

3. Here is the end, For thy ſelf, or to thy ſelf, that is, to the uſe of any man, it muſt be underſtood of religious uſe for the ſervice of a God, either true or immaginary. See Levit. 26. 1. or to thy ſelf] that is, of thine own head [a].

[a] Non facias tibi, intellige, ex tuo capite ſine meo expreſſo verbo ac juſſu.

Ergò non præſcribit ſibi legem Deus, quin poſſit jubere fieri imagines prout ipſi viſum fuerit, ſicut poſtea juſſit fieri Cherubinos & alias imagines in Templo: ſed nobis præſcribit legem generalem quam nunquam licet tranſgredi, niſi peculiare accedat verbum Dei: ex Levit. 26. interpretatio colligitur hujus præcepti, ubi non ſimpliciter ait non facias tibi ſculptile, ſed addit ad adorandum ea. Ergo non ſimpliciter damnantur ſculptura aut imagines quævis, ſed tantum quæ ad cultum ſolitæ ſunt proponi. Zanch. de Decalogo, cap. 14. Non facies tibi, id eſt, ex tuo proprio cerebro vel judicio: quamvis enim particula illa tibi aliàs nonnunquam vel redundat, vel aliam vim habet: hic tamen & redundantiam excludit accuratiſſimum horum præceptorum breviloquium, & vanitatem humanarum cogitationum excludi manifeſtum eſt ex aliis Scripturæ locis eodem ſpectantibus, ut Amos 5. 26. Num. 15. 39. Ameſ. ubi ſupra. Non facies, nec fieri curabis, aut ab alio factum habebis, ſcilicet ad repræſentandum Deum. Fabrit. Conc. Sac. in Decal. Certè Deus leges ſuas promulgans, nullius violatori tam gravem decrevit pœnam, atque ſecundæ; nullius obſervatori tam ampla propoſuit præmia, atque ſecundæ: ſiquidem præcepti de fugiendis Idolis tranſgreſſorum pœnam, in tertiam & quartam generationem, ejuſdem verò obſervatorum præmium, in multa poſterorum millia derivavit. Nulla etiam Lex eſt, quam toties Deus repetiverit, atque hæc ipſa de Idolis: de quibus cum Exod. 20. commate quinto mentem ſuam explicuiſſet, mox verſu 22. ſenſum præcepti iterans, vos, inquit, vidiſtis, quòd de cœlo loquutus ſum vobis. Non facietis Deos argenteos, nec Deos aureos facietis vobis. Nec aliud præceptum Moſes moriturus tam altè populi animo impreſſit, ac hoc de execrandis Idolis Deut. 4. 15, 16, & 23 v. Sculpet. Serm. de Idol. Vide plura ibid. Vide Picherel. Diſſert. de Imag. habita ad ſanum Germani, coram Regina matre. Et Gallaſium in c. 20. Exodi.

Thus this part is propounded, it is inlarged by a diſtribution of things whereof Images or likeneſſes are to be made.

Theſe viſible things are enumerated more particularly, man, beaſts, fowl, creeping things, fiſh, Sun, Moon, Stars, and the Hoſt of Heaven, Deut. 4. 16. 17, 18, 19. Among theſe there is no mention of God, Angels, the Spirits of men: for theſe are not viſible.

Of things in Heaven above] meaning the higheſt heavens, called the heaven of the bleſſed, and ſo the Images of God the Father, or God the Son, or God the holy Ghoſt, and of our Lord Jeſus God and Man are excluded, as alſo of holy Angels and Saints, for all theſe are in heaven.

2. The heavens of the Stars, and ſo the Image of the Sunne, Moon, Planets, or any Conſtellation or Starre is condemned. Vide Voſſ. de Orig. & Progreſſ. Idol. l. 2. c. 4.

3. The inferiour heavens called the Air or place where the Fowls of the heaven flie, ſo as pictures of feathered Fowls are condemned.

Again he ſaith, Of things on Earth] here are all men and four-footed beaſts living and walking, and all kind of creeping things together, with Herbs, Plants, Trees, and ſo all Images of them are blamed.

3. The Waters under the Earth are named, and thereby are ſignified all manner of Fiſhes. The waters are ſaid to be under the earth, becauſe God made the earth hollow, that there the waters might be contained, Pſal. 104 6.

And God particularly nameth all theſe places, beſides which there is no other place, that we might fully conceive, that his meaning is, to forbid all manner of Images of all things whatſoever, whether of God, of creatures, of what ſort and kinde ſoever. The Gentiles abuſed the Images of moſt of all theſe, Rom. 1. 23.

Coles referunt ad ipſum animi affectum & mentem colentis: Adorabis aut inclinabis ad honorem, qui aliquo corporis geſtu fit & exhibetur, Gen. 24. 27. Quorum utrunque prohibetur. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 8. Neque coles] victimis, libamine, incenſo. Grot. in Exod. 20.

This is the firſt part of the Prohibition, the ſecond is, Thou ſhalt not bow down nor ſerve them, that is, to any ſuch Image. Quibus verbis omnem omnino cultum, quocunque modo Idolis tribuatur prohibet. Scultet.

To bow down notes the outward geſture of the body uſed of men to ſhew reverence, and is uſed to denote all manner of reverent behaviours, which either nature hath ordained, or cuſtome of Countries authorized to expreſſe reſpect and regard of things, as worthy of honour and account. Vox Hebræa geſtum honoris indicem ſignificat. Grot in Exod. 20.

To do ſervice noteth all manner of actions to be accompanied with ſuch reverent geſtures, the former is a circumſtance of ſervice, the latter the ſubſtance of it. So no manner of account is to be ſhewed to pictures, neither by any outward geſture of body, nor by any kind of ſervice at all. Zanchy de Decalogo c. 14. doth otherwiſe diſtinguiſh between theſe two words. Gallaſius on 20. of Exodus comparing theſe words with the former, Thou ſhalt not make, ſaith, they are added by way of expoſition; Idols are therefore forbidden, becauſe the worſhip of God is corrupted by them, q. d. thou ſhalt not make unto thy ſelf an Idol, that thou maiſt fall down before it, or thereby give honour to God.

Hitherto the Prohibition, the confirmation is taken from the Lords intereſt, I am the Lord thy God. God deſerved to be worſhipt by this people, and by us which have ſucceeded them, becauſe he was their God, and made a Covenant with them, Jer. 2. 10, 11. and a ſtrong God, therefore the Jews which were Idolaters and hated him ought to fear.

Jealous ſignifieth as much as zealous, or to be moved with a very ardent affection and fervent deſire, proceeding either out of love to ſave the thing untouched which is loved, Zech. 1. 14. & 8. 2. or elſe of indignation againſt that thing which deſerveth puniſhment, Exod. 34. 14. Nahum. 1. 2. Ezek. 38. 19. and here it is uſed in both thoſe two ſenſes or ſignifications. Ford on the Covenant. See Eſtey on the Commandments. See Lev. 10. 2. 1 Chron. 15. 13. Ezek. 43. 8.

2. From one Attribute of his jealouſie. See Exod. 34. 14. Jealouſie is that property of a husband or wife, whereby they cannot endure that the yoke-fellow ſhould give either their affections or body to others beſide themſelves. It noteth the holineſſe of Gods nature, that cannot away to have that ſervice which is due to him communicated to Images, or to any other thing with or beſides himſelf; it is love joyned with anger, ſith God cannot away with this, we ſhould not practiſe it.

[b] Verbum viſitandi alias eſt mediæ ſignificationis, hic in malum ponitur, pro eo effectu qui conſequitur irati Judicis viſitationem, id eſt, pro punitione, LXX. ἀποδιδὸς, reddens iniquitatem, hoc eſt pœnam iniquitatis Patrum in filios, &c. Rivet. in Exod. 20. See Eſtey.

3. There is an argument from Gods effects of viſiting the ſins of the fathers on the children to the third and fourth generation, of them that hate him. See Exod. 34. 7. Deut. 5. 9. Viſiting is two-fold, 1. In love and favour, Luk. 1. 58. 2. In diſpleaſure to puniſh, as here. Puniſhing [b] is the laying of miſery upon any one that hath done a fault, proportionable unto his fault. The object of this puniſhment are the children of them that hate God even to the third and fourth generation, as in the Babyloniſh tranſportation.

Et nati natorum, & qui naſcentur ab illis.

For a man may live to ſee his poſterity to the fourth generation, Job 42. 16. and ſo ſee himſelf puniſhed in them.

So Aquinas 1*a*, 2*æ Quæſt.* 87. Artic. 8. Kellet. Miſcel. lib. 1. cap. 7. and others.

Some

Some ſay the wrath of God deſcends from fathers to children onely in caſe the children imitate, and write after their fathers copy; ſuppoſing thoſe words [In them that hate me] to relate to the children. But this is expreſly againſt the words of the Text, and the examples of the thing: God afflicts good children of evil parents for their fathers ſinnes, and the words are plain and determinate: God viſits the ſinnes of the fathers, In tertiam & quartam generationem eorum qui oderunt me, of them, of thoſe fathers that hate me. Doctor Taylor on Exod. 20.5. part 1.

Some urge, that if it be righteous with God to leave the world liable to death for Adams ſin, then children may ſuffer temporal afflictions for their Parents ſins. Parents may convey an eſtate to them with a curſe. But Pet. du Moulin and Knewſtub are of another judgement, alledging Ezek. 28. 20. and ſo are divers others. Deus punit peccatum Patrum in filiis non ſemper, ſed tunc ſolùm, cùm filij imitantur peccata patrum, ut docent S. Patres (Hieron. Chryſoſt. Auguſt.) & Thom. 1, 2. Queſt. 87. Quos ſequuntur ferè omnes recentiores, & hoc ipſum indicat Scriptura, cùm ait: His qui oderunt me: Non enim ſimpliciter Deus dicit, ſe puniturum peccata patrum in filiis, ſed in iis qui eum oderunt. Bellarm. de Amiſſ. grat. & ſtatu peccat. lib. 4. cap. 7. The Chaldee Paraphraſe therefore adds theſe words, Quando filij ſequentur peccata patrum. Vide Bonfrerium in loc.

The cauſe moving to puniſh is the ſins of the Fathers. Now God puniſheth the ſins of the Fathers on the children, by giving up the children to follow or exceed their Parents in ſinning, that ſo he may bring upon them a more full vengeance, to ſhew his deteſtation of his Fathers ſins. Seeing no man would have his poſterity to be plagued, himſelf muſt not ſin in breaking the former prohibition.

They hate the Lord which do not worſhip him as he hath commanded them, but after their own fantaſies, and after the traditions of men. Ford of the Covenant.

God in no other Commandment but the ſecond threatens to puniſh the ſins of fathers upon the children, becauſe ſuperſtitious worſhippers of all men are ſtrengthned by the tradition of their Fathers, O our Fathers did thus and thus, Shall we be wiſer than our fore-fathers? Mr Burrh. on Hoſ.

A ſecond effect of God is ſhewing mercy, that is, doing good and helping out of evil, and the object of this to thouſands; the promiſe is oppoſed to the commination, but is of larger extent. Longè benignior eſt Deus, quàm acerbior. Danæus. Rabbi Salomon hence obſerves, That the goodneſſe of God doth as much exceed his ſeverity, as fifty exceed one, viz. becauſe his ſeverity is reſtrained to four generations, but his goodneſſe is extended to thouſands, two thouſands at the leaſt. Non mille, ſed multa millia: ita oſtenditur, quanto largior ſit Deus in benefaciendo, quam in puniendo. Grot. in Exod. 20. Altera pars ſanctionis promiſſionem continet, & eam quidem luculentiſſimam & locupletiſſimam. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 8.

Of them that love him and keep his Commandments] Not that pretend to love him indeed and ſhew their love by obedience to his revealed will. Joh. 14. 15, 21. 1 John 5. 3.

There is a great difference between keeping Gods Commandments and fulfilling his Commandment. Keeping noteth a truth, fulfilling a perfection: This Chriſt only had; but the truth every Chriſtian muſt have Mr Dod.

The ſcope, end and ſumme of this Commandment is to order us in the ſolemn worſhip of God, called Heb. 9. 1. Ordinances of divine ſervice, and uſually termed religious exerciſes. For the conſtitu ing of a ſolemn worſhip of God three things are required: It commands us to worſhip God by ſuch means, and after ſuch a manner as he hath preſcribed in his Word, and is agreeable to his nature, Deut. 12. 30, 31, 32. Bp Down. Abſtract. Dr Wilkins of the gift of Prayer, chap. 19. To be godly is to worſhip God aright, εὐσέβεια is derived from εὖ bene and σέβομαι Colo.

1. That it be done with immediate reference to God, and that himſelf or ſomething in his ſtead be made the object thereof, and ſo therein we draw near to him, and he to us. This people draw near to me, ſaith Jeremy ſpeaking of ſuch exerciſes.

2. That it tend in the doers intention directly and of it ſelf to the honouring of God and pleaſing him, and getting of grace from him, by exerciſing of ſome or all the virtues required in the firſt Commandment. Cultum generaliter appellare conſuetudo eſt: omnem honorem

3. That there be a ſeparating of our ſelves from all other buſineſſes to be wholly ab inferiori perſona debitum, præſtitumve ſuperiori. Chamierus Tomo ſecundo, lib. 18. cap. 1.

and altogether imployed about ſuch acts in which the difference between common and ſolemn worſhip doth ſeem to ſtand.

The ſubject of worſhip is the reaſonable creature, the foundation of all worſhip is the moſt ſupreame excellency, this muſt be known and apprehended.

The formal nature of it conſiſts in two things:

First, It muſt be ſuch an act of the creature, as is immediately carried out to God and fixed on him, Pſal. 95. 6.

Secondly, An intention of honouring and glorifying him, Joh. 4. 23, 24. Honor debetur alicui propter ſuperiorem excellentiam.

Worſhip conſiſts in three things:

1. There muſt be a right knowledg and high apprehenſion of God, the perſon to be worſhipt.

2. A reflexion of this knowledg.

3. An abaſement of the creature under the reflection of this knowledg. Rev. 5. Chriſt is repreſented as ſitting on a Throne. The people of God are there brought in as compaſſing him about, they have high apprehenſions of the perſon of Chriſt, his glory and holineſſe. 2. They reflect theſe excellencies. 3. They abaſe themſelves, fall on their faces, verſ. ult.

Every religious exerciſe or ordinance of divine ſervice hath uſually divers particular acts, that be as parts of the whole, and in the orderly uniting of which the whole is accompliſhed. And whatſoever is done in any ſuch exerciſe of Religion, for the end and purpoſe of pleaſing God, and getting grace from him with reſpect of conſcience to him (as eſteeming that he muſt and will have it ſo, or elſe the ſervice ſhall not be well-pleaſing and acceptable to him) this is a part of worſhip, or of divine Service. For example, a man brought an Oxe or a Ramme, a Lamb or ſuch like thing, and preſented it to the Prieſt, he did offer it unto God, and that directly with intention of exerciſing obedience and faith to God. Likewiſe this Offering was to be made by a certain perſon in a certain place, at a certain time, with certain Garments and Rites: So all thoſe obſervations became parts of this worſhip; for in theſe alſo the intention of the doer was directly carried to God, hoping and purpoſing by them to pleaſe God, and exerciſe faith and obedience, and other graces, as well and as much, as by the very offering it ſelf, and accounting the ſervice not to be acceptable to God without them.

The things commanded here are of two ſorts:

1. For the performance of divine ſervice.

2. For the preſervation and continuance thereof.

For the right performance of divine worſhip, ſome things are to be looked unto for the ſubſtance and circumſtances of it.

For the ſubſtance of worſhip alſo, ſome things are required for the { Matter / Manner } of it.

The grounds of worſhip are theſe,
1. God will be honoured by all the creatures, he expects honour from them ſutable to their nature.

For the Matter, ſome things are required, for

1. The Object of the ſervice.

2. The Subject of it, that is, the kinds and parts of it.

For the Object, two things are required,

I. That it be the true God alone.

II. For the parts that they be ſuch as are preſcribed and appointed by the true God.

2. The creature in all its worſhip muſt have a rule, their ſervice muſt be reaſonable, Rom. 12. 2. Gal. 6. 16. therefore the Lord hath manifeſted his will to them, Dan. 9. 23. 3. The conſcience of the creature muſt receive this rule, and ſubmit to it. To worſhip God purely and uncorrupty, is to worſhip him agreeably to his own will and nature, John 4. 23. Luke of the Command. Finis præcepti eſt, ut verus ille Deus, qui ſolus Cœli jubetur in primo præcepto, rectè colatur, hoc eſt, eo cultu, quo juſtum eſt ipſum cœli à creaturis intelligentibus, quique ipſi placet. Urſinus in primum præceptum.

Adoration or worſhip is either civil or religious. The Scripture comprehends both in one word, 1 Chron. 29. 20. they worſhipped God with a religious, and David

David their King with a civil adoration, the external geſture was the like, but the diſcriminating difference is eaſily gathered from the objects.

Adoration, according to the common acceptation of the Schoole-men, is compounded of three Acts; Firſt, Of the Act of the underſtanding, which is the knowledg of the Supreame and Divine excellency; Then, Of the Act of the Will, which is a free ſubmiſſion of our ſelves, and all things in our power, to this Divine excellency; which is the formal reaſon of worſhip. Laſtly, Of the external Act of the Body, which is the effect of the former actions. Of this the Schoole-men mention four kinds or manners, and with thoſe the Writers of Caſes of Conſcience, viz. To uncover the head, bow the body, bend the knees, and proſtrate the body on the ground. Dr Duncon De Adoratione Dei verſus Altare.

For the Oject, it muſt be onely the true God the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which is the maker of Heaven and Earth, the Sonne of God our bleſſed Saviour and Mediator, the bleſſed Spirit our Sanctifier, which God hath manifeſted himſelf to us in the Scriptures, to him and him only muſt we render our worſhip, which is ſo eſſential to worſhip, that it cannot be true unleſſe it be appropriated unto him, according to the words of the Law repeated by our Saviour, ſaying, *Matth.*4.10. Thou ſhalt bow down to the Lord thy God, and him (alone) that excluſive and confining particle our Saviour addeth by way of interpretation, Shalt thou ſerve or worſhip, for ſo that word which in the original is, Thou ſhalt ſerve, Chriſt rendereth, Thou ſhalt worſhip. And great cauſe that he alone ſhould be worſhipped who alone is worthy of worſhip. Seeing this worſhip is a ſolemn acknowledgment of his Deity, we teſtifie that we eſteem him the only true God upon whom we depend, and to whom we give our ſelves as ſervants.

Secondly, This true God muſt be the object of our worſhip, purely, and by a clear work of the underſtanding conceived of in his Attributes and Properties, not repreſented to the eye, or any way pictured forth or imagined under any viſible or ſenſible form or repreſentation, becauſe there is no poſſibility of reſembling him to the life by any ſimilitude that any man or creature can invent or frame, yea all reſemblances fall ſo farre ſhort of his perfection, that it will prove an imbaſing of our conceits concerning him, to attempt any ſuch reſemblance, and therefore Deut. 4.2. is expreſſe, telling Iſrael, that they heard a voice alone in the time that God came amongſt them to deliver the Law, and ſaw no manner of Image or likeneſſe, and therefore they ought not to corrupt themſelves by making any Image or Repreſentation. God is not a body but a Spirit and Eſſence, a Spirit whoſe being is every way above all that all creatures can attain and reach to proportionable to the excellency thereof by the moſt deep contemplation of their mind. And therefore alſo the Prophets do cry out againſt the picturing of God or worſhipping him under any ſuch form or picture, ſaying, Whereunto will ye liken me? What ſimilitude will ye make of me? Iſa.48.18.

It is one of the hardeſt things in religion to conceive aright of God. Every Nation ſuited the picture of their gods according to their own genius. The Spartans being a warlike people, painted god in armour. The Ethiopians painted him black. The Heathens miſrepreſented God, Rom. 1. 23. The Jews likewiſe miſfigure the Divine Eſſence. Idolatry is not onely in Images, but in falſe imaginations of God, mental Idolatry, unſeemly conceits of God are as bad as Atheiſm, *Rom.*1.25.

The way to cure this evil:

1. Purge your hearts more and more from carnal affections, Pſalm 17. 15. *Matth.*5.8.

2. Beg the aſſiſtance of the holy Ghoſt to raiſe your apprehenſions of the Divine Eſſence, 2 *Cor.*3.14,15,16. The Spirit gives us light, and makes it powerful to change the heart.

3. Be much in the ſtudy of the Scriptures, they are the Image of Chriſt, and he is the image of God, 2 *Cor.*3.18.& 4.4.

4. Be obedient to divine inſtitutions; God knows what worſhip is beſt for himſelf, Col. 2. 23. Obedience to Gods will keeps up the repute of his Eſſence. See 2 Sam. 6. 6. Nihil adeo offendit hominum mentes ac ſimplicitas Divinorum operum. Tertul.

5. Conſider your experiences of grace, *Exod.*15.11. *Mic.*7.17. *Luk.*1.46.

6. Often

6. Often view God in his ſtupendious works, Pſal. 104. obſerve the bounding of the Sea, the hanging of the earth upon nothing, Job 26. 7. the beauty and motion of the heavens, the order of all the creatures, Hoſea 2. latter end. See *Pſal.*40.18.

7. When you make uſe of ſenſitive things to increaſe your knowledg of God, you muſt proceed by way of negation and argument, and not by repreſentation. See *Iſa.*45.15.

8. Labour to get a more perfect and clear notion of God, follow on to know the Lord, *Hoſ.*6.3. Heaven conſiſts much in the viſion of God.

For the parts of worſhip, it is required that they be all preſcribed unto us by the written Word of God, that he may not have cauſe to except againſt us, ſaying, Who required theſe things at your hands? For ſeeing we do them to him, we muſt from him know whether they will be acceptable unto him, yea or no. His own will is the right rule of his own worſhip, what is not conformable to the rule cannot be true worſhip. Wherefore the Lord chargeth Iſrael that they ſhould not adde any thing to the thing by him preſcribed, but keep themſelves ſtrictly to his appointment, doing alone that very thing which he required, without ſwerving to the right hand or to the left, *Deut.*4.2. *Joſh.*1.7. *Prov.*30.2.

Rom. 6. 17. Dum obtemperant non obſequuntur: Deo ſerviendum eſt non ex arbitrio ſed ex imperio. Tertul. Id eſt, non determinabis tu pro tuo arbitrio quomodo ſim colendus, ſed quo modo ego determino vero, eo modo coles.

If God had left us without a patern in the wayes of his worſhip, we ſhould have wandered in incertainties, the Heathens by the light of nature knew that there was a God, and that he was to be worſhipped, yet they did but grope after him, becauſe they wanted a rule of worſhip.

Altare Damaſcenum c. 9, de rebus Adiaphoris & Ceremoniis. The ſecond Commandement forbiddeth to make unto our ſelves the likeneſſe of any thing whatſoever for religious uſe: as Bucer, Juel, Fulke, Andrews and Bilſon do interpret it. Therefore to make, appoint, or uſe ſignificant Ceremonies, of mans deviſing, is unlawfull. Saith Dr Ames in his freſh ſuite againſt Ceremonies, Sect. 7. See more there.

Humane inventions in matters of worſhip have been brought in.

Firſt, By Satan, he knows

1. That they take away the glory of worſhip, that onely is excellent which is plenum ſui.

2. That they take away the Majeſty and Authority of it; God ſhews no ſuch Majeſty any where as in his Ordinances but in heaven, *Rev.*4.2.

3. That they take away the power of Ordinances, Matth. 15. 6. all the power of Ordinances conſiſts in Gods preſence in them.

4. That it hinders their acceptation, *Rev.*9.20.

See Dr Sanderſons 6. Lecture de obligatione Conſcientiæ, Sect.26,27,28 of Eccleſiaſtical Laws, and *Sect.*29. of the nature of worſhip.

Secondly, By the Miniſter.

1. A ſpirit of uncleanneſſe works in the Prophets, *Zech.*13.2.

2. A great deal of pride, *Col.*2.18.

3. A vehement deſire of drawing proſelytes after them, *Gal.*6.13.

4. Horrible hypocriſie, *Matth.*23.13,14.

5. Worldly wiſdom and fleſhly ends, 2 *King.*16.11.

6. A conſtant ignorance and idleneſſe in them, While they ſlept, the envious man ſowed tares.

7. Cowardiſe, *Gal.*6.12.

Thirdly, By the people, 2 *Theſſ.*2.10,11. *Hoſ.*5.11. Amos 4.5.

Three things about the worſhip of God are to be conſidered:

1. The kinds of it, that is (as was before ſaid) certain orders of actions to be performed.

2 The parts of it, that is, each action of each kind, ſo receiving the Lords Supper is a kind of worſhip, the action of giving, taking, eating, drinking, with the things hereby repreſented, are parts.

3. There are certain * circumſtances and ſolemnities for the manner of celebrating

* Helps and ſurtherances in Gods worſhip are, 1. Neceſſary and in nature and uſe the ſame with the true worſhip of God inſtituted by himſelf particularly, theſe are unlawful if deviſed by men, becauſe deviſed, for the ſubſtantial things of Gods worſhip are to be determined and inſtituted by him. 2. Meer circumſtances and matters of order concerning the method, phraſe, externall celebration which are not determined by God, therefore no particular is unlawful which is according to the general rules in Scripture. Bulls Trial of grounds of Separat. *chap.*3.

thoſe

those parts and kinds. Now the two former must be expressly commanded. The latter must not be forbidden nor condemned, onely a thing of solemnity is changed into a part when a religious necessity is imposed upon it, and a spiritual efficacy conceived to be annexed unto it, as appears in the Priests garments in the Law. Thus for example: Prayer is a kind of Gods worship, the confession of sins, Petition and Thanksgiving for benefits be parts of this kind of worship, and so are the person to whom, and the person in whose name necessary things for the matter of the worship. But now, whether I pray in such or such a place, whether with eyes lift up or cast down, whether kneeling or standing, whether with mine head covered or uncovered, these are certain points of solemnity, as it were adjuncts of the exercise. And here it is sufficient, that I use no such circumstance as is condemned, nor neglect any that is commanded, but if I do esteem it a matter of religious necessity to God-ward, to pray in such a place rather than such, and conceive that my prayers shall be more effectual for my good there rather than elsewhere, not having any such warrant from God, I do now turn the circumstance into a part of worship, and seeing it is not from God, of false worship.

We should be

1. Frequent in the acts of worship, Gen. 12.8. & 13.4, 18.
2. We should desire to make the worship of God as solemn and publick as may be, Gen. 12.7.
3. We should be carefull to attain the great end of worship, that God may be glorified thereby, Judg. 5.12.
4. We should performe all religious duties diligently, Jer. 48.10. Mal. 1.14. The heart should be drawn out in them, Rom. 1.7. the understanding. We should labour to have high thoughts of God, we should attend, Psal. 57.7. the will and affections; we should will the things we pray for.
5. We should perform acts of worship as acts of worship, that is, when we directly intend the honour of God in those acts. We may come to the Ordinances to meet with comfort and quickening. But the proper nature of worship lies, 1. In acknowledgment of what is in God, and what we have received from him. 2. In retribution, in giving to the Lord, the glory due to his name.

The several kindes and parts of Gods worship, are either Ordinary or Extraordinary.

I. Ordinary.

1. Publick. 2. Private. 3. Indifferent.

First, Publick, such as ought to be usually and only performed in publick assemblies of whole Congregations in one known appointed place, as being open and publick professions of our allegiance to God. Such are two alone,

1. Preaching of the Word, which hath two main parts:
   1. The Explication and Declaration of any part of holy Writ, or any point of Doctrine contained in holy Writ.
   2. The Application of that part of holy Writ or point of Doctrine so contained in Scripture, to teach, admonish, exhort, correct, comfort, for which things it is most fit and convenient.

The second publick worship is administration of the Sacraments, that is, of the seals of the new Covenant of Grace, which are two alone,

1. The seal of ingrafting into Christs body, called Baptism, where the parts are outward, washing with water, inward, bestowing the bloud of Christ to wash and purge the soul.
2. The seal of our nourishment in Christ, whereof the parts are; outward, on the Ministers part, taking, blessing, breaking, distributing Bread and Wine: on the receivers, taking, eating the Bread, taking and drinking the Wine: inward, certain works of God in giving his Sonne, and of the receiver in receiving him. This is publick worship.

Some distinguish worship into,

1. Natural, that worship which ariseth from the consideration of the Nature of God, and which a reasonable creature indued with knowledge, holds fit to give unto unto him. Adam in the ſtate of innoceney by the light of nature, might ſee that worſhip was due to Chriſt.

2. Inſtituted worſhip, which depends on the will of God.

1. This is appointed for exerciſe of natural worſhip.

2. It depends on the will of God, he might (if he had pleaſed) have appointed other Ordinances.

3. Whatever one doth in inſtituted worſhip, he muſt do it with an eye to the Will of God.

Or into,

1. Internal, which is ſeated in the heart, Cultus internus eſt anima cultus exterioris, Iſai. 29. 13. John 4. 23, 24. God principally looks after the heart.

This conſiſts,

1. In high thoughts of God.

2. In abaſement of our ſelves, Dan. 9. 7. there are both, Matth. 15. 25, 27. ſhe cals Chriſt Lord, and her ſelf a Dog.

2. Extarnal, when one teſtifies his inward reſpect by a ſuitable deportment in the outward man.

Secondly, Private, two;

1. Meditation by ones ſelf alone of the Word of God, or the parts of it in any particular matter; the parts of which are conſideration of the truth thereof, and application of the ſame to ones ſelf. Iſaac went out into the field to meditate. Theſe things meditate and be in them, ſaid Paul to Timothy.

2. Conference with a few others, which is a mutual propounding of mens judgments of any part of Scripture or point of Religion for their mutual edifying, as Paul went up to conferre with Peter and with the chief Apoſtles.

Thirdly, Indifferent, which may be done both publickly and privately, yea which muſt be done both in private by each perſon and family, and alſo may be done, and moſt of them muſt be done by the whole Aſſemblies of men profeſſing true Religion.

The ordinary ſervices which muſt be of conſtant and continual practice day by day as occaſion ſerveth; are four,

1. Reading the Scriptures and good Books, or hearing them read, which is an intentive obſerving of the things contained in the Word, or ſuch godly Books as tend to make the points of doctrine in the Scripture contained, more plain and uſefull unto us.

2. Catechizing, which is a particular teaching the principles of Religion by Queſtion and Anſwer, neceſſarily required of all Houſholders and Miniſters to the young or ignorant people of the Pariſh. For the Houſholders it is apparent in that Commandment, that they ſhould whet theſe things upon their children; for Miniſters, Let him that is catechized in the Word, make him that catechizeth him partaker of all good things: Where catechizing is made a part of the miniſterial function of a Paſtor, in regard of which maintenance is due unto him.

Deut. 6. 7.
Gal. 6. 6.
1 Theſſ. 5. 17.

3. Prayer, Pray continually, ſaith the Apoſtle; for private prayer, Enter into thy cloſet and pray, ſaith our Saviour Chriſt; and Mine houſe ſhall be called a houſe of prayer, ſaith the Lord himſelf for publick worſhip.

Matth. 6.

4. Singing of Pſalms, whether Scriptures, or other conformable unto Scripture made by godly men, ones ſelf or others, it is not material, as ſome think, for ſo ſaith David, Sing unto the Lord a new ſong; and ſo ſaith the Apoſtle, Edifie your ſelves with Pſalms and Hymns and ſpiritual Songs; the word tranſlated Hymns ſignifieth ſuch a Song as is uttered with voice alone, but ſpiritual Songs and Pſalms are ſuch as are ſung to the tune of any well tuned Inſtrument of muſick, but muſt be ſo perſormed as may be for edification.

Col. 3. 16.

The extraordinary ſervices are ſuch as are to be performed upon particular and ſpecial occaſions, either publick or private; ſuch are

1. Faſting, which is the ſetting of an artificial day at leaſt apart to the work of humiliation and reconciliation.

2. Feaſting

2. Feasting, which is the setting of so much time apart to the work of rejoycing.

3. Vowing, which is a tying of ones soul by Gods name unto Gods self to do, or not to do a thing lawful for his furtherance in godlinesse.

These be all the kinds of worship which God in his Word requireth, and the performance of them each in their place and order is required at the hands of all Gods people by virtue of this Commandment, so that each man and woman stands bound in conscience constantly to perform the publick and private, as God gives ability, and the extraordinary upon such extraordinary occasions as fall out to require the performance of them.

And so much for the Matter of true Worship. The Manner followeth.

The Manner of true and divine Worwip, is when the true God is so worshipt, as he hath commanded to be worshipt in his Word.

And he is worshipt in this manner:

1. When the worship is immediately directed to God, not to any bare creature.

2. When the true means of divine worship prescribed by God himself are duely used. See Mr Poolts Sermon on John 4. 23, 24. Evangelical Worship is spiritual Worship.

The Manner was carefully to be looked unto as the Matter; neither shall any service we perform be acceptable unto God, further than the manner of performing the same is agreeable to his will. Know, four things are required to the right performing of Gods Services in this kind: 1. Sincerity. 2. Diligence. 3. Faith. 4. Reverence. And when we do worship truely, diligently, faithfully, reverently, then we also worship him acceptably and fruitfully.

For sincere worshipping of God we may learn it by the Apostles denying it of some that preached Christ of contention: what we do for a right end, attaining of grace, and for the right motives, Gods Commandment and Honour, that is done truly; for truth in this case is the agreement betwixt the shews we make and meaning we have.

In moralibus plus valet circumstantia quam substantia modus cadit sub præcepto, say the Schoole-men. 1. Not only the matter but manner of obedience, falls under Gods command, 1 Cor. 9. 24 Rom. 12. 11 Luke 8. 18. Acts 26. 7. James 5. 16. So run that you may obtain. 2. The manner is the great thing which God requires, Prov. 16. 2. God is a jealous God, Josh. 24. 19. We owe our best to God, Deut. 6. 5. 3. We have no other plea to evidence our sincerity, than when we aim at the highest exactnesse. True grace aims at the highest manner of serving God, Prov. 16. 2. Take heed how you hear. The more one fetcheth duties from God immediately, and the more he draws the motives from God immediately, and the more he placeth his comforts in God immediately, the more spiritual and happy he is.

To the sincere performing of the acts of Worship, three things are requisite:

1. That we do it upon a right motive, which must be Gods Commandment, because he requireth us so to serve him, not pray to be seen of men.

2. For a right end, which must be the shewing of our obedience to God, and winning of grace from him acording to his promise.

3. With the joyning together of the inward and outward man, the Soul and Body.

The Scripture requireth this in prayer by special name, saying, that God is near to all those that call upon him in truth; that is, with a true intention to please him, and a true desire to get grace from him. The thing which ought to make a Preacher preach, is, that he may be Gods instrument in converting and edifying souls, seeing God hath appointed to do this work by the Ministry of men. The thing which should make the people come to Church, is, that by hearing their souls may live, seeing God hath appointed preaching to save men.

When we do in our soulsaim at the right end of the several kinds of Worship we perform, seeking to approve our selves to God so in them, that by them we may profit according to his institution, this is Truth.

I must not only perform service to God, but for God, Hosea 7. 14. 1. That which sets you a-work is your end, Finis movet efficientem ad agendum. 2. The end sweetens the service, finis dat amabilitatem mediis. 3. One rests satisfied when he hath attained his end, in fine terminatur appetitus efficientis, do you perform duties that you may honour God, John 17. 4. please him, Col. 1. 5. injoy him, Heb. 10. 22. and adde to your own everlasting account. If God be not your utmost end, he will not be your chiefest good. Hoc desiderio colendus est Deus ut sui cultus ipsi sit meuses. Augustine.

The ſecond thing is Diligence, which will follow upon Truth, and is joyned with it, for alwayes they go together as the contrary vices, and therefore in the Hebrew one word ſignifies both negligently and guilefully, in that ſpeech, Curſed be he that doth Gods work negligently, Jer. 48.10.

See 2 Kings 10.31. A conſtant heedleſneſſe in duties is a great ſigne of an hypocrite, Deut. 33. 2. Ezek. 10.1, 2. Rev. 4. 5.

He that would ſerve God acceptably, muſt ſerve him heedfully, Eccleſ. 5. 1, 2. Mark 4.23,24. Heb. 2,1,2.

Reaſons.

1. Becauſe of Gods peculiar preſence in his Ordinances, Ezek. ult. ult. Rev. 21.3. he is there preſent, 1. In Majeſty, Exod. 40.34. Lev. 10.3. 2 Chron. 5.14. Iſa. 6.7. the Ordinances of the Goſpel are compared to a wedding Feaſt, Matth. 22. where the King comes in, therefore we are ſaid to come to a throne of grace. 2. In holineſs, Iſa. 6.3. Pſal. 48.1. Ezek. 45. latter end, Rev. 4 8. 3. As a Judg, Ezek. 22.2. Rom. 2.14. Job 9. 15, 4. In jealouſie, as in the ſecond Commandment, which is quickſighted, Joſh. 24.19.

It is not enough to worſhip God, but we muſt ſeek him in worſhip, Pſalm 22. 26. which notes an exact care in ſerving

2. Look to the rule of all your converſes with God, Rom. 12.1. word-ſervice it may be rendred, as 1 Pet. 2.2. It is 1. A ſtraight rule, Pſal. 19.7. one may quickly go awry. 2. A ſpiritual rule, Rom. 7.12. 3. An harmonious rule, Jam. 2.10.

3. Conſider the evil frame of your ſpirits that are to walk with God in this rule, 1. There is much enmity in them to every duty. 2. Much inadvertency in the things of God. 3. Looſeneſs and vanity in the thoughts, Jer. 4.14.

him. Accedebant ad aras ſacra facturi, aqua viva purificati, qui venere abſtinuiſſe debebant, qua polluti ſacris arcebantur, illos ſequebatur ſacris veſtibus amictus Pontifex, qui ad aras Sacrificij, littore praeunte ducebatur, qui virga turbam ſubmovebat. Tum Solennia Sacrificij aggreſſuro Pontifici, exclamabat Praeo Hoc Age. Pontificem magiſtratumque ſimul admonens, ut ſedulo rei divinae vacarent, neve illorum animus cogitationibus aliis diſtraheretur. Gutherius de Vet. Jure Pontificio l. 4. c. 2.

4. God is more honoured or diſhonoured in your religious duties, than in all the actions of your lives, there you ſhould actively, intentionally, and ſolely intend his glory, therefore more of your ſpirits ſhould be laid out in theſe duties than in all your other actions, Pſal. 103.5.

5. The Devil is there preſent, Matth. 13.19. 1. As an accuſer, as of Job. 2. As an Oppoſer, Zach. 3.1. 3. As an Executioner, Iſa. 29.13,14.

This diligence is a ſetting ones ſelf to procure to ones ſelf the benefit of the exerciſe, an indeavour and ſtriving in good earneſt to have the graces wrought in us which theſe exerciſes are to work.

This diligence conſiſts in three things:

1. A taking pains to fit and prepare our ſelves for theſe Exerciſes before hand.
2. A due carriage of our ſelves in them.
3. A due uſe-making afterwards.

See Dr Manton on Jam. 1. 21. Doct. 1, & 2.

For the firſt, we muſt all know that there is a very great natural unfitneſs in our hearts to perform any religious work, any good work at all; that which is of it ſelf unfit to effect any thing, muſt be fitted for the work before it be imployed in the ſame. The heart of the beſt man is very apt to be out of tune, as it were, for Prayer, Meditation, hearing; when it is exerciſed about worldly matters, it is made very unapt to matters of godlineſs, becauſe it cannot converſe in the world in that holy and diſcreet manner it ought, wherefore it muſt be new tuned, and that is to be the firſt pains of a good man, without which his following labour is loſt.

This preparation is double:

1. Common to all exerciſes of Religion.
2. Proper to ſome ſpecial Exerciſes.

The common Preparation ſtands in four things:

Examination of our eſtate is as neceſſary as our purging from ſin, and the excitation

1. In knowledg of the Exerciſe to be performed, both that it is by God required, and what good he intends by, and how he would have us perform it. For it is impoſſible that any man ſhould well worſhip God in any thing, who hath not received convenient information of the nature and uſe of that thing. No man can pray except he know what it is, to whom to be made, in whoſe Name, and what good he ſhall shall attain by it: Nor read, nor hear, unless he know the needfulness and nature of these Ordinances. For it is the Word of God by which all things are sanctified, in that our minds are thence instructed of the lawfulness and manner of performing them. This is the foundation which must be first laid to all that follows, to be made acquainted what the exercise is, what good it will bring, how necessarily required, that so a man may do what he does out of this knowledg, and not serve God he knows not with what.

of our affections, 2 Corinth. 13. 5. In the Priesthood under the Law there was to be a consecration as well as an offering,

Mal. 3. 3, 4. Heb. 9. 14. The main care must be to get the person reconciled to God. Those that discern not their interest in Christ if they had it, and have lost it by returning to folly, 1 Pet. 3. 7. are not to come reeking from their sinnes, and so rush into Gods presence, Isa. 1. 15. Neither are they wholly to decline Worship, and restrain Prayer. 1. There must be a serious acknowledgement of their sinnes with shame and sorrow, Psal. 51. 3. Numb. 12. 14 John 1. 2. 2. They must earnestly sue out the former grace and pardon, Psal. 25. 6. & 51. 12. Those who never had assurance must know, 1. That it is comfortable in our approaches to God, the Apostle hath taught us to begin our supplications with Our Father, Heb. 10. 21, 22. 1 Tim. 2. 10. 2. Some believers have less peace, that they may have more grace. 3. When we cannot reflect upon our actual interest, the direct and dutifull acts of Faith must be more solemnly put forth. 1. Disclaim more earnestly your own personal righteousnesse, Dan. 9. 18. 2. You must adhere to God in Christ, more closely cast your selves upon God with hope, Psalm 22. 18. 3. It is safe to say, I am my beloveds, though we cannot apply Christ to our selves, Psalm 119. 94.

Some say we must come to all the Ordinances with hunger, with an afflicting sense of our want, exciting up in us earnest desires, and using constant indeavours to be satisfied with the graces and comforts of the Spirit, Luk. 1. 53. See the promises made to such a frame of heart, Psal. 107. 5, 6, 7, 9, 36.

2. A man before he comes into Gods presence about such works must repent of his sins, yea renew his repentance, bethinking himself of the several things which he last committed, to work a fresh measure of grief in his soul, with a full determination of heart to strive more against them; for God cannot endure to be served with a foul hand. The sprinkling water must be sprinkled upon us, and we must purge our selves from all uncleanness if we draw near to him. So in the old Law they were to wash their cloathes after some pollution, and when God came to them to put off their shooes. And that is it which David saith, I will wash mine hands in innocency and compass thine Altar. A man must bring an undefiled spirit; if he will pray, he must work his heart to sorrow, and resolution to amend his late sins, for he cannot be welcome into Gods presence, that is not cleansed from his wickedness, or hateth to be reformed; we must be pure if we will come into Gods presence.

3. Prayer to God for his blessing must be prefixed to all religious services, for our better inabling thereto, for of our selves we can do nothing, all our sufficiency comes from him who hath promised to hear us when we pray, and to grant our petitions, so that without seeking a blessing we cannot expect to find it; and therefore the Apostle saith, that all things are sanctified unto us by prayer, even exercises of Religion, the Word, the Sacraments and the like, yea and Prayer too, by praying God first for his Spirit of prayer. Therefore he that will serve God aright, must first crave his help and grace to serve him.

The fourth and last part of common preparation is by a preconsideration of the exceeding greatnesse of the Lord before whom we come, and of our vilenesse, baseness, unworthinesse to come before him, that so we may be rightly affected with the regard of him, Lev. 26. 2. So Cornelius saith, that he and the rest were all there before God to hear what Peter should say unto them, they had considered with themselves that God came to speak unto them, and that they came to hear

Have high thoughts of the work 2. forehand, 1 Chron. 29. 2. take the fittest opportunity of doing duties, Christ is present in the Ordinances, Rev. 1. 18. 1. As a Speaker, Heb. 12. 25. 2. That he may delight himself in the graces of his people, Cant. 8. 1. 3. To execute judgment as well as shew mercy. 2. The Angels are there present, 1 Cor. 11. 10. as your Guardians, Dan 4. 13. and to delight in your graces, Cant. 5. 2. 3. The Devil is present, Matth. 13. 1. To draw you to evil, 1 Sam. 2. 22. 2. To hinder you in whatever is good, Zach. 3. 1. 3. Comes to steal away the Word out of your hearts, Matth. 13. 19. 4. To accuse you, Rev. 12. 12. Zach. 3. 1, 2. 5. As an Executioner, expecting a commission from Christ to lay hold on thee, John 13. 27.

him; for in what ſervice we do not make account that we have to deal with the Lord our God and Maker, and do not put our ſelves in mind what a one he is, we ſhall not carry our ſelves aright towards him. Abraham ſaid he was duſt and aſhes when he prayed to God, therefore the Lord hath ſet down a Preface before the Lords Prayer, acquainting us what a one God is, becauſe by the thinking of him, and ſtriving to bring our hearts to conceive of him as ſuch a one, we ſhould be better fitted to make the requeſts and ſupplications following; the heart then muſt put it ſelf in mind what it goes about, and to whom it tenders a ſervice. I come before the Lord Almighty that hath my ſoul in his hand, to hear him ſpeak to me, or to ſpeak to him. I draw near to the King of Heaven and earth, I preſent my ſelf before his face, let me frame my ſelf ſo as befits his holy and all-ſearching eyes. And this is the common preparation for our religious duties. Now ſpecial preparation for ſpecial ſervices follows to be ſpoken of; that is, to the Word, to Prayer, to the Sacraments, and to a Vow.

For the Word. The heart is to be framed to a reſolution of obeying it in all things, this is the honeſt and good heart whereof our Saviour makes mention in deſcribing the good ground, concerning this it is that our Lord ſaith again, If you will do my will, you ſhall know it. This will give a man a good memory and a good judgement, and the Lord to recompence this obedient reſolution will become as he hath promiſed, a Teacher to the humble; ſo ſhall he be taught of God that comes with a firm purpoſe to be guided by God, and that in all things. Before you come to Church you ſhould ſpend ſome time with your hearts, to encline them and bow them to the teſtimonies of God, and to ſay unto your ſelves, I am going to hear what the Lord will ſay unto me, ſeeing he is my Maker I will not harden my heart againſt him, but I will be ready to know what he teacheth, and not gainſay any thing that ſhall to my conſcience appear truth, and I will undoubtedly yield to that I know in practice, for it is the word of him that is Lord of the ſpirits of all fleſh; then will the Word be powerful to make us able, when we reſolve before whatever it be, to be willing.

2. Before Prayer a threefold conſideration is neceſſary, of our ſpecial wants, and ſins, and benefits, that we may accordingly mention them in our prayers, The Lord hath promiſed he will grant us whatſoever we ſhall ask, we muſt bethink our ſelves therefore what be thoſe things that for our preſent eſtate we do ſtand in need of. What ſins had need to be pardoned and healed, what benefits continued, or new given, and what we have already to give thanks for, that we may with more earneſtneſſe pray when we know for what we will pray. In the next place we muſt conſider of Gods gracious promiſes that he hath made unto us to help, and of his exceeding mercy, goodneſſe, and power, by which we are ſure he is able and willing to help, even of thoſe Excellencies of God which the title, Our Father which art in Heaven doth offer unto our conſideration, but principally Gods promiſe to hear and accept, is to fill our minds when we come before him as ſuppliants.

Thirdly, For the Sacraments: the ſpecial preparation is, 1. By examining and judging our ſelves, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, that is, a more narrow and diligent ſearch for our eſtate, and for our particular offences if we have forgotten any, if through careleſneſſe or guile we have let paſſe the ſight and acknowledgement of any, that now the old leaven may be caſt out. So ſaith the Apoſtle, Examine your ſelves, and again, If we would judge our ſelves, God would not judge us.

2. We muſt labour to get a good appetite to this ſpiritual food, to ſtir up in our ſelves an earneſt hungring and thirſting after Chriſt and his benefits there. God cals all that thirſt to come and eat. As a good ſtomack is a neceſſary preparation to our natural meals, ſo to theſe ſpiritual meals is a good deſire and longing for the grace there offered, remiſſion of ſins paſt, and power to live more blameleſly and holily hereafter. Then when a man hath by ſpecial examination and judging himſelf found out his faults, and humbled himſelf for them, and alſo hath brought his heart to long for Chriſt Jeſus to be his Saviour, and to ſave him from the puniſhment and power of them by his body and bloud, he is now fit to come to the Lords Table.

3. He

3. He muſt meditate on Chriſts ſufferings.

Laſtly, For a vow, becauſe this is a very ſolemn bond betwixt God and us (I ſpeak it not of impoſed vows, but aſſumed) wherein we enter, it behoves us very carefully to weigh the nature of the thing, and our ſufficiency for the ſame, that we may not be raſh with our lips to ſpeak before our Maker, which is principally ſpoken of vowing by Salomon; for better not vow than not perform, for want of which care many men have ſo entangled themſelves, as their vows have been occaſion of exceeding much miſery unto them; as we have one fearfull example for all in Jephta, who though he did not ſo bad as is vulgarly thought (for can any man imagine that the newly reformed Church of Iſrael at that time after ſo ſpecial a bleſſing could have endured to ſee Gods holy Altar by any of his Prieſts polluted with ſo fearfull an abomination, and ſo expreſly forbidden) yet he procured himſelf and his daughter great reproach, in that he was fain to conſecrate his onely daughter to God as a perpetual Nazariteſſe. Whence followed at leaſt in the opinion of thoſe times a neceſſity of remaining a Virgin and childleſſe; ſo that his example muſt warne us before vowing to conſider diſtinctly and ſeriouſly what we vow.

Jephta muſt not offer her himſelf, but ſome Prieſt to whom he muſt bring her, and he not in any place, but upon the Altar of God. In vovendo fuit ſtultus, in reddendo impius. Hieron.

Thus we have ſhewed you what diligence is required before the worſhip. In the worſhip is* required as great diligence, Rom. 12.11.

* Take a great deal of heed to your own hearts in the duty, leſt your thoughts vaniſh, Eccleſ. 5.3. Salomon compares the vanity of mens thoughts in ſervices to dreams, where the thoughts are incoherent. 2. Obſerve in duties the approaches or withdrawings of God from your ſouls.

First, With our underſtanding and thoughts to make them attentive, that we may heed what we do, and apply our thoughts and conceits alone that way, that ſo there may be an agreement betwixt body and minde. Thus in praying we muſt mark what it is that we ask, confeſſe or give thanks for, ſo that we underſtand our ſelves, and be able to approve that we have asked nothing but what we might. In hearing we muſt liſten and attend that we may carry away the Word, and let it not leak; we muſt binde our mindes to give heedfull attention, according to that, Let him that hath an ear hear what the Spirit ſaith. Hear, O Iſrael, ſaith Moſes often. Hear, O children, ſaith David. So in the Sacraments we muſt mark each action, and buſie our minds in obſerving the thing ſignified as well as our eyes in the thing that is outward. When we ſee the Bread, conſider of Chriſts preſence and power to nouriſh; when we ſee the Wine, of his preſence and power to comfort; ſo in the other actions; when we ſee the breaking of the Bread, think of his death; when we ſee the giving, conſider of Gods offering him, and ſo in every action we muſt ſerve the Lord with our whole heart, whereof one part is this, obſerving, attending, marking the action.

See Matth. 15. 10. & 24.15. 2, & 3. chap. of Revel.

Secondly, We muſt bring our affections to be ſo moved as the nature of the exerciſes requireth, which is that which is commended in the good Joſiah, his heart melted in hearing threatnings; and the Theſſalonians received the Goſpel with joy; in prayer we muſt be fervent, and in the Sacrament we muſt bring our hearts to a feeling ſorrow for Chriſts death and our ſins, and to a joyfull remembrance of the great work of our Redemption; ſo it muſt be a ſweet mixture of joy and ſorrow, ſo muſt we worſhip God with our whole heart; for then we worſhip him with our whole heart, when our mind and affections are taken up with the matter of his worſhip, as hath been ſaid; ſo in prayer, David cried unto God, was earneſt about his requeſts. This earneſtneſſe of affection is a very neceſſary thing to make the worſhip of God we perform acceptable, and this is diligence in the worſhip. There muſt alſo be diligence after the worſhip in a care to make good uſe of it, and to obſerve

We muſt, 1. Practice the good reſolutions taken up in the ſervice, keep it evermore in the hearts of thy ſervants. 2. After every duty we muſt be humbled for our raſhneſſe before God, as Jacob, Gen. 28.16.

our

our growth by it, and to perceive what proceedings we make in godlineſſe by all the ſervices we perform, ſeeing all that we do tends to this end, the Sacrament, Word, Prayer ſhould nouriſh grace, all to confirm and ſtrengthen the grace of the inward man.

1. All duties to God muſt be done with all the faculties of the inward man.

2. With the intention of all the faculties.

The demeanour of the body lies in this, that it is a fit inſtrument to ſerve the ſoul. The Turkes worſhip Mahomet more reverently than Chriſtians the true God, a vain carriage of the body is an evident argument of a vaine minde.

2. The ſoul ſhould be active, the whole inward man, the underſtanding ſhould be ready to apprehend truth, the will to chooſe it, the memory to retain it, the conſcience to ſubmit unto it, Eſay 58.5. 1 Cor. 14.15.

Reaſons why the inward man muſt be active in worſhip:

1. God will be worſhipt according to his nature, John 4. 24.

2. The ſoul is the man; the main of ſin lies in the ſoul, Mic. 6.7.

3. The ſoul only is the ſeat of grace, Epheſ. 3. 17.

4. The end of all Chriſtian duty is communion with God; he can have no communion with the body.

5. In this doth the glory of all a Chriſtians duties conſiſt, Mark 13. 33. Revel. 5. 8.

6. This onely makes the duty fruitfull, the fruit of the duty lies in the activity of it.

After the duties done there ſhould be,

1. An impreſſion of Gods holineſſe upon us, Exod. 34. 29. Acts 4. 13. a ſavour of the duties we have done.

2. When we have found out God in a duty, we ſhould ingage our hearts to that duty ever after, Pſalm 116.2. and it ſhould encourage us in all the ſervices God requires, Gen. 29. 1.

3. We ſhould be very thankfull to God for every good motion, thought, new diſcovery, 1 Chron. 29.13.

The ſpecial duties after the Word, Prayer, and a Vow, are theſe.

After the Word to call our ſelves to account what we remember, and ſo to ſearch if it be true, and ponder upon it our ſelves, chewing of the cud, the life of hearing depends on it. This is digeſting the Word; this is cauſing it to take root; this is ingraffing it in the heart; and if we have convenient means of company we ought to confer of it, and adviſe together about it, that one may help another, ſo did the Bereans ſearching the Scriptures after Pauls ſpeaking the Goſpel to them. The next for prayer is as David ſaith, to wait on God, to look for and continue, though we be defer'd, to look for what we have begged, and to obſerve how it is granted, that accordingly we may be thankfull or humbled, and increaſe our earneſtneſſe. When a man prefers a Petition to the King, he gives his attendance to ſee what ſucceſſe, ſo muſt we to God. Our eyes muſt behold him as the eyes of the hand-maids the Miſtreſſe, ſo that we may be able to ſee, whether he be angry againſt our prayers, or condeſcend to them; and if he do ſeem angry, yet we may not faint but follow him ſtill: if we have praid againſt a temptation, we muſt look for power againſt it; and if we feel power, rejoyce in God that gave it, if not, pray again, and ſtill wait, renewing our ſupplication: ſo if we have deſired any grace or benefit either temporal or ſpiritual according to Gods Word, we muſt not make haſte or be heedleſſe, but even wait and attend his leiſure, as one that is infinitely better and wiſer than our ſelves.

Next for Vows, the uſes muſt be a ſpecial care of our Vow to fullfill it; for the word is expreſſe, Thou ſhalt pay thy vows, and thou ſhalt not goe back if the Vow be of things lawfull, elſe we muſt not ſtand to it; but with great repentance for the Vow, performe Gods Commandment rather than our Vow.

Thus you have heard of truth and diligence: there are required two things more, more, Faith, * which is a believing of Gods truth shew'd in the exercise we performe according to the nature of it, Heb. 11. 4. In praying we must believe, that God can and will grant our requests, asking with boldnesse and assurance; When you pray, believe, saith our Saviour. When we read the Word and hear it, we must believe that each thing is true, and shall accordingly be performed, both predictions, promises, threats; in the like manner we must believe that God will blesse those his Ordinances to our spiritual good; and in general we must assure our selves, that God will accept us in his Ordinances, and blesse them to us for our good. Truth aims at the right end; diligence labours so to do them that we may not misse that end; Faith assures us that our diligence shall be prosperous, and so these three things hang together, and fitly, one for the help of another. If the Word be not mixed with Faith; if Prayer, Sacraments, every worship be not so mixed, then it will not be profitable unto us, for the wavering minded shall receive no good.

* There must be a faith,
1. That his duties shall be accepted, Gen. 4. 7.
2. In the general rewards of religion, Gen. 4. 8.
3. In the Messiah to come.

Reasons.
1. Because faith discerns by a clear light and apprehension, keeps God in the eye. Faith is conversant about God the object of worship, Heb. 11. 6, 27. and discernes the worth of his service, and represents more of priviledge than burden, Psal. 19. 10. & 73. 28. 2. It receives a mighty aid and supply from the Spirit of God, Rom. 8. 26. 3. It works by a mighty principle, love, Gal. 5. 4. It fils the soul with a sweet apprehension of Gods love; love will carry one to a duty that is against the bent of Nature, Genesis 34. 19. 2 Corin. 5. 14. 5. Faith discourseth and pleads in the soul with strong reasonings, First, From the mercies of God, 1. Special, Galat. 2. 20. 2. Common, 1 Timothy 1. 16, 17. Secondly, From the Promises, 1. Of assistance, 2 Cor. 12. 10. Philip. 4. 10. 2. Acceptance, 2 Cor. 8. 11. Faith shews the Mediatour, Ephes. 3. 1,2. Revel. 8. 3,4. 3. Of reward, 2 Cor. 7. 1. & 2 Cor. 1. 4. It sees assistance in the power of God, acceptance in the grace of God, reward in the bounty of God.

The last point is Reverence, Leviticus 26. 2. & 10. 3. which will follow doubtlesse upon the former; indeed this should have been named first. We must worship the Lord with reverence, saith David in Psalme 2. and he cals even upon Kings and Princes to have this affection, saying, Serve the Lord with fear. A true apprehension of Gods greatnesse and our own baseneſse will work fear.

Deut. 28. 58. Psal. 2. 11. Psal. 68. 35.

Malachy 1. 14. God urgeth there two arguments for reverence in his worship:

1. He is a great King; careless addresses to him are a dethroning of him.
2. My Name is terrible among the Heathen; the Heathens which know him only by common providence, yet know enough of him to fear him, See Dr Gouge on Heb. 12. 28. Sect. 135, 136.

This Reverence is double:

First, Inward of the heart, which is a framing our selves to a special apprehension of Gods goodnesse and greatnesse over us, Hoseah 3 5 Deut. 7. 21. Esay 40. 17. a mixt working of love and fear; love to God and desire to please him; fear lest we should displease. For so reverence seemes to be a compound affection of these three. We are still in Gods presence, and therefore should walk in fear of him continually, but we come near unto him, even before him; if we addresse our selves to religious services, Psalm 100. 2. wherefore there ought to be a fresh renewing and augmenting of our reverence in such cases.

Worship is therefore called fear, as we may see by comparing Deut. 6. 13. Isa. 29. 13. with Matth 4. 11. & 15 9. God hath his name in Greek Δέος from fear, and the same word εὐλάβεια signifies both fear and religion, Heb. 5. 7. See Chap. 12. 28,29. Abraham, Gen. 18. 27. Elijah, 1 King. 18. 42. the four and twenty Elders, Revel. 4. 16. Christ himself, Matth. 26. 33. were reverent in their acts of worship. For publick prayer, kneeling and standing are mentioned, 1 King. 8. 54. The Publican stood, Luke 18. 13. In preaching the eyes of the hearers should be fastened on the Preacher, Luke 4. 20. See Nehem. 8. 3. At the Sacrament our eyes should observe the Elements as visible Sermons, Exod. 23. 8. Christ read the Scripture standing, Luke 4. 16. by that he taught how he honoured the Word of God; the same thing is affirmed of the people, Nehem. 8. 5. For that cause that we may shew our respect to the Word of God, we are bare (saith Mr Cartwright in his Harmony) when the Scripture Text is read. Mr Hildersam hath the like on John 4. Constantine the Great used to shew much reverence and attention to the Word of God preached, so that many times he would stand up all the Sermon while; and when some of his Courtiers told him, that it would tend to his disparagement: he answered, That it was in the service of the great God, who is no respecter of persons. See Crakan. Epist. Dedicat. to his Defence of Constantine.

Secondly,

Secondly, The body must also be reverent before God, and therefore Psal. 95. 6,7. Come and worship before the Lord, and bow down and kneel; all worship is termed bowing. In all services the outward man must be composed in a more stayed, quiet and still manner than in any other exercise; if we kneel it must be reverent; if we stand that must be reverent; if we sit that must be reverent; and what usual outward testifications of submission we would practise before our betters in worldly respects, we must much more practise before God when we draw near to worship him.

M^r John Bois Batchellour in Divinity, and a famous Grecian was a very reverent esteemer of the holy Scriptures, using as well in hearing as in reading them, to uncover his head.

During the time of prayer, the Jews must neither gape, nor belch, nor spit. View of the Jewish Religion, ch. 5.

1. A negligent careless carriage of the body is to be avoided, Revel. 2. 7. The attention of the mind and outward senses is required in attending on the Ordinances.

2. Drowsinesse and sleepinesse, Acts 20. 9, 10.

3. The wearisomnesse of the body, God loves cheerfulnesse in his worship.

4. All irreverence in the body, lightnesse of behaviour, of habit. There is a mean, could we hit on it, between a scrupulous ceremoniousnesse, and an irreverent rudenesse in the performance of Gospel-duties, between a phantastick gaudinesse, and a supine carelesnesse, between an anxious precisenesse, and a slovenly sordidnesse; and that is S^t Pauls εὐσχημόνως, 1 Cor. 14. ult. a handsome and comely deportment, That all things be done decen. and in order. D^r Duports Evangelical Politie.

Thus much for the performing of true worship for matter in regard of object, parts, for manner also in practising diligence, sincerity, faith and reverence.

Concerning performance of Gods solemn worship we have spoken. Now God would that his worship should also be preserved and upheld for continuance of time, generation after generation, and that in purity and credit. To this purpose two things are necessary, Church-maintenance and Church-government. For without these two things, allowance of means for their livelihood that attend any work, and a due observation of good order by them that are imployed any way in that work, no work or service can have an honourable and respective continuance in the world.

For the first, viz. Maintenance, the Apostle saith, Let him that is taught make him that teacheth him partaker of all his goods; and it is Gods will that those should live of the Gospel which preach the Gospel. The Ministers maintenance should be competent, honourable, certain.

For the second, Discipline or Government, it concerns

1. The Ministers.
2. The People.

For the Ministers,

1. The Government is to provide fit men for fit Offices.
2. To censure those which be disordered in the Ministry.
3. To depose those which be of scandalous life and erroneous Doctrine.

For the People, the Discipline is either Private or Publick.

The Private consists in

1. Admonition.
2. Complaint.
3. Withdrawing themselves.
4. Acknowledging their offences.

Publick, it is,

1. Admonition.
2. Excommunication.
3. Receiving in again the penitent.

Those of the Congregational way say, The Body of Church-members hath power power to chooſe their Officers, to admit Members, and to cenſure Offenders, and that the Officers onely have power to preach the Word with Office and Authority, and to adminiſter the Sacraments. They diſtinguiſh Poteſtatem into Officiariam & honorariam. Excommunication by the Brethren (ſay they) is the higheſt act of Honoraria Poteſtas. To preach the Word with Authority, and to adminiſter the Seals of it, are acts of the higheſt Office and Power in the Church. Mr Cottons Defence, pag. 11, & 20.

So much for thoſe Duties which are commanded in this ſecond Commandment.

Now we will ſpeak of the things forbidden therein, which are of two ſorts, Sins of Omiſſion, and ſins of Commiſſion.

The ſins of Omiſſion are in regard of the performance of Gods worſhip, and in regard of preſerving and continuing it, for performing either in regard of the matter or manner; and for both either total or partial. The total omiſſion for matter is, when we do even altogether neglect the ſervices commanded of God in his Word, or at leaſt the moſt of them, and that with a kinde of contemning them as fruitleſſe and unneceſſary; as when men abſent themſelves from the Congregation, and care not at all, or not uſually come to the hearing of the Word, or receiving of the Sacraments; or when they never reade, pray, meditate or uſe any good conference, thinking theſe things needleſſe, which is the ſinne of prophaneneſſe condemned by the Apoſtle, when he ſaith, Heb. 12. 6. Let there be no prophane perſon amongſt you as Eſau. Partial omiſſion for the matter, is when one doth theſe ſometimes, and ſometimes omits them, by ſtarts and fits performing Gods worſhip, and then leaving them again, either all of them or ſome of them, which is a degree and diſpoſition toward prophaneneſſe, as thoſe who would faſt for a day, and then after cared no more for Gods ſervice. Total omiſſion for the manner is, when men do wholly neglect that ſincerity, faith, reverence and diligence which is required, making no preparation at all, giving no attention, nor caring at all to have their affections moved, nor at all obſerving the fruit and benefit they reap by Gods Ordinances, ſo that they performe the thing it ſelf, they little or nothing regard in what faſhion, and ſo become hypocritical or formal ſervants of God, either wholly moved by cuſtome and example, or at leaſt by a kinde of ſuperſtitious inclination, and ſo either aiming at credit, and pleaſing of men onely, or elſe miſaiming at better things, hoping by the thing done in ſome form, though without all power and zeal, to pleaſe God; this formal, hypocritical and irreverent worſhip is to be taxed, when men do the things but alone in outward faſhion and careleſly, and for cuſtome and mans ſake, not aiming at the true ends which God hath appointed. Theſe are omiſſions for the performance of Gods worſhip; there is a fault alſo in omitting the preſervation thereof.

Profaneneſſe is the ſinne of deſpiſing and contemning the true worſhip of God, ſetting light by it, accounting it as a thing not at all profitable, and therefore not at all doing it. They call not on the Name of God, ſaith the Pſalmiſt. This was the ſinne of the Prieſts themſelves, Mal. 1.7,12.

There is, 1. A virtual or habitual intention, when one keeps a purpoſe to intend. 2. Actual. The cauſes of actual roving, and the diſtractions of the thoughts in ſervice, are, 1. Want of love to God, and holy things; affection and attention go together, Pſalm 1. 2. & 119. 97. 2. A natural weakneſſe incident to all Gods children. 3. Want of Meditation; their knowledge lies idle and unactive. 4. The curioſities of the ſenſes, Prov. 17. 21. 5. Multiplicity of worldly buſineſſe, Ezek. 33. 1. 6. The Devil is moſt buſie then when we are beſt imployed. 7. Gods withdrawing of his grace, Pſal. 86. 11. We ſhould therefore pray to God to unite our hearts to him, and ſet the heart to ſeek the Lord, Pſal. 57. 7. and watch againſt the firſt diviſion, and labour for quick ſpiritual affections. Conſider with whom we have to do, Heb. 4. 13. the weightineſſe of the duty, Deut. 32. 46. and the ſtrict account that we muſt give for all religious ſervices, Mal. 3. 16. We ſhould keep our ſelves from wandering in every duty: 1. In Hearing, Jer. 15. 19. Acts 16. 14. 2. In Prayer, Matth. 15. 7,8. Epheſ. 6. 18. 3. In the Supper; here the work is onely diſpatched by the thoughts. 4. Upon the Lords day, Eſay 58. 13. The ſinne forbidden in this Commandment, is the corrupting or omitting Gods true worſhip. Lakes Theologi Probe.

Firſt, By niggardize, in not cheerfully allowing of things neceſſary to uphold the worſhip of God and his Miniſters, tendring ſuch allowance pinchingly and grudgingly, if at all.

Secondly, By careleſneſs in Church-Diſcipline, when there is not due care for the chooſing of good Miniſters, or rejecting of evil, viz. when offenders are winked at, not admoniſhed, not excommunicated; or in private, when men do not admoniſh, complain of, or withdraw themſelves from ſcandalous offenders. In a word, when many of theſe things are either in whole or in part omitted that are appointed, then is this Commandment broken. So that according to the number of duties commanded, ſo muſt the breaches of this Commandment be numbred, in caſe any of them be wholly or in part neglected.

Now I come to ſhew the ſins of Commiſſion, that is, the doing of things contrary to the duties commanded, even things that are forbidden.

Sins of Commiſſion are here of two ſorts, 1. Direct. 2. Indirect. The former being ſimply and of themſelves ſins, the other ſins by a conſequent, and in ſome reſpect annexed to them.

Direct breaches of this Commandment are in regard of performing theſe Ordinances, and in regard of preſerving and continuing them.

For performance here are two things forbidden. The tendering of a falſe worſhip, or abaſing of the true. Falſe worſhip is a worſhip not enjoyned by God; for the meaſure of Gods worſhip is the manifeſtation of his will, wherefore what agrees not with that, as being inconformable to the right rule of worſhip, is worſhip alone in ſhew and appearance, that is feigned and counterfeit, like bad coyn not true and right.

The Lord here forbiddeth them to make any graven or molten image to repreſent him, and ſo thereby to worſhip him. Ford on the Covenant. Therefore thoſe are but poor ſhifts that Aquinas hath part.1. Queſt. 25. Art.3. Quòd non prohibetur illo præcepto facere quamcunque ſculpturam vel ſimilitudinem, ſed facere ad adorandum; unde ſubdit, non adorabis ea, neque coles. Ibi intelligitur prohiberi adoratio Imaginum, quas Gentiles faciebant in veneratione Deorum ſuorum, id eſt, dæmonum. Et ideo præmittitur, non habebis Deos alienos coram me.

Now worſhip is falſe in regard of the Object and Parts of it. For the Object it is falſe,

First, When the true God himſelf is intended to be worſhipped but under ſome viſible or ſenſible repreſentation; when I ſay God ſet forth by any Picture or Image is worſhipped, or when any ſuch Image is uſed as a means to derive and convey honour unto him by. This was the ſinne of the Iſraelites in the wilderneſſe *, for they purpoſed in their intention to ſerve that God which brought them out of Ægypt; but for the better helping of them in this worſhip, and to ſtir up their devotion, they would ſet up the Image of an Ox (a moſt beneficial creature, whoſe labour did yeeld them through Gods bleſſing the beſt means of maintenance and living) ſomewhat to repreſent God unto them, and to bring his benefits unto their minds. So Aaron profeſſeth, when he ſaith, To morrow ſhall be an holy day to the Lord. Bos in Ægypto etiam numinis vice colitur, Apim vocant. Plin. Secund. Natural. Hiſt. lib. 8. cap. 46. Vide Athanaſ. Kirch. Oedipi Ægyptiaci *Tomum primum. Syntag.*4. cap. 9. Et Obeliſcum Pamphilii, *lib.*4. Ideam Hieroglyph. 1. This was likewiſe the ſinne of Micah the Ephraimite, he made a Teraphim, and had an houſe of Images. Teraphim was the Image of a man, he Quæ prohibentur, Imagines ſunt, quæ ſimilitudinem habent rei, quam repræſentant. Imago enim ad ſimilitudinem fit. Imago autem ſimilitudinem habet, ſed non eſt ipſa res. Imago ergo ſimilitudo eſt. Images or ſimilitudes are forbidden in the ſecond Commandment, not as objects of worſhip, wherein the objects of worſhip are terminated; for all falſe objects of worſhip are forbidden in the firſt Commandment, but as falſe means of worſhipping the true God deviſed by man, and a falſe manner of worſhip alſo, 2 Kings 17. 26, 28, 41. The Image of the Croſſe and Chriſt crucified ought to be aboliſhed out of Churches, as the braſen Serpent was, 2 Kings 18. Mr Perkins of Salvat. and Damnat. The Homilies condemn pictures in Churches, as Popiſh and perillous. See Dr Taylors Ductor Dubitantium l.2. c.2. Mr Thorndikes 3d Book of the Laws of the Church, chap.25. & 30. and Mr Lawſons Body of Divinity, l. 2. c. 8. Whitaker againſt Duræus in the Margent of his Anſwer to Campians fifth Reaſon tranſlated by Mr Stock. Mr Tombes his Romaniſm diſcuſſed, *Art.*5. *Sect.*8. Origenes ad Decalogum diſtinguit inter Imaginem & Idolum. Illud ait eſſe effigiem rei veræ, hoc fictæ. Sed magis placet diſtinctio Hebræorum, qui Idolum ab Imagine ſolo fine diſtinguunt: ut cultus Idolum faciat. Itaque merito Idola nuncupant tam ea, quibus res vera, quam quibus falſa repræſentantur. Alioqui quis non videat ſimulachra avium, ſerpentium, quadrupedum, quæ Gentiles colebant, nequire Idola vocari? Quod abſurdiſſimum eſt, Sapientes pro Deorum ſymbolis habuerint, at anima plebea & pro ipſis numinibus coluere. Voſſ. in Maimon. de Idol. * Exod.32.4,5. Theſe be thy gods, O Iſrael, that is, pictures of that God which brought thee out of the Land of Ægypt. Chamier ſent to Cotton the Jeſuite theſe Theſes de Idololatria Epiſt. Jeſuit. 1. Religio eſt cultus debitus uni Deo. 2. Qui eum cultum creaturis tribuunt, eos Eccleſia ſolet vocare Idololatras. 3. Proinde Papiſtæ ſunt Idololatræ qui religioſè colunt Virginem Θεοτόκον, Angelos, Sanctos, reliquias Sanctorum, item Imagines Dei, Chriſti, Sanctorum: & crucis lignum & ſignum. Idola fuiſſe prius in uſu, quàm iſta in conſecrandis mortuorum imaginibus ambitio invaluiſſet, conſtat ex Moſe, qui Rachelis furta narrans (Gen.31.19.) non ſecus ac de communi vitio loquitur. Vera Idololatriæ origo ea eſt, quòd homines Deum ſibi adeſſe non credunt, niſi carnaliter exhibeat ſe præſentem. Paulò poſt diluvium certè nefarium illud Satana commentum invaluit, poſteris Noachi paulatim à vero Dei cultu ad tetram Idolomaniam converſis. Goulart. in Cypr. de Idol. vanit. Tres ſunt cauſæ evidentes, cur aboleri debeant Imagines quibus Deus repræſentatur, 1. Mandatum Dei, qui aboleri vult Idola & omnes veri cultus Dei & veræ Doctrinæ corruptelas, ut iram ſuam adverſus Idololatriam teſtetur.

made

made this to worship God in and by; for he saith, Now I know Jehovah will blesse me; it must needs be that he purposed to worship that God, of whom he did expect a blessing for his worship, and his mother had vowed the silver to Jehovah, to make a graven and molten Image, wherefore this Image vowed to Jehovah must needs be intended to serve Jehovah by. This was the sinne of Jeroboam, who said of the Calves, These are thy gods that did bring thee out of the Land[a]; as if he had proclaimed that he intended to do service to the God of their Fathers; but he thought it convenient to have him repreſented to them by theſe figures, and under theſe Images to have ſervice tendred unto him. And therefore David chargeth the Iſraelites to have changed their glory, meaning God (who was indeed their glory) into a ſimilitude of a Calf, that is, to have ſet up an Image of a Calf to repreſent him by; and Paul ſaith the ſame of the wiſer Heathen, that they did worſhip God, but not as God, but changed the glory of that incorruptible God into the ſimilitude of a corruptible man, that is, they went about to ſet out and repreſent to themſelves the glorious maker of all things by ſuch baſe and inglorious Pictures; as if there could be any proportion betwixt God and a dead Image, the workmanſhip of mans hands, which is indeed a great embaſing of their apprehenſion of his Majeſty, cauſing them at laſt to think as meanly of God as of a thing that could be ſo ſet forth; yea this is the ſin the Prophet ſo finds fault with in Gods Name, ſaying, What ſimilitude will you ſet up to me? and whereunto will you liken me[b]? And this is the ſinne of the Popiſh Church which they continually commit and maintain, and by which they have ſo corrupted themſelves that they even ceaſe to be the true Church of God, and are turned into a company of ſpiritual adulterers; for that Church with the wine of her fornications hath made almoſt all Nations drunken; to whom hath ſhe not conveyed the infection of this foul Idolatry? God muſt be worſhipped under the picture of an aged man, the holy Ghoſt under the ſimilitude of a Dove, the Sonne of God under the ſimilitude of a man hanging on the Croſſe, all foul Idolatries: for ſeeing that Chriſt is God as well as man, he is no more to have an Image ſet up to him than the Father or holy Ghoſt, ſeeing the Divinity is not repreſentable, and the humanity without the Deity is not Chriſt; ſo that it is nothing but a ſtrong fancy makes men take any Picture for Chriſts Picture; for ſeeing his natural Phyſiognomy is wholly concealed in Scripture, and no approved ſtory hath acquainted us with it, and ſeeing his Deity is wholly irrepreſentible, why ſhould any Picture drawn by man be called a Picture of Chriſt rather than of the thief that hanged by him? It muſt needs be a very dead devotion that a dead Picture can provoke.

2. Confessio sinceri cultus Dei & odij adversus Idololatriam, qua confessio non tantum in verbis, sed etiam in actionibus, spectatur.

cie & signis externis consistit. 3. Vitatio scandali, ne hostes Ecclesiæ hoc spectaculo magnam Idololatriæ speciem habente ab Ecclesia magis alienentur, & veritatem divinam afficiant contumelia. Ursin. de Lege divina Expos. 2di præcepti. Cultus divini prophanatio extabat olim multiplex apud Judæos, & in pietatem patriam prævaricatio. Ante illam Babylonicam μετοικεσιαν, ab ipso Exodo & egressu ab Ægypto, quemadmodum testantur Historiæ sacræ, propensi ad Gentilismum, & mores vicinarum nationum imitandos, ferebantur. Idola ad insaniam usque, sectabantur: vitulos, Baalim, Astaroth, catera numinum portenta colebant & purgamenta. Montac. *Anal. Exerc.*3. Sect 1. Vide plura ibid. Cultus nil aliud est, quam obsequium alicui præstitum juxta ejus excellentiam. Cultus religiosus est obsequium supremum, illi soli debitum, qui est principium & Autor tam creationis quam beatificationis nostræ. Passim in templis Romanis Deus Pater senis cani portat effigiem, Filius Agni, Spiritus Columbæ: & hoc non solum pinguntur ad historiæ alicujus significationem, sed ad cultum atque adorationem. Episc. Daven. *Determ. Quæst.*18. Religiosores Judæi ne characteres quidem Planetarum tolerant in suis Calendarijs, aut Astronomorum libris, neque ceras quovis annulo signant. Skickardi Tarich, p.34. Idololatriam à Chami posteris Ortam dubitandum non est; unde omnes uno ore Scriptores tradunt, primos Deorum cultum Ægyptios esse adeptos. Voss. in Maimon. de Idolol. cap. 1. Illuminatissimus doctor dubitantium R. Moses, dictus Rambam, cum hanc gentis suæ ad Gentilium ritus propensionem considerasset, legem non alia de causa Moysi datam luculenter demonstrat, nisi ad impias Ægyptiorum consuetudines ab Hebræis imbibitos, salutari lege abolendos. Athan. Kirch. Oedip. Ægypt. Vol. 1. *Syntag.*4. *cap.*1. Plutarch a Heathen writer relates that Numa forbad the Romans to make any Image, whereby to represent God; and that for an hundred and seventy years the Romans had no Images of a religious nature. Plutar. in Numa. The wiser sort both of Pagans and Papists worshipped God under the Image, so only faulty in symbolical Idolatry, and breach of the second Commandment, serving the true Deity in a false and forbidden manner, yet the ignorant people amongst them both, were directly guilty of dull downright Idolatry, breaking both first and second Commandment, adoring a false god with a false service. Mr Fullers Descript. of Palest. l. 4. What a number of distinctions have the Papists devised for the worshipping of Images. Propriè & impropriè; principaliter & reductivè; primariò & secundariò; largè & strictè; per se, per accidens; simpliciter & secundum quid; absolutè & quodam modo; merè & non merè; mediatè & immediatè, per se & propter se. So Bellarmine. Quo sanctior & spiritualior est in specie Idololatria, hoc nocentior est. Luth. *in cap.*4. ad Gal. Ut Pontificij nunquam satis solidè contra Socinianos Divinitatem Christi adstruent ab ipsius cultu religioso, quamdiu ejus tam prodigi erunt in meros creatoros & suos sanctos in Divos & Deos transformabunt, quibus etiam vota nuncupare liceat, quod Dii sint per participationem, ut loquitur Bellarminus, *l.*3. de Sanct.c 9. Ita nunquam Socciniani solidè convincent Pontificios Idolotatriæ & illiciti cultus, in religioso cultu, adoratione & invocatione B. Mariæ & Sanctorum demortuorum, quamdiu statuent possibilem esse communicationem illius cultus & potestatis verè Divinæ, alicui meræ creaturæ, cujusmodi ipsis Christus est. Maresii *Hydra Socinianismi expugnata l.*1. *c.*17. Vide Lactant. *Div. Instit. l.*2 de orig. erroris. Estis Idololatræ, quotquot estis Papistæ: Novo quodam monstrosæ superstitionis genere, qui nec Ethnici sitis, quia Christum profitemini: nec Christiani quia Idola colitis. Crede mihi non excusabunt vos in ultimo illo & tremendo examine, vestrarum distinctionum strophæ, judicabit Deus non explacitis Scholasticorum Sophistarum, sed secundum illud illius cujus hoc est præceptum, Filioli cavete ab Idolis. Chamier. Epist. Jes. Per. Cotton. [a] 1 King.12.28. See Ainsw. Arrow against Idol.c.3,& 4. Vide Voss. *de Orig. & Progres. Idol. l.*1. *c.*3. Psal.106.20. See Act.7.41. Rom.1.23. This very thing the Lord hath condemned, Exod.20.23. With me, that is, beside me, God, &c that is, golden and silver Images or pictures of God. Quod si quæras, cur illud facietis, repetatur, dicam, voluisse Deum ineulcare maximè, ut sibi ab eo delicto caverent, ad quod maximè proni erant. Voss. in Maim. *de Idol. c.*3. Pontificij totum secundum præceptum de Imaginibus non colendis omittunt in recitatione Decalogi, ut patet, tum ex officio B. Mariæ autoritate Pij 5. reformato, tum ex Catechismo Ledesmæ, quasi de ea re nullum omnino præceptum dedisset Deus. Rivet. *Tract. de Pat. Autorit. c.*5. Vide Pontificiorum crassa & prodigiosa dogmata contra singula Decalogi præcepta. Mort. *Apol. Cath. l.*2. *c.*13,14,15. Idolatry is a Greek word compounded of an Idol, which signifieth any similitude, Image, likenesse, form, shape, or representation, exhibited either to the body or minde, and Latry, which signifieth service. Ainsw. Arrow against Idol.c.1. The first Commandment bindeth us to have Jehovah the living and true God for our God, and none other, and forbiddeth generally these four things, 1. The having of strange gods, and not the true, as had the Heathens, *Act.*14.11,12,15. 2. The having of strange gods with the true, as had the Samaritans, 2 King. 17.32. 3. The having of no God at all, as foolish Atheists, *Psal.*14.1. 4. The not having of the true God aright, but in hypocrisie only, *Isa.*29 13. *Tit.*1.16. The second Commandment bindeth to the true worship of the true God, which is only as himself commandeth, and by the means, rites and services that he ordaineth, John 4.20,to 24. *Deut.*12 32.& 4.11.1,2,5,6. Ainsw. ibid. See more there, and *Chap.*2. how fast the sin of Idolatry cleaveth to all, and *Chap.*5. of the Idolatry of these times far exceeding Jeroboams, and *Chap.*6. a dehortation from this sinne. 1 Peter 4 5. aggravates all kinds of Idolatry with the Epithete of abominable. Sir Henry Spelman De conciliis shews, Ecclesiam Anglicanam non suscepisse Imaginum cultum ante secundum Nicænum Concilium, p.218. Concile de Trente, Concile d'hommes si brutaux que s'assemblans exprez pour faire des restrictions à la Loy de Dieu, neantmoins il n'y auoit vn seul d' eux qui entendist l' original de la Loy. Autrement s'il falloit distinguer entre dulie & latrie, ils eussent sceu que le mot qu'ils traduisent latrie, signifie proprement dulie. Instruction Chrestienne par Jacques Cappel *l.*1. *c.*19. Petavius in the second part of his 4th Tome of *Theologica Dogmata de Incarnat. l.*15, from c. 11. to the end of that Book, pleads for the use and worship of Images in the Church. Voetius in his third part of his Select Theological Disputations, De Adoratione Imaginum in Papatu writes against the use and adoration of Images in Churches. He saith there, Unum Bellarminum si quis legat, videbit manifestè contradictionem, simulationem, fallam inter viri interiorem sensum, & inter exterius susceptum Imaginum patrocinium.

Catholici Patres nullam aliam agnoverunt religioſam adorationem, niſi eam quæ ſoli Deo debetur, atqs adeò quæ eſt adoratio latria, ſeu ſervitutis religioſæ, ſeu pars ſervitij ſoli Deo debiti. Altera autem pars diſtinctionis, quæ poſterioribus ſeculis excogitata eſt, de adoratione honorariâ, vel adoratione dulia, vel hyperdulia, non invenitur apud Catholicos Patres, qui primis ſex ſeculis floruerunt. Forbeſ. Inſtruct. Hiſtorico-Theol. l.7.c.1.

[b] Iſa.40.18. & verſ.25. Pontificij doctores hodierni communiter illam ſententiam, quòd propriè & verè non Imagines, ſed earum prototypa in eis & per eas adorentur, quam Durandus Holcot, Picus Mirandula, Petrus Cluniacenſis, Jonas Aurelianenſis, Alphonſus à Caſtro, Payva amplectuntur) tanquam periculoſam, temerariam & hæreſi proximam improbant. Imagines per ſe & propriè adorandas eſſe dicunt. Gerh. Confeſſ. Catholi. contra Pontif. l.2. Spec. part.2. Art.10. c.4.

I have heard that when the late King was in Spain, reaſoning againſt worſhipping of Images with a Prieſt, who denying the Charge, it was agreed betwixt them, to take the next perſon they found at Devotions in their Churches, for an experiment: The Prieſt beſpake the Perſon, a woman, to this purpoſe, Good Woman, you do not pray to this Image or Saint, but to God in it: I but I do, ſaith the woman, and will do, till you ſhew me a better. Mr Hodges his Preface to his Scripture-Catechiſm towards the Confutation of ſundry Errours.

This is the firſt falſhood of worſhip for the Object, when the true God is intended as the Object, but under ſome Picture or Repreſentation; for God repreſented by an Image is now become an Idol, ſeeing the true God hath diſavowed all ſuch repreſenting. This is the firſt kinde of Idolatry, which is a great ſinne, becauſe it is a giving of that honour to another, which is due unto God alone.

Gal.4.8. Idolatry (ſaith Tertullian) is Principale crimen & ſummus hujus ſæculi reatus.

Another is, When a creature hath theſe kindes of Worſhip performed to him (or any like them) which God hath appointed to himſelf, and ſo becomes the object of worſhip; ſo Paul to the Galatians defines Idolatry to be a ſerving of the creature, or of thoſe things which by nature are not Gods. He uſeth the word ſer-

It is called abomination, *Deut.*27.15. 1 *Pet.*4.3. Aquin.2a,2æ. Queſt. 94. *Art.*3. ſhews, That Idolatry is graviſſimum peccatum. S[t] Hierom affirmeth, That when Jeſus being a childe was carried into Ægypt for fear of Herod, all the Idols of Ægypt fell down, and all their miracles became mute, which the Prophet Iſaiah fore ſaw, *Chap.*19.1. The general ſilence of the Devil in his Oracles throughout the world preſently upon Chriſts Incarnation, is a thing known and confeſſed by all men.

ving

ving, which utterly overturns that fond diſtinction of worſhip and ſervice mentioned by Papiſts to ſhift off the blame of this ſin; to ſerve that which by nature is not God, is flat Idolatry.

He performed the part of a good Biſhop, that finding a vail ſpread in the entrance of a Church-door, wherein the Image of Chriſt or of ſome other Saint was pictured, rent it in pieces with theſe words, That it was againſt the Authority of the ſacred Scriptures, to have any Image of Chriſt ſet up in the Church. The Theatre of Gods judgements, chap. 25. Idols in Churches are a ſcandal to Jewes, Turks: Idolatry either makes that to be God which is not; or God to be that which he is not. Robinſ. Eſſayes obſerv. 11. Rabbi Moſes Ben Nachman, whom they call Raſbam, or Moſes Gerundenſis, ſaith, Non eſt tibi, Iſrael, ultio, in qua non ſit uncia de iniquitate vituli, There is no vengeance taken on thee, Iſrael, wherein there is not an ounce of the iniquity of the Calf. God neither will, nor can, nor ought to be expreſt by any Image. He will not, Exod. 20 4. neither can he be repreſented by any Image, Deut 4.15. Iſa. 40.12. Neither ought any Image to be made of him. His Majeſty and glory cannot be repreſented by any viſible form, Rom. 1. 22,23. Quin audeam dicere, eos, qui olim cum cultu Dei Idololatriam miſcebant, ut diſertè extat in poſteriorum Regum capite 17. 29,30,31,32. eos, inquam, hodie adeo ab omni Idololatria abhorrere, ut in hac parte Judæos ipſos ſuperare videantur. Scaliger. de Samaritis, l. 7. De emendat. Temp.

The Mahometans reproach the Chriſtians with their Idols, and the Jewes deteſt Chriſtianity for this. See Dr Weſtfield on Pſalm 106. 19, 20. againſt Images.

Templa Papiſtarum propter Imagines, earumque cultum, Judæi appellare ſolent, domum turpitudinis. Elias in Thiſbi.

The Papiſts conſecrate their Images, they hope in them, they expect gifts and graces from them, they clothe and crown them, they erect Altars and Temples to them, they kiſſe them, and bowe their head and knee before them, they light up Tapers and Lamps to them. Doctor Taylors Ductor Dubitantium, lib. 2. cap. 2.

Mr Crofton (in his Book againſt Altar-worſhip, or bowing to the Communion-Table) ſaith, that Archbiſhop Laud was the firſt that ever framed a Canon for bowing to, towards, or before the Communion-Table. See more there, pag. 115, 116. and in the Quench-coal, and in Mr Gurnay Redivivus againſt Images in Churches, and Mr Cawdrey againſt Dr Duncons Determination.

Dr Warmſtry in his Convocation-Speech againſt Images, Altars, Croſſes, ſpeaks fully, Though the Primitive Church uſed the name of Altar for the holy Table, yet that makes it neither neceſſary nor warrantable for us to do the like; unleſſe together with the language we could call back the purity, the ſimplicity of the primitive times. He ſaith, It is the obſervation of Hemmingius, and Peter Martyr, That when the Miniſters of the Church began to give themſelves to idleneſſe, and ſilence in the Church, then began the frequent uſe of Images in Gods houſe. As I deſire (ſaith he) there may be nothing ſcandalous in the Church; ſo that there may be nothing frivolous or irrational, that our ſervice may be a reaſonable ſervice. I know not why (ſaith he ſtill) we ſhould have Candles in the day: I wiſh there may not be ſo much as an Embleme of a fruitleſſe Prelacy or Clergy in the Church, that only fill the Candleſticks, but give no light. So he. See the Obſervator Obſerved, pag. 17, 18.

Now there are divers creatures which have been and are worſhipped with the worſhip due to God or ſomething like it, and coined in imitation of it.

Firſt, Angels, which thing began in the time of the Apoſtles, and is by Paul writing to the Coloſſians condemned as a baſe will-worſhip. Col. 2. 18.

Secondly, Saints departed, which grew into the Church long after by degrees, and was rife ſince four hundred years after Chriſt amongſt many (though not allowed by the authority of the Church-Governours, as after it was) by building Churches, dedicating Altars and dayes, and offering Incenſe and the like to theſe, all which are ſtill in uſe and practice among the Popiſh Churches, yea are by them maintained as very devout and profitable exerciſes; for what more common than Invocation of Saints with them, pretending that they may ſo honour them as Gods friends? whereas Gods worſhip is to be given alone to God, if Chriſt might be heard above the Pope. See Ainſw. Arrow againſt Idol. c. 5. p. 27, 30, 31.

Thirdly, The Sunne, Moon and Stars have been worſhipped by Heathen men, under a conceit that there were certain ſpirits rulers of the world under God aſſiſtant Deut. 4.

ſtant to them, whereas they are created by God for the uſe of mankind, and do move by their own natural inclination as other things, not by any ſuch external mover.

Fourthly. The pictures of God, Chriſt, Saints (ſo ſuppoſed to be I meane) have been, and are ſtill worſhipped, which is the very particular made choice of in this Commandment, to include all other ſpiritual uncleanneſſe, as the ſinne of adultery in the ſeventh, to include all other bodily filthineſſe: for indeed this is the very groſſeſt of all to worſhip a dead ſtock, whatſoever ſhifts men have, as if they did purpoſe not to worſhip the thing for its own ſake, but for the thing repreſented by it. Such things Jews and Gentiles did alledge for their excuſe; but God rejects their counſels, and ſaith, in ſpight of all their denials, that their Idols were gold, meaning nothing elſe but gold, and that they worſhipped the work of their own fingers, he counted alone the wood or ſtone ſerved, what ever they dreamed of a further Deity repreſented. And this Idolatry alſo the Church of Rome maintaineth, and hath by her tyranny thruſt upon all theſe quarters of the world at ſuch times as ſhe had ſomewhat eſtabliſhed her uſurped Supremacy. You ſhall find in the Papiſts Service-books the Trinity with three faces. In ſome of them you ſhall finde God the Father as an old man, and Chriſt his Sonne between his legs, and the Dove between them both. Dr Weſtfield on Pſalm 106. 19, 20.

Laſtly, The Devil perſonally hath been and is worſhipped by ſervices invented by himſelf of Witches and Sorcerers, to whom he did appear in bodily ſhapes, which is of all Idolatries the moſt fearfull and hainous, becauſe here Gods profeſſed enemy is openly ſet in his place and room.

Two things may juſtly cauſe us to abhor Popery:

1. Their Idolatry, Image-worſhip, Angel-worſhip, Saint-worſhip, Mary-worſhip, Croſſe-worſhip, Relique-worſhip, Pope-worſhip. See Durham on Revel. 9.12, to 21. Lect. 2. *p.*454, to 463.

2. Their Cruelty, Revel. 17.5,6.

There is cloſe and groſſe Idolatry, External and Internal Idolatry:

1. Idols are meer vanities, and cannot help us.

2. Idolatry is numbred among the luſts of the fleſh, Gal. 5.20.

3. It is a complicated ſin, Jer. 2.12,13.

4. Will lead you to all other ungodlineſſe, Exod. 32.6.

5. Takes away the uſe of reaſon, Eſay 44. 16,17,18,19. and provokes God to give us up judicially to other ſins, Rom. 1.24.

And thus much for the falſneſſe of Worſhip in regard of the Object.

Now it may be alſo for the kindes and parts, that is, when any action or actions are performed to the pleaſing of God and working of ſpiritual grace in our ſelves, that God hath not aſſigned in his Word for that end, which is to worſhip God after the commandments of men, which the Apoſtle forbids, Titus 1. ſaying, That men muſt not give heed to the commandments of men which doe ſubvert the truth. The ſame thing is by him condemned under the name of Will-worſhip *;

* Col. 2.18. Voluntary Religion.

Superſtitio à ſuperſtando, non quaſi Deus verus vero cultu ſtantium coli poſſit: ſed quia ad materiem cultus accedat, quod eum corrumpat. Voſſ de Orig. & Progreſ. Idol. l. 1. c. 3. Superſtitio eſt cultus indebitus præter verbum Dei. Zanch. Superſtitioſi vocantur non qui ſibi ſuos ſuperſtites optant (omnes enim optamus) ſed aut ij qui ſuperſtitem memoriam defunctorum colant, aut qui parentibus ſuis ſuperſtites, colebant Imagines eorum domi tanquam Deos penates. Lactant. Div. Inſtit. l. 4. de vera ſapientia. Vide plura ibid. See how great a ſinne ſuperſtition is in Mr Cawdreys Preface to his Superſtitio ſuperſtes, and in the Book it ſelf. And Dr Ames his freſh ſuit againſt Ceremonies, ch. 9. Deut. 12.32. See Matth. 15 9. Ignorant zeal is the mother of ſuperſtition, formality and hypocriſie is the daughter of it. Superſtitio dicta à ſuper ſtatuo vel ſuper inſtituo eo quod ſit ſuperflua aut ſuper ſtatuta obſervatio. Iſid. l. 8. Etymol. cap 3 Super inſtituere non eſt ſolùm contra inſtituere, ſed etiam præter inſtituere. Altare Damaſcenum cap. 9. De ritus Adiaphoris & Ceremoniis. The Phariſees in Chriſts dayes were great prerenders to holineſſe, but they corrupted the worſhip of God. Corruption in worſhip provokes God, 1. To depart from a people, Ezek. 8 3. 2. To deſtroy them, 2 Chron. 7.20. The divine worſhip of the Heathens and Papiſts in the Temples is of ſo near affinity, that Ludovicus Vives confeſſeth there cannot any difference be ſhewn, unleſſe the Papiſts have changed the names and titles. The Popiſh Purgatory agreeth with the Heathen Purgatory mentioned in Plato and Virgil. The papiſtical manner of conſecrating Churches and Church-yards fully imitateth the Ceremonies of the Pagans when they conſecrated their Temples and Temple-courts or yards, deſcribed by Alexander ab Alexandro. Their ſprinkling of holy water is mentioned in the fixth Satyre of Juvenal; and Sozomen calleth it a Heatheniſh Ceremony. The whole ſwarm of Friers or Monks firſt began among the Heathen, as at large appeareth by learned Hoſpinian.

for

for what I do out of a religious conſcience to God, with an intention I mean to pleaſe and honour him thereby, and hoping to winne grace to my ſoul, by that I in my minde intend to worſhip him; and if there be no other warrant for this but my own will, this is now to ſerve God after the precepts of men, which he cannot endure. And with ſuch will-worſhip the Church of Rome abounds; they have their vows of canonical Obedience, Chaſtity, Poverty, and a number more; it is our great happineſſe that we are delivered from the bondage and ſlavery of them.

Thus you ſee the falſe worſhip forbidden; now follows the ſecond branch of things forbidden in regard of the performance of Gods ſolemn worſhip, which is the abuſe of the true worſhip, and that worſhip of God is abuſed both in the matter and manner of it.

Firſt, For the matter, by taking away any of thoſe parts from any kind of worſhip which God hath commanded to be performed; as for example, the Church of Rome hath taken away the Cup from the Sacrament, and ſo maimed the Seal of Gods Covenant; yea they have taken away the reading of the Scripture in private altogether, and will not ſuffer men to exerciſe themſelves therein; and they have taken away the whole power of the Scripture, in ſubjecting it to the Church, and not the Church to it, and in cauſing it to be read in an unknowne tongue.

Secondly, By adding any part of worſhip unto thoſe which God hath appointed; as for example, to the Sacrament of Baptiſme they adde Oyl and Spittle, and the ſigne of the Croſſe *, I ſay, added theſe things, becauſe they have not appointed them as matters of meer Solemnity or Order, but as matters of Religion, profitable to the Soule, and needfull in conſcience to God.

The Papiſts calumniate us, as enemies to the Croſſe of Chriſt, whereas we honour it. His death is our life; his ignominy our glory. But we abhor the divine adoration of the Images of the Croſſe.

* Papiſts give a ſtone or wooden croſs the right hand as they go or ride by; ſome alſo put off their hats, the Croſſe is not medium cultus. The Papiſts Invocate this ſign,

Per crucis ſignum fugiat hinc omne malignum;
Per idem ſignum ſalvetur quodq; benignum.

Bellarm. de Imag. cap. 19, & 20. calleth it, Signum ſacrum & venerabile, & ſignum crucis adoramus. Vide Aquin. part. 3. Quæſt. 25. Art. 4. See Parker of the Croſſe, chap. 1. Sect. 10. and elſwhere. They account it among the moſt precious reliques, and not only the whole, but every piece thereof, they adore it, ſalute it, pray unto it, and truſt therein for ſalvation, crying, Hail, O Croſſe our only hope in this time of paſſion, increaſe thou to the godly righteouſneſſe, and unto ſinners give pardon. And leſt ſome ſhould think, that this prayer is to him that died on the Croſſe, and not to the Croſſe, the Papiſts have handled the Caſe, and reſolved it, that Ipſam Crucem alloquimur, ipſam crucem deprecamur, quaſi ipſum crucifixum. Craſhaws Fiſcus Papalis, c. 8. Who knows not that ſtale Hymn, and unreaſonable rime of Ara Crucis, lampas lucis, ſola ſalus hominum.

Nobis prouum fac patronum quem tuliſti Dominum. D. Hall in his Remain. works on Phil. 3. 18.

Yea the very ſign of this Idol made in the air, upon the fore-head, or over any other thing, is ſacred and venerable, hath force to drive away Devils, and do many like feats. Ainſw. Arrow againſt Idol ch. 5. Certum eſt ſignum crucis peperiſſe primùm cruces materiales; deinde Imaginem crucifixi. Didoclav. Alt. Damaſc. cap. 11. Nous nous ſeruons ſans ſcrupule de la Monnoye qui eſt marquee d' vne Croix: Les banderolles de nos nauires portent vne Croix pour eſtre diſcernees d' auec les Nauires des Mahumetans qui portent vn croiſſant. Et voudrois volontiers eſtre condamné à faire mille ſignes de Croix & avoir ma maiſon toute peinte de Croix, pourueu qu'en Egliſe Romaine le benefice de Jeſus Chriſt, & l' efficace de ſa mort fut gardee en ſon entier. Anatomie De La Meſſe par Pierre Du Moulin. l. 5. c. 48. Voetius ſpeaking (in his third part of ſelect Theological Diſputat. De cultu & abuſu crucis) of our uſing of the Croſſe in England at Baptiſm, ſaith, Hæſit ibidem Crux illa verè Crux piiſſimis Eccleſiarum tum Paſtoribus tum membris. Vide plura ibid.

So much for the abuſe of Gods worſhip in the matter thereof: It is abuſed for the manner:

Firſt, When it is performed hypocritically, meerly out of faſhion, and out of a deſire of winning credit and good eſtimation from men; yea, or out of a conceit of meriting or deſerving at Gods hand; for this laſt conceit is as falſe an end of worſhip as the former, and the aiming at it no leſſe hypocritical, becauſe I neither intend to ſhew ſubjection unto God, nor to gain grace, but in the one to win credit, in the other to bind God to men, and make him as it were in my debt. So the Phariſees were hypocritical both wayes, for they did all their things to be ſeen of men, and yet withall they hoped to get ſalvation as by deſert for the work ſake done, as it appeareth in thy proud Phariſees prayer: and Paul confeſſeth as much of himſelf, when he ſaith, that the things which before were gain to him, meaning in his conceit ſuch as would bring him to Heaven, now he renounceth, to relie wholly upon Chriſt, and to be found in him.

and

Secondly, When it is performed in formality, the outward thing done without any care of preparation, attention or affection, only with ſome outward geſtures and behaviours, carrying a ſhew of theſe things, ſuch as was the ſervice of the Jews in their ſacrificing, I mean the hypocrites among them, and ſuch is all the religion of the Popiſh Church in publick, where all is done in an unknown tongue; and ſuch is the worſhip of our diſſembling time-ſerving Proteſtants, which care for nothing but the very outward act, look to nothing elſe, and have an hope that that ſhall ſerve their turn to bring them to Heaven.

Laſtly, When it is performed rudely, irreverently, careleſly, with an open manifeſtation of contempt and neglect, which is one of the worſt abuſes for the manner of all other.

Theſe be ſins in regard of performing Gods worſhip, when it is ill performed for matter and manner.

Now thoſe things follow which are forbidden in regard of the preſerving of it, which are,

Rom. 2.

Firſt, Sacriledge, that is the turning of holy ſubſtance and wealth to common and prophane uſes. There muſt be ſome things holy, elſe there can be no ſacriledge.

Next follows the abuſe of Church-Diſcipline, and that is in regard of the Miniſters and people.

In regard of the Miniſters four-fold:

1. When a falſe Miniſtry is erected and ſet up in the Church of God. A Miniſtry is nothing elſe but a relation to certain ſpiritual actions tending to the ſouls good directly (for we ſpeak of Eccleſiaſtical Miniſtry) binding ſome man upon whom that relation is put, to the conſtant attendance upon thoſe actions. Now when men are appointed to ſuch actions, which have no warrant out of Gods word, neither are indeed profitable for the ſoul, this is a falſe Miniſtry. Such is the Miniſtry of the Church of Rome, where men are appointed to ſay and ſing the Word, Pſalms and Prayers in an unknown tongue, a ſervice unhallowed not ordained of God; ſo when men are appointed and aſſigned to offer a propitiatory Sacrifice for quick and dead, that is, as they call it, to celebrate Maſſe; for Chriſt never appointed a ſacrificing Miniſtry in the New Teſtament, nor any other Sacrifice but the Sacrifice of prayers, thankſgivings, alms, and of our ſelves. And this is the firſt abuſe of Church-Diſcipline.

The ſecond is, When thoſe that are not Miniſters are allowed to intermeddle in miniſterial functions, and actions proper to the Miniſters, that is, to men ſet apart by a known and publick order to give attendance unto ſome Eccleſiaſtical function. As if women be admitted to baptize; and ſo if any doe take upon him to preach or adminiſter the Sacrament that is not admitted to the order of the Miniſtry. This is a great abuſe of Church-Diſcipline, and to joyn with ſuch, knowing them to be ſuch, is a ſinne.

A third fault in the Church-Diſcipline for the Miniſtry is, when wicked, erroneous, ſcandalous men are let it, and ſuffered to abide in, yea or any without due care of trying them; for Timothy was to lay hands upon none raſhly.

A fourth fault is, when good and able men are either kept out or thruſt out for things of no moment.

And theſe be the abuſes of Church-Diſcipline in regard of the Miniſtry.

The abuſes of it in regard of the people follow, as Firſt, In the Governours publickly, when either Excommunication is abuſed, or when too much rigour is uſed toward the penitent. Now Excommunication is abuſed three wayes:

1. When it is put into the hands of too few, especially such as have nothing to do with it. This being a chief part of governing the Church, belongs to the Pastours of the Church. Paul did not himself excommunicate, but appointed that the Corinthians should excommunicate the incestuous person. Indeed he did deliver Hymenem and Alexander to Satan, as it seemeth himself, but this was becaufe they themselves were Pastours, and so would not excommunicate themselves, or taking upon them to be teachers of the Church at large, were not to be medled with by any particular Governours of any particular Church. But if the Apostles did alone doe this in regard of their supereminent Authority, it follows not that others may doe it now; for in this unlimited and supereminent power the Apostles were not to finde any Successours, becaufe they had no Successours in the eminency of Gifts, without which such Authority must needs prove mischievous in any one mans hands.

Secondly, Excommunication is abused when it is pronounced against men for small and trivial offences, to pronounce a man a child of the Devil, and out of the state of grace, becaufe he will not pay a small summe of money for a fee, or becaufe he forgets to appear at the Court-day; but most of all it is abused, when it is pronounced against men for well-doing, as it was against the blind man; John 9. and as Diotrephes abused it against those that would receive John the Apostle and his Epistles; as when men are punished for hearing the Word preached abroad, when they have it not at home, and the like.

The last abuse of Excommunication is, when it is done privately before one or two, before the Judge and his man, or his mans Deputy: so the most solemn Censure of the Church is denounced against a man, no man knowing of it.

So much for the abuse of Church-Discipline in regard of Excommunication.

Now it is also abused in regard of too much rigour to the offendor, when upon his repentance he is denied to be received in again to the Church; when too much bodily exercise of humiliation was cast upon them, as a penance to last seven years, and the like; this was to turn sound repentance into an outward form, for so soon as ever the penitent did shew sound humiliation, and sound purpose of amendment, after some convenient time of his trial, lest he should be swallowed up of grief, he was to be taken into the Church again, as a member of it.

Now the private Discipline pertaining to every man is abused,

1. By contemning and setting light by the Censures and Admonitions of the Church, which if they be rightly passed they are terrible, and should not be despised.

2. A free conversing with offendors and sinners that are scandalous, and having familiarity with them. Indeed the natural bonds betwixt father and mother, master and servant, Prince and Subject, cannot be dissolved by any wickedness, no nor by Excommunication; but intimate familiarity is to be declined so far as may be without neglect of duty in regard of these places A father must keep his child though excommunicated, and not suffer him to perish; a child his Father, and so in the rest; but familiarity, loving and kind society, even in such cases is to be denied, and where these bonds are not, so much as may be, all society but to converse with them, be merry with them, play, eat and drink with them that are notorious offendors, chiefly excommunicate, is a great offence against God, and endangering of ones self to infection by them.

Lastly, Obstinacy against Church-Discipline and publick or private admonition, viz. a refusing to confesse ones fault, and to shew publick repentance for publick sins, private for private, is a great disorder, which was the offence of the incestuous person at the first, for he stood in his sin, and cared for no reproof. And Paul blames those of the Corinthians, that being admonished by his betters, had not 2 Cor. 12. 21. repented of their fornication, drunkennesse, he must needs mean of publick repentance for their known offences in this kind, becaufe if they had been private, he could not have told of them; and whether they had in private repented or no, how could he tell; but yet it is ſure there is no true private repentance when men are not willing to ſhew it publickly in ſuch caſe. On the other ſide he greatly praiſed them, becauſe they had received Titus ſent by him for this purpoſe, with much fear and trembling, and ſo conſequently with all obedience had ſubmitted themſelves to his admonition, to do any thing he required for the giving of the Church ſatisfaction in regard of their offences, 2 Cor. 7. 15. Theſe be the ſins condemned in this ſecond Commandment directly: now indirectly ſome things are forbidden alſo not for their own ſakes, but for ſome evil conſequent that may follow upon them. As all occaſions of Idolatry and Superſtition to our ſelves and others, for what is of that nature will in likelihood draw both our ſelves or others to great ſinne, though it be not ſimply a ſinne, yet it is in that reſpect ſinfull, and therefore cannot be done without ſinne, unleſſe ſome other greater reſpect countervaling that evil conſequent, come betwixt to take away the ſinfulneſſe of it.

Now ſuch occaſions of Idolatry are theſe principally:

Imagines primò inter privatos parietes uſurpata gratitudinis ergo, teſte Euſebio, poſtea in templa etiam introducta memoriæ cauſa, tandem degenerarunt in adorationis objectum, Chamier. See Dr Hill on Prov. 23. 23. Vetus concilium Elibertinum decrevit, ne quid, quod colitur à populo, pingeretur in templis.

1. Keeping of Idols, that is to ſay, of Images and Pictures which have formerly been worſhipped, or at leaſt have been by ſuperſtitious perſons made for that end and purpoſe, this is bad if it be in private places, becauſe a man doth not know who may come thither hereafter, and ſo what miſchief may be done; but worſt of all when theſe are ſuffered to ſtand in publick or religious places, though the purpoſe of thoſe which ſuffer them to ſtand there, be not, that they ſhould ſerve for worſhip, but only for hiſtorical and memorative uſe. For the nature chiefly of the common ſort of people being ſtrongly inclined to Idolatry, and we ſo much deſiring to have our ſenſes pleaſed in the Worſhip of God, it ſhall be very hard and almoſt impoſſible that ſuch things ſhould ſtand long without being worſhipped of ſome at leaſt, without being made inſtruments of worſhipping God or Chriſt in or by them. Wherefore S^t John wiſheth, babes to beware of Idols, not alone of Idolatry, but of Idols; becauſe from having Idols, to worſhip them, or God by them, it is a very eaſie ſtep; wherefore the godly Jews did demoliſh Idols, and were commanded to do ſo, and ſo I ſuppoſe ought all Magiſtrates and Governours to do in the place where they have power.

Vetus pater Epiphanius ait eſſe horrendum nefas, & non ferendum flagitium, ſi quis vel picturam, quam vir Chriſti ipſius imaginem, excitat in Templis Chriſtianorum: iſti imaginibus & ſtatuis, quaſi ſine illis religio nulla ſit, omnia templa ſua, atque omnes angulos compleverunt. Mocket Apol. Eccleſ. 4. The Auguſtane Confeſſion, p. 94. ſaith Images are by no means to be tolerated in Temples. Vide etiam controv. de cæremon. tertiam. Judæi hodie à Chriſtiana religione alienores ſunt quod vident in Templis Papiſticis ad cultum proſtrare ſculptilia. Humf. Jeſuit. pars ſecunda de natura Eccleſ. rat. tertia. Imagines Pontificiorum, quibus exprimere voluit S. Trinitatem, cum pingunt vel unum virum cum tribus vultibus, vel virum bicipitem, aut bifrontem, additâ columbâ, vel Patrem depingunt effigie viri ſenis, Filium juvenis, vel agni, & Spiritum Sanctum columba, non tantum inepta & monſtroſa ſed etiam Deo ignominioſa ſunt & contra expreſſum Dei mandatum efformantur, atque habentur. Hommij Diſputat. 37. De imaginibus. Deut. 4. 15. As if he ſhould have told them, that he on purpoſe did not appear to them under any viſible form or ſimilitude, leaſt they ſhould repreſent him by that form, and ander it worſhip him, which he ſo much warneth them of in that place. Mr Shermans Greek in the Temple. Vide Grotium in loc.

A ſecond means of occaſioning Idolatry, is familiar ſociety, leagues of amity and friendſhip, and mutual help, (for leagues of peace with ſuch are lawful) eſpecially joyning with them in Matrimony, which was the fault of the Jews in the time of Nehemiah, and which was the beginning of Solomons great * fall; for though the commandment of not marrying with the people round about, were in that reſpect Jewiſh, as it did make a nullity of the marriage, yet now alſo to be unequally yoked with Idolaters as well as any other Infidels, cannot be warrantable neither for man nor woman.

* Aaron erroni populo ad Idolum fabricandum non conſenſit inductum, ſed ceſſit abſtrictus: nec Solomonem eruditum eſt errore putaſſe idolis eſſe ſerviendum, ſed blanditiis fœmineis ad illa ſacrilegia fuiſſe compulſum. Aug. de civit. Dei, l. 14. c. 11.

A third

A third occaſion of Idolatry, is furniſhing Idolaters with means of their falſe worſhip, as making Idols for them, printing their idolatrous books, or any thing like to this, by which they are furthered in their abominations. Theſe are occaſions of Idolatry.

Now appearances are chiefly two:

1. To be ſilent and hold ones peace, and not manifeſt a diſlike of their deeds when occaſion ſerves, for hereby he ſtrengthens the hands of the offenders, as if he did not diſlike his ill practice.

2. To joyn with them outwardly for fear or the like reſpects, though inwardly a man diſlike of their wickedneſſe and folly, as it ſeems Solomon did alone go with his wives for faſhion ſake to their Idol-Temples, though after he might in likelihood have been drawn further. And ſuch was the offence of thoſe that would in Corinth go to the Idols Temples and ſit among their old acquaintance at their idolatrous Feaſt, eating and drinking with them, truſting that this was no fault becauſe they knew an Idol was nothing in the world, which yet Paul doth blame in them, as having communion with Devils in ſo doing. And ſuch is the caſe of thoſe that will needs go ſee Maſs, and there carry themſelves in all reverent ſort as if they liked all, when inwardly they condemn them.

Chap. IV.

Of the third Commandment.

Thou ſhalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain, for the Lord will not hold him guiltleſſe that taketh his Name in vain.

The Lord having injoyned to mankind that principal ſervice which He moſt delighteth in, and which for it ſelf he doth approve and require, commands alſo the leſs principal both for the kinds and ſorts of it, and a ſpecial time to be dedicated thereunto.

The ſorts of this Worſhip are twofold.

1. Solemn.
2. Common.

The Solemn Worſhip is that whereto men do wholly give themſelves, ſetting themſelves apart from all other things to attend it wholly.

The Common is that which is to be performed to God joyntly in and with our other affairs, ſo far forth as in them we have any thing to do with him or any thing of his. It ſufficeth not to honour God in the orderly performance of all religious ſervices commanded by him, but even then alſo when we are buſied in our common affairs, it is our duty to carry our ſelves ſo reſpectively to him-ward, that we may make it appear that we do indeed make him our God; and that due carriage is preſcribed in this Commandment, by forbidding one thing contrary thereto. For the explication of the words, we are to know, that by the [Name of God] is meant himſelf, ſo far forth as he hath made himſelf known to us, and all thoſe things by which (as men are known by their names) he hath pleaſed to manifeſt himſelf unto us. Theſe are all referable to two heads, his Word, and his Works; his Works are of two ſorts, common to all his Creatures, as Creation, Providence; and ſpecial to his Church, as Election, Calling, Juſtification, Sanctification, Adoption, Glorification, and in a word, the whole work of our Redemption. Under the title of his Word are comprehended the holy Scriptures themſelves, the true Religion therein contained, and his holy Titles and Attributes; ſee 1 Tim. 6. 1. All of theſe are meant by the Name of God. To take up this Name of God, is to meddle with them, or have any thing any way to do with any of them. In the ſolemn Worſhip of God we are as it were taken up of God and of his Name, but in common life we have occaſion in divers reſpects to make uſe of the Name of God, either in word, deed, or thought, and ſo to make uſe of them, is to take them up. To take this Name in vain, or for vanity, is ſo to uſe them, as the uſe of them ſerveth not for any ſpiritual good to our ſouls, or any ſpecial honour to him. For all things are idle and fruitleſſe which ſerve not for theſe purpoſes. That is, (ſaith Deodate on Exod. 20. 7.) thou ſhalt not make uſe of it in Oaths, and other kind of frivolous, unprofitable, raſh, falſe and impious ſpeeches. So then as the ſubſtance of the firſt Commandment was to require piety, and of the ſecond true religiouſneſſe, ſo the ſcope of this is to require a godly or holy converſation; that is, behaving of our ſelves holily and godly in the courſe of our lives, even then when we are not buſied in performing any duty of Religion. That in our common and uſual ſpeech and actions, we declare what a worthy and reverent eſtimation we have of the Lord; as by ſpeaking all good of his Name, Word, and Works; and in our lawful callings, by ordering and behaving our ſelves wiſely and graciouſly. Rogers ſeventh Treatiſe of the Commandments, c. 15.

Non jurabis fruſtra Chald. ne jures falſo Syr. & Arab. Non aſſumes] nempe in os tuum. Id autem fit non tantum proprio Dei nomine expreſſo, ſed etiam quovis vocabulo quo Deus intelligitur. Grotius in Exod. 20. In vanum] id eſt, non pejerabis, Grotius in loc. alſo, ſic Wolkelius, & alij. Sed latiùs patet hoc præceptum quàm ut ad juramentum reſtringi debeat. Cartw. in loc. Vide plura ibid. Lo tiſſa ad verbum, non feres, verbum Naſa valde latè patet, & varias habet ſignificationes, quæ tamen omnes videntur deducta à ſignificatione levandi, tollendi, ſeu elevandi. Quia non ea quæ tollimus aut levamus in altum, prius ſunt aſſumenda aut capienda, hinc etiam in ſignificatione aſſumendi, aut uſurpandi accipitur, qua ſignificatione in ſermone, prophetia & jure jurando accipi ſolet, imo aliquando ſine ulla adjectione ſumitur hoc verbum pro jurare, ut Iſa. 3. 7. jiſſa bajom habu, ad verbum, aſſumet in die illo, id eſt, jurabit, ubi ſupplent manum, attollet manum, quod in juramento fiebat. Gen. 14. 12. Hic aſſumere nomen, eſt uſurpare nomen Dei jurando. Deus enim vult ut in juramento in nomen ipſius, invocetur, unde illud tam ſæpè repetitum, jurabis per nomen meum, Deut. 6. 13. & 10. 20. Iſa. 48. 1. Rivetus in Deca logum. Schem Jehovæ, nomen Domini, accipitur in Scriptura pro Deo ipſo, & pro notitia ejus, qua inter homines celebratur, ac pro omni eo quod de Deo dici poteſt. Æquivalent autem iſta, invocare nomen Dei, & Deum invocare, jurare per nomen Dei, & per Deum jurare; quod tamen fieri non poteſt, niſi uſurpato aliquo nomine quo Deum ſignificamus, aut ſigno aliquo, quod vicem nominis gerit. Id. ibid. Summa & ſcopus eſt: ut nominis Dei Majeſtas nobis ſit ſacroſancta; ideoque de nomine divino non leviter, contemptim, irreverenter aut contumelioſè vel ſentiamus vel loquamur, &c. Fabrit. Conc. in Decal.

Thus Bp Downame and Wollebius alſo interprets this Commandment. The gracious heart ſees God in every thing, Exod. 15. 1, 2, 3. Deut. 33. ult. Judg. 5. 3, 4. 1 Sam. 2. 2, 3. In afflictions, I held my peace becauſe it was thy doing, ſaith David, in mercies, Gen. 33. 10. See ver. 4. & Pſal. 44. 3.

Reaſons.

The Lord will not hold him guiltleſſe, that is, will certainly puniſh him, 1 King. 2. 9. See Prov. 12. 3. & 28. 20. Laſcavi, in vanum, vel fruſtra, ſic vulgata ut LXX. Schave, apud Ebraos ſumitur pro re vana aut nihili, pro eo quod eſt gratis, aut fruſtra ſæpe, non pro mendacio. Hic retinemus ſignificationem generalem; non jurandum, aut uſurpandum nomen Domini, ubi neceſſe non eſt; minus includit majus, ſi fruſtra non ſit uſurpandum nomen Domini, multo minus falſó. Eadem enim eſt vis vocis quæ apud Latinos vocabuli vani, quod tam pro mendacio, quam pro re levicula accipi ſolet. Sequitur comminatio prohibitioni addita, lo jenakeh, non abſolvet, non innocentem judicabit, ad verbum, non mundificabit, eum qui nomen ejus in vanum uſurpaverit, non ſinet impunitum, quo verbo, plus ſignificatur quam prima facie videtur, eſt enim μείωσις Ebræis familiaris qua plus intelligitur quam dicitur. LXX. vocem Ebraicam expreſſerunt ὐ μὴ καθαρίσῃ, id eſt, non mundabit, ſeu non habebit pro mundo, neque impunem dimittet, ſic Deut. 5. 11. hoc eſt, graviſſime puniet, 2 Reg. 2. 21. Rivet. ubi ſupra. Vide illum in Pſal. 24. v. 4. *Eſt verbum judiciale, & oſtendit tranſgreſſores hujus præcepti reos fieri iræ Dei & pœnarum. Huic commination*i inclusa eſt promiſſio præmij contrarij obſervatoribus hujus præcepti exſpectandi, &c. Fabrit. *Conc. in Decal. Quæſitum eſt, cur addita ſit pœna, quum ſuperius præceptum commination*em habeat in omnes Dei oſores, & contemptores. Reſpondeo, duplici de cauſa. 1. Ut ſui nominis majeſtatem nobis hac ratione Deus magis magiſque commendet & vindicet à contemptu. Ergo non eſt contentus generali pœna, ut eam ſanciret, ſed hanc etiam ſpecialem addit. 2. Perè apud homines vileſcit hoc genus ſceleris, & pro nihilo ducitur, itaq; neq; legibus ferè puniunt, neq; pro vitio habent homines. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 9.

1. The Lord promiſeth this as a great mercy, Matth. 5. 8. See God in all his diſpenſations here, and beatifically in Heaven.

2. This will ſet one in Heaven, Matth. 18. 20. the Saints in Heaven injoy God in all.

3. The Lord requireth this of us, he alone ſhould be exalted, Iſaiah 2. 17. Rev. 21. 22, 23.

Now we will proceed to ſhew what things are { 1. Required, 2. Forbidden } in this Commandment.

The

The things required may be fitly drawn to these two heads.

1. A due and right use of such holy actions as fall out to be performed in and with our common affairs, by which we do call God himself as it were to intermeddle with our businesses and affairs.

2. A right and due behaviour in our common affairs, so far as they may any way touch God, or concern him.

For the first, there are (say some, though this be controverted) two holy actions, whereof we have many occasions to make use of in our ordinary dealings; these are { An Oath, A Lot.

An holy action is that which hath God for the next and immediate object, and which is done for the exercising of holiness either in whole or in part, as for the next immediate end thereof; which description doth sufficiently distinguish the thing described from all other things, and agrees to all such things which are of that kind; and this description doth equally agree to these two forenamed things, viz. a Lot and an Oath, both of which are holy.

1. For an Oath, I will declare, 1. The nature. 2. The use of it.

For the Nature of an Oath, there are the essential or proper parts of it, and the next and proper end whereto those parts are to be applied in the taking of an Oath.

Divers Schoolmen, Casuists, Civilians, and Theological Writers, both Papists and Protestants, agree in the definition of an Oath, That it is a calling of God to witnesse, for the confirmation of a matter that is doubtful. Mr Lawsons Body of Divinity, l. 2. c. 19. See Mr Cartwright on Psal. 15. v. 4.

The parts of an Oath I tearm those several and distinct acts which are included in it, and each of which must be conceived to be done at least implicitely when we take an Oath.

There are four in all.

1. An Affirmation or Negation either narrative or obligatory; that is, either barely declaring what is or is not, or else binding one to or from some thing, and this it hath common with common speech.

2. A confession of Gods Omniscience, Omnipotence, Justice, Authority, and other like holy Attributes, all included in the mention of his holy life in that usual form of swearing, The Lord liveth.

3. Invocation of Gods Name, or a calling upon him to shew these holy Attributes of his in bearing witnesse to the truth of that which we do swear. Assumere Deum in testem dicitur jurare, quia quasi pro jure introductum est, ut quod sub invocatione divini testimonij dicitur, pro vero habeatur. Aquin. secunda secundæ, q. 8. art. 1.

4. Imprecation against our selves, or a putting over our selves into his hands, to be by him punished according to his power and justice, if the thing we affirm be not true, or if we do any way falsifie our Oath. Wherefore these two parts are frequently expressed in an Oath, though they be most times omitted, and the bare Name of God mentioned, saying, The Lord liveth. The Apostle saith, God is my witnes, whom I serve with my spirit in the Gospel of his Son. And, I call God to record against my soul. And Ruth takes her Oath in these terms, The Lord do so to me, and more also, if any thing but death shall separate betwixt thee and me. So Solomon, God do so to me and more also, if Adonijah have not spoken this word against his own life. These are the parts of an Oath.

Rom. 1. 9. 2 Cor. 1. 23. Juramentum est Dei attestatio ad veritatem sermonis nostri confirmandam. Calv. Instit. l. 2. c. 8. 1 Kings 2. 23. Juramentum est asseveratio religiosa de re possibili & licita, cum veri Dei invocatione facta, quâ petimus, ut sit testis dictorum; & fallentes puniat. D. Prid. Conc. 5. de Religione juramenti.

The end or purpose to which these all must be applied, is the ending of some doubt or controversie, and so setling of peace and quietnesse, for so saith the Apostle, Heb. 6. 6. An Oath for confirmation is to them an end of all controversies. For God is so great a lover of peace and concord amongst men, that he is well pleased that they they make uſe of his Name for the preventing of diſſention and eſtabliſhing of peace. To theſe two things muſt be added, a third, that we may fully know the nature of an Oath, and that is the object of it, or the perſon to be ſworn by, which ſhould have been named in the firſt place, and that is God himſelf, as witneſſeth the Prophet, Jer. 4.2. Thou ſhalt ſwear the Lord liveth. So Deut. 6.11. Thou ſhalt fear the Lord and ſerve him, and ſwear by his Name, & 10. 10. Thou ſhalt cleave to the Lord, and ſwear by his Name. Theſe things now laid all together, give us to underſtand the true nature of an Oath, viz. That it is an holy action, wherein we refer our ſelves unto God as a competent witneſſe and Judg, for the confirmation of the truth of our ſpeeches, to make all doubts and controverſies ceaſe. See Robinſons Eſſayes, Obſervat. 49.

Juramentum eſt duplex, 1. Aſſertorium, quod præcipuè fidem facit de re præterita aut præſenti, ut aliquid credatur, 2 Cor. 1. 23. 2. Promiſſorium, quod prospicit futura, ubi ad faciendum vel omittendum aliquid noſmetipſos aſtringimus, 1 Sam. 14. 44. Id ib. Uſitatiſſima ceremonia eſt, ut quis jurando manum in cœlum tollat. Dubium non eſt, quin hoc ritu proteſtetur, ſe jurare per eum qui in cœlis regnat, quiq; è cœlis poteſt ſe, ſi mentiatur, graviter punire. Zanch. de Decalogo. Ritus à Judæis obſervatus ille eſt, ut juraturi ſuper librum legis, aut tale aliquid quod ſacrum erat, manum ponere tenerentur: at hunc librum non niſi dignum, idoneum, hoc eſt, ſumma religione ſcriptum & paratum, non vitiatum proponunt, & quo in ſuis Synagogis utantur omne aliud juramentum qualecunque ſit & quavis forma expreſſum, rident, ac pro nihilo ducunt; unicum hoc legitimum agnoſcunt & venerantur. Filelac. Seleft. l. 2. c. 4.

There are many Diviſions of Oaths, Publick, Private, Voluntary, Impoſed, ſome are judicial, ſome extrajudicial; ſome explicite, ſome implicite. The principal and moſt uſual, is that of Aſſertory, and Promiſſory. Aſſertory is of that which is paſt or preſent: Promiſſory, of ſome thing to come: This latter is often uſed to confirm Leagues or Contracts, publick or private. The Confirmation, in both theſe kinds of Oaths is the ſame, and that is, by calling God to witneſſe. The Schoolemen have a Rule, received both by all Caſuiſts and Civilians, That a promiſſory Oath cannot be diſcharged for any other reaſon, but for the unlawfullneſſe of the matter.

Hitherto we have ſeen the nature of an Oath; let us ſearch into the uſe of an Oath, and ſhew { 1. Upon what occaſions } it is to be uſed.

{ 2. In what manner }

Summa apud veteres cautela atque religio circa juramentum; ita ut quidam ab eo prorſus abſtinendum putarent. Et certè jusjurandum aut omittendum penitus, aut parcè & rarò uſurpandum: nec ut cibus, ſed ut condimentum, vel potius ut medicina, & juramentum reverà remedium eſt, maximum remedium expediendarum litium, ut paſſim appellant; Juriſconſulti; ad remedia autem non recurrimus, niſi quando urget neceſſitas; Nec Deus interſit, niſi dignus vindice nodus. Duporti Gnomologia Homerica.

The occaſions of uſing an Oath are for the ſatisfying of one that requireth or will accept it in a thing of ſome weight, either for it ſelf or for the conſequence, whether it be before a Magiſtrate judicially, or in private ſpeech, as alſo for the tying and binding one ſelf to do or not to do a thing of ſome moment, which I might elſe by ſome occaſion be altered in. In all theſe caſes we have examples of good men that have uſed ſwearing, and therefore we may alſo lawfully ſwear. To ſatisfie another that requires it, Abrahams ſervant took an Oath about the taking of a wife for Iſaac, and Joſeph about burying his Father in Canaan, and the Iſraelites about burying Joſephs bones. To ſatisfie another that would accept the ſame, Paul ſwore to the Romans and Corinthians of his good affection to the one, and the cauſe of his not coming to the other. To bind himſelf, Solomon ſware to put Adoniſah to death; and Ruth, to go with her mother; and the Prophet Eliſha, not to leave Eliah. So when it falleth out, that in a matter of ſome moment there is cauſe of ſatisfying another, in giving him aſſurance that I ſpeak truth, or of binding my ſelf to ſpeak truth, and accompliſh the truth of my words, then it is an honour to God that we interpoſe his Name to aſſure others and tye our ſelves to ſpeak the truth.

Gods people have been tender in caſe of an Oath, Joſh. 9.9,10. Gods great quarrel with Chriſtendome is for breaking their Oathes, Lev. 26.25. Heb. 10.29. all Chriſtendome is in viſible Covenant with God.

Theſe are the occaſions of ſwearing, the rules of ſwearing upon theſe occaſions are three three, as the Prophet Jeremiah hath ſet them down, chap. 4. 2.

1. Truth.
2. Judgement.
3. Righteouſneſſe.

Truth is oppoſed to falſhood or perjury: Judgment to raſh and common ſwearing; Righteouſneſſe to unjuſt and unlawful Oaths.

Vide Rivetum in Pſal. 24. v. 4. In judgment diſcreetly, when the cauſe is found weighty, the doubt difficult and an Oath neceſſary, that belongs to the Perſon. In truth ſincerely, when the matter is well known to be ſo, that belongs to the Matter. In righteouſneſs honeſtly, that juſtice may be fulfilled, that belongs to the End.

1. Truth, that is, when the words of the mouth agree with the meaning of the heart, and both with the thing it ſelf whereof the ſpeech is, and that without all doubting, halting, equivocating, ſhifting, according to the meaneth that we would ſeem to have to him, which giveth or requireth the Oath of us. He that indeed intendeth what he pretendeth in the words of his Oath, ſwearing truely in a promiſſive Oath; and in an aſſertive Oath, he that ſweareth what he knoweth to be or not to be.

2. Judgment is a ſerious conſideration of the nature of an Oath, and of the thing which we do ſwear about, and it is oppoſed to raſhneſſe, headineſſe, and unadviſedneſſe, that we may ſwear with due reſpect to the great Name of God, which we do take into our mouths when we ſwear.

Ad bonum uſum juramenti duo requiruntur. Primò quidem, quod aliquis non leviter, ſed ex neceſſaria cauſa, & diſcretè juret. Et quantum ad hoc requiritur judicium ſcilicet diſcretionis, ex parte juranti. Secundò, quantum ad id quod per juramentum confirmatur, ut ſcilicet neque ſit falſum, neq; ſit aliquid illicitum, & quantum ad hoc requiritur veritas, per quam aliquis juramento confirmat quod verum eſt, & juſtitia per quam confirmat quod licitum eſt. Aquinas, ſecunda ſecundæ, Quæſt. 89. Art. 3.

3. Righteouſneſſe is when we do ſwear ſo as to give God and man his due in our Oath, having due reverence to God, and ſwearing about things good, honeſt, and lawful, that we may ſettle peace betwixt our ſelves and others, and ſo may declare our honourable account of Gods Name; but the principal point of righteouſneſſe in ſwearing, is, when we ſwear only to good and honeſt things, for good and honeſt purpoſes, and accordingly ſtand to our Oaths; and the Prophet puts judgement in the mideſt betwixt theſe two, becauſe it is an help to both, ſeeing he that ſweareth raſhly cannot tell but he may ſoon ſtumble upon falſhood and unrighteouſneſſe, ſo that judgement reſpecteth the manner of ſwearing chiefly, and truth and righteouſneſſe the matter.

Thus you ſee the nature and uſe of an Oath, and to ſwear thus is a moſt worthy ſervice of God.

Vix copioſiores unquam homines & magis luxuriantes, quàm in juramentorum formulis. Creguti Revelator Arcanorum, c. 8. Vide plura ibid.

Rivet on Pſal. 24. well determines that queſtion, What is to be thought of that cuſtome which is uſed in ſome Reformed Churches, of touching the Bible or Goſpel when one ſwears. The Angel lifted up his hand towards Heaven in ſwearing, Dan. 12. 7. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 6. 16. divers Sections.

Mr Baxter (in his Diſputation of Church Government, Diſputat. 5. chap. 2.) ſaith, the taking of an Oath is not primarily an act of worſhip, but reductively and conſequentially: It being the principal uſe of an Oath to confirm the truth, and end ſtrife, by appealing to God; which appellation is indeed an acknowledgment of his Government and Juſtice. See more there.

Mr Tombs in his Conſideration of the Oath of Supremacy, ſhews

1. That ſome ſwearing is lawful.
2. That ſome promiſſory Oaths are lawful.
3. That a promiſſory Oath of Allegiance and due Obedience to a King is lawful.

See alſo his Supplement. See alſo Bp Ushers Speech of the Oath of Supremacy.

Mr Galliard in his Right of the Church Aſſerted, oppoſeth the preſſing of the Canonical Oath; He ſaith the Apoſtles impoſed no ſuch Oaths upon their fellow-Miniſters.

We

We muſt ſpeak now of a Lot, and ſhew alſo the nature and uſe thereof.

To the conſtituting of a Lot three things muſt concur:

1. Some controverſie or matter in doubt not agreed upon.

2. A caſual act, that is, ſuch an act as in regard of the event, dependeth not upon the will, or wit, or activity of any man or creature, but upon the ſecret diſpoſing of Gods providence, which men do fondly thruſt out of ſight by the name of luck or chance.

Sors eſt petitio divini teſtimonij per determinationem eventus in mera contingentia manifeſtandi, ad controverſiam aliquam dirimendam. Amef. Medul. Theol. l. 2. c. 11. Sors eſt actio humana in hunc finem inſtituta, ut ex ejus eventu rem nobis incognitam divinitus agnoſcere poſſimus. Zanchius in Miſcel. Sors eſt res in dubitatione humana divinam indicans voluntatem. Auguſt. in Pſal. 30. A Lot is nothing elſe but a caſualty, or caſual event purpoſely applied to the determination of ſome doubtfull thing. Of Lots, ſome are meer, ſome mixt. Meer Lots are thoſe wherein there is nothing elſe but a Lot, or wherein there is nothing applied to determine the doubt but onely meer caſualty. Mixt Lots are thoſe wherein ſomething elſe beſides caſualty is applied to determine the doubt; as namely, wit, skill, induſtry, and the like. Lots are, 1. Extraordinary, thoſe wherein God and his immediate and ſpecial Providence inevitably conducteth the Lot to that end whereunto it was intended. 2. Ordinary, thoſe wherein God by his general Providence ſupporting the natural abilities of the Creatures, ſuffereth it to work according to that power wherewith it is enabled. Mr Downe in his Defence of the lawfulneſſe of Lots in gaming.

3. A referring of the determination of that controverſie to the event of that caſual act, whether by the mutual conſent of parties, or appointment of ſome ſuperiour.

Quod Latini ſortem id Graci κλῆρον vocant. Neque magni facio, quod ad meam inſtitutum, qua alij de originatione utriuſq; aſſerunt, eſſe nempe ſortem, à ſerie κατ' ἀντιφρασιν diſtam, quod minime ſeriem, id eſt, ordinem ſervet. Κλῆρον verò à κλᾶν factum quòd frangit, hoc eſt. dirimit lites & controverſias. Medi problema, An alea ſit ſortitio. Sortes Deus regit ſpeciali manu, & virtute extraordinaria, alioquin quid novi aut proprij dixerat Salomon, Prov. 16. ult. cum nihil in toto mundo ſit quod non à Dei providentia gubernetur, ſed communi & ordinaria, non vero ſpeciali iſta. Idem ibid?

And in this reference there are contained and implied the ſame things that before were contained in an Oath, viz.

1. A ſecret acknowledgment of Gods infinite Wiſdome and Authority over us, viz. that he knoweth how to diſpoſe of all things in the beſt manner, and that all men ought to be content without any more ado to ſtand to his determination.

2. An Invocation, or calling upon him to exerciſe his Authority and Wiſdome in the diſpoſing of the caſual event ſo as ſhall ſeem beſt to him for the determining of the preſent controverſie according to his mind.

3. A binding or tying of the parties to ſtand to his determination, a profeſſion that he will be ſatisfied with ſuch determination as he ſhall pleaſe to make by diſpoſing of the Lot. So the caſting of a Lot is none other thing in effect, but an actual expreſſing of ſuch a form of words as theſe: Lord, thou knoweſt in all caſes what is beſt and fitteſt to be done, and we here are all equally ſubject unto thee, wherefore there being a thing in controverſie betwixt us, which we cannot ſo well agree upon our ſelves, but that there will be ſome diſcontent betwixt us, we are willing to ſtand to thy determination, and as thou ſhalt ſhew thy own pleaſure to be by ordering this caſual event (which nothing but thy ſecret providence can order) ſo ſhall we reſt ſatisfied; and we beſeech thee now to declare thy mind herein accordingly.

The caſting of a Lot is but a compendium, or abridgment, or actual expreſſing of ſuch a prayer, wherefore alſo the Apoſtles to the caſting of a Lot for the choice of an Apoſtle, did adde ſuch a prayer, Acts 1. Shew whether of theſe two thou haſt choſen.

By this which hath been ſaid it is evident, that a Lot and an Oath are both of the ſame nature, and that the due uſe of them is a ſpecial honour to God in the exerciſing of humble ſubmiſſion to him, and faith in his Providence, Truth and Goodneſſe.

This is the nature of a Lot: it follows to declare the uſe both in regard of

1. The occaſions of uſing.
2. The manner of uſing.

1. The

1. The occaſions of uſing a Lot can be none other than to determine ſomething in controverſie.

All controverſies muſt needs be about matters { Paſt / Preſent / To come

As who is to do, or have ſuch or ſuch a thing, who hath done, or who doth it.

Now for the determining of things paſt and preſent, a Lot doth not ſerve at all, once or twice it was uſed for that extraordinarily, but it is not ordinary for that purpoſe.

But doubts about things to come are of two ſorts:

1. Contingent, doubtful, and uncertain events and accidents, as Haman by Lot would foreknow how his device againſt the Jews ſhould ſpeed; and for theſe a Lot is not ordained.

2. Diſpoſitions or diſtributions of labours, offices, rewards, puniſhments, poſſeſſions, or the like, and for theſe purpoſes was a Lot appointed, as Solomon noteth, ſaying, Prov. 18. 18. The Lot parteth, or maketh diviſion among the mighty. But we muſt put our ſelves in mind, that doubts and controverſies about ſuch things are of two ſorts: ſome made by men of their own will, and not exiſtent in nature of themſelves; ſome exiſtent in nature, and not onely made by men.

Now if men will needs make a doubt for ſatisfying of their own fancies, where none is or need to be, the thing being already by other means put out of doubt, it is a preſumptuous boldneſſe to put ſuch a doubt to God to umpire, ſeeing no wiſe Superiour would take it well to be ſo imployed by his inferiour, but would utterly refuſe to intermeddle in ſuch deciſions. For example, A man gave unto his four ſervants 10lb a piece, or ſo many pence, and they will needs make ſuch a bargain among themſelves, of this 40lb, one of us ſhall have twenty marks, the other 12lb, and the other 12lb, and the other juſt nothing, and the remainder ſhall be to relieve the poore, wherefore they come to their Maſter to tell who of the four ſhall have the forenamed ſummes, and who juſt nothing, would he not be diſcontented with them and reprove them, and not have any hand in ſuch a diviſion, as being fooliſh and unequal? and ſo ſtands the caſe in all Lotteries, and yet they are bold to uſe a Lot to determine the matter; that is, to refer themſelves to Gods providence in this caſe, and to make him their umpire; is not this an abuſe of him? Wherefore in ſuch coined doubts God muſt not be made a determiner, unleſſe we will be bold to draw him into the participation of our folly.

But of true and real doubts exiſtent in nature there are alſo two kinds; for

1. Some are trivial and of no weight.
2. Some are of weight and moment.

I ſhall propound the opinion of a Reverend Divine ſeeing the thing is much controverted, and leave it to the wiſe to judg.

There is a great controverſie between Mr Gataker, Dr Ames, and Voetius about this point.

To put trifling and toyiſh differences, ſportful and ludicrous controverſies unto Gods determination (ſaith he) is ſurely to abaſe and abuſe him, ſeeing a Lot is an implicite invocation, as I ſaid; where a man would abhor to make ſuch a prayer in word there it were alſo profaneſſe to make it an act, or by ſignes to ſignifie it, as it is done in a Lot. But in differences that either of themſelves, or in regard of the conſequents of them, be of moment and weight, there a Lot may and muſt be uſed, that peace may be ſetled amongſt men, none having to find fault with the diviſion, unleſſe he will be ſo bold and wicked as to find fault with God. So in the diviſion of the Land of Canaan, of the Prieſts Offices, of the work of fighting and victualing the Camp a Lot was uſed, as alſo in the choice of an Apoſtle in Judas room, and of the tythe Lamb in the fold. For becauſe infinite heart-burnings and quarrels might have grown betwixt the Prieſt and people for Tythe-Lambs, if either the one ſhould have taken, or the other have given which he would, and that the order of their yeaning could not certainly be known, therefore that alſo was a matter of great weight, in regard of the conſequence thereof for the conſtant and univerſal order and courſe of tything, though for the particular difference betwixt ſome one or other Lamb, the matter

This is a ſpecial Ordinance of God to decide a controverſie from Heaven by God himſelf, when al means on earth fail, therefore Lots muſt not be uſed without great reverence and prayer, becauſe the diſpoſition of them comes immediately from the Lord, Prov. 16. 33. and not but in great matters, not for recreation: for it is ſaid to cauſe contentions to ceaſe among the mighty, Prov. 18. 18. Neither do we read it was ever uſed, but in very great things, as the dividing of the Land of Canaan, the election of high-Prieſts and Kings, and the ſurrogation of Matthias into the place of Judas. Dr Taylor on Chriſts temptation. Dr Jeremy Taylor in his Ductor Dubitantium, lib. 4. cap. 1. ſaith, Cards and Dice are of themſelves lawful, and gives Rules there for conducting our Sports and Recreations; and alſo holds the Trade of Card-makers and Dice-makers to be lawful. His 2d Rule is, He that means to make his Games lawful, muſt not play for money, but for refreſhment. The gaining of money (ſaith he) can have no influence into the Game, to make it the more recreative, unleſſe covetouſneſſe hold the Box. Mr Gouge in his Chriſtian Directions for walking with God, chap. 12. ſaith, in Dice-play, and ſome Games at Cards, there is nothing but an expectation of an uncertain event, wherein neither wit of mind, nor exerciſe of body is uſed, which are the main ends of Sports and Recreations. Mr Trevethick in his Epiſtle Dedicatory to his Sermon Preached at the Funeral of Mr Rolle of Heanton, ſaith, Gaming at Cards and Dice was not tolerated in his Anceſtors Families for a full century of years. The gain that comes that way is worſe than Uſury, yea it is flat Theft; for by the Law we may recover things ſtolne, but there is no Law to recover things wonne. And yet if play be but for a ſmall matter, the loſſe whereof is no hurt to him that loſeth it, and it be applied to a common good, it is lawful, otherwiſe not. Mr Perkins Caſe of Conſc. 390. Things ſanctified to ſome eſpecial and holy uſe, muſt not be made a recreation; therefore I think with divers godly and learned men, that the uſe of a Lot for recreation is unlawfull, becauſe a Lot is an eſpecial means, whereby God hath ordained by himſelf from Heaven, to end ſuch controverſies, as otherwiſe cannot conveniently be ended. 2. The Scripture maketh a Lot, ſo the ſentence of God, as in the moſt weighty matters of God and man, of life and death, it is the very Oracle and Declaration of Gods will, wherein man muſt reſt without any contradiction or motion to the contrary. So Acts 1. 24, 26. Numb. 26. 55. Levit. 16. 8. for matters of God; and Joſh. 14. for matters of life; yea the Gentiles themſelves knew it to be the very Oracle of God, Jon. 1. 7. Such Oracles of God muſt not be uſed for recreation, ſeeing they are his Name, and muſt not be vainly uſed. Therefore Dice, dealing of Cards, where the matter is laid on hazard (as they call it) or rather Gods providence, without uſing any cunning of ours to diſpoſe it, is upon the ſame reaſon of a Lot unlawfull. A Lot is abuſed in thoſe Games of Dice and Cards, &c. which wholly conſiſt in chance: for in Toys and Sports we are not to appeal to the immediate judgement of God, Prov. 6. 33. Br Down. Abſtract on the third Precept. To make a gain of Play is a Theft, and againſt the eighth Commandment and Precept of the Law, Epheſ. 4. 28. Their courſe is an unjuſt taking into their poſſeſſion that which no Law of Chriſt or man doth warrant them by any manner of lawfull contract; the Civil Law and Auguſtine condemn that gain which is gotten by play. Dr Taylor. Prov. 16. 3. & 18. 18. Vide Fabritium in octavum præceptum Decalogi, pag. 450, 451. Dudley Fenners Treatiſe of Recreation. Mr Dod on the eighth Commandment, pag. 275, 276. And Mr Elton on the eighth Commandment, pag. 311. the Theatre of Gods Judgem. part 1. chap. 43. Mr Hinds Remonſtrance of Mr Bruens Life and Death, chap. 37, 38, 39. A Lot muſt be in weighty matters; if in vain things, it is a breach of this Commandment; therefore Dice, Cards, and Tables are unlawfull, for we may not uſe a Lot in ſo light a matter, as we may not ſwear lightly, theſe things muſt not be uſed at our pleaſure. Mr Richardſon in his Manuſcript. Merito propter irreverentiam, & neceſſitatis defectum damnantur aleæ, aut teſſerarum, calculorum, & chartarum ludi. Rivetus in Pſal. 22. v. 19. pag. 225. Commercij gratia non eſt inter homines inſtitutus Ludus, ut aliquid ex eo quod eſt alienum nobis acquiramus, & comparemus, ſed tantùm ut animi relaxandi, corporiſve reficiendi vel exercendi ratio quædam eſſet. Danæus De Ludo Aleæ. cap. 2. Vide plura ibid.

matter was not great. So the due occaſion of uſing a Lot, is a real difference of ſome moment about the diviſions of ſomething to be divided betwixt ſuch or ſuch that may ſeem to have reaſon to challenge each what would beſt content and ſatisfie himſelf.

The manner of uſing a Lot upon ſuch occaſions follows, and that muſt be thus:

1. With a reverent careful obſervation of Gods providence in the event of the thing, and diſpoſing of the controverſie ſo, as a mans heart may ſay within it ſelf, Thou Lord haſt done this or that, not by the wit and skill, or will of any man, but the hidden work of thine own providence without any ſuch thing coming betwixt, and thou haſt manifeſted to me thy good pleaſure, that things ſhould be diſtributed thus or thus.

2. It muſt be uſed with a quiet ſubmiſſion of our will to Gods will ſo manifeſted, giving up our ſelves to be ruled by that hand and providence without murmuring. For ſeeing the diſpoſition of a Lot is of God, therefore we cannot grudge at the falling of it out ſo or ſo, but that we ſhall ſeem to pick a quarrel with God.

Hitherto of the right uſe of ſuch holy acts as come to be uſed in and with our common affairs.

It follows to ſhew how we muſt order our ſelves in our common affairs, ſo far forth as in them we have to do with God, or any of thoſe things by which he makes himſelf known to us.

This is double.

1. Inward.

2. Outward.

2. Outward.

The inward alſo is double in regard of

1. Gods Actions.
2. Our Actions.

That which reſpecteth Gods actions is alſo double,

1. To ſee him in them.
2. To make a good uſe of them.

The firſt thing we are bound unto for the ſanctifying of Gods Name, is to ſee him in all his actions, that is, to take notice of him as the Author of them, informing our ſelves that he hath wrought them, as David doth *Pſal.*8.3. & 118. 23. & Pſal. 44. 1, 2, 3. Pſal. 18. 47, 48. Job 1. 21. *Joſeph, Gen.*45.7,8. *Pſal.*46.8. All things that are done in all the world, natural, ſupernatural, common, ſpecial, of mercy, of juſtice, good, bad, of what kind ſoever, muſt in ſome ſenſe (even the bad ſo far as they be actions and means of good) be aſcribed to God, and man muſt ſpeedily take notice of Gods providence and working in them, and ſay, The Lord hath done this or that, be it never ſo ſmall or trifling, for his providence extendeth to every motion of every creature, ſeeing in him we live, and move, and have our being.

A gracious heart ſees God in every thing. God would have his people find all in him, *Gen.*15.1. Zach. 2. 5. and the Saints have alwayes reſolved all into God, Pſal. 18. 1. & 27. 1. & 84. 11. & 90.1. & 16. 5. & 43. 11. See 1 Job. 4. 16. He that expects not all from God as the chiefeſt good, and reſolves not all into him as the utmoſt end, is an Atheiſt, *Epheſ.*2.12. To ſee God in every thing, is 1. Continually to ſee all good things to be eminently in God, Rev. 21. 7. *Pſal.*73.25. 2. To ſee all things come from God, cauſative or permiſſive, as the efficient cauſe, if good; as the permitting cauſe, if evil. 3. To obſerve in all things what of God is to be ſeen, 1 Pet. 1. 12. 4. To hope onely in him, and to fear none but him; He is called the fear of Iſaac, and the hope of Iſrael. See Jer.17.17. Qui nil ſperent niſi à Domino, nil metuunt præter Dominum. Bern. 5. To love God for himſelf, and all things elſe for him, *Zach.*8.ult. 6. To obſerve Gods departings, and to be afflicted with nothing ſo much. Numb. 14. 9. Deut. 22. 30. The main of godlineſſe is in making God your All, therefore the luſts of our hearts are called ungodly luſts. The more one can ſee and taſte God in every thing, the more he thrives in grace. See Pſal. 104. 34. Hereby the ſoul ſees the Allſufficiency of God to ſatisfie him, Prov. 14. 14. This is the only ground of the triumph of Faith, I will make my boaſt in God. See Hab. 3. 17, 18. and is the beginning of eternal life, Matth. 18. 14.

2. The ſecond thing we are bound to in regard of Gods Actions, is to make a good uſe of them, by building up our ſelves thereby in the knowledge of God, and in all holy affections of love, fear, confidence toward him, and of hatred of ſin, love of righteouſneſſe, and the like; as when the people ſaw that great miracle wrought by the Lord by the hand of Eliah, they cried out, The Lord is God, the Lord is God, 1 King.18.39. So David ſaith, *Pſal.*116.1. I love the Lord, becauſe he hath heard the voyce of my ſupplication. So David having ſaid, *Pſal.*33.6,7. that God hath made all things, addeth, Let all the earth fear the Lord, let all the inhabitants of the world ſtand in awe of him, for he ſpake and they were created. So the Lord himſelf ſaith, Jer. 5. 22. Fear ye not me, ſaith the Lord, will ye not tremble at my preſence, which have placed the ſand for the bound of the ſea? When we ſee Gods Works, we muſt ſee in them the clear demonſtration of his Wiſdome, Power, Juſtice, Mercy, and other holy Attributes, that we may grow in knowledg of him, and love, and fear, and other virtues.

Now this is a general uſe to be made of all, but there are two ſpecial works which he uſeth to do to mankind, works of Mercy and Juſtice, which require two ſpecial uſes,

1. A thankful receiving of the works of mercy.
2. A patient and penitent bearing of corrections.

Thankful receiving of mercies is, ſo to taſte and feel the goodneſſe of God in them, that we provoke our ſelves by them to ſerve and obey him with more cheerfulneſs, willingneſſe, and readineſſe. Each benefit and bleſſing we enjoy, muſt cauſe us to be more careful of pleaſing him that gave us all thoſe benefits, and ſhould make us renew in our minds ſuch thoughts as theſe; It is God which feedeth me, preſerveth me, O why ſhould not I reſpect, honour, love, ſerve him; Lord, I will give my ſelf to thee, I will obey thee, thou deſerveſt it. The duty of thankfulneſſe is required in the firſt Commandment, the improving of all good things to the increaſe of this thankfulneſſe is a ſpecial ſanctifying of Gods Name required in this Hoſ. 2. 8.

Commandment, *Pſal.*116.12. & *Pſal.*118.19. He meaneth there that he will apply himſelf to the practice of all righteouſneſſe becauſe of Gods graciouſneſſe in delivering him out of affliction. The want of this God blameth, *Deut.*28.47. and ſo are good things to be uſed.

Job 1. 23. 2. The patient and penitent bearing of afflictions, is a framing of our ſelves willingly and without grudging to undergo the ſame becauſe God hath done them, yea to humble our ſelves before him, and turn unto him with repentance. So David did, *Pſal.*39.9. & 38.13,17. So James wiſheth, *ch.*4.*v.*10. and Peter, 1 *Pet.*5.6. So doth Eliphaz adviſe, Job 5.8.

When we meet with any evil from God, if we conſider, God hath ſent this upon me, and therefore frame to be well pleaſed with it, and to humble our ſelves and renew our repentance before him, confeſſing our ſins, and ſupplicating to him for favour, and reſolving to caſt away our ſins and amend our lives, this is an excellent uſe of his chaſtiſements, and happy is he whom God ſo chaſtiſeth and teacheth his way.

So much for our right carriage in regard of Gods works, whereby we ſanctifie his Name. Now

We muſt alſo ſanctifie him in regard of our works, by referring them all to his glory, as the main end of them, intending in the doing of them to ſhew our obedience to him, and faith in him; for this end, and in this conſideration doing them, becauſe he either commands or allows them; and with this purpoſe and intention of heart, that we may witneſſe our due regard of him. This is to live to God, and not to our ſelves, which that we may do, Chriſt died for us, 2 Cor. 5. 15. and this the Apoſtle plainly requireth, 1 *Cor.*10.31. So our Saviour ſaith of himſelf, *Joh.*17.4. I have glorified thee, I have done the work thou haſt given me to do. When in each action of ours we conſider God would have us do it, therefore we will do it that we may pleaſe him, and declare our duty to him, this is to glorifie him, elſe we do not honour him by our actions, as by eating, drinking, labouring in our callings, and the like.

So much for the right carriage of our ſelves to God inwardly. We muſt behave our ſelves aright alſo outwardly, and that both in

1. Words.
2. Deeds.

The right ordering of our ſpeech ſtandeth principally in four things:

1. By uttering good wiſhes ſincerely and heartily.
2. By a reverent mention of his Titles and Attributes.
3. By good communication of his Word and Works.
4. By bold confeſſion of his Truth.

Firſt then we muſt utter, as occaſion ſerves, good wiſhes and deſires, whereby we may ſhew the moving of our will to God-ward, to do ſome good or remove ſome evil that is to be done or removed.

Theſe good wiſhes are of two ſorts, for they reſpect either

1. Our ſelves.
2. Others.

Whether { 1. Our Brethren. / 2. Other Creatures.

For our ſelves, if any ſudden peril threatens us, and we do ſuddenly dart out, as it were, the deſires of our ſouls fervently and faithfully, ſaying, Lord help me, or the like, this is a due honouring of Gods name, it is not a ſolemn prayer, but a ſanctified uſe of Gods name. So Jehoſaphat being in great danger by the Aramites who furiouſly aſſailed him, miſtaking him for the King of Iſrael, could not in that caſe frame to any ſet form of ſolemn prayer, yet he cried unto the Lord, that is, ſent up theſe fervent deſires in words to this purpoſe, Lord help me, Lord deliver me, 1 *King.*22.32. 2 *Chron.*18.31. So our Saviour being in extremity of torment on the Croſſe, could not make a ſet ſolemn prayer, but he uttered ſuch a ſhort complaint as contained a ſubmiſſive requeſt to his Father, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? This is an allowable taking of Gods name into our mouths, ſo it be done heartily and reſpectively.

Secondly,

Secondly, Now for others alſo, even our brethren, if upon occaſion of meeting them we open our mouths with good ſalutations, wiſhing a good day, or the like proſperity to them, ſo that it be done ſincerely and with the motions of our minds, looking to God-ward, it is a good ſervice of God, as Boaz ſaluted his reapers, ſaying, The Lord be with thee, Ruth 2. 4. and they returned him alike good wiſhes, ſaying, The Lord bleſſe you: If ſuch ſalutations be heartily uttered it is a right exerciſe of our faith in Gods providence and goodneſſe. And not onely ſo, but if we bleſſe other things, as corn, graſſe, cattle or the like, with the like bleſſing, ſo that we have our hearts only carried to God, it is good and acceptable uſing of his Name, as appeareth in Pſal. 129. 8. where he ſaith of the corn growing on the houſe-tops, that thoſe which paſſe by do not ſay, We bleſſe you in the name of the Lord, ſhewing evidently, that it was a good and commendable cuſtome of the people of God then, to crave Gods bleſſing on the corn, graſſe or other fruites which they ſaw upon the earth in theſe or the like words, God bleſſe it, or God ſave it. Theſe wiſhes if they proceed from the heart duly apprehending the nature of God, whom they mention, are evident declarations of our faith in God, and of our depending upon him for all good things. So much for good wiſhes.

Secondly, We muſt mention the Titles and Attributes of God with all due reſpect and reverence, when we have any occaſion at all to mention them. If it fall out that we uſe this word, God, Lord, Chriſt, Jeſus, or the like, we are to have our hearts affected with ſome reverend regard of thoſe divine perſons that are ſo termed, our hearts muſt entertain honourable conceits of them, and muſt ſubmiſſively be carried towards them; this is that which Moſes meaneth in part, ſaying, Deut. 28. 58. Fear this glorious and fearful Name, the Lord thy God. The Name of God muſt be with fear and reverence taken into our mouths, and we ſhould not once ſpeak of him, but with due apprehenſion of his glorioufneſſe. This is an excellent exerciſing of that worthy virtue of the fear of God, when we do ſo regard him, that at any occaſional mentioning of him our hearts do homage unto him.

Thirdly, We muſt uſe good communication as we go about our other affairs, imploying our tongues as occaſion may offer it ſelf to talk of his Word or Works, Deut. 6. 7. & 11. 19 Judg. 5. 11. therefore we are commanded that our communication be alwayes gracious, Col. 4. 6. & Epheſ. 4. 29. Such communication muſt paſſe out of our mouths as is good to the uſe of edifying, that it may miniſter grace to the hearers. See Prov. 10. 22. Pſal. 37. 30. A good man is to be ready upon all occaſions to ſpeak of good things, the works of God, the Commandments of God, his promiſes, his threats, and all ſuch things as may help to increaſe grace in himſelf or others. When his hand is on earth, as his heart ſo if he have a companion, his tongue muſt be in Heaven.

Fourthly, We ought boldly to make confeſſion of the truth of God in whole or in part, as any occaſion ſhall be offered; So ſaith S^t Peter, 1 Pet. 3. 15. Be ready alwayes to give an anſwer to every one that aſketh you a reaſon of the hope that is in you with meekneſſe and with fear. And this is a thing of ſo great neceſſity that no appearance

See Heb. 4. 14. and 10. 23. 2 Cor. 9. 13. The Centuriſts obſerve four kinds of confeſſion in the New Teſtament. 1. A confeſſion of ſinne to God alone, 1 Joh. 1. 9. 2. A confeſſion coram Eccleſia, before the Church, when men acknowledge publickly their wicked and ſcandalous deeds, and do profeſſe their repenting and loathing of the ſame, Act. 19. 18. 3. Confeſſion one to another of particular private injuries and offences, Jam. 5. 16. 4. The confeſſion or profeſſion of the true faith, 1 Joh. 4. 2. M^r Gilleſp. Aar. Rod bloſſ. l. 2. c. 2. Of profeſſion ſee M^r Baxters 3^d Diſputat. p. 274, 275, 276, 277. Truths to be confeſſed, are 1. Truths of faith, 1 Pet. 3. 15. 2. Truths of fact, Joſhua 7. 14. The juſt occaſions of confeſſing, 1. Our faith, are, 1. When the true faith is oppoſed, Acts 24. 14. 2. When we are queſtioned about it by Magiſtrates, Dan 3. 3. When others go aſide from the true faith, Acts 17. 23. 4. When it tends to the edification of the Church and State where we live, 1 Cor. 14. 4, 5, 12, 19. 2. Matters of fact, 1. When there are evidences that ſuch a fact is committed, as in Achans caſe. 2. When others are in danger in reſpect of ſuch a fact I have committed, Judg. 17. 2, 3. 3. When prejudice elſe may come to the Church or State where I live. 4. When by due courſe of the Law one is found guilty, and ſentence pronounced againſt him, in ſuch a caſe he is bound to make confeſſion (ſo the penitent Thief) elſe he ſhall end his dayes in ſinne. 5. For the eaſe of a mans conſcience, when his ſinnes are ſecret he may diſcloſe them; confeſſion muſt be, 1. Voluntary, not forced. 2. Prudently ordered.

pearance of danger, no terrour, no threatning muſt affright us from it, if we have a due calling thereunto; wherefore our Saviour requireth, that we ſhould confeſſe him before an adulterous and crooked generation, ſaying, Matth. 10 32. Whoſoever ſhall confeſſe me before men, him will I confeſſe before my Father which is in Heaven; And S^t Paul commendeth Timothy, 1 Tim. 6. 12. becauſe he had profeſſed a good profeſſion before many witneſſes, and ſetteth before us in the next Verſe, the example of Chriſt who before Pontius Pilate witneſſed a good confeſſion, boldly averring that he was the Sonne of God, and ſaying, That he was ſent to bear witneſſe to the truth, John 18. 37. and the Lord ſaith of S^t Paul, That he had called him to bear his Name before the Gentiles and Kings, and before the people of Iſrael.

And ſo muſt we order our ſelves in regard of our words. It follows to ſhew what our carriage muſt be in regard of our deeds, and that both

1. Generally.
2. Particularly.

In General there are alſo required two things:

1. To walk worthy the Goſpel.
2. To ſuffer for righteouſneſſe ſake, and for the name of Chriſt.

Firſt then every one which is called by the name of Chriſt muſt walk as becometh the Goſpel of Chriſt, urging himſelf to ſuch behaviour of life in all things that Religion may be well ſpoken of by means of his good carriage. This is to have our life ſhine forth ſo before men, that they may ſee our good works, and glorifie our Father which is in Heaven, Mat. 5. 16. See 1 Pet. 2. 15. & 3. 1. Phil. 1. 27. Epheſ. 5. 8. 1 Theſſ. 2. 11, 12. A man profeſſing to be of the Chriſtian Religion, is to honour that name by a ſpecial care of all his wayes, that he may ſhew forth ſuch goodneſſe as all men may be allured to love and like Religion for his ſake, and is to deny himſelf ſome lawful things, that he may not open the mouths of thoſe which are willing to ſpeak evil; and when out of a deſire to make Religion well thought and ſpoken of, we do thus look to our ſelves, we honour the Name of God exceeding much.

Secondly, Every man is bound reſolutely and cheerfully to ſuffer for well-doing and for defence of the truth, as Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 5. 10. Bleſſed are they that ſuffer perſecution for righteouſneſſe ſake; and after, Rejoyce and be glad when all men ſpeak all manner of evil of you, for great is your reward. See Phil. 1. 29. 2 Tim. 2. 3. & 1. 12. Heb. 10. 32. Mat. 10. 38. Our Saviour ſaith, that his Diſciples muſt take up their croſſe and follow him, that is, muſt reſolutely make account with themſelves to bear tribulation for his ſake, and all that will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus muſt ſuffer perſecution, 2 Tim. 3. 12. and Paul ſaith of himſelf, to them which by weeping ſought to withdraw him from going up to Jeruſalem (where it was fore-told that bonds and impriſonment did abide him) that he was ready not alone to be bound at Jeruſalem, but alſo to die for the name of the Lord Jeſus, Act. 21. 13. according as in the former Chapter, Acts 20. 24. That he counted not his life dear ſo that he might finiſh his courſe with joy. Now this ſuffering if it be to bloud, is called Martyrdome, which is one of the moſt glorious ſervices that a man can do for God, and ſhall be moſt plentifully rewarded, in which cup Stephen had the honour to be the firſt that ever pledged our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as it is recorded Act. 7. 60.

Stephen the Protomartyr.

And thus muſt we order our lives in general, by being carefull to excell in doing good, and yet chearfully to ſuffer * as if we did evil.

* Regium eſt malè audire, cum bene facere.

Now more particularly we muſt uſe ſanctifiedly all the creatures of God, and do in a ſanctified manner all that ever we do, and this ſanctified uſe of the creatures ſtands in four things;

First, In doing all things out of a well informed conſcience, having knowledge out of Gods Word concerning the lawfulneſſe of our doing or enjoying this or that. This is to have things ſanctified to us by the Word of God, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, 1 Tim. 4. 5. viz. to have our hearts grounded upon the Word concerning the lawfulneſſe of them, and this well-grounded perſwaſion of the warrantableneſſe of our actions, is the faith, without which he that doth any deed ſinneth, as we learn Rom. 14. ult. and therefore the Apoſtle ſaith in the caſe of meats, and the like Rom. 14. 5. Let every man be thorowly perſwaded in his own mind. For a childe or ſervant doth greatly diſhonour his Parent or Maſter, if he will adventure to do any thing that pleaſeth himſelf, never regarding whether his Governour like or diſlike it: but it is a ſign of good reſpect if he dare not adventure upon a thing unleſſe he have ſome good reaſon to make him conceive, that his Maſter or Parent will approve thereof; ſo ſtandeth the matter betwixt God and us; wherefore it is an honouring of God thus to take his warrant with us in all things.

as

Secondly, We muſt crave Gods leave for, and bleſſing upon the uſe of good things in particular, when we know in general that we may lawfully uſe them. So Paul tels us, that meat, drink, marriage and all things elſe are ſanctified by prayer, 1 Tim. 4. 5. that is, by calling upon God for his licenſe to uſe ſuch benefits or to do ſuch things and to have his bleſſing upon them. Thus we do ſanctifiedly uſe them when we thus ask leave of God and help from him to do them. Men look that he which would uſe any of their goods ſhould crave their good will, and that thoſe which would enjoy their help in any thing ſhould requeſt it; for it is a poor thing that is not worth asking, and leave is light; ſo doth God look that we ſhould carry our ſelves toward him, and by uſing all things in ſuch ſort we do acknowledg our dependance upon him, confeſſe his Providence, Soveraignty and Power over our ſelves and all things, and ſo worthily exerciſe the principal graces of God in our ſouls, for he that will not dare to meddle with any thing in the houſe till he have requeſted the good will of ſuch a one, doth by this deed confeſſe him to be the Lord of the houſe, and of all things in it.

Thirdly, We are to return thanks to God for his goodneſſe, when we have enjoyed any good thing from him, for ſo alſo the Apoſtle tels, that things are ſanctified to us by thankſgiving, 1 Tim. 4. 6. when we have ſent one any of our goods, we look that he ſhould bring them home again with thanks, ſo muſt we give back to God thanks for the uſe of his creatures, though the things themſelves are allowed us ſtill to retain them. And this alſo is a notable acknowledgement of his Soveraign Lordſhip over all creatures, and our abſolute dependance upon him. So when the Diſciples returned reporting what great things they had wrought, our Saviour gave thanks to his Father, ſaying, Luke 10. 21. I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth. So when Abrahams ſervant had found great ſucceſſe in his journey, he bows himſelf, worſhipping the Lord and ſaying, Bleſſed be the Lord God of my maſter, Gen. 24. 27. and after alſo v. 52.

Laſtly, It is required that we uſe all the creatures of God moderately, proportioning the meaſure of our uſe of them to the true ends for which God in nature hath ordained them. If a man give his Servant leave to take his key and fetch ſo much money out of his coffer as will ſerve to buy ſuch and ſuch things which his Maſter would have bought, he is bound to take juſt ſo much and no more to a farthing if he know the Summe, if he do not particularly know the Summe, as near as he can gueſſe thereabout, and in keeping himſelf to his Maſters direction here, he ſhews that he accounts not himſelf but his Maſter the owner of theſe goods. So when the Lord hath appointed meat and drink to ſtrengthen and refreſh nature, attire to keep the body warm, and to adorn men, according to the diſtinction of their places, and other like things for like purpoſes, he that is carefull as near as he can to keep himſelf ſo within compaſſe, as to uſe no more of theſe things than are requiſite for theſe ends, ſo near I ſay as he can gueſſe, doth behave himſelf like a ſervant in the uſe of theſe things, and by ſo uſing them doth give to God the honour of being the Lord and Maſter of them: ſo temperance in meat and drink, and all ſuch things, is a needful duty for the ſanctifying of Gods Name in the uſe of his creatures.

And ſo much of the things commanded in this third Commandment; Now of the things forbidden herein which all come to two heads:

1. The abuſe of thoſe holy actions which are ſometimes mingled with our common affairs, viz. { An Oath. / A Lot.

2. Diſordered

2. Disordered carriage of our selves in our common affairs.

Of the abuse of an Oath we must speak first.

It is abused two wayes, in regard of the

1. Taking, for the
   1. Matter of it, in the
      1. Object or thing sworn by.
      2. Subject or thing sworn to.
   2. Manner, contrary to
      1. Truth by a false Oath.
      2. Judgment by swearing.
         1. Ignorantly.
         2. Rashly or causlesly.
         3. Irreverently.
         4. Ragingly.

2. Keeping { By not performing a lawfull Oath. / By performing an unlawfull.

The first abuse of an Oath is in regard of the thing sworn by, and that is double, swearing.

1. By an Idol.
2. By a meer creature.

They transgresse this Commandment, 1. Who swear commonly. 3. Who swear to do things unlawful, as 1 Sam. 28. 10. & 14. 39, 44. 3. Who swear falsly or fraudulently, or what they mind not to perform, Matth. 26. 72. 1 Sam. 19. 6. Ezek. 17. 16, 18, 19. 4. Who use to swear indirectly, as meaning to swear by God, name the creatures. 5. Who swear by God and by Idols, Gen 31. 53. Ford. Those that swear by the name of God, and likewise by the name of Saints, offend this Commandment. As when the form of their Oath is thus, As help me God and all Saints, for the Oath must be onely in the name of God. B^p Hooper of the Command.

To swear by an Idol is a great abuse of an Oath, wherein Gods honour is given to his utter enemy, which the Prophet condemns in the Jews, Jer. 5. 7. Thy children have sworn by them that are no gods, that is, by false and feigned gods, and Jer. 12. 16. he condemneth the Jews for having learned of the Gentiles to swear by Baal, and the Prophet Zeph. 1. 5. saith, That God will visit, that is (punish) them which swear by the Lord, and by Malcham. For seeing an Oath is a due and true worship of God, how should he endure to have it translated to a false god? Surely those which swear by them do bear some respect to them in their hearts, and make honourable mention of them with their lips, which is condemned, Exod. 23. 13.

Aquin. 2a, 2æ Quæst. 89. Art. 6. docet, licere per ipsas quoque creaturas jurare, ut per Sanctos, per Angelos, per sacra Dei Evangelia. Quod alicubi etiam in Eccles. is reformatis illa adhuc consuetudo retineatur, ut cum quis jurat manu tangat Evangelia sacra, atque etiam addat hæc verba; Ad hæc sacra Dei Evangelia juro, &c. illud excusari utcunque potest. Non enim propriè juratur per Evangelium: sed est obtestatio, qualis est illa, Vivit Deus: ut sit sensus, Sicut verba Evangelij, & sacrorum Bibliorum verissima sunt: sic etiam quod dico, verum est. Zanch. Tom. 4. lib. 1. de Decal. in Præcept. 3. Jurare per creaturam absolutè ultimatè & terminativè, ita ut constituatur in aliqua creatura finis & vis juramenti sine relatione ad Deum, simpliciter illicitum est. Secundò, jurare per creaturas relativè & quasi transitivè, ita ut per B. Virginem & alios sanctos sanctorumve reliquias pertranseat, & per ipsos deferatur finaliter ad Deum, hoc est superstitiosum. Sanders. de Juram. Prom. Oblig. Præl. 5. Vide Rivetum in Psal. 24. v. 4. See Doctor Gouge on Heb. 6. v. 16. Sect. 120, and 123. And M^r Cartw. on Psal. 15. 4.

Also to swear by a creature, is to do more honour unto it than ought to be done to it, for seeing an Oath is to be taken by the greater, as the Apostle saith, that is, one which hath authority over men to punish them if they swear amisse, and that no creature is so much greater than man, that he can discern to punish the disorders of his heart in swearing, it is a wrong to God to set them in his room when we swear, yea when God doth plainly say, The Lord liveth, Jer. 4. 2. and saith, Thou shalt swear by his name, Deut. 10. 20 & 6. 13. it seemeth to me that this bidding to swear by him, forbiddeth to swear by any thing besides him.

Here two things may be objected, First, That usual form of swearing which was accustomed by the people of God when they sware, to say, The Lord liveth, and Thy soul liveth, 1 Sam. 20. 3.

To

To which we anſwer, That in mentioning this living of the ſoul they do not ſwear by it, but alone wiſh well unto it, ſwearing by God, and yet mentioning the ſoul of that party ſworn unto, for proof of their love and good deſires of its welfare, is as much as if they had ſaid, I ſwear by God, whom I deſire alſo to preſerve thy ſoul.

Further the Apoſtle 1 Cor. 15. 31. may ſeem to ſwear by his rejoycing in Chriſt, when he ſaith, By our rejoycing which we have in Chriſt Jeſus our Lord, we dye daily.

To this I anſwer, That this is as much as if he had ſaid, By Jeſus Chriſt in whom I rejoyce, ſo that Chriſt is here the ſole object of the Oath, and his rejoycing is mentioned as an effect of Chriſts power, the more honourably to convey the Oath unto him. See Dr Manton on Jam. 5. 12. and Mr Lyfords Princip. of Faith and good Conſc. p. 148.

So this is the firſt abuſe of an Oath to ſwear by a creature, or an Idol, or falſe god. An earneſt proteſtation may, it ſeems, be made by a creature, as to ſay, as ſure as I live, or the like; but this muſt not be conceived as a ſwearing by them, or calling them to bear witneſſe to the truth of our ſpeeches.

There is one main difference between a Proteſtation and an Oath, that we may lawfully proteſt by a creature, but without ſin we cannot ſwear by a creature, Gen. 42. 15. compared with ch. 43. 3. ſeems to ſhew, that thoſe words By the life of Pharaoh, were but a Proteſtation. Capel of Tent. part 3. c. 5.

The ſecond abuſe of an Oath is in regard of the thing ſworn to, and that is double.

1. In an aſſertive Oath.
2. In a promiſſive Oath.

It is in an aſſertive Oath when it is trivial, of a ſmall light matter of no worth and value, neither in it ſelf nor in the conſequents of it. For ſeeing an Oath is a calling God to be witneſſe and judge of our ſpeech, he muſt not be called to witneſſe for meer trifles and toyes, and he that ſo ſweareth doth not ſwear in judgement, but raſhly and inconſiderately, for what is, if this be not to take the Name of God in vain, when the matter is light and vain which occaſioneth us to take it up.

Alſo in a promiſſive Oath there is an abuſe if one ſwear to do that which is ſinful and wicked, or not to do that which is commanded and required at his hand by God, for this is not to ſwear in righteouſneſſe, but unjuſtly. Therefore David in ſwearing to kill Nabal did greatly offend, and ſo did Herod in ſwearing to do for Herodias whatſoever ſhe ſhould ask, not excepting unleſſe it were ſinful and wicked that ſhe ſhould ask. And ſuch alſo it may ſeem was the Oath of the other Tribes, when they ſware not to give any of their daughters to wife to Benjamin, forthis was to cut off one Tribe from Iſrael, which they ought not to have done, and therefore afterwards they were compelled to uſe tricks to break that Oath, giving the Benjamites authority to ſteal wives, that ſo they might have them, and yet the Parents not ſeem guilty of this Oath, becauſe they did not give them with their conſent and good liking. Judg. 21. 1.

And thus much for the abuſe of an Oath in regard of the matter. Now the abuſes in regard of the manner of ſwearing follow.

The firſt abuſe in the manner of ſwearing is againſt truth, when men do ſwear falſly and deceitfully. This is condemned Pſal 24. and by Zechary chap. 8. 17. Love no falſe Oath, for theſe are things which I hate, ſaith the Lord. So a falſe Oath we ſee is abominable to God. This is to defile the Name of God, and to draw him into fellowſhip with our lying ſo farre as may be. Now falſhood is when a mans words do not agree with the conceits of his mind, or his conceits with the things which he ſpeaketh of. So there is a double falſhood, one witting, the other unwitting.

Nor ſworn deceitfully. Nihil aliud eſt perjurium, quam mendacium juramento firmatum. Ita ut omnino idem ſit accedente juramento Perjurium, quod eſt id nuda pollicitatione mendacium. D. Sanderſon. de Juramenti promiſſorij obligatione, prælect. 2. Sect. 6.

The witting falſhood is, when a man utters things contrary to his own thought and meaning. And this is alſo double,

1. Plain, and palpable, and flat falſhood.
2. Cloaked, coloured and painted falſhood.

Palpable falſhood is when a man doth not ſo much as labour to caſt any colour of truth upon his Oath, but ſwears that which is evidently falſe, and this is in an aſſertive Oath, when a man ſwears a thing to be or not to be, which he either knows or thinks to be otherwiſe. This was the fault of Peter when he denied his Maſter with an Oath. This was done by him in a paſſion of fear, yet did it not wholly excuſe his ſin, but it is worſe when it is done premeditately and upon deliberation, as the falſe witneſſes did which Jezabel appointed to ſwear againſt Naboth, and this is ſo grievous a ſin, that it doth plainly prove a man to be an Atheiſt in heart, for who that acknowledgeth God would call him to witneſſe a lie? and it is all one in this caſe, whether a man think the thing only to be falſe, or it be o indeed, for if his words diſagree with his thoughts, though his thoughts agree with the thing accidentally and by chance, there is the moſt blame-worthy and condemnable falſhood.

Alſo there is palpable falſhood in an aſſertive Oath, when a man ſweareth to do that which he hath no mind, purpoſe nor meaning to do, nay nor perhaps doth not know what it is that he ſwears to, but takes the Oath for example or cuſtome, for no man can have a true meaning to do he knows not what. And if any man ſhould know anothers meaning not to be ſuch as his words pretend, he would ſurely condemn him of perjury, therefore in the like caſe he muſt needs alſo condemn himſelf.

This is open and palpable falſhood; coloured falſhood is when a man makes a ſhew of truth, but hides his meaning with craft, as in equivocations, reſervations, and the like: for example, when a man intends his Oath in another meaning than that which is expreſſed to him by the perſons which cauſe him to take the Oath, and which he knows they do take him to mean, and which he would have them to take his meaning in. For a good man muſt ſpeak the truth in his heart, and therefore alſo muſt ſwear it. Now he doth not ſo when he ſweareth thus deceitfully, ſo deceit is not a remedy againſt falſhood, but alone a cloak for falſhood, which maketh it leſſe ſeen, but not leſſe ſinnefull. And the groſſeſt kind of deceit this way I think is that of equivocations and reſervations, when a man of purpoſe takes the words of his Oath in another ſenſe than they are intended, as, Are you a Prieſt? I ſwear No, meaning a Prieſt of Venus, though I be a Popiſh Prieſt: or when he reſerves ſomething in his mind, which being added to the words of his mouth make up a truth, but being taken by themſelves contain a falſhood, as, Are you a Prieſt? No, meaning not to tell you. Surely the words of Ananias and Saphirah were no lie, if this kind of jugling were good, yea Peter was unjuſtly charged to have ſworne falſly, if this were a juſt defence, for he might eaſily mean, I know not the man, meaning to tell you of it at this time. But onely Popiſh * perſons which are willing to ſtrive for their ſafety will maintain this falſhood, wherefore we take it for granted to be naught and wicked, what is if this be not to ſwear deceitfully which is blamed Pſalm 24?

* Barneſius and ſome others of them, perhaps may not allow of equivocation.

Now there is alſo an unwitting falſhood more pardonable of the twain, and yet bad enough, when a man ſwears that which he thinks is true, but indeed is not true, he being deceived in his opinion. And this kind of falſhood is often brought into an Oath by reaſon of raſhneſſe, when men take not their Oath in judgement they often offend againſt truth. The conceits of things going alone are not the meaſure of words, but the things themſelves alſo, and if the words agree not to both, there is not perfect truth in them but ſome admixture of falſhood.

This is the firſt abuſe of an Oath, for the manner againſt the Truth.

Other abuſes there are contrary to judgment.

And firſt, When a man ſwears ignorantly, not knowing the nature of an Oath, and muſt of neceſſity abuſe it, in that he cannot have the regard of it which he ſhould, if he know not the nature of it.

It was the ordinary Oath of the Romans, Medius fidius,

Secondly, When he ſwears raſhly and cauſeleſly in his common ſpeech and talk,

the

the things being ſuch as require no Oath; which is plainly condemned by our Saviour, Zach. 5.2. Matth. 5.34. and by his Apoſtles, Jam. 5.12. counterfeit oaths and vehement affirmations, as being more than yea and nay, are naught and blameworthy.

One ſaith, there is a Family in England which hath its name Bigod from their great ſwearing. Camden in his Remains Surnames, p. 105. ſaith, The French-men called the Normans Bigod, that is, ſuperſtitious, becauſe at every other word they would ſwear By God.

Thirdly, When a man ſwears ragingly in his choler and paſſion, which is to pierce through the Name of God, as the wicked wretch did in the Camp of Iſrael, for which he was ſtoned, Lev. 24.10.

Fourthly, When he ſwears irreverently, without any due regard of God when he hath juſt cauſe of ſwearing, for this is contrary to fearing of an Oath, commended, Eccl. 9.2.

So much for the abuſe by taking an Oath. It is alſo abuſed in regard of keeping.

Firſt, When men break lawful Oaths, as Zedekiah did, for which he was puniſhed, Ezek. 17.16. and ſo did the Princes and people, Jer. 34.18. and Saul ſinned in breaking the Oath of Joſhua made long before, ſeeking to ſlay the Gibeonites, 2 Sam. 21.1, 2. for the Oath of a man in ſuch caſe is not performed, but binds him and all that do ſucceed him in that place.

as with us was, By the Maſſe, or by our Lady: and ſo much uſed, That Tertullian complaineth, that the Chriſtians through cuſtome had made it ſo familiar, that in ordinary ſpeech they uſed Medius fidius, and Mebercules, not remembring, nor yet underſtanding what they ſaid, Conſuetudinis vitium eſt dicere mehercules, dicere & Medius fidius, accedente ignorantiâ quorundam, qui ignorant jurandum eſſe per Herculem. Tertul. de Idololat. Students will not ſwear in Engliſh, yet in Latine they make no bones of it, ſaying, Mehercule; medius fidius, adipol. per Deos immortales. Mr Perkins in his Government of the tongue. Mebercule, ſo Hercules bleſſe me, as God help me. Gods me is ſwearing by a figure; s'lid is an Oath by way of abbreviation; and as I am a Gentleman, is little better. Gapel of Tentat. part 3. cap. 5. There are, 1. Ridiculous Oaths, as by Lakin. 2. Phariſaical, by Creatures, as Light, Fire. 3. Popiſh, by Saints, as Mary, John; Idols, as Maſſe, Rood, Amos 8.14. 4. Heatheniſh, by the gods of the Gentiles, 1 King. 19.2. Mebercule, Medius fidius, &c. 5. Blaſphemous, as by all the parts and members of Chriſt. B. Down. Abſtract 3. prec. See Mr Powels Summons for ſwearers, the ſtrange judgments upon Swearers, For ſwearers, Curſers. Barclay in his Vindicia pro regibus againſt Bellarmine being reproved by him for ſaying Mebercle, anſwers he uſed not that word, ut jurandi particula, but ornatus & affirmationis ſimplicis. See more there. Tempus fuit, & illud memoria repeto, quum ſi Genevæ quis, vel peregrinus dejeraſſet, omnes commoverentur, terramque ille deoſculari cogeretur: Noſtin, inquam, probè, etiam ex vicinis nobilibus quoſdam in carcerem propterea conjectos. Beza Homil. xiv. in Hiſt. Paſſionis Jeſu Chriſti.

Secondly, In regard of keeping it is abuſed, when men doe keep a wicked Oath, as Herod did in beheading John Baptiſt, whereas ſuch an Oath is a nullity; and therefore David kept not his Oath to kill Nabal; yea, if one under Government have ſworne to do a thing without the conſent and privity of his Governour, and after the Governour knowing it, refuſe to give way unto it, he or ſhe under Government is not to keep the Oath, as appears Numb. 30. and therefore alſo in ſuch caſe to ſtand upon termes of an Oath to diſobey a Governour, is a ſinne.

An Oath muſt not be vinculum iniquitatis. Act. 23.12.

And ſo much for the abuſe of an Oath. Now follows the abuſe of a Lot, and that is two wayes, either for the Matter about which it is uſed, or the Manner of uſing.

For the Matter:

Firſt, When it is uſed in meer ſport and paſtime, in matrers trivial and idle,

Nec Deus interſit niſi dignus vindice nodus.

Where we have examples of uſing any thing to ſerious & weighty purpoſes, and never to ludicrous and ſportfull; there it is far ſafer for us ſo to uſe the ſame, that we may be aſſured we follow Gods warrant; for God by leaving divers ſuch examples to us, may ſeem to intend our direction in the uſe of that thing; we have divers examples for uſing Lots in weighty matters, none in ſports. 2. A Lot is a ſacred thing, the caſting of a Lot a ſacred action, becauſe in uſing it we do eſpecially and immediately referre our ſelves unto Gods providence, for the whole diſpoſing of it is from him. Here the old ſaying is true, Non eſt bonum ludere cum ſanctis. Dr Taylor cals Cards and Dice the Devils books and bones. See him on Temptat. Dr Ames caſes of conſc. l. 5. c. 45. Cartwright on Prov. 16. ult. and Dr Willet on Lev. 16.12. p. 375, 376. of unlawfulneſſe of games going wholly by Lot. Voetius in his third part of Theological ſelect Diſputations, De ſortis abuſibus alledgeth ſeveral reaſons, and quotes divers Authors againſt ludicrous Lots.

Gods holy Providence must not be called to determine toyes; his Providence rules the least things; but we must not put a trifle to the determining of his Providence, for then Gods Name is taken up idly and to no purpose, because no use can be made of the falling out of such trifles. So when men cast Lots who shall be together in play, who shall begin first; yea when they use games consisting of Lottery, as are Cards and Dice; Games, if we consider of them aright, as unlawfull (say some) as it is unlawfull to swear in jest, or in common talk, for there is a manifest Lot in every game of these: In the Cards, the shuffling and dealing is an apparent Lot, for here are all the three things which are named in the affirmative part; first, A controversie or doubt who shall begin, this man or that. 2. A casual act, shuffling and dealing, which, unlesse there be foul play, is so ordered, that no wit, skill, nor activity of men, but meer chance; that is, Gods secret Providence can dispose of it. 3. The appointing and using of this casual act to end that controversie, or the putting of it to God to determine. So likewise in Tables, the cast of the Dye is a meer casual act, and this casual act is appointed to determine a controversie, viz. either what kinde of remove, or what particular remove each man shall make; for they will not let each other choose their removes; so that there being all the things that constitute a Lot, to deny it the name is fond and absurd. Indeed the main controversie is determined in part also by skill; but as the mixing of Gold and Lead together, cannot cause but that Gold is Gold: so the mixing of a Lot and skill together, cannot cause but that a Lot is a Lot; and therefore here a Lot is abused to a matter of pastime; that is to say, men play with holy things, which cannot be denied to be a sin. This is the first abuse of a Lot.

Alearum ludus, & id genus alij, ob fortem aut fortunam in eis omnino dominantem, ob turpe lucrum, ob infamiam, nec non propter blasphemiarum & periuriorum pericula, honestæ ac sanctæ vitæ adversantia, atq; ob horrendissimas eventus, & ob certa denique damna quæ inde proveniunt, tam civilibus quam canonicis legibus non solum apud Christicolas Anglic. verum etiam apud Ethnicos veriti undequaque inveniuntur. Commentarius contra ludum Alearum A Fr. Angelo Roccha Episcopo.

Cohilonem (aiunt) quendam Lacedæm. cum fœderis feriendi causa missus esset legatus ad Regem Persarum, & Aulicos fortè invenisset ludentes aleâ, statim re infecta rediisse domum: rogatum cur neglexisset ea facere quæ publicè acceperat in mandatis, respondisse, Quod ignominiosum existimasset id fore Reipublicæ, si fœdus percussisset cum aleatoribus. Mocket Apol. Orat.

2. A Lot is abused when it is used to end a counterfeit controversie which is made by mens pleasure for sinister respects, and is not at all in nature; as in all gaming by Lot, where two men lay the money in common that before was proper, and then will needs cast a Dye (that is, a Lot) who shall have both: So in Lotteries of all sorts, where many men put that money which of right appertained to each of them severally, in one purse as it were, and then a Lot must be cast, who shall have of that summe a little, who much, who nothing, when God had before by the disposition of his Providence given each his portion. Now for men unnecessarily to make a controversie, that some may get by the losse of others, surely this is a dallying with God, and an abusing of his Name. No wise father would suffer himself to be made Umpire so betwixt his children, therefore will not God take it well, that himself should be made a Determiner of such lust-coined doubts. If it be said, that the end is good, viz. the bestowing of the overplus of the money to some good use, as relief of the poor, or the like. I answer, the Lot is abused for all that, because it is used to a wrong end; for the end to which God appointed a Lot, was not to get money out of mens purses, for the doing of some charitable action, but for the keeping of unity and concord among them in doubts not so well otherwise determinable. For why? It is an high honour to him in such case to be made as it were the chief Judge of all matters; so that these Lotteries be flat sins (as some conceive) and the using of them as bad as common swearing, because they are the abusing of a thing which is holy, as an Oath is holy.

And thus a Lot is abused for the Matter about which it is used. Now

For Manner likewise it it abused.

Mocket Apol. Orat. A game or play may thus fitly be described, viz. A concession betwixt two or more, who shall do best in an exercise of wit or activity, or both, about some indifferent and trifling subject. Every lawfull means of getting is sanctifiable by prayer, as being that which God alloweth and blesseth. Playing for price is not sanctifiable by prayer, so that we may pray to God to blesse us in that means of getting. Therefore playing for price is no lawfull means of getting. The Scripture saith plainly, Thou shalt not covet any thing that is thy neighbours. When conscience doubteth on the one part, and is resolved on the other, we must refuse the doubting part, and take that wherein we are certain and sure. As for example, When one doubteth of the lawfullnesse of playing at Cards and Dice, he is sure it is no sinne not to play; but whether he may lawfully play he doubteth, in this case he is bound not to play. Mr Fenner of conscience.

First,

First, By colluſion and deceit, when men ſeem to uſe a Lot, yet by ſome cloſe and underhand-dealing diſpoſe of the act themſelves, as in cogging a Dye in falſe Dice; in all thoſe tricks of oiled Cards, and over-long, and over-broad Cards, and the like, where there is a manifeſt mocking of God, by diſſembling to make him determine of what we purpoſe not to intruſt him withall; where a Lot is alſo abuſed doubly, becauſe here is both colluſion and trifling. But if in a matter of weight a man will ſeem to caſt Lots, and yet have ſome ſecret trick to turn the Lot as he liſt, not committing the diſpoſition thereof to God, he doth grievouſly offend God.

Secondly, A careleſſe uſing of a Lot, imputing to I know not what chance and luck, without any heeding of God in it, is an abuſing of it; ſo when men do make an excuſe of their ſin in ſporting with Lots, it becomes an aggravation of it; for they ſay, that they never intend to put Gods Providence to trouble; but mark the falling of the Dye, and there is an end. Whereto is anſwered, That they ought not to let ſlip Gods Providence ſo negligently, but ſeeing he takes the whole diſpoſing to himſelf, they ſhould ſee his care in it; and if the matter be ſo trifling, that they fear to mark Gods Providence in it, then it is too baſe to have a Lot imployed about it.

Thirdly, A chafing and fretting at the falling out of a Lot, is a groſſe abuſe of it, asif one ſhould charge God with want of wiſdome, or tell him that he had done wrong; for God is ſo abſolute a Sovereign, that when he hath manifeſted his good pleaſure all ſhould be huſht and ended; and therefore after that he which will fume and take on, doth offer indignity to God, and neglect his due ſubjection to that Sovereign Prince of his life, whom he ought above all things to regard.

And ſo much for the abuſe of thoſe holy things which are intermingled with our common affairs.

Now it follows to ſpeak of the diſhonour done to God in diſordering of our common actions ſo far as they touch himſelf, and the things by which he hath manifeſted himſelf to us.

Now theſe are,

1. Inward.
2. Outward.

Inward, in regard of Gods Works or our own.

In regard of Gods Works firſt, by aſcribing them wholly and principally to other cauſes, without taking any notice of him, at leaſt any diligent notice. As for example:

Firſt, To Fortune or Chance, good or bad; if a man go and finde a thing of price to his enriching, or ſo have any other ſudden and unexpected benefit coming unto him, this he doth in his minde aſcribe to good luck, and ſaith, that he had great good fortune. Contrarily, if he go on the way, and there loſe ſomething of value and price, he ſtorms and ſaith, he had bad luck; or if any occurrent fals out that diſappoints his preſent hopes, he in his mind looks no higher, but thinks it ill luck; as the Prieſts of the Philiſtines told the Princes, that if the Kine did not carry the Ark directly towards the way of Bethſhemeſh, then all the miſery which had befallen them by Mice and Emerods, was but ſome chance that had befallen them.

Again, Men impute Gods works ſometimes to the courſe of Nature, ſo as to thruſt out him the Authour of Nature, or elſe to tie him to any inferiour cauſe in nature. Thus the Atheiſt ſayes it comes by nature, that ſome years are unſeaſonable, and ſome again ſeaſonable. Nature is Gods inſtrument, being nothing elſe but that common courſe which he hath eſtabliſhed in things; if men therefore would from nature aſcend higher to the Author, Maker, Ordainer of nature, which hath by his great wiſdome eſtabliſhed that courſe herein, they would not ſinne, for God doth work things according to his own determination by uſual and natural means moſt commonly; but to be ſo intentive to nature, as to have no thought, or but weak, few and ſlender thoughts of God; this is a grievous profaning of his Name.

There is natura naturans, and natura naturata.

A third

A third thing which men do impute Gods works to, to his diſhonour, is their friends and foes, their benefactours out of good will, and their malicious adverſaries out of their uncharitableneſſe; as the Iſraelites looked to Aſſur, not to God, in whoſe hand Aſſur was as a rod, and contrarily being ſuccoured by their well-willers, they aſcribed all to their policy, wiſdome, and friendſhip.

Laſtly, Men aſcribe things to their own wiſdome, care, induſtry, pains, courage, thinking within themſelves, that their hand hath gotten much, that their ſword hath ſaved them; as the King of Aſſur boaſted what great matters he had done; and Nebuchadnezzar boaſted, that it was great Babel which he had built.

Now when any of theſe things, fortune, nature, our friends, our foes, our ſelves, are ſo thruſt betwixt God and us, that we ſee not God becauſe of our fond doating on theſe either feigned or ſubordinate cauſes, here God is exceedingly diſhonoured.

Another way of diſhonouring God in his works, is by perverting them to evil and vile purpoſes and ends.

Firſt, By hardening our ſelves in our ſins from his long-ſuffering, patience and forbearance; as Salomon ſaith moſt men do, Becauſe ſentence againſt ſinners is not ſpeedily executed, therefore are they fully bent upon miſchief; and as the Apoſtle chargeth them, Rom. 2. to heap up wrath to themſelves againſt the day of wrath, by turning Gods grace thus into wantonneſſe.

Secondly, When men charge Gods actions with injuſtice, and ſo either deny or blemiſh his Providence, eſpecially in caſe of croſſes befalling them; ſo taking occaſion to murmure and be impatient, as Job was by fits, and as it is often ſeen in good men, but moſt of all in bad, as they ſaid, Where is the God of judgement? When men take occaſion from any of Gods works to repine againſt, or entertain hard conceits of him, this is a grievous ſinne, and a diſhonouring of him in his works.

Mal. 2. ult.

Thirdly, When men grow proud of his benefits, thinking highly of themſelves, becauſe of thoſe good things he hath undeſervedly beſtowed upon them, and are lifted up, as if they had not received them, for God gives his merties to better purpoſes than to ſwell the heart: as ſome man becauſe he hath wealth, thinks himſelf better than all that have leſſe, thinks that he may be diſpenſed with in ſins, that he ſhould not be called upon to ſuch and ſuch duties, and contemns others in compariſon of himſelf. So did Nebuchadnezzar abuſe Gods advancement of him to be lifted up; yea Davids heart was ſomewhat lifted up, and he grew ſecure, and therefore proud, and Uzziah alſo; for this is a diſeaſe marvellous hard to eſcape, which is the true cauſe why the Lord is fain to be narrow-handed toward his ſervants in regard of theſe things, becauſe he would not have this pernicious diſeaſe to grow upon them, and ſees that out of abundance it would come forth, ſuch is their weakneſſe.

The laſt abuſe of Gods workes is by hardening our hearts againſt them, and a wilfull refuſing to be brought unto that amendment, which we might, if we would ſee plainly that he intends, as Pharaoh hardened his heart againſt the wonderfull workes done by Moſes; and the wicked Phariſees hardened their hearts againſt all Chriſts miracles, then which what greater deſpight can we offer to God, to reſolve we will not go though he leade, and though he drive us, or that we will go on, though he hold us back with a kinde of violence? And theſe be the principal wayes of diſhonouring God in his works.

Secondly, We diſhonour him in our works by miſ-intending them, either to ends lawfull in exceſſiveneſſe, or to unlawfull ends: as for example, when men labour in their calling onely, or chiefly, to be rich; when men do eat onely to fill the belly; moſt of all if men do theſe for wrong ends, as to do a work in ones calling to anger another, or the like; for herein we do ſinfully pervert the order that ſhould be obſerved, and caſt our eyes from him upon whom they ſhould alwayes be fixed, as Jehu in exalting of juſtice in Ahabs family, aimed at nothing nothing but the lifting up of himself, and establishing the Kingdome to his own house. This is a living to ones self, and a serving of ones self, whereas we ought no longer to live to our selves, but to him which hath redeemed us. The common sin of mankind, and that which doth stain and defile all the Moralities of unsanctified men, causing that those things of theirs are abominable before God, which to men carry the most glorious appearances that may be. And thus God is dishonoured in heart. Now he is dishonoured outwardly, and that, 1. In tongue. 2. In action. In word, by all such kinde of speeches as are contrary to those four kinds (wherein our words touch God any way) that were named in the affirmative part.

As first, contrary to good and charitable wishes, there are

1. Formal wishes, as when men in a form say, God blesse you, God save all; much more when it is in falshood, the tongue speaking peace when the heart wisheth mischief; as David complains of his enemies that came to visit him, and then wished him all welfare in tongue, but were so contrary-minded, that after they wished he might never recover, and so were bold to utter their malicious conceits when they came forth.

2. Contrary to these good wishes are curses, imprecations, and execrations against ones self or others, especially such as wherein the Devil hath his name honoured, as the Devil take thee, the Devil goe with thee: or though God be wished to be the authour of the evil, as God confound thee, or the like. It is a token of an evil heart to be apt to curse, They which love cursing shall have enough of it; these bad wishes will flie back to the nest where they were hatched. The Apostle delivers it as a token of an unregenerate man, That the gall of Aspes is under his lips, and that his mouth is full of cursing and bitternesse; it is a proof of a soul very much void of the fear of God, when a man dareth to speak to God to become his hangman or executioner, and a most horrible boldnesse when a man dare invocate the Devil for revenge. S^t James speaks of it as a wofull and grievous crime, that a man should with the same mouth blesse God and curse man, who was made after the Image of God; yea not alone to curse men, but to curse any creature, wishing pox or plague upon it, or murrain, or the like, is a fearfull abusing of God from whom he dare ask such things, unlesse we curse in Gods Name, being armed by his Authority and Warrant; for if God bid his servants curse they must curse, I mean by pronouncing a curse; yea by praying God according to his truth to fulfill his curses. But of wicked and unwarrantable cursing we have an example in the proud Goliah, who cursed David by his gods; and of Shimei who cursed David with a horrible and bitter curse. And these be against good wishes.

Secondly, Against respective mentioning of Gods Titles and Attributes there are two faults, The one is a light and foolish speaking of them by way of wonderment or otherwise, as O Lord God, Good God; when a man thinks no more of God nor his goodnesse, than he thinks of the Devil or Pope; so in other like occasions.

2. There is a mentioning of Gods Titles by way of vilifying and abusing him, as Who is God, that I should let Israel go? and, What God can deliver out of my hands? and a mentioning of him by way of blaspheming, speaking evil of him in such fearfull accusations as are not to be named, as raging against his justice, truth and wisdom, and charging him with the contrary imperfections, as some in their distemper have done, a most hideous and fearfull sin!

Contrary unto good conference of Gods Word and Works, there are four faults:

First, Vain jangling, a discoursing of Gods Word or Works, onely to shew wit, and winne applause, or to dispute of them onely to try masteries and get victory, especially if a man choose out nice points, or genealogies and idle needlesse questions. If a man do jangle and wrangle about the most usefull points, it is a great fault; but if he fill the world with controversies about trifles, this is a greater abuse, and more dangerous, because these matters will most easily breed doubt upon doubt.

Secondly,

Secondly, When men make jeſts of Gods Word, alleadging any place of Scripture in merriment to procure laughter, or make a mock of any of Gods ſpecial Workes, as the people did of the Apoſtles ſpeaking in ſtrange tongues, as if it had been nothing but the vent of new wine over-abundantly ſwallowed.

Thirdly, When men miſapply Gods Word and Works, as by miſ-alleadging them to countenance ſinne and maintain wickedneſſe; or contrarily, putting off Gods teſtimonies, and miſ-interpreting Scripture; as that wicked Syricius would have no Miniſters marry, becauſe thoſe that were in the fleſh could not pleaſe God; and as the Popiſh Cardinal would have the Pope take upon him to puniſh, becauſe it was ſaid to Peter, Slay and eat, and ſuch like. But eſpecially the making ſpels of verſes of Scripture by the words written, ſpoken or hanged upon ones neck, to cure agues or the like; and ſo by miſapplying Gods works to any wicked concluſion, as if he did not hate ſinne, becauſe he is patient in not puniſhing of it. Any wrongfull wreſting of the Scriptures or any of Gods works, is a ſhamefull abuſing it to Gods diſhonour. Cavilling and deſpightfull objecting againſt Gods Word, as if it were falſe and repugnant to it ſelf, or a meer invention of men; and againſt his works, as if they were not righteous and juſt; picking a quarrel with God in either of theſe two, is an high diſhonouring of him, and very diſpleaſing to his Majeſty. And all theſe are directly contrary to the holy and good conference which we ought to have together of Gods Word and Works.

Now ſome other things are contrary to the confeſſing of the true Religion, and theſe are:

Firſt, Denying and diſavoing the ſame, principally if it be againſt the light of a mans own conſcience, and after ſome profeſſing and maintaining of it before; for Chriſt ſaith, that if any man deny him before men, him will he alſo deny before his heavenly Father. So Peter denied that he knew Chriſt, but we know how dear it coſt him afterwards.

Secondly, There is oppoſing the truth of God, ſetting ones ſelf by ſhifts and devices to impure falſhood unto it, and to pull down the pillars of it, as the wicked Jewes oppoſed themſelves to the faithfull and ſincere preaching of Paul, and did diſpute againſt thoſe things which he ſpake, labouring to make it appear that all he ſpake was but a meer lie and falſhood, which is therefore a very wicked thing, becauſe it tends to make others alſo hang back from beleeving the truth, and moſt wicked, when it is done contrary to a mans own knowledge or conſcience, and ſo that he himſelf knows it is truth which he oppoſeth; but moſt of all abominable, when it is as it was in the fore-named Jewes, joyned with actual perſecuting of them which do ſtand for the truth, and labour to uphold the ſame.

Laſtly, When men ſtrive to maintain falſhood, or falſe Religion and falſe Faith, endeavouring by coloured and cloaked reaſons to get unto it the colour of truth, which is hereſie when it is joyned with obſtinacy; and then a moſt damnable thing, when a man is condemned of his own conſcience, and yet will perſiſt in the maintaining of his lying imaginations, not ſuffering his mouth to be ſtopped, though his own heart ſees and knows that he is anſwered, and that it is but a lie which he ſtands for with ſo much earneſtneſſe.

And theſe be the moſt hainous diſorders of the ſpeech whereby God is diſhonoured.

Now follows to ſpeak of actual diſhonours, and theſe are two-fold,

1. General. Then Special.

Generally to live a ſcandalous and offenſive life, in the profeſſion of true Religion to make a ſhew of fearing; yea to fear God in truth, and yet ſo little to regard the Name and Honour of God, as to give occaſion to thoſe which deſire matter of obloquy and reproach, which is charged upon the wicked Jews, that by their means the Name of God was evil ſpoken of among the Gentiles. Their lewd and ungodly, and unrighteous life, made that truth and ſound Religion which they did profeſſe, to become a by-word, and to be contumeliouſly ſpoken of by all

thoſe

thoſe which knew them; and ſo the wickedneſſe of David in that foul ſinne of his, opened the mouths of the enemies, and gave them matter to ſpeak evil of. He that being of Gods Houſe, cauſeth it by his ungodly demeanour to have an ill name brought up upon it, as if his Religion would no more ſanctifie men than if they had it not, he doth exceedingly diſhonour God; as a bad ſervant diſcrediteth his Maſters houſe; for it gives ſuſpition of ill government, when the people are of a diſordered converſation. Yea, and thoſe which do hinder others alſo from imbracing the true Religion, and cauſe them which are godly to receive ſome blemiſh and aſperſion, as if they were equally wicked, though they be more wary and crafty to keep it in.

And that is in general. Now in ſpecial it is done two wayes:

1. By perſecuting any for righteouſneſs ſake, ſeeking to hurt them in body, goods, or name, becauſe of their good life, becauſe of their refuſing to joyn in ſinfull actions, or the like; as the Phariſees did perſecute the Apoſtles; and as Paul was perſecuted by the Jews, himſelf having firſt been a perſecutor; and as Herod took and ſlew James, and would have ſlain Peter alſo; here Gods Name, his Truth, is with great violence as it were defaced and made hateſull amongſt men; and therefore this of all ſins is counted moſt grievous, and likely doth bring with it a ſevere and ſpeedy judgment. This is to fight againſt God with drawn ſword, as it were, to come into the field with weapon in hand againſt him.

2. Sin is committed to the diſhonour of God, when his natural benefits and Ordinances are abuſed; and this is done four wayes:

1. When a man enjoyes them with a doubting conſcience, or againſt his conſcience, then and in that manner doing or uſing them upon the example of others, or the like; when he in his own heart, though erring through miſ-information of judgment, doth ſuppoſe them to be unlawfull; to offend againſt the conſcience, is to ſet light by God. I mean, when the conſcience ſeems ſupported by ſome place of Scripture, that it cannot well anſwer; otherwiſe if an idle ſcruple be objected through Satans temptation without any ground from Gods word; or when a man perceives it ſufficiently anſwered and cleared, then it muſt not be taken as the voice of conſcience, but as the voice of Satan by his crafty temptations troubling and moleſting conſcience, and then a man is not to heed it, but to break through it, ſo to winne his own liberty, and daſh thoſe needleſſe fears out of countenance. But when a man grounding himſelf upon any place of Scripture, doth eſteem any thing unlawfull, becauſe he thinks ſo, and cannot ſee the matter yet in his judgement cleared from that appearance, but thinks ſtill that the Scripture condemneth it, then to do it is to ſinne againſt God; and ſo the Apoſtle Paul ſaith, I am perſwaded that nothing (meaning no indifferent thing either in regard of Levitical Ordinance, as Hoggs-fleſh and bloud, or of Idolatrous abuſe, as meat offered to Idols) is unclean; but to him, (ſaith he) that eſteems any thing ſinfull, to him it is uncleun. And it may fall out in this caſe that a man ſhall be ſo perplexed that in doing the thing he ſhall ſin, becauſe he goes againſt his conſcience, in not doing it he ſhall ſin, becauſe he may by ſome other bond be bound unto it, it being a duty commanded which he takes to be a ſin forbidden. And ſo much for offending through an ill informed conſcience.

Secondly, The creatures of God are abuſed prophanely when a man ruſheth upon them with brutiſh boldneſſe, not caring to crave licenſe from the God of Heaven, not regarding to give him thanks for them, having taken the benefit and comfort thereof. If a man eat and drink, ſport himſelf, uſe marriage or the like, and do not intreat of God a liberty to uſe theſe things, and having enjoyed them goes away, and never opens his mouth or lifts up his heart to render praiſes unto God; this is as it were a challenging of a kinde of property and intereſt in theſe things, as if they were our own; this is a denying of Gods Sovereignty and peculiar right over them, in intruding and incroaching upon them, and no better than a ſtealing of them from the Lord. Beaſts which have no manner of reaſon to diſcern of their Creator, which never conceived of a ſupream and infinite Ruler of all things, they do thus fall upon all they meet, and take it at all adventures. And thieves deal ſo with men, all is their own they lay hands on, whether they have the good will of the owner yea or no, and he that ſo doth play the thief and the beaſt with God, not acknowledging his title, and preheminence in and over all things.

Thirdly, Theſe creatures of God are abuſed ſuperſtitiouſly, and that two wayes:

1. By placing Religion in them, doing them as things which will of themſelves ſpecially pleaſe and honour God, and profit our ſouls, or abſtaining from them as from things which will defile our ſouls and offend God, as thoſe in the Coloſſians which faded themſelves with obſervations, Touch not, Taſte not. And ſo thoſe which after the abrogating of the Ceremonial Law would not eat the meats formerly forbidden. If a man do abſtain from a thing for ſome civil reſpect or end, or do a thing for the like, knowing alſo that it pleaſeth God, it is all one which way ſoever he do it; in regard of the thing it ſelf he offends not; but if it be out of a conſcience to God-ward to eat or not to eat, placing Religion in uſing or abſtaining from any of theſe common things, meat, drink, apparel, or the like, then is he very fond, fooliſh and ſuperſtitious.

2. By applying them to certain ſupernatural effects and purpoſes to which God hath no way fitted nor aſſigned them, as to divine of things to come, to find out hidden ſecrets; and here comes in all manner of Divination, Fortune-telling, and the like, by certain odd and idle Obſervations from the Stars, from the Aſpects of the heavenly bodies. Natural effects which are grounded upon certain cauſes may be fore-told by the knowledge of theſe bodies; but contingent effects depending upon the will of men as their cauſe cannot ſo be fore-told, or thoſe which depend upon other as uncertain cauſes, as mans will. Here comes in alſo all obſerving of the flying of Birds, and of ſuch like things as are taken fondly for ominous preſages of good or evil; for God hath forbidden theſe kinds of fooliſh obſervations to his people. Alſo there are other ſupernatural effects which men may miſapply things to, as to drive away Devils by holy water, imagined to be holy by the ſigne of the Croſſe, or the like, and to cure diſeaſes in a ſupernatural way, as to cure an Ague by ſome baubling toyes which ſome have invented, of paring ones nails, and putting the parings in a dunghill, and let them rot, and ſo ſhall the diſeaſe go away. All which be but Sacraments of the Devil, either no effect can follow upon them, or if any do, it is from the operation and work of the Devil, which blinds mens eyes from ſeeing himſelf by theſe trifling obſervations. But moſt of all, if a man deem to merit remiſſion of ſins by theſe natural actions, of caſting holy water, of croſſing himſelf, of abſtaining from food, of whipping himſelf, or of going in courſe attire, or the like; this is the moſt ſuperſtitious and fond abuſing of them that can be, for then they become as it were Competitours with the bloud of Chriſt, which is the only Sacrifice for ſin, by offering of which he hath made perfect for ever them that do obey.

And this is the ſuperſtitious abuſe of theſe things.

Now follows the laſt, and that is exceſſive, prodigal and licentious abuſing of them; The chief things abuſed by intemperateneſſe, are meat by ſurfeting, drink by drunkenneſſe, ſports by voluptuouſneſſe, attire by ſumptuouſneſſe: When a man contents not himſelf to take ſuch a quantity of any of theſe as agree to the end which God hath in nature appointed them for, viz. meat to feed and refreſh his body, drink to quench thirſt and comfort his body, apparel to cover his nakedneſſe and adorn the body according to the difference of degrees amongſt men, and ſhelter from the cold, and ſports to fit the tired mind for the calling and exerciſe of the body, that diſeaſes may be prevented, but ſeeks to content his own inordinate appetite, or follows the fond cuſtome and example of others, or the like; then doth a man ſhamefully abuſe one of Gods works which is his name; for he ſerves the Devil and the fleſh with thoſe things which God hath made, and hinders himſelf from being able to do good by that which ſhould further him, and doth expoſe himſelf to many evils by that which ſhould not be a ſnare unto him. Here the riotous, voluptuous, prodigal liver, ſpecially the drunkard, which muſt drink healths till he have no conſideration of health, and pledge as much as any man will drink to him, till he have inflamed himſelf, and be unable with diſcretion to conſider any thing, thing, is a groſſe abuſer of the Name of God, for he takes no notice of God in his creatures, nor doth ſerve him in uſing them as he ought, for in the end and meaſure of uſing Gods creatures, whoſe directions ſhould we follow but Gods?

CHAP. V.

The fourth Commandment.

REmember the Sabbath-day, or the day of Reſt, to keep it holy. Six dayes ſhalt thou labour and do all thy work, but the ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the LORD thy God, in it thou ſhalt do no manner of work, Thou, nor thy Sonne, nor thy Daughter, nor thy Man-ſervant, nor thy Maid-ſervant, nor thy Cattle, nor the Stranger which is within thy Gates: For in ſix dayes the LORD made Heaven and Earth, the Sea and all that in them is, and reſted the ſeventh day; wherefore the LORD bleſſed the Sabbath-day, and hallowed it.

THeſe words contain the fourth Commandment of the Decalogue, being the laſt of the firſt Table concerning our duty to God immediately. The ſumme of it is to appoint unto men a ſet and ſolemne time wherein they ſhould wholly give themſelves to the ſtudy of holineſſe, and to the performance of holy exerciſes neceſſary for that purpoſe.

Exod. 16. 29. It was but the breach of this one Commandment, and yet God chargeth them with the breach of his Laws in generall, becauſe he that is a wilfull tranſgreſſour of this makes little conſcience of any of the reſt.

The Sanctity of the whole man required in the firſt Commandment, is the chief thing which God looketh for, to the attaining and increaſing whereof the Lord ſaw good to require ſome ſpecial kindes of ſervices, viz. ſolemne in the ſecond Commandment, and common in the third, and the addicting and beſtowing of a ſpecial time, viz. every ſeventh day. The end therefore of this Commandment is the maintaining and increaſing of ſanctity in men, the Summe, that every ſeventh day muſt be ſpecially ſet apart to this purpoſe.

This Commandment concerning the keeping of the Sabbath day to ſanctifie it, is placed in the midſt between the two Tables, of purpoſe to ſhew that the keeping of the Sabbath is a ſingular help to all piety and righteouſneſſe. Mr Biſield. Hoc præceptum de Sabbatho, aperte affirmativum eſt & negativum, This Commandment of the Sabbath is expreſſly affirmative and negative above all the reſt. Zanch. in prec. 4. Finis hujus præcepti eſt ut ſe exerceant fideles in Dei cultu. Calvinus. Hoc præceptum tum trium priorum progreſſorum, tum ſex reliquorum eſt incentivum atque ſuſcitabulum divinum, ut docet vox exhortatoria, Memento. Grocij Syntagma Theol. lib. 4. cap. 7. De Lege.

Let us proceed to handle this Commandment, and to that end,

1. Explicate the words of the Commandment.
2. Speak ſomething of the perpetuity of the Commandment.
3. Shew the duties herein required, and the ſins forbidden.

For the firſt, the Commandment hath two parts, as the words themſelves doe plainly ſhew to each attentive Reader.

Firſt, The Precept is briefly propounded.

Secondly, It is ſomewhat enlarged.

Memento seu Recordare, imò vero recordando recordare, ut notat modus loquendi apud Mosen. Id est omnino ac sollicitè recordare, nec unquam oblivisce re. Fabritius. The Lord saith only Remember in this Commandment for three reasons, 1. Because though the Law was given from the beginning, yet this fourth Commandment was better kept in memory and in practice than any of the rest, and was but a little before repeated, Exod. 16. 22, 23, 25, 26. 2. To shew what reckoning he maketh of the Sabbath, as men giving their sonnes or servants divers things in charge, say of some principal matter, Remember this. 3. To shew how apt we are to forget it. Ford of the Covenant between God and man. Quæ æquum non erat, ut res tanti momenti niteretur auctoritate, fide ac testimonio unius hominis; idcirco Deus secundo apparuit Mosi, & omni populo in Monte Sinai luculentam hujusce rei fidem facit, præcipiendo illic cultum Sabbati, ut constaret certa memoria, mundum sex diebus, à Deo creatum esse, & septimo die Deum quievisse; idem fecit, Memor esto diei Sabbati: Quasi diceret, Quando & quotiescunque Sabbatum observatis, memoriam creationis fideliter, ac constanter colitote. Menasseh Ben Israel Probl. de Creat. 6. Vide ibid. prob. 8. Sabbatum non solum Quietem, seu à laboribus cessationem, quæ pars Festi semper singularis habita, atque vocabuli ipsissima est significatio, denotat, verùm etiam diem seu annum septimum, quoniam in eo quiescendum, uti Lustrum & Olympias quinquennium, Seld. de jur. natural. & Gent. lib. 3. cap. 17. Ob varias causas inducta est à Deo observatio Sabbathi, in primis ut homo qui corpore & animo constat, aliquo destinato tempore meditationi rerum divinarum, sacrarumque rerum tractationi vacuo & libero animo studere & vacare posset. Secundo observatio Sabbathi inducta est ut esset certum signum inter Deum, & homines Deum agnoscentes. Tertio observatio Sabbathi inducta est; ut omnes illo die admonerentur illius ineffabilis operis, nempe creationis totius orbis terræ. Bodeni Conc. 11. De observatione Diei Dominicæ. Recordando recordare, ut notat modus loquendi apud Mosen. Id est, omnino ac sollicitè recordare, nec unquam oblivisce re, &c. Fabrit. Conc. in Decal.

It is propounded in these words, Remember the Sabbath-day to sanctifie it. Remembrance is properly of things past, but here according to the usual acceptation of the word, it signifies a diligent consideration of the thing before hand, as where the young man is commanded, Eccles. 12. 1. To remember his Creator in the dayes of his youth, that is, seriously to consider of him. It is all one as if he should say, diligently observe, for so he interprets himself, Deut. 5. 12. See Deut. 8. 11. & 24. 8. 2 Kings 2. 3. & 11. 5. Think upon and accordingly provide for the observation of this holy rest, by dispatching all the works of thy calling, that nothing might be undone which providence and diligence might prevent, that might hinder thy rest on the seventh day. Men are apt to forget the Creation of the world, therefore the Lord appointed the fourth Commandment; and to forget Christ, therefore he appointed the standing Ordinance of the Lords Supper, Luke 22. 19.

The Sabbath-day] or the day of rest, and ceasing from labour, as the word properly signifieth, which is repeated again in the conclusion of the Commandment, Exod. 20, 8, 11. It must not be bestowed as other dayes, but then they ought conscionably to forbear those things which on other dayes they might lawfully perform, for rest is a cessation from doing things.

The Ancients do usually speak of the Lords-day in distinction from the Sabbath, because that denomination (Dies Sabbati in Latine) doth denote the Saturday, but our Saviour cals it the Sabbath-day, Matth. 24. 20. and it is called so three times in the fourth Commandment. The word was used by the Ancients, Ruffinus, Origen, Gregory Nazianzen.

To sanctifie it] or keep it holy, that is, to imploy the day in holy duties of Gods immediate worship, to sanctifie it, to set it apart to holy uses and purposes. So two things are required, 1. The remembrance of the time, which is a serious preconsideration to prepare for it. 2. A carefull celebration, consisting in resting and sanctifying it, for a bare rest is not enough, but such a rest as tendeth to, and endeth in the sanctifying of it.

To sanctifie a Sabbath is to call our selves, not only from our own sinfull wayes, which we must do every day, but from our honest and lawfull callings, that giving our selves to godly and Christian exercises of our faith, we may be strengthned in the wayes of God, and so in thought, word and deed, consecrate a glorious Sabbath unto the Lord. Therefore it is called the Sabbath of God, Exod. 20. 10. Levit. 23. 3. He calleth it a holy convocation, that is, dedicated to holy meetings. So Isai. 50. 13. Hereby is confured their opinion, that take it a Sabbath kept, if they rest from their labours, though in the mean time they labour in Playes, Dancings, vain Songs, as though the Lord had called us from our profitable labour commanded, to displease him in these vanities. Fenners Table of the Principles of Religion. Lex non præcipit totum simpliciter, sed præcipit sancta opera, quæ ministerio verbi Dei conducunt, & prohibet alia externa opera corporis, quæ impediunt ministerium. Hæc simplicissima est hujus legis & principalis sententia, Melancth. De virtutibus primæ Tabulæ. Sabbatum Latine quies aut cessatio dicitur, à qua significatione dies septimus, in quo Deus à novarum rerum speciebus creandis requievit, Sabbati nomen accepit, & ob ejus dignitatem, ipsa etiam hebdomada eo nomine vocata est. Juxta illud Luc. : Jejuno bis in Sabbato. Sabbatizare ergo idem est, quod cessare, requiescere. Bayi Institut. Relig. Christ. l. 3. c. 54.

Thus the duty is briefly propounded, it is further enlarged, and that two wayes:

1. By

1. By an explication of ſome things which might ſeem doubtfull.
2. By an argument of confirmation or reaſon to ratifie the precept.

The Explication ſhews two things anſwering unto two Queſtions, which upon hearing of the precept ſo briefly delivered, muſt needs ariſe in the mind of the hearer, needing therein to be ſatisfied. The one, Which is the day of reſt? The other, What muſt be reſted from; and who muſt reſt?

To the former the Lord makes a full anſwer, by ſhewing the time as diſtinctly as might be, ſaying, Six dayes thou ſhalt [a] (that is, thou maiſt, I warrant thee, and give thee good allowance for it) labour and do all thy buſineſſes, that is, all the works of thy particular calling for thy profit, but the ſeventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God, that is, which the Lord thy God requireth thee to reſt in. So the matter is defined particularly, after ſix dayes beſtowed in labour, and the works of thy calling of all ſorts, followeth the ſeventh day, and that is the day of reſt, which I appoint thee to obſerve. Here you have the matter of the Commandment explicated, every ſeventh day ſucceeding ſix of labour in a conſtant courſe of reckoning muſt be given to God for a day of reſt. The ſeventh day [b] following ſix of labour and ſtill coming between ſix of labour, muſt in a ſetled and conſtant courſe be yielded unto God for an holy reſt, the time being particularly determined.

Mr Warren would have theſe words to be preceptive, becauſe the injunction of working ſix dayes is delivered in the ſame commanding terms, verſ. 9. with the inhibition of work on the ſeventh day, verſ. 10. Poſition 1.

[a] Quod verbum non ſignificat hoc loco præceptum, ſed operandi permiſſionem & libertatem, non neceſſitatem: alioqui nunquam liceret ſex illis diebus otiari, aut ab operibus noſtris abſtinere. Rivet. Hac verba non ſunt præceptiva, ſed conceſſiva, niſi quatenus ad diem ſeptimam referuntur, quo operari non licet. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. lib. 2. cap. 10. Eſt duplex Dei præceptum, unum quod vocatur Imperij, aliud Indulgentiæ, præceptum Imperij rationem habet, in iis quæ ſua natura ſunt neceſſaria, & in iis quæ ſunt ex ſe adiaphora. Præceptum indulgentiæ, cùm Deus jubendo non imperat, ſed indulget, Gen. 1. v. 16. & 9. 3, 4. Et hic Creguti Revelator Arcanorum, cap. 1. Shalt] is as much as mayeſt, a word rather of permiſſion than command. Mr White on Command. 4. When the Commandment ſaith, Six dayes thou ſhalt labour, the meaning is, ſix dayes thou maiſt labour: thou art licenſed and not forbidden to do thy daily work on them by this Commandment. So it is tranſlated in our laſt Engliſh Tranſlation, Exod 31. 15. Six dayes may work be done. And in the Hebrew the ſame word ſtandeth for both ſenſes. Mr Thorn. Serv. of God at Rel. Aſſ. cap. 8. [b] Seventh here is taken indefinitely not particularly, that is, for ſeventh in proportion, one day in ſeven, not for ſeven in order, the laſt in ſeven. If the proportion of time be all that God reſpects in the ſix dayes of labour, then the proportion of time muſt needs be all which God can intend in the ſeventh day, which he ſets apart for a day of reſt. Mr White ubi ſupra, and Mr Warren of the Lords-day. This Commandment doth not directly require the ſeventh day from the Creation, but the ſeventh day in general. Cartw. Catech. See the contrary in Mr Thorndikes Principles of Chriſtian Truth, chap. 21. pag 161, 162. and Laws of the Church, chap. 21. Quod Deus determinat, id indeterminatum relinquere homini non licet. At Deus determinat expreſſe ſeptimum diem. Sic argumentor, cui dixi Deus benedixit & quem ſanctificavit, illum, non alium ab illo, cuſtodiendum præcepit. At non uni ex ſeptenario, ſed ipſi ſeptimo dixi Deus benedixit. Deinde illum diem Deus ſervandum præcepit quo ipſe quievit ab operibus ſuis. At non uno ex ſeptem, ſed ipſo ſeptimo die quievit Deus. Heydanus De Sabbato. Omnia illa opera prohibentur quæ propriè vocantur noſtra, quamvis non ſint ſtrictè loquendo ſervilia aut mechanica. Illa autem ſunt opera noſtra quæ pertinent ad hujus vitæ uſus, id eſt, in rebus naturalibus & civilibus verſantur, & propriè ad lucrum & commodum noſtrum ſpectant. Ameſ. Medul. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 15. In omnibus linguis cardinalibus ſeptimana dicitur à numero ſeptenario. Sanctitas & dignitas Sabbathi exinde etiam comprobari poteſt quod omnes ferè mundi populi illam agnoverunt, & aliquod Sabbatum obſervare voluerunt, etſi immutato die, Judæi enim & Chriſtiani & Muhammedani ſua Sabbatha Celebrarunt, ſed Judæi die ſeptima, Chriſtiani die prima, & Muhammedani die ſexta. Creguti Revelator Arcanorum, c. 18.

Another queſtion remains, What muſt be reſted from, and who muſt reſt? To which the Lord alſo makes anſwer, ſaying, In it thou ſhalt do no work; that is, none of thy works or buſineſſes, none of the labours of thy calling wherein thou doſt warrantably beſtow thy time upon the ſix dayes, and the reſt muſt be celebrated by the maſter of the Family and his Wife, comprehended both under the name [thou:] nay the King, Magiſtrate, Father, or any Superiour, is meant; by ſons and daughters, Servile ſcilicet & Mechanicum Fabrit. Conc. in Decal. Nempe quod vel pridie confici potuit, vel in craſtinum differri poteſt.

Calvinus in loc. Vide Curcellæi Diat. de Eſu ſang, c. 6. He names ſon and daughter firſt, becauſe parents through natural affection are ready to wink at them. Mr Dod. Filius tuus & filia tua] Intelligit eos qui ob ætatem legis intellectum nondum habent, quos arcere ab operis debent parentes. Grotius. Man and maid-ſervant, becauſe commonly ſome lucre is gotten by their labour. Quocirca diligenter attendant, qui ſervos, ancillas & mancipia domi habent, ut diem Sabbathi obſervare jubeant, atque nullum opus illo die faciant. Alioquin timeant ne hujus præcepti violatio in eorum caput recidat, Deuſque de manu illorum, ſervorum ſanguinem requirat. Bodeni Conciones Morales & Doctrinales in Decal. Conc. 1. de 3tio Præcepto. Weore nyten) Saxon. Jumentum, animal operatorium. Angli hodie, magna animalia & armentaria vocant nete, ſcoti noute: ut etiam per convicium ſtupidis ingerant, ze ar à nour, quod Galli, vous eſtes vne beſte. Freheri nota in Saxon. Verſ. Decal. Jumentorum à laboribus ceſſatio ideo præcipitur, 1. Ut ita aſſuefierent miſericordiæ, dum enim jubebantur ipſis jumentis quietem concedere, diſcebant erga homines mitiùs agere, Prov. 12. 10. 2. Et maximè ut ipſi Iſraelitæ Sabbatho quieſcere poſſint, non enim potuiſſent à laboribus ceſſare, occupati regendis jumentis, Exod. 23. 12. Rivet.

by

by men-servants and maid-servants, yea and by the cattle too, because their labour will require the labour of men attending them; and by all strangers within thy gates, whose labour will induce thee to labour, and be an occasion of thy labouring also. Turbasset ordinem civilem, & damnum attulisset Israelitis, si alij inter ipsos viventes permissi essent opus facere. Grotius in Exod. 20. So have we the Commandment explicated; now it is confirmed by a reason taken from Gods institution, and of this institution we have the ground and parts, the ground from Gods behaviour in the beginning, who in six dayes did make Heavn and Earth, this Universe, as in Gen. 1. the Seas and all things in them, and upon the seventh day did rest from creating any more things; and out of a will to have the Creation kept in a perpetual memory to the worlds end, did institute a day of rest, which institution standeth in blessing the day of rest and sanctifying it. The Holy Ghost saith that twice of the Sabbath, Gen. 2. 3. & Exod. 20. 11. that he never said of any other day, that the Lord blessed that day. To blesse is to appoint and make it effectual for a means of blessing; see Isa. 65. 6, 7. & 58. 13, 14. and to sanctifie is to sequester or set apart for holy purposes. So the whole argument stands thus, If God having himself made all things in six dayes, and rested from making on the seventh, did hereupon appoint the day of rest * by blessing and sanctifying it, then must thou remember the day of rest to sanctifie it, as I said at first; but so hath the Lord done, therefore must thou remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

* This reason drawn from Gods resting upon the seventh day, must be deduced, not from Gods act in resting upon that day, but from the consequent of that rest, the honouring of that day by his resting therein. Mr White on the fourth Commandment. Adam nisi Deo revelante scire non potuit mundum ab eo sex diebus fuisse conditum, & septimo die quievisse, sibique septimo quoque die cessandum esse, nisi Deo jubente. At quia sunt moraliter bona, & Adam tum scire potuit, ex insita sibi boni & honesti notitia, & homo ex recta rationis naturali luce, & interno conscientiæ sensu potest. Atque hac causa esse videtur, quod quartum præceptum, non negativè, ut tria præcedentia, sed affirmativè, & singulariter hac forma proponatur, memento ut diem Sabbathi sanctifices: causaque ejus subjiciatur, Quia cessavit die septimo ab opere suo: secus quam in cæteris, quæ menti insita & per se cognita sunt, fieri videmus. Heydanus de Sabbato.

There are ten words or sentences, of which if we take away this, there will be but nine, Exo. 34. 18, 20.

2. Adam in innocency kept a Sabbath, Gen. 2. 3, 15.

Now having expounded the words of the Commandment, let us come briefly to handle the question, Whether this Commandment be perpetual, binding all men in all ages, or whether temporary, binding onely the men which lived before the resurrection of Christ, and no further? It is manifest that the Laws given in the Old Testament are to be distinguished in regard of their continuance into these two kinds. For the will of the Law-giver (from which the force, extent, and continuance of the Law hath its original) was that some of them should be observed but till the resurrection of Christ and no longer, and again that some should continue in force from the time of their making to the worlds end.

therefore much more should we, the Apostles, in taking this day and giving it the name of the Lords day, Apoc. 1. 10. as before it was called the Lords Sabbath, and ordaining publick exercises, Acts 10. 3. and private, 1 Cor. 4. 2. 3. As they did shew that in the particular seventh day, it was Ceremonial: so in the common necessity it was perpetual, according to equity. 4. As Calvin saith unto the Papists, of the second Commandment, who also said that was Ceremonial and abolished. As long as we feel the grosnesse of our nature to invent false Worship, framing Images of God, so long that must remain to humble us: even so, as long as we do feel our corruption, in accounting the Sabbath unpossible, and so omitting and prosaning it, so long we will hold it to be perpetual. Fenners Table of the Principles of Religion.

Now concerning this fourth Commandment, it is apparent that the Law giver did intend that it should bind all men for ever from the time that he gave it. For how could he declare his mind in this behalf more plainly than by equalling it in all things with those precepts which are known to be of everlasting continuance, and by separating it from, and exalting it above all those others which are known to have been but Temporary. It was promulgated in the same majestick manner with the same voice, at the same time, and in the same place that the other nine. It was delivered to the same person to be laid up together in the same Ark, and so is a part of the same Covenant, whence those Tables are called the Tables of the Covenant, venant, and that Ark the Ark of the Covenant. What Commandment therefore is a part of the eternal Covenant, and is by God graced and commended with all those signs of commendation wherewith all the rest are graced, cannot, I think, be made of lesse continuance than the rest; for what did their writing in Tables of stone, and laying up in the Ark signifie, but their durableneſſe and eternal continuance, and full accompliſhment for us in Christ. The Lord hath ſeparated this precept from all temporary precepts, by giving it thoſe priviledges, as it were, and notes of honour, which all of them wanted, and God hath equalled it with the perpetual and everlaſting precepts, by communicating to it all thoſe teſtimonies of force and continuance which they had, therefore we are bound to believe that he would have this to continue in force as much and as long as the reſt, even to all men in all ages, ſo long as this world ſhall laſt. There is one argument that carries ſome ſhew of force for the overthrowing of this Doctrine of the perpetuity of the fourth Commandment, viz. That we are not now bound to do the thing it requireth, nay we are bound not to do it. For our Sabbath is not the ſeventh but the eighth from the Creation. To which I anſwer, That this fourth Commandment doth not require to reſt and ſanctifie the ſeventh from the Creation, nor from any other period or date of time, but alone the ſeventh after ſix of labour, or coming betwixt ſix of labour, in a ſetled courſe of numbring from any period that God ſhould appoint; and ſo in the meaning of the Commandment we do now and ever muſt reſt the ſeventh day, for the ſeventh is that part in order of numbring which doth ſtill come betwixt ſix, having ſix before it and ſix after continually, and ſo our day of reſt hath, and therefore we alſo reſt the ſeventh day. Indeed the period from which we take the beginning of our account, is not the ſame but another, for they did reckon from the beginning of the Creation and ſo forward, we from the Reſurrection and ſo forward; but ours is as truly and ſurely the ſeventh as theirs, though reckoned from another period; and for the period from whence the count muſt be made, we have no word at all in this precept. He ſaith not ſix dayes from the Creation thou ſhalt labour, and the ſeventh from the Creation is the Sabbath of the Lord, in it thou ſhalt do no work, but ſix dayes ſhalt thou labour; and he ſaith not after, the Lord bleſſed and ſanctified the ſeventh day from the Creation, but the Sabbath day; that is, the ſeventh after ſix of labour. Indeed the Lord by a ſpecial inſtitution given to Adam, Gen. 2. 1. had for the times before Chriſt appointed that they ſhould reckon from the Creation, which was the cauſe of that ſpecial inſtitution; but this is no part of the Commandment; and in that inſtitution God did two things:

Voetius in his 3d part of Select Theological Diſputations, De Sabbato & Feſtis, is for the morality and ſtrict obſervation of the Sabbath, he diſcuſſeth ſeveral queſtions there about the Sabbath. Jus Divinum ſometimes importeth a Divine Precept, (which is indeed the primary and moſt proper ſignification) when it appeareth by ſome clear, expreſſe and peremptory command of God in his Word, to be the Will of God, that the thing ſo commanded ſhould be perpetually and univerſally obeyed. Of which ſort, ſetting aſide the Articles of the Creed, and the Moral duties of the Law, there are few things that can properly be ſaid to be of Divine poſitive Right under the New Teſtament; the Preaching of the Goſpel and Adminiſtration of the Sacrament excepted. There is a ſecondary and more extended ſignication of that term, which is alſo of frequent uſe among Divines. In which ſenſe ſuch things, as having no expreſſe command in the Word, are yet found to have authority and warrant from the inſtitution, example, or approbation of Chriſt himſelf, or his Apoſtles, ſuch things uſually and interpretative, are ſaid to be of Divine Right. Of which ſort I take the obſervation of the Lords day, the ordering of the Keys, the diſtinction of Presbyters and Deacons. So the Government of the Church by Biſhops is of Divine Right, that is, of Apoſtolical Inſtitution and Approbation. Dr Sanderſons Epiſcopacy not prejudicial to Regal Power. See Sabbatum Redivivum, by Mr Cawdry and Palmer, part 4. chap. 1. The Sabbath includes two reſpects of time: Firſt the quotum, one day of ſeven, or the ſeventh day after ſix dayes labour. Secondly, The deſignation or pitching that ſeventh day upon the day we call Saturday. Whether this day was in order the ſeventh from the Creation or not, the Scripture is ſilent; for it is called in the Commandment the ſeventh day, that is, in reſpect of the ſix dayes of labour, and not otherwiſe; and therefore whenſoever it is ſo called, thoſe ſix dayes of labour are mentioned with it. The example of the Creation is brought for the quotum one day of ſeven, and not for the deſignation of any certain day for that ſeventh. Mr Mede on Ezek. 20. 20. Seneca inter alias civilis Theologiæ ſuperſtitiones reprehendit etiam ſacramenta Judæorum: & maxime ſabbata, inutiliter eos facere affirmans, quod per illos ſingulos ſeptem interpoſitos dies, ſeptimam ferè partem ætatis ſuæ perdant vacando, & multa in tempore vergentia non agendo ladantur. Auguſt. de Civit. Dei, lib. 6. cap. 11. The Jewes ſay, Ponderatur Sabbatum contra omnia præcepta quæ ſunt in lege, that is, the Sabbath is of that moment, that if any one rightly keep it, he may be thought to have kept all the Commandments.

1. He appointed the period from whence the ſeventh ſhou'd be accounted, which elſe Adam according to the Law infuſed into him would have taken otherwiſe, for thoſe ten were written in Adams heart, as is ſignified by the writing them in in Tables of Stone, and calling them the Tables of the Covenant, for God did not make one Covenant with Iſrael, another with Adam, but one and the ſame with both. Indeed the Covenant made with Iſrael was put in the Ark, to ſhew Chriſt to be the end of the Law, but yet it was the ſame Covenant for matter, and ſo all the parts of it were written in Adams heart. But Adam looking to the Law of his heart, and finding it written there (as ſome hold) I muſt labour ſix dayes and reſt the ſeventh, would have begun his life with ſix dayes labour, and then in courſe have conſecrated the ſeventh, but the Lord by a ſpecial inſtitution prevented him, requiring him to begin his life with an holy reſt, and to ſanctifie that ſeventh day from the Creation, and ſo forward. This was of ſpecial inſtitution, the aſſigning of that ſpecial date or period. And in this another thing was done, viz. the eſtabliſhing alſo of the Law of ſanctifying the ſeventh after ſix of labour, wherefore in the reaſon confirming the Commandment God ſeemeth to have reference to this inſtitution, but ſo that he maketh it manifeſt he looked not to that period, but to the number and order of the day; and ſo ſaith, He bleſſed and ſanctified the Sabbath day (which he had before determined to be the ſeventh after ſix of labour) not the ſeventh day, as it is ſaid in the words of that inſtitution. And the Lords reaſon is not this, What day I reſted that thou muſt reſt, but I reſted the ſeventh from the Creation, therfore ſo muſt thou; but thus, What day I upon occaſion of my labouring ſix and reſting the ſeventh did bleſſe and ſanctifie, that day thou muſt reſt: But I upon occaſion of my ſo labouring and reſting, did bleſſe and ſanctifie the Sabbath day, that is, the ſeventh after ſix of labour indefinitely, as the words before expreſſe, not from the creation only, Therefore thou muſt remember the Sabbath day to ſanctifie it. So then this reaſon I take to be fully anſwered. And for our better ſatisfaction we muſt know, that we keep the Sabbath juſt according to this Commandment word for word, in that we labour ſix and reſt the ſeventh, and ſo muſt do to the worlds end; but that we have taken up a new reckoning from a new period, even the reſurrection, we have it from Chriſts appointment, as is plainly ſhewed us, becauſe this day is called the Lords day, that is, the day which he appointed to be kept conſtantly. This name of the day ſhews the Authour of the day the Lord, and the end the remembrance of him our Lord, as the Lords Supper by that name is ſignified to be alſo from him and to him. And ſo by the wiſdom of God it cometh to paſſe, that becauſe men do labour ſix and reſt the ſeventh, we do eternize the memorial of the Creation according to this fourth Commandment; and becauſe we reckon from the Reſurrection, we do alſo eternize the memorial of that work, which is greater than the Creation. We muſt not think any thing more to be commanded than what the words do ſet down expreſly or intimate. Now neither expreſly, nor by any neceſſary conſequence or intimation are we pointed to a ſet period of numbring, or to a ſeventh from this or that date, but alone to the ſeventh after ſix of labour. As for the period, it being eſtabliſhed by the inſtitution mentioned Gen. 2. no queſtion needed to ariſe about that. If any ſtill argue, That day which God did reſt, bleſſe, and ſanctifie, is here commanded: But God did reſt, bleſſe, ſanctifie the ſeventh day from the Creation, Ergo, that is here ratified: We anſwer, That the Propoſition is to be underſtood with limitation, The ſame day which God did reſt, bleſſe, and ſanctifie, the ſame for order and number, not the ſame for the period or point from whence the number is beginning. For ſo himſelf doth ſhew his meaning to be, in that he inſiſts upon this order and number, ſaying, Six dayes ſhalt thou labour, the ſeventh ſhalt thou do no work, and doth not once mention the period from the Creation, as he could and would have done had that been his intention. Now the ſame point concerning the perpetuity of this Law is confirmed plainly by S^t James, Jam. 2. 9. where he ſaith, He that keepeth the whole Law, and faileth in one point, is guilty of all. Whence I reaſon, the whole Law and every point of it was of force when S^t James wrote this Epiſtle, for how can a man break a Law that is abrogated, or be guilty of all by breaking any one point, if the whole be not, and each Dies Dominica dicitur eadem ratione, qua Sacra Euchariſtiæ cœna vocatur cœna Dominica, 1 Cor. 11. 20. quia ſcilicet & à Domino noſtro Jeſu Chriſto fuit inſtituta, & ad eundem etiam Dominum in fine & uſu debet referri. Ames. Medul. Theol. l. 2. c. 15.

It was a uſual Queſtion put to Chriſtians, Dominicam ſervaſtis? and their Anſwer was, Chriſtianus ſum, intermittere non poſſum. Eſt obſervationis Apoſtolica & verè divina. Beza in Apoc. 1.

Some ſay, that Dr Bound was the firſt who ſet on foot the Sabbatarian Doctrines in the Church of England, if ſo, it was a great honour to him to be firſt in ſo good a work.

part

part equally in force. Now this Epiſtle was written by S^t James to thoſe which lived under the Goſpel, wherefore at that time, and to thoſe perſons the whole Law and each part of it was in force. And if any doubt grow what S^t James meaneth by the Law; it is plain, he meaneth the Decalogue or ten Commandments, thus; He that ſpeaketh of a whole Law, and after inſtanceth in particular members of the Law, muſt needs mean the whole number of Precepts, whereof thoſe two brought in for inſtance are members and parts. Now for inſtance, S^t James brings in two members of the Decalogue, Ergo, by the whole Law and each point, he muſt needs mean the Decalogue and every precept thereof, as will appear further by his manner of ſpeaking and reaſoning after, for he ſaith thus, He that ſaid, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, ſaid alſo, Thou ſhalt not kill; if then thou commit not adultery, but killeſt, thou art a tranſgreſſor of the Law. Here we have a plain Enthymeme, and a propoſition muſt needs be underſtood to make up the argument, and having one propoſition and the concluſion, no man which hath reaſon can chooſe but adde the propoſition underſtood, viz. To this effect, What things were ſpoken by the ſame Law-giver, do bind ſo equally, that though a man keep one of them, and yet break another, he is a tranſgreſſor of that Law given by that Law-giver. Now theſe two, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, and Thou ſhalt not kill, were ſo ſpoken. May not one adde to the ſame propoſition. But this, Thou ſhalt ſanctifie the Sabbath, was ſo ſpoken, and ſo conclude, Therefore if thou keep all the reſt, and break this, thou art a tranſgreſſor. It is therefore I think manifeſt by this place, that the fourth Commandment as well as any other point of the Law is now in force. I confeſſe that all the Jewiſh Sabbaths are abrogated according to the ſpeech of Paul elſewhere, but not the Sabbath in general. The Jewiſh weekly Sabbath is abrogated, viz. the ſeventh from the Creation, but the Sabbath in general, that is, the ſeventh after ſix of labour, is not abrogated. If the Sabbath in general were abrogated, viz. the reſting and ſanctifying of the ſeventh day after ſix of labour, than neither the Apoſtles nor the Church could have appointed the Lords day, nay nor Chriſt himſelf, unleſſe he would be contrary to himſelf. Indeed he might have appointed a day of publick ſervice, but he muſt have altered the number and order, and not have taken the ſeventh in conſtant courſe after ſix of labour for a new date, for this would have been ſtill to have appointed a Sabbath, but to appoint a Sabbath and abrogate all Sabbaths, are contradictory. Coloſſ. 2.

And ſo much for the clearing of the perpetuity of this precept. Now I come to handle the things therein commanded and forbidden.

The things required in this Commandment are of two ſorts:

1. Preparation to it.
2. Celebration of it.

The preparation to it is required in the word Remember, for ſuch is the nature of this Commandment, that it cannot be well kept unleſſe care be had of it before hand.

Now this preparation is two-fold,

General.

Special.

The general ſtandeth in a due ordering of our buſineſſes, that we may not bring upon our ſelves any occaſion of interruption and diſturbance in the ſanctifying of the Sabbath, by moderating our ſelves in our buſineſſes, not clogging our ſelves with ſo much as we cannot diſpatch without incroaching upon the Sabbath; for ſeeing God hath ſaid, Six dayes ſhalt thou labour and do all thy buſineſſe, it is requiſite, and

In the reign of Henry the 3^d a Jew fell into a Jakes at Tewkesbury, & when ſome offered to draw him out, he being Saturday (the Jews Sabbath) he refuſed, leſt he ſhould pollute the holineſſe of the day. Sabbata ſancta colo, de ſtercore ſurgere nolo. The thing coming to the chief Lord of the Country, he commanded they ſhould let him lie the next day too, for the honour of the Lords day, the Chriſtians Sabbath, leſt he ſhould profane it: ſo by abiding in it that day alſo, he periſhed. Sabbata noſtra quidem Salomon celebrabis ibidem. In Conſtantinople, and all other places of Turkie, I ever ſaw three Sabbaths together in one week: the Friday for the Turks, the Saturday for the Jews, and the Sunday for Chriſtians: but the Turks Sabbath is worſt kept of all, for they will not ſpare to do any labour on their Holy-day. Lithgows nineteen years Travels, part 4. Obſervant ſane Æthiopes utrumque Sabbatum vetus & novum non ex Lege Moſaica, ſed ex vetuſtiſſimo primorum Chriſtianorum uſu, qui idem faciebant. Longè tamen ſanctius diem Dominicum quam Sabbatum celebrant. In hoc enim à nullo alio, quàm à gretti agere, ut oratione & ſimilibus feriantur: Ludolphi note ad Confeſſ. Fidei Claudij Regis Æthiopia.

we are hereby tied to frame and order our affairs ſo, what in us lieth, that they may be diſpatched in the compaſſe of ſix dayes, which will not be ſo if we over-fill our hands with work.

2. That buſineſſe we have we muſt with diligence and foreſight diſpatch in the compaſſe of ſix dayes, for ſo we are wiſhed, ſix dayes ſhalt thou do all thy buſineſſes, which doth ſo ſerve to limit out the day of reſt, that it doth alſo direct us to preparation for this reſt, for ſeeing God hath allowed us to labour ſix dayes, it follows that we muſt wiſely and diligently follow our buſineſſes therein, that (as far as may be attained by our care) all may fitly fall within that compaſſe of time, and nothing may remain to diſquiet, clog and diſturb us in the day of reſt.

The more ſpecial preparation is on the end of the Saturday, by making all things ready for that day, and ſo a ſeaſonable betaking our ſelves to reſt, that we may be fitter for the ſanctifying of it. What ordinary buſineſſes may be diſpatched before all the week we muſt do, what ſpecial things are to be made ready againſt the Sabbath, that ſo much as may be no labour may be put upon us on that day, muſt alſo be done. And ſo it appeareth that the Church of the Jews did underſtand this precept, and had on the day before the Sabbath a time of preparation for the Sabbath *, Luke 23.54. That day was the preparation, and the Sabbath drew on. We ought to be as careful of preparing for our Sabbath called the Lords day, as they for theirs ſurely; and this we are not, if we do not take care the evening before to ſet all things in a readineſſe for the prevenuing of occaſions of labour that day, as by fitting our houſes, our attire, our food, ſo far as may be conveniently, ſo as little or no more than needs may, remain to be done about them, for our comfortable uſe of them on the Lords day, and fitting our bodies with convenient ſleep for the whole work then to be done. All this is injoyned in the word Remember, for it muſt not be a careleſſe remembrance, but remembrance joyned with a care of doing the thing to be remembred, and therefore alſo with all needful preparation to it.

* The godly Jews had their preparation for the Sabbath, that nothing might diſturb the holy reſt enſuing, Matth. 27. 62. Mark 15. 42. We muſt prepare for the Sabbath before it comes, 1. By preventing all lets and incumbrances which on that day might hinder us in Gods ſervice publick or private. 2. We muſt in a godly manner prepare and fit our ſelves in ſoul and body, ſo as on that day we may give moſt glory to God, and receive moſt good and comfort to our ſouls. Ad hujus diei veſtrum obſervationem duo ſunt neceſſaria, quies, & quietis illius ſanctificatio. Quies qua requiritur, eſt ceſſatio ab omni opere, quod excevitiis cultus divini poneret impedimentum. Sanctificatio hujus quietis ac diei, eſt applicatio noſtrum ipſorum ſingularis ad Deum illa die colendum: quod innuitur illis ipſis præfatibus, Sanctificavit illum diem, & Sabbathum eſt Jehovæ Deo tuo. Ames. Medul. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 15.

Hitherto of preparation. The celebration of the Sabbath ſtands in two things: { Reſt. / Sanctification.

The Reſt of the day is appointed in regard of the Sanctification chiefly, being of it ſelf nothing acceptable to God; for a meer reſt, that is, a ceſſation from doing work, if it be not referred to an holy end, and joyned with a holy uſe, is idleneſſe, and ſo rather a ſin than a duty, and therefore he ſaith, Remember the day of reſt to ſanctifie it, Exod. 20.8. ſee Deut. 5.12. Ezek 28.12. ſhewing that the reſt muſt have reference to the ſanctification.

About which reſt it will be needful to ſhew,

1. Who muſt reſt, and theſe are the Governours and all under their government, both publick and private, and not onely ſo, but even alſo the Beaſts, and conſequently all other things of the like nature, which muſt be attended and followed by the labour of man, ſuch as are Mills, Fire-works, and the like, in which God aimed leſſe principally at the benefit of the Creatures, but chiefly at mans good, by following theſe things he muſt not be hindered from the ſanctifying of this day.

2. From what they muſt reſt, and that is

1. From labours.
2. From ſports.

From labours firſt.

All labours or works are of two ſorts, ſome religious, tending to the ſervice of God,

God, these are not understood here, as not being our works * but Gods, and therefore they are not forbidden. Some are civil or natural, tending to the commodity of this present life, such as are specially the labours of our ordinary callings, buying, selling, travelling, pleading, making any handy-work, or the like.

* Opus nostrum vocat, quod facimus nostri causa. hoc est, propter nostrum lucrum, mercedem & commodum: hoc autem proprium est servorum, servilia ergo hac opera, quæ scilicet lucri nostri causa fiunt, & ad seculum hoc pertinent, eóque verè nostra, concedit fieri intra sex dies, cavet verò ne fiant die septimo. Zanchius in quartum præceptum.

Now all these are here forbidden, yet not simply but with limitation. For

1. Works of mercy may be done on the Lords day without sin, and might ever; for mercy must take the upper hand of all external acts of Religion, as being more essentially and intrinsecally good than any of them, hence Christ saith, It is lawfull to do good on the Sabbath day, meaning by good works works of mercy, and so he justifieth the pulling of an Oxe or an Asse out of a ditch upon the Sabbath day, and himself did cure those diseased people which came unto him on the Sabbath day; so that if either man or beast be in distresse, it is lawful to work, labour, and take pains for their help, succour and relief, and this prohibition must be understood not to reach to such things, and therefore the lawfulnesse of doing them cannot impeach the perpetuity of this Commandment. Mat. 12. 10, 12. Luke 13. 12. John 5. 8, 9. and 9. 14.

2. Works of necessity may be done; such I mean as are requisite for the preventing of imminent danger, as Elijah did flie for his life divers dayes, whereof some must needs fall out on the Sabbath; and in the time of war men may fight on the Sabbath-day, and so they may quench a fire if it happen, or the like, or stop an inundation of the Sea, or prevent any other like imminent peril which cannot be prevented without labouring presently.

The Apostles constrained with hunger plucked the ears of corn, rubbed them in their hands and did eate the corn upon the day of rest, and yet polluted not the Sabbath: for Christ defendeth their doing to be lawfull, Matth. 12. 3. Mark 2. 27.

3. Works needfull for the comfortable passing of the Sabbath, as dressing of moderate food, and the like, may be done on the Sabbath-day; for seeing Christ allows us to lead the Ox to the water, and requireth not to fetch in water for him over night, he alloweth us to dresse meat, and requireth not to dresse it over night. For the order in the Law of not kindling a fire pertained alone to the businesse of the Tabernacle, and that order of dressing what they would dresse on the sixth day, pertained alone to the matter of Manna. And for this we have Christs clear example, who being invited went to a feast on the Sabbath-day, which he might not have done if it had been unlawfull to dresse meat and drink on the Lords day, for a feast sure was not kept without some preparation of warm [a] meat. This example of Christ we have Luk. 14. 1, 8, 12. which verses compared make it apparent, that it was a feast whereto he was bidden amongst divers others. So then all labours and businesses except in these three cases are unlawfull, for mercy, necessity, and present needfull comfort. And not alone the labour of the hand about these things, but also the labour of the tongue and of the heart, in speaking and thinking of these businesses out of the cases excepted, is condemned, as the Prophet Isaiah doth plainly shew [b], commanding to sanctifie the Sabbath to the Lord, not doing thine own wayes, nor finding thine own pleasure, nor speaking thine own words; our own words must be forborn, and our own pleasure, and consequently our own thoughts, for indeed words and thoughts of worldly businesses are as opposite to the sanctifying of the Sabbath as works, seeing the soul can no better be imployed in holy exercises if it give it self to them, then if the whole body were so bestowed. So the true keeping of the Sabbath requireth the turning of hand, tongue and heart from our own wayes, and thoughts, and words, that is, such as concern our own worldly matters and affairs.

[a] Yet some think it might be a feast without warm meat in that hot Countrey where they usually did drink water.

[b] Isa. 58. ult.

Secondly, Sports and pastimes, and natural wonted recreations, such as may be used on the week day are also forbidden, and therefore in the place alledged before, it is forbidden to seek ones own pleasure or will, and sure he that taketh leave to use pastimes seeks his own pleasure as he that followeth his bodinesse. Indeed when work is forbidden, sports can hardly be allowed which are never lawfull, but as sauce for work, only the spiritual pastimes of singing holy Psalms and Songs as a spiritual recreation is allowed to prevent all wearinesse. Indeed the exercises of the day are of such divers kinds, that nothing but meer fleshlinesse can cause a man to be weary.

c Isa. 58. 13. in one verse he ninefold hath forbidden twice the following of our pleasures as the chief prophanation of the Sabbath day.

Some, and they no small ones professe, that recreations and sports are no otherwise then to be allowed then as they may be used to the praise and glory of God; which calls to my remembrance what a Scotchman sometimes said, as he was going in one of London streets spying one of his acquaintance on the other side; for calling him aloud by his name. Sir, said he, when shall we meet at a Tavern to give God thanks for our deliverance out of the Ile of Re? D. Prosse of the Sabbath. See of the prophanation of the Sabbath in Holland. The Royal Charter, c. 14.

But it must be shew'd thirdly, how long this rest must continue, to which the answer is, for a whole natural day d, for of what quantity the foregoing six are, of that must the seventh be which cometh betwixt six in numbring, even four and twenty hours. If it be demanded at what time the day must begin and end: it is answered, when the first of the six following beginneth, and seeing Gods intention was not to bind all Nations to begin and end their dayes at one period, and that we cannot tye the seventh day, but we must in like manner tye the dayes before, and after, to a set period of beginning and ending, it is apparent that by this Commandment we are not tyed to any set beginning or ending, but must follow the common computation and reckoning of other dayes which is amongst us, from twelve of the clock at night, to twelve the next night, for we lay twelve at night, and one a clock in the morning. Neither is it any inconvenience that in some Countries the Sabbath shall be in being before and after the being of it in others, for the same inconvenience must needs follow upon any kind of beginning or ending either by Sun-set or Sun-rising (unlesse God had named a special hour which he hath not) for the Sun riseth and setteth in some places three or four, five or six hours sooner than in others, for a good space of the year at least. Yea in some Countreys they have but two Sun-risings and Sun-settings in one year, that is, one half-year day, the other night. See Cartw. Catechism.

d The Sabbath contains four and twenty hours as well as any other natural day, Psal. 92. being a Psalm of the Sabbath, v. 2. David saith, He will declare the loving kindnesse of the Lord in the morning, and his truth in the night, making the night a part of the Sabbath. It begins at midnight on the Saturday, and ends at midnight next following, Matth. 28. 1. Mark 16. 1, 2. Joh 20. 1. compared together, it appears that the Jews Sabbath ended at the dawning of the first day of the week, and then the Lords day or Sabbath day began, Acts 20. 7. Elton on the fourth Commandment. De certo tempore quo cessandum a re servili finiede judicatur: aliis centibus totis viginti quatuor dies illius horis cessandum esse: quin alij incipiant ab hora undecima a vespera ad vesperam: alij ab ortu solis diei illius ad sequentem ortum, qui oriente sole, vel paulo ante ejus ortum Christus resurrexit: aliis volentibus, interdiu tum de non faciendo opere abstinere tantum per diurnum lucem, ab ortu nimirum solis ad ejus occasum: ita ut magnâ diei parte cessabitur, quâ cessandum non est, vel non cessabitur, quâ cessandum est, atque ita Sabbatum profanabitur. Heydanus de Sabbato.

And so have we one part of the celebration of the Sabbath-day concerning resting, the next follows concerning the sanctification of it. Time is sanctified by bestowing it in holy exercises tending to work, increase, and exercise sanctity in man. So this day is sanctified when the time wherein men surcease the labour of their callings (which they followed all the six dayes before) is imployed in exercises of holinesse.

These exercises are of two sorts:

1. Publick.
2. Private.

For the publick they are the hearing and reading of the Word, praying, partaking of the Sacraments and all such like services of God, for the reverend and orderly performing of which men are bound on this day as God giveth opportunity

Acts 2. 42. The Jewes were 1. Assembled. 2. Had the Apostles doctrine, that is, the Old and New Testament read and expounded. 3. They had fellowship, that is, they did communicate their earthly things as every one had need. 4. They had breaking of bread, that is, the administration of the Lords Supper. 5. They had prayers. Vid on the 4th Commandment. For publick prayer, see Acts 16. 13. and receiving the Sacraments at the times appointed, Act. 20 7.

to

to assemble together, and each man is to appear before God in the Land of the living, as David saith. It is manifest that our Saviour Christ's custome was still to go into the Synagogues, and teach them on the Sabbath-dayes, as appears Luke 4. 16. And it is apparent that Moses was read and preached in the Synagogues every Sabbath day, Act. 15. 21. See Act. 13. 14, 15. and that the custome of the ancient Church was on their Sabbaths to meet as we now do twice a day, it is to be seen in the Ordinance of the morning and evening Sacrifices which were appointed to be as many more for the Sabbath as for the other dayes. Upon the Lords-day God is to be publickly served of the whole Church in their several Congregations, and all the particular members of each Church are bound, unlesse they have some very just cause to come in due season to the Congregations, and attentively and reverently to joyn with them, and continue so doing till the end, and that not only in the Morning but also in the Evening.

Secondly, The Churches are then to make collections for the use and behalf of the poor and other acts of mercy, as the Apostle appointed them to do in Corinth, 1 Cor. 16. 1, 2, 3. and as he saith, He had ordained in all Churches.

These are publick duties. The private are some with reference to the publick to prepare for it, and make use of it before and after, fixing our hearts to hear by prayer and meditation, and the like, and by praying and meditation applying that to our selves which we have heard, as the Bereans examined the Doctrine of Paul, some again without such reference, as all holy exercises of singing of Psalms, prayer, meditation, reading, together with actions of mercy, in laying aside as God hath blessed us for the use of the poor, and in visiting and relieving the sick, comfortlesse, needy, and the like; all which are acts as well of holinesse toward God, as of mercy toward men. Especially we must know that it is our duty to meditate upon the great works of our Creation and Redemption, and our eternal rest in heaven, seeing the Sabbath is given us as a memorial of the two former, and an assurance of the latter, that being the excellent rest, our entring into which this holy rest doth point at and help unto.

Both the Family-duties and secret duties which we are bound to perform every day, are (by the equity of that Law, Numb. 28. 9, 10.) to be doubled upon the Sabbath-day. Hilders. on Psal. 51. 7. Lect. 135.

He who keeps the day most strictly, most religiously, he keeps it best, and most consonant to the design of the Church, and the ends of Religion, and the opportunity of the present leisure, and the interests of his soul. D^r Jer. Taylor's Great Exemplar, Part 2. Sect. 12. of the Decalogue.

We must not onely keep the Sabbath in the Church-meetings and solemn Assemblies (though it be specially appointed for the publick worship) but at home in our houses, Lev. 23. 3. We must awake with God in the morning, begin with him, rise early, spend not much time in dressing of our selves that day, it is the Sabbath of the Lord, have holy thoughts while we are dressing our selves, pray to the Lord to pardon all our sinnes, and to put us into a holy frame, and yet finish all this so soon that we may be with the first in the publick Assembly. We may after the first Sermon eat and drink, but for spiritual ends and purposes, that our bodies being refreshed we may be the fitter to serve God, but must take heed of spending too much time, or feeding too liberally, which may cause drousinesse. We must then season all with heavenly discourse, Luk. 4. from v. 1, to 23. We must not speak our own words. After the publick worship is ended we must call our Families together and repeat what we have heard, and Catechize them in the Principles of Religion, Heb. 2. 1, 3. the fourth Commandment, sing Psalmes and pray. At night we should blesse God for the mercies of the day, lye down with a great deal of soul-refreshment, sleeping in the bosom of Jesus Christ.

The Sabbath must last as long as other dayes, that is, the full space of 24 hours.

And this is the matter of the duties to be performed, the manner is to consecrate the same as a delight unto God, with comfort and joy serving him on that day, as we do with comfort and chearfulnesse follow our common businesse on the week dayes, as the Prophet Isaiah chap. 58. 13. expressly requireth. And call the Sabbath

[1] Isa. 58. 13. Call it a delight to consecrate it to the Lord, that is, take you as much delight in doing the exercises of Religion, as many do in the works of their callings or recreations, and also much more: for they are farre more ease, comfortable and profitable. M^r Dod on the fourth Commandment. See M^r Hilders. on Psal. 51. 7. Lect. 135. Mal. 1. 14, 15. What shall one do in Heaven, if the Sabbath be wearisom to him? there we shall keep an eternal Sabbath.

bath

hath a delight] Call, that is, make or count, an Hebrew phrase often used in Isaiah: Sabbath; Some by it understand the extraordinary Sabbath or day of fast, because in the beginning of the Chapter there is an expostulation about it, Levit. 16. 31. but the Lord is now speaking of an entire reformation; My Holy day, the Sabbath; agree not so properly to an arbitrary Sabbath: A delight,] LXX. thy delicate things, that is, one of the choicest priviledges God hath given thee.

These are common duties. The duty of Superiours specially is to look to their Inferiours, and at least to keep them from prophanation of the Sabbath, and so far as their authority will bear, to draw them at least to the outward celebration of it, by resting and by joyning in the publick exercises of Religion, as the good Nehemiah did cause the people to sanctifie the Sabbath in his time, and forbad Merchants to bring wares to Jerusalem on that day, and as we see in the very words of the Commandment, the Governour is appointed to rest, and not himself alone, but his whole Family.

There is,

First, No liberty granted more to the Superiour than to the Inferiour, but all of what state or condition soever must sanctifie the Lords day.

Secondly, Every Superiour standeth charged before God, not onely for himself, but for all those which the Lord hath put under his Government, that both he and all they sanctifie the Lords Sabbath or day of rest. Ford on Command. 4.

This delight is spiritual in God as the proper object, and in the Ordinances, as the onely means to lead us unto God, Job 27. 10. Psalm 43. 4. Cant. 2. 3. Isaiah 56. 7.

Reasons.

1. Because the duties of that day are higher, we have then all the means of Communion with God:

1. We have them in a more raised solemn way without any interruption, there is then a double Institution, not only of the worship but the time.

2. Its a spiritual Feast, a day of Gods appointment, our recompence as well as our duty, Neh. 2. 16. Ordinances are fodina gratiæ, Isa. 12. 3.

3. This day we come to remember the highest favours of God to the creature, to contemplate the works of Creation, Gods rest, and of Redemption, Christs rest, 1 Pet. 4. 1. and our own eternal rest, Heb. 4. 9. the Sabbaths of the faithfull are the suburbs of Heaven, Heb. 12. 23. the Lords Supper is Heaven in a Map, Luk. 14 15. Mat. 26. 29.

4. Many of the duties of the day are but spiritual recreations; meditation is the solace of the mind in the contemplation of Gods works, Psal. 104. 34. Singing of Psalms is a vent for spiritual mirth, Jam. 5. Eph. 5. 18, 19. then God should be solemnly praised, Psal. 92. 1, 2.

God manifests himself more sensibly and comfortably to his people on that day, Job. 20. 19. That was the first Christian Sabbath, see Verse 26. Rev. 1. 10. see Psal. 118. 24. Labour to get a spiritual and heavenly frame of heart; so much of Heaven as is in you so much you will count these duties a delight. Some have found a beginning of the taste of Heaven on the Sabbath.

5. It is the temper of the people of God to delight in his solemn worship, Psal. 2. 1 Cor. 2. 12. Malè concordat canticum novum & vetus homo. Aug. Psal. 84. 1, 10. Psal. 122. 1.

6. Delight in the Sabbath is the best way to discharge the duties, 1. With comfort, delight sweetens all, how will men toil at their sport? Neh 11. 8. 2. With profit. Isa 64. 5. God will not send them away sad which come into his presence with joy.

Means to delight in the Sabbath:

1. Labour after the assurance of the pardon of your sins.
2. Solemnly prepare for the duties of the Sabbath.
3. Wean the heart from temporal pleasures, Psal. 26. 8. & 119. 37.
4. Esteem the Sabbath a priviledge, that after six dayes of labour, God should appoint us a day of rest; he might have taken all our time.
5. Treasure up the experience of former Sabbaths, Psal. 63. begin.

6. In

6. In caſe of deadneſſe plead with your ſouls, as David doth Pſal. 42. Shall I go with grudging to the higheſt Communion that a creature is capable of.

The fourth Commandment then requireth,

1. Preparation.
   - 1. General, in our buſineſſe all the week.
     - 1. Diligence
     - 2. Diſcretion
     - 3. Moderation
   - 2. Special, by fitting all things for the Sabbath on the end of the day precedent.

2. Celebration of it, which is both
   - 1. Common to all, for
     - 1. Matter, both
       - 1. Reſt,
         - 1. From what
           - 1. Labors.
           - 2. Sports.
         - 2. Who? all.
         - 3. How long, one whole day.
       - 2. Sanctification,
         - Publickly.
         - Privately.
     - 2. Manner, to do all with delight.
   - 2. Special, to Superiours, to look to Inferiours.

Six Arguments prove the Commandment of the Sabbath to be moral:

1. It was delivered to Adam before the fall, when there was no Ceremony, Gen. 2.2. which is not ſpoken by anticipation, but the context ſheweth it was then ſanctified to him, v. 3.

2. Moſes takes it for granted, it was known to be moral, and known before the Law was given, Exod. 16.25.

3. Unleſſe this be moral there cannot be ten Commandments, Deut. 10.4.

4. God would not put a Ceremonial Law in the midſt of the Morals, and urge it with more words, reaſons, repetitions, and particulars, than any of the Morals, as he doth the Sabbath, Exod. 20.8,9,10,11.

5. Chriſt ſpeaking of thoſe dayes when all the ceremonial Law was dead and buried, ſheweth the Sabbath ſtands ſtill, Mat. 24.20.

6. The Prophet propheſying of the dayes of the Goſpel when Chriſt ſhould be revealed, Iſa. 56.1. pronounceth a bleſſing on them in thoſe times that keep the Sabbath from polluting it, verſ. 2. and putteth the keeping of the Sabbath for the whole obedience of the Covenant, verſ. 6 which he would not do if it were ceremonial, 1 Sam. 15.22. Mr Fenner on the Commandm.

We keep the Chriſtian Sabbath by force of the fourth Commandment, and by the Apoſtles example, Act. 20. 1 Cor. 14.2.

Its plain in the New Teſtament, that Chriſt did not onely riſe upon the Lords day, and appear to his Diſciples on it, and ſend down the holy Ghoſt upon it; but that the Diſciples preſently after Chriſts Reſurrection, began their Religious Aſſemblies on it, and ſo continued them by the guidance of the holy Ghoſt; and ſo ſetled that day for the uſe of the holy Aſſemblies of the Church, calling it the Lords day, John 21. 19, 26. Acts 2. 1. & 20. 7. 1 Cor. 16. 2. Rev. 1. 10. And it is paſt all doubt in the Hiſtory of the Church, that ſince the Apoſtles dayes till now, the Church hath conſtantly kept this day as thus eſtabliſhed, by the name of the Lords day: which the Fathers called the Chriſtian Sabbath. Mr Baxters Catholick Unity, pag. 322.

There is one general way of breaking this Commandment, by denying the Morality of this Law, and caſhiering it among other Levitical Ceremonies. If it be Ceremonial abſolutely, then how comes it to paſſe, that it was delivered by the voice of God, and written by the finger of God in Tables of ſtone, being one amongſt the reſt of the ten Commandments of the Moral Law, which are all perpetual in nature, ſeeing nothing abſolutely Ceremonial amongſt all the Ordinances of Moſes, was ever ſo delivered? Again, how can that be a Ceremony which was given of God unto man in the estate of innocency, when yet there was no sin, and so no need of a Saviour, and therefore no use for any Ceremony, to signifie or set forth either one or other. Mr Hinde of the use of the Moral Law, p. 128. Indeed the Sabbath is in part ceremonial, figuring both our rest of sanctification here, and glory hereafter, but that contradicts not the perpetuity of it, for it is not a Ceremony leading to Christ, and at his coming to determine, as appears Matth. 15. 17. I came not to dissolve the Law, vers. 19. He that shall break the least of these Commandments, where each of the ten Commandments is ratified, and consequently this fourth, Luk. 23. 56. They rested according to the Commandment; and Luke writ that divers years after the Resurrection of Christ, the things were done after his death when all Levitical institutions lost their power of binding, James 2. 10. Therefore the whole Law and each principle thereof doth bind us under the Gospel, as the time of instituting a particular date of time for the beginning of the Sabbath of the old Law, viz. in innocency.

unto

There are two principal reasons for observing set times of worship.

1. In respect of God, its meet that the creature should perform homage to him. The Angels honour God, not only as ministring spirits, by setting forth his glory in a more immediate manner, Luke 2. 30. so should we not onely by doing all we do to spiritual ends, but actually honour him in acts of worship.

2. In respect of us, our spirits are but finite things, and cannot mind several things at one and the same time: These were the grounds of instituting the Sabbath.

That term is not given to any other thing in the New Testament, but to the Supper, and the day κυριακὴ ἡμέρα, 1 Cor. 11. 20. ἡμέρα κυριακὴ, Rev. 1. 10. It is called the Lords day in respect of the institution, and Sabbath in respect of the observation. Sabbatum Redivivum, par. 4. cap. 3. It is called the Lords day, because it is a special day, set apart for the Lords use, of special signification, and for a special end, for three reasons likewise it is called the Lords Supper. See Durhams 4th Lecture on Rev. 1. 10.

The whole Church since the Apostles times, hath always so understood it, as it received it from our Lord Jesus Christ. Eusebius calls it so, Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Clemens Alexandrinus, Tertullian, Origen. According to the Jews anciently, the Lords day was the first day of the week, since Saturday, that is, the day of rest was counted for the last of the week after the Creation. The French Proverb is, Jamais ne fut Samedy que le lendemain ne fust Dimanche. Rives in the 5th Chapter of his Heptaglottologie observes, that the Arabick Rev. 1. 10. readeth, I was in the Spirit on the first day of the week. The which testimony (saith he) is of some worth for to prove, that the keeping of our Sunday for the Sabbath day, unto the alone service of the Almighty God in Jesus Christ, is not a humane Tradition but a divine Adoration. Vide Curcellæi Diatribam de Esu Sanguinis, cap. 6.

So much of the Commandments of the first Table enjoyning our duty to God; now follow the precepts of the second Table concerning our duty to our selves and our neighbours.

Yet this is to be observed, when the duty is performed to man, the obedience is given to God who commandeth us to perform these duties to our neighbours. Ford.

CHAP

Chap. VI.

The fifth Commandment.

Honour thy Father and thy Mother, that thy dayes may be long upon the Land which the LORD thy God giveth thee, Exod. 20. 12.

THis Commandment ſet in the Head of the ſecond Table, is the ſummary or ground of humane Politicks, commanding the duties of Princes and People, though Parents and Children only are expreſly mentioned. The following commands againſt Murther, Adultery, Theft and falſe Witneſſe, were part of the Jews Political Laws, and are ſtill part of Gods univerſal Politicks, and belong to every Commonwealth in particular to enforce, and ſee them executed, as well as Ethically to private conſciences. Mr Baxters Holy Commonwealth, ch. 9. Theſ. 213.

There are three things to be conſidered in it:

1. The Subject, Father and Mother.
2. The Attribute, Honour.
3. The reaſon of the Precept with a promiſe, That thy dayes may be long, &c.

God ſets this Precept immediately after the duties that concern himſelf, the Parents being in order of nature next to God, the cauſe of our being. Dr Taylors Great Exemplar Part 2. Sect. 12.

This is the firſt Commandment of the ſecond Table, upon which all the reſt do depend.

As in the firſt Table the keeping of all Commandments following dependeth on the keeping of the firſt: ſo here, if this Commandment were well obſerved, both of Superiours, Inferiours and Equals, there could be no diſorder againſt any of the Commandments following. Mr Dod. Of all the Commandments of the ſecond Table this firſt onely is affirmative, the other are all negatives. This Commandment is the firſt of the ſecond Table, becauſe there can be no order or ſtate that can ſtand without this Commandment, nor could the other Commandments be kept without this. Richardſon makes it one of the firſt Table, ſo doth Hudſon in his Divine Right of Government, l. 2. c. 11. but our orthodox Divines generally do upon good grounds make it the firſt of the ſecond Table. So Gallaſius on 20. ch. of Exod. Honoris intereſſe majus eſt omni intereſſe & jam vel vita ipſius & generoſa indoli, emori ſic ſatius eſt per honorem, quam per dedecus vivere. Epiſc. Andr. Toſtura Torti. Vult Deus hoc Præcepto ſancire ac ſtabilire tres illos præclaros in genere humano ordines ac ſtatus: Oeconomicum videlicet, Eccleſiaſticum & Politicum: omneſq; in his ordinibus comprehenſos ſui officij admonere, & ad illud præſtandum obſtringere. Fabric. in Decalog.

The firſt Command of the ſecond Table, or the laſt of the firſt, is that caution to honour Father and Mother; a duty of piety and religion, as well as of morality, civility, humanity and polity. Bp Gaudens Sermon preached at the Funeral of Bp Brounrig.

Though I judge not peremptorily that thoſe Ancients were in the right that made the fifth Commndment to be the laſt of the firſt Table, yet I doubt not but our modern are leſſe likely to be in the right, that confine it only to the ſecond Table. And as I think it ſtandeth ſo between the two, as in ſeveral reſpects to belong to each, ſo I rather think that it more principally belongeth to the firſt. Mr Baxters his Holy Commonwealth, chap. 7. See Lawſons Crucifying of the World, pag. 103. His Body of Divinity on this Commandment, and his Politica Sacra & Civilis. chap. 5.

Hujus præcepti æquitas eſt triplex: Divina, Naturalis, Politica. Divina, quia quicquid jubet Deus juſtum eſt, Epheſ. 6. 8. Naturalis item affectus idem faciendum docet, Rom. 1. 31. 1 Tim. 5. 8. Politica æquitas ex eo apparet, quòd oportet rerum omnium, Ordinum, Magiſtratuum confuſionem ſequi, ſi non in metu & poteſtate parentum liberi retineantur. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 12.

Under the name of Father and Mother all Superiours are comprehended, otherwiſe neither the duties of Inferiours to Superiours, nor of Superiours to them are to be found in Gods Law, which oppoſeth abſolute perfection. Firſt and principally thoſe are underſtood of whom we are begotten, Heb. 12. 9. Not onely Father but alſo Mother is expreſſed, leſt any ſhould think that for the weakneſſe of her Sex, and the ſubjection of the woman, the Father onely were to be honoured, and not the Mother. The Precept is repeated, Deuter. 5. 16. & Levit 19. 3. where the Mother is put firſt, becauſe the childe begins to know her firſt.

Prov. 23. 22. & 15. 20.

Superiority conſiſteth in three things, Excellency, Rule and Power. The Magiſtrate is Superiour to the Miniſter in Dominion and civil Authority; but the Miniſter notwithſtanding is Superiour to the Magiſtrate in excellency. B. Down. Def. of his Serm. l. 3. c. 4.

All Superiours alſo are comprehended under this Title, Magiſtrates, Gen. 41. 8, 43. Miniſters, 2 Kings 2. 12. & 13. 14. 1 Cor. 4. 15. Maſters of Families, 1 Kings 5. 13. Elders in years, Acts 7. 2. 1 Tim. 5. 1, 2. Superiours muſt be obeyed in things agreeable to the Word, not ſimply and abſolutely, Epheſ. 6. 1. Daniel 3. 16, 17. Exod. 17. Heb. 11. 23. Acts 4. 19. & 5. 29. becauſe they have their power from God, Rom. 13 4. Luke 2. 49. Yet God makes mention of Parents:

Gratiæ nomen eſt pietatis quam poteſtatis, etiam familiæ magis patres quam Domûs vocantur.

Firſt, That he might propound that Superiority for an example which ſeems moſt amiable and leaſt envious. For as in the negative precepts he uſeth odious words to deter men from ſin; ſo in the affirmative he chooſeth words full of love, by which we are to be allured to obedience.

Secondly, The ſame at the firſt in the beginning of the world were both Parents, Magiſtrates, Maſters and Schoolmaſters.

Pater in hoc mandato naturalis eſt, ſpiritualis eſt, & politicus: omnibus æqualiter & ſine diſcrimine dicitur: Honorate Parentes, & omnes Parentes honorate: Honora Patrem & Matrem, honore reverentiæ, fidelitatis & tolerantiæ.

Thirdly, He names Parents, becauſe their power and government which was the firſt, is as it were the rule by which all others ought to be framed. Hence all Superiours are taught to carry themſelves as Parents, and all Inferiours as children.

Diſertè nomen Matrum exprimitur, ne ſexus eas contemptibiles reddat apud liberos maſculos. Calvin. in loc. Utriuſque, patris & matris diſertè fit mentio, quia in procreandis liberis & educandis utriuſque & labor intervenit, & miniſterium. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 12.

He ſaith, Father and Mother, disjoyning them, to ſhew that there is a duty peculiar to both theſe perſons. For though the Mother be ſubject to her Husband, yet ſhe is Superiour to her Child.

Sub nominibus Patris & Matris intelliguntur etiam avus, avia, aliique majores, qui in lineâ, quam vocant aſcendentem, numerantur, quemadmodum ſub filiorum nomine nepotes & omnes qui ab aliquo originem ducunt, ſignificantur. Mac. cov. loc. commun. c. 9.

He ſaith not ſimply Father and Mother, but thy Father and Mother; therefore thou ſhalt honour the Father, becauſe he is thy Father, of whom thou art begotten and bred; therefore thou ſhalt honour the Mother, becauſe by her not without ſorrow and pain thou waſt brought into this life. Whatſoever they be they are therefore to be honoured, becauſe they are thy Parents.

The Law-giver ſets down the duty of the child toward the Father, and not the duty of the Father toward the child, becauſe the affection of a Father toward the childe is naturally greater, and hath leſſe need of incitements than that of a childe toward the Father, Amor deſcendit non aſcendit. It is proper to love, to deſcend not aſcend; the reaſon is, becauſe love began in Heaven, God was the firſt that loved. Charity, I ſay, begins in Heaven, and deſcends on the Earth; and in this it differs from faith, which begins on Earth and ends in Heaven. The Inferiour is commanded rather than the Superiour, becauſe the Inferiour hath more Patris Matrisve ſignificatio hoc loco eſt latiſſima, & ad quatuor hominum genera pertinet. Nempe ad eos qui ſunt vel patres, natura ſive adoptione, ut omnes cognati, conſanguinei, patria ipſa: vel Dignitate, ut Principes, Domini, Magiſtri: vel Ætate, ut Senes omnes: vel Beneficio, ut Benefactores animorum & corporum: & ita explicat doctiſſimè Calv. imprimiſque in Harmonia Moſis. Atq; etiam Philo Judæus. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 12. Vide Urſini Expoſit. hujus præcepti.

cauſe

cauſe to neglect his duty than the other; it is eaſier to be honoured than to give honour.

2. The Attribute Honour. The Hebrew word in Kul ſignifieth to be heavy, in Piel to honour, becauſe we do not eſteem them as light or vile whom we honour. Honos eſt onus. See 2 Cor. 4. 17. 1 Theſſ. 2.6. It ſignifies not only a right eſteem of the excellency and prerogative of Parents, and a right judgment of their perſon and office manifeſted alſo by outward ſigns of reverence, but love and obedience, and a readineſſe to relieve them in their neceſſity.

Honor eſt agnitio dignitatis, vel excellentiæ illius quæ eſt in alio, cum ejuſdem debita teſtificatione. Agnitio ſimul dicitur & teſtificatio, quia neq; in externa obſervantia ſola, neque in interna conſiſtit, ſed in utroque. Amef. Medul. Theol. Tria ſignificat hoc loco, reverentiam, obſequium, Gratitudinem ſeu ſublevationem. Danæi Ethic. Chriſt. l. 2. c. 12.

We honour men, when taking knowledge of that excellency which is in them, we bear our ſelves accordingly towards them.

Honour, inwardly is the eſteem a man hath of that which he honours; outwardly, the ſignes whereby he expreſſeth it. Honor eſt proteſtatio præeminentiæ, ſay the Schoolmen.

In as much as the unreaſonable creatures alſo love their little ones, and are loved of them; the Law-giver would have this natural affection (which ought to be in a man) of a more noble quality than that which is found among the very beaſts. The beaſts are capable of natural affections, but onely man is capable of honour.

Honora] Tum aliis reverentiæ ſignis, tum ad vitam neceſſaria illis exhibendo, quod ſub voce unâ comprehenditur, ut 1 Tim. 5. 3, 17. Aiunt Hebræi vel in piſtrino laborare filium debere, ut ſubveniat parentibus. Patrem tuum & Matrem tuam] Ut terreſtres Deos, à quibus originem trahitis. Grot. in Exod. xx.

2. In ſome reſpect a man ows more affection to his wife and his children than to his Father or Mother; but in honour the Father and Mother have alwayes the preheminence.

The honour due unto Superiours of all ſorts, is reverence of mind, declared by ſome civil ſubmiſſion, as of riſing before them, and giving them the honour of ſpeaking firſt.

3. The Reaſon of the Precept, That thy dayes may be long.

Which promiſe if we reſpect the words in the Hebrew, may be read two wayes, either ſo, That thy dayes may be long upon the Land which the Lord thy God giveth thee; for then he did, as it were, give it to them after he had delivered them out of Ægyptian bondage: or word for word, That they may prolong thy dayes, viz. Thy Parents; both readings have the ſame meaning, but this later hath a ſpecial emphaſis; for it ſheweth, that with our Parents after a ſort is the prolonging of our life, that we may be the more incited to love and honour them.

Terra fuit mentio; qua ſymbolum fuit divini favoris ac vitæ æternæ. Ejus quidem terræ promiſſio, quum peculiaris fuerit Iſraelitis, ad nos pertinere non videtur. Gallaſius in Exod. xx. Notat hic Aben Eſdras ſolere Deum, ubi quid velat, pœnam addere ut modo bis, ubi quid imperat præmium, ut hoc loco.

The Verb which is here tranſlated as a Verb paſſive, hath uſually in the Scripture the ſignification of a Verb tranſitive, and therefore it may well be tranſlated, that they (meaning thy Parents) may prolong thy dayes. Knewſtub on Exod. 20.

Dayes] ſignifies time, becauſe a day was the firſt ſenſible diſtinction of time.

Quidem Hebræa verba exponant, Ut prolongent dies tuos, Scilicet Parentes ipſi ſuo favore & ad Deum precibus. Sed vereor ne id nimis ſubtile ſit, & rectius Græci aliique interpretes vocem quanquam forma activa, ſumant in ſenſu paſſivo aut reciproco, nimirum ut prolongentur, aut prolongent dies tui. Abſolomo hoc præceptum violanti curtati ſunt dies. Grot. explicat. Decal. Ut prolongent ſe dies tuos] Scilicet Parentes, eſt enim prolongandi verbum hic activæ ſignificationis. Sed quo modo parentibus tribuitur quod ſolius Dei? Propterea quod Parentes ſunt quodammodo medium & cauſa inſtrumentalis per quos Deus filiis aliquando vitam prolongat, exaudit enim Deus ſæpè præces & benedictiones, quibus filiis ſuis obedientibus ac morigeris benedicunt ac bene precantur. R. Aben Ezra hæc verba ita explicat, ut prolongent dies tuos, ſcilicet mandata Dei, ſed prior lectio ſimplicior eſt. Paul. Fag. in Annot. in Chald. Paraph. Vide Cartw. in loc.

God promiſed life in this Commandment rather than any other kinde of bleſſing, becauſe we received life from our Parents; therefore life is promiſed mised to him which honours those from whom he hath received it.

This Commandment enjoyns the performance of all such duties as appertain to men in regard of their place, that is, which respect a special relation which passeth betwixt some men more then others in some special and particular bond, binding them mutually one to another.

The Summe of the Commandment is to shew, what duties we owe one to another, in respect of their and our place, gifts and calling.

This is made the summe of all the duties the childe oweth to his Parents, Honour thy Father and Mother, because this is the chief duty of all others, yea this is the fountain of all other duties a childe can performe, Mal. 1. 6. Deut. 27. 16.

The duties required of the natural childe are comprehended under these three heads, Reverence[a], Obedience and Thankfulnesse.

[a] Calv. Instit. l. 2. c. 8.

1. Reverence.

This Reverence must be both inward and outward, in the heart and in the behaviour.

Sir Thomas Moor being Lord Chancellor in his time, and having his own Father then living, and at that time a Judge (for he was one of the Judges of the Kings-bench) never went to Westminster-Hall to sit in the Chancery there, but first he would up to the Kings-bench where his Father then sate, and there on his knees would ask him blessing before a world of lookers on. How respective was Joseph to his Father, and Solomon to his Mother, 1 Kings 2. 19, 20. Lewis the thirteenth King of France, when he had passed nonage, said, I am now major to all the world except my Mother, to whom I shall be still a minor. Howels Corollary to the Life of Lewis the thirteenth.

The inward Reverence is commanded Lev. 19. 2. Ye shall fear every man his mother and father. God begins there where obedience is best tried.

Secondly, Reverence in outward behaviour, as bowing to them, in standing bare, and putting off before them, in an humble and lowly countenance and behaviour, when the Parents speak to them, or they unto their Parents.

2. They must obey their Parents, Col. 3. 20. Ephes. 6. 1.

Luke 2. 51.

1. In doing the things which they command if they be lawfull.

2. In quiet and patient bearing their admonitions and corrections, Pro. 13. 1. & 15. 5.

3. They must be thankfull to their Parents, which thankfulnesse consisteth in two things:

1. In relieving their Parents when they be in want, Gen. 47. 12,

2. In praying for their Parents, 1 Tim. 1. 2.

Children must be obedient to their Parents, so was David, 1 Sam. 17. 20. Christ went down with his Parents, and was subject to them.

Reasons.

[b] Ephes 6. 1. Right implieth three things, 1. That it is agreeable to the Law, the Law of God, of Nature, of Nations. 2. That the place of Parents requireth as much, for right requireth that every one have his own, that which is his due. 3. That Parents deserve as much, for right presupposeth desert. Dr Gouges Domest. Dut.

First, It is a Duty most [b] equal that they should be obsequious to them, by whose means they are, they were the instruments of thy being.

Secondly, It is a profitable duty, that is the promise, That it may be well with them, and their dayes may be long on the earth; a prosperous and long continuance upon the earth is the reward of dutifulnesse; the Rechabites were highly commended of God for their obedience to their Parents, and received this Promise from him as a recompence of their obedience, That Jonathan the son of Rechab should not want a man to stand before him for ever.

Life is in it self a blessing, and so promised, as here Exod. 20. 12. Prov. 28. 12. Psalm 91. 16.

Long life is a mercy,

1. To the godly, that they are not gathered till they be ripe, Prov. 6. 31.

2. To the wicked it affords them time to repent and reconcile themselves God.

The

The Irish Countesse of Desmond lived to the age of above 140 years, being able to go on foot four or five miles to the Market-Town, and using weekly so to do in her last years, and not many years before she died, she had all her teeth renewed.

Thirdly, It is well pleasing to God, Col. 3. 20.

The bounds and limits of it:

It must be a very large obedience, extending it self to all those things which God or some superiour joyntly over Father and child hath not forbidden.

Col. 3. 20. compared with Ephes. 6. 1. so far forth as children transgresse not any of Gods Commandments in obeying their parents, they ought to obey, Rom. 1. 30. 2 Tim 3. 2. Tit. 1. 6. τέκνα ἀσωτίας. Deut. 13. 13. Ever the blessing or curse Stubbornnesse and disobedience to Parents much displeaseth God. When the Apostle would reckon up the foul sinnes of the Heathen, for which the wrath of God was manifested against them from Heaven, he reckons among the rest, Disobedience to Parents; and when he would describe the ill qualities of those which should live in the later perilous times, he saith, Disobedient to Parents. The Apostle also setteth forth childrens disobedience by a Metaphor taken from untamed head-strong Beasts, that will not be brought under the yoke. The word therefore is not unfitly translated unruly: and it is somewhat answerable to an Hebrew phrase given to disobedient children, viz. Sons of Belial, which is according to the notation as much as sons without profit; or, as some will have it, Sonnes without yoke; that is, such children as refusing to be in subjection unto Parents, are no way profitable, but work much mischief, and cause great grief. Cursed be he that dispiseth Father or Mother, and let all the people say, Amen.

of the parents, hath a prophetick power joyned with it, Flores Regij by King James, Deut. 27. 16. The punishment which by the Law was appointed to disobedient and rebellious children, was a publick shamefull death, Deut. 21. 18, 19, 22. Parentis effigiem filio corporis exprimere hoc omnibus cum aliis commune est: virtutes patrum tam rarum natis est exprimere, quam patribus virtutum suarum ac morum exempla suis relinquere posse. Jos. Scalig. Epist. Christoph. & Augustino Puteanis.

The Treasury of Ancient and Modern Times, Part 1. lib. 5. chap. 23. mentions three Princes, who ended their dayes miserably, for disobeying their Fathers. The last is of Muleasses King of Thunis in Africa, a great Philosopher, following the Religion of Averroes, whose eyes his sonne Amydas caused to be put out with a hot burning Iron, and himself to be kept blinde in prison most miserably. His sonne from the day that he caused his eyes to be put out, felt himself continually afflicted with an extream head-ach, and Impostumations in his eyes: whereby he lost all joy, and became blinde of one of his eyes, whereof he died. Philip de Commines in his Hist. lib. 4. cap. 1. hath one of the other two stories, which is there quoted out of him.

They must not so much as attempt to bestow themselves in marriage without the consent of their Parents, Gen. 21. 21. & 24. 4. Exod. 34. 16. Deut. 7. 3. Wives were given by their Parents to all the Patriarchs in the Old Testament. See Dr Taylors Ductor Dubitantium l. 3. c. 5. Rule 8.

Erasmus in one of his Epistles speaking of Levinus that got a wife, neglecting the counsel of his friends about it, and so proving unhappy, he saith, Res celeb. peracta est magis, quam caute. They should imitate what is good in their Parents, Ephes. 5. 1.

The Fundamental Laws of France do not permit Princes of the blood to marry without the Kings consent. Bodingtons Administration of Cardinal de Richelieu, pag. 460

Though the consent of Parents in second marriages be not absolutely necessary, yet it is to be thought fit and convenient, because children in some regard exempted from parents authority, do notwithstanding owe duty to them, and they are to testifie it by being advised by them in some sort in their after bestowing of themselves in marriage. Elton on the 5th Commandment.

Postquam ex parentum consensu, vel expresso, vel tacito in sua potestate sunt constituti, summa pietate filiali.

tria parentum propriè sic dicta cessant, quamvis nunquam cessare possit debitum gratitudinis, observantiæ, & pietatis filialis. Amesius de conscr. l. 5. c. 22.

The duties of Parents to their children, are either in their tender years or riper age, common to both, or special.

The four Cardinal duties of a parent are

The

prayer, admonition, example, correction

The fountain of Parents duty is love. This is expresly enjoyned to them. Many approved examples are recorded thereof, as [c] Abrahams and [d] Isaacs, Rebecca's and others.

c Gen. 22.2.
d Gen. 25. 28.

Reasons.

Great is that pain, cost and care, which Parents must undergo for their children; if love be in them, no pains, cost or care, will seem too much. Contrary to love in the defect, is want of natural affection, which is reckoned in the Catalogue of notorious sins, Rom. 1. 30. Tit. 3. 3. in the excesse is too much doting upon children. Parents are apt to exceed in their love to their children, and be extream fond in their affection; so Eli, Isaac to Esau, Jacob to Joseph and Benjamin, David to Absolom and Adonijah.

There is a three-fold advantage in being born of godly Parents:

1. The children of such are without scruple to be accounted within the Covenant, Rom. 11. 16. 1 Cor. 7. 14.

2. They are seasoned with good education in their infancy, Gen. 18. 9.

3. There God usually dispenseth special grace, though God be not tied, Rom. 11, 24.

Reasons.

First, Affection is natural and grows in the heart it self, and so grows the bigger and stronger; natural affections can hardly be moderated.

Secondly, It is ancient, it comes into the world with the child, nay begins when the child is in the womb.

Thirdly, It is much nourished; for it is the property of all, both affections and habits, to grow very strong by exercise, and to wax mighty by frequent acts.

But yet this fond affection is evil,

1. Because it is an undecent thing for a man to suffer his reason to be blinded by his affection.

2. It is dangerous and hurtfull,

1. To Parents, in hindering them from doing that which is good for their childrens souls, and so causing them to neglect the best and most necessary offices of a Parent, viz. To watch over them, to observe their faults and reprove them, and to beat down the corruptions that will be growing in them: it endangers the parents to sin against God, and honour their children above him, and to be too worldly for them.

2. To the children, they will grow bold on their parents love, and so much more careless of them.

The child set at liberty makes the mother ashamed, Prov. 29.15. See Dr Gouges Domest. Dut. on Ephes. 6.4. Deut. 6.7. See 2 Tim. 3.15. and Mr Baxters Saints Rest, part 3. See Dr Gauge ibid. Self. 46,47. Discam hic Matres se debere per se suas proles nutrire & lactare: natura enim hoc illis onus imposuit. Hinc Maximil-

The Parents common duty to their children in their tender years and childhood is,

1. To instruct them in Religion so soon as they are able to speak and have the least use of understanding, Prov. 22. 6. Ephes. 6. 4. God hath commanded parents to have a care of the souls of their children, Deut. 6. 7. Abraham had so, Gen. 8. 19. We should tell them of Gods right to them, he made them, Eccles. 12. 1. and of their account, Eccles. 11. 9. tell them how all are polluted by nature, and of the necessity of cleansing, of their Mediator, the uncertainty of life. Amongst all the meanes of Grace there is none more effectual than Family-instruction and example; by means hereof are persons fitted and prepared for, and made more capable of benefit by publick preaching, the younger sort especially.

Secondly, To give them correction, Prov. 23. 13. & 29. 27. & 13. 20. & 22. 15.

Thirdly, To blesse them, so Abraham did Isaac, and Isaac Jacob, and he his children.

The special duty of the Father is to give the name unto the child; of the Mother, is to nurse up her own child, if God hath given her ability thereunto, Gen. 21. 7. 1 Sam. 1. 29. Luke 2. 12. Sarah nursed Isaac, Rebekah Jacob, Anna Samuel. Else the mother will not so ardently love the child, nor the child the mother; for her love increaseth by kissing it often at her breast. Her milk (which is but white blood) of which the child conſiſts, and with which it was nouriſhed nine moneths in the womb, is more familiar and natural to the child, than that of another woman. He reſembleth his nurſe often in manners, Mores animi ſequuntur temperamentum corporis. Plato gives this as a reaſon why Alcibiades was ſo ſtout, though he was an Athenian (which naturally are fearfull) becauſe a woman of Sparta, a couragious and valiant Nation, was his nurſe. Tacitus writes that the Germanes are among all Nations great and valiant, becauſe their own mothers, which are of great ſtature, do nouriſh them.

of

lac & ubera veluti lagenulas quaſdam ad proles nutriendas aptas, illis largita eſt. Plin. l. 28. cap. 9. ſcribit lac Maternum eſſe utiliſſimum & natura pro- lis convenientiſſimum. Vide Aul. Gell. l. 12. noct. Attic. cap. 1. Scribit Lampridius Titum filium Veſpaſiani Imperatoris toto vita tempore adverſa valetudine laboraſſe, eò quòd à nutrice infirma lactatus eſſet; de Tiberio quoque Cæſare fertur quòd fuerit magnus orator, quia nutrix ipſius talis erat. Naturalem parentum ac filiorum amorem majorem videmus in communi plebe, quam in familiis nobilium, quoniam ferè nobiles fœmina infantes ſuos per nutrices lactari curant, à Lapide in Gen. 21. 7.

A Lamb ſucking a Goat, or a Kid ſucking of an Ewe, change their fleece and hair reſpectively, ſay Naturaliſts. See Dr Willet on Gen. 21. 7. and Dr Gouge of Domeſtical Duties on Epheſ. 6. 4. Sect. 12. to 16. and Mr Needler on Gen. 5. 4. fourteen Quæres about it, and Dr Taylors Hiſtory of the Life and Death of Chriſt, Part 1. Sect. 3.

It was not ſore nipples or breſts, nor an Infants wrangling, nor breaking her ſleep in the night, nor any other diſturbance that could make her neglect this bounden duty. Mr Guy of Dr Gouges wife.

So much for the duties which Parents muſt perform to their children in their tender years. Now thoſe follow which they muſt perform to them when they grow to riper age.

1. To bring them up in ſome profitable and lawfull Calling, by which they may live honeſtly and Chriſtianly; ſo Adam brought up one of his children in Husbandry, and the other in keeping Sheep, both profitable and lawfull Vocations. Adam in Paradiſe is appointed to dreſſe the Garden. See Dr Gouges Domeſtick Duties, Epheſ. 6. 4. Sect. 31, to 34. A Vocation or Calling is a certain condition, or kinde of life ordained and impoſed on man by God for the common good.

2. To provide for the diſpoſing of them in marriage, and that in ſeaſonable and due time.

3. To lay up ſomething for their children, 2 Cor. 12. 14.

Parents alſo when dying ſhould have a ſpecial care of their children, John 19. 26. they ſhould bleſſe their children, and give them good inſtructions. See Gen. 24. 1. & 27. 1. & 48. 15. & 49. 33. 1 Kings 2. v. 1, to 10.

Now follows the duties of Servants and Maſters.

Firſt, Of Servants.

Servitude came in by ſinne. Conditio ſervitutis jure intelligitur impoſita peccatori, nomen iſtud culpa meruit non natura. Aug. de civit. Dei. lib. 19. cap. 15. Vide plura ibid.

Origo vocabuli ſervorum in Latina lingua inde creditur ducta, quod hi qui jure belli poſſent

Some ſay, if man had not fallen, there would have been Imperium blandum non oneroſum, ſince the fall Magiſtrates are neceſſary.

occidi, à victoribus cum ſervabantur, ſervi fiebant, à ſervando appellati, quod etiam ipſum ſine peccati merito non eſt. Aug. de civit. Dei, l. 19. c. 15.

There are two kinds of Servants:

1. Such as were abſolute; thoſe that were conquered in war, the Conquerour had an abſolute power over their lives; the Apoſtle ſpeaks of theſe Col. 4. 1. and bids give to them that which is equal.

2. By compact and agreement, ſuch as our ſervants are now.

Servitus conditionalis & uſualis.

Servants are with care and faithfulneſſe, as in the preſence of God, to beſtow themſelves wholly on the times appointed, in their Maſters buſineſſe, Coloſſians 3. 27.

Three

Three things exceedingly commend a ſervant,

1. Diligence.
2. Obedience.
3. Prudence and Diſcretion.

The former two belonging eſpecially to a mans place as an inferiour, the third indifferently agreeing to every place: I ſhall handle the two firſt.

Firſt, A ſervant muſt be diligent in his buſineſſe. Seeſt thou a man diligent in his buſineſſe, he ſhall ſtand before Princes, not before men of lower rank. Solomon ſpeaks this principally of one in the place of a ſervant, if he be diligent he ſhall find good contentment with men of beſt note, 1 Sam. 18. 2, to 6. Such a one was the ſervant of Abraham, which ſhewed ſo much care, painfulneſſe, conſtancy, diſcretion, fidelity, in that great buſineſſe of chooſing his Maſters ſons wife, as nothing could be more. Such a one was Jacob to Laban, whom he ſerved with all his might, Joſeph to Potiphar.

Reaſons.

See Epheſ. 6. 5. Col. 4. 22. 1 Tim. 6. 2. Tit. 2. 15.

1. Becauſe in ſo doing they will pleaſe God himſelf who is the Author of this ſubordination of men in the family, that ſome ſhould be Maſters, ſome ſervants; therefore Paul ſaith, They muſt do it as to the Lord, not to men; and ſaith, Of God they ſhall receive the recompence of inheritance.

Prov. 10. 26.

2. For the quiet ſake of the Family, elſe he ſhall become like vinegar to the teeth and ſmoke to the eyes.

3. They muſt do it for their own ſakes, becauſe they ſhall live with moſt comfort, cheer and content themſelves, as having the good will firſt of God, then of their Governours, and the good eſteem of all which do know them. He that is ſlothfull walks on a thorn-hedge, and pricks himſelf. A ſlothfull ſervant is, 1. A thief, he ſteals from his Maſter wages, meat and drink, which he receiveth, but diſchargeth not his work painfully. 2. A diſſembler, an hypocrite; if he allow this idleneſſe he cannot be a faithfull ſervant to God whom he never ſaw, who is not faithfull to his Maſter whom he ſees daily.

Secondly, A ſervant ſhould be obedient and dutifull, doing the things which his Maſter appoints him, as the places before-quoted in the Coloſſians and Epheſians ſhew; Paul wiſhed Timothy to tell the ſervants that are under the yoke, that they muſt do ſervice to their believing Maſters; and he willeth Titus, To exhort ſervants to be obedient to their Maſters in all things, to pleaſe them well; and Peter commandeth ſervants to be ſubject to their Maſters with all fear, and that not alone to the good and gentle, but alſo to the froward.

See Dr Willet on Exod. 21. Queſt. 8, & 9. Dr Gouges Domeſtical Duties on Epheſ. 6. 5, 6, 7, 8. Servants muſt obey their Maſters, but in the Lord; and therefore the Apoſtle ever joyneth ſome clauſe of reſtraint, Col. 3. 22. Epheſ. 6. 6. 1 Cor. 7. 15.

Reaſons.

1. God hath communicated a great part of his Authority unto Maſters, for the good of that little ſociety, and all which flow thence.

2. Servants are placed in a lower room, in a place of inferiority and ſubjection, and ſo are bound to perform obedience, ſeeing in all places the Superiour muſt rule, and the inferiour be ruled, or elſe neither Superiour nor inferiour ſhall with any comfort enjoy the places allotted unto them by God.

A ſervant is not ſui juris, muſt do his Maſters work, is a living inſtrument in the hand of another, 1 Pet. 2. 18. Servum non eſt perſona ſed res, ſaith the Civil Law: One deſcribes him thus, A ſervant is a perſon that yeelds himſelf to the command of a Maſter, and ſubmits to his authority to do his will, Rom. 6. 16. So the Centurion deſcribes a ſervant, Matth. 8. 9.

3. Servants do receive meat and drink, and as the caſe goes with us, alſo wages at the hands of their Maſters; and theſe are badges of obedience, tying them neceſſarily to do ſervice to them from whom they receive theſe recompences of their ſervice.

When Servants are ſtubborn, unruly, maſterfull; this ſin hath its original in pride and ſelf-conceitedneſs, they tread Gods Power and Authority under feet in treading their Maſters.

The Maſters Duty conſiſts in two things chiefly:

1. In chooſing good ſervants, ſuch as be godly and of an honeſt and blameleſſe converſation.

Reaſons.

Reaſons.

1. If the ſervants be not faithfull to God, they will never be faithfull to their Maſter. Pſal. 101. 6, 7.

2. A wicked perſon is very contagious, and will infect the Family with his lewdneſſe.

3. He hrings Gods curſe upon his Maſters ſtate and family. 1 Tim. 3. 4.

II. In uſing his ſervants well. See Dr Gouges Domeſt. Dut. on Epheſ. 6. 9.

His chief duties are:

1. To uſe his Authority and intereſt that he hath in the hearts of his children and ſervants, to draw them to go with him to the Miniſtry of the Word, 1 Sam. 1. 27. 2 Kings 5. 15.

2. He muſt uſe his skill and endeavour to make the Miniſtry of the Word profitable to his family by examining them, making things plainer to them, and applying them more particularly, Matth. 13. 51. Mark 4. 34. Deut. 6. 7.

A Maſter was called by the ancient Romans, Pater-familias, the Father of the family, becauſe he was to look over all thoſe of the houſhold with a fatherly tenderneſs, as being committed to his truſt and cuſtody. Naamans ſervants called him Father.

A Maſter ſhould reward a good ſervant.

So Joſephs Maſter ſet him over the whole family. A wiſe ſervant ſhall rule over a fooliſh ſon, and as he that dreſſeth the fig-tree ſhall eat of the figs, ſo he which attendeth on his Maſter (ſaith Solomon) ſhall come to honour.

Reaſons.

1. This will encourage others to vertuous behaviour, when they ſee it ſo rewarded.

2. Equity requires it, the equity of the Judicial Law binds us, The faithfull ſervant muſt not go away empty; all men will complain of a bad ſervant, few will requite a good one. Deut. 15. 13, 14.

So much for their duties that be further off from equality in the family, as Parents and Children, Maſters and Servants. Now thoſe that are more equal are Huſband and Wife, whoſe duties are either common to both, or more particular to either of them. See Dr Gouges Domeſt. Dut. part 2.

The common Duties are of two ſorts:

1. In reſpect of themſelves.

2. In reſpect of their Families.

For themſelves; they owe to each other Love, Truſtineſſe, and Helpfulneſſe.

1. Yoakfellows muſt love each other, the Wife the Husband and he her. The Apoſtle commands Huſbands to love their Wives and not be bitter to them, Col. 3. 19. The Heathens in their Sacrifices to Juno the maker of Marriages, took all the gall out of the Beaſt, to ſhew that all bitterneſſe muſt be abſent from that condition. A Huſband in that he is a man ſhould be far from all bitterneſſe; hence humane and humanity, the cords of a man; all theſe imply ſweetneſſe and facility. It is noted of Elkanah, that he loved Hannah; and Iſaac, that he loved Rebekah, Gen. 24. 6. and the Apoſtle requires of women, that they be lovers of their huſbands and children, Titus 2. 4. Without their union of hearts, their uniting of bodies and ſtates will be a death, Epheſ. 5. 25. Love is ſuch a natural property of that relation, that God to ſhew his affections to his Church, when he would comfort her, ſaith, that he is her huſband. See a rare example of wively affection. In Speeds Edw. the firſt, p. 542.

Reaſons.

Firſt, God hath joyned Man and Wife in many and neer bonds, they have one name, houſe, off-ſpring, one bed, one body, and ſhould they not have one heart?

Secondly, This is neceſſary,

1. To make all the duties of marriage eaſie.

2. To make all the cumbers of marriage tollerable, Such ſhall have trouble in the fleſh, in regard of domeſtical grievances, troubles from each other, children, ſervants. What a deal of miſery had Jacob in his married eſtate and ſo 1 Cor. 7.

David; therefore an happy condition is described to be that wherein they neither marry, nor are given in marriage.

I will in the next place shew,

1. What properties their love must have.

2. By what means it must be gotten and increased.

Their love must have three properties;

Not beauty, wit, wealth, kindnesse received, these things may alter.

1. It must be spiritual; their affection must be grounded on spiritual respects, and shew it self in spiritual effects; it must be a love founded on Gods Will and Commandment, which requireth them to love one another, that so it may be a sound and durable love, being grounded upon a lasting and durable foundation, and may be able to prevail against all difficulties and impediments. Secondly, It must shew it self in all spiritual effects, of seeking the good of each others souls; and if they love one another, because God commands it, they will love one another so as God commands; that is, so as to respect the eternal good of themselves.

Matrimonial love, that is, such as beseemeth that neer knot and conjunction. Where the bond is closest, the love must be strongest. His soul must rest it self in her as der Heaven for the onely woman under Heaven for him; and hers upon him, as the onely man under Heaven for her.

2. It must be plentifull, that is to say, for the measure exceeding all o her loves; the Husband must love the Wife and she him, more than Father, Mother, Children, Brethren, Friends, there being most neer bonds of union betwixt them, they are one flesh. Let the Husband so love his Wife, even as himself, not meaning it as the phrase is used, when it is spoken of the love we bear to our neighbour, that he must love her with a love which hath the same properties that our love to our selves; for then there were no special matter in it; but they must love their Wives (saith a Reverend Divine) even as themselves for measure, as much as themselves, as Christ loved his Church.

Prov. 5.19,20. As if he had said, If thou do not love thy wife, thou wilt look after harlots, or at least art in danger so to do.

3. This love must be a binding love, limiting and tying their Matrimonial affections and desires solely to each other. Erre in her love continually, and let her brests satisfie thee; And, Why shouldst thou, my son, imbrace the bosom of a stranger? Desire not the beauty of a stranger in thy heart. Means of attaining this love are of two sorts, Natural and Spiritual: The Natural are, sociableness and familiar conversing together in the same house, at the same table, in the same bed; therefore God appointed that a new married man for the first year should not be sent abroad to warfare, or to any other publick service, but should remain at home with his wife, that so through the constant society of one whole year their souls might be inseparably united in affection. Therefore those take a very bad course that dwell asunder, and fare asunder, and lie asunder, as for state and pomp is the custom of the greater sort of people.

2. Spiritual means must be added to the natural, or else little good will be done, and these are two:

1. Let them pray often to God to link their hearts together.

2. Let them be frequent in performing all holy exercises one with another, and specially in praying one with and for another. Spiritual exercises breed spiritual affection, and nothing is more binding than [c] Religion. Religious duties do both expresse and increase the Image of God, and that is amiable. So much for love.

[c] Religio à religando.

Now follow Trustinesse and Helpfulnesse, both which we will put together, as Solomon doth, saying of a good wife, Prov. 31.11,12. That the heart of her Husband doth trust in her. And again, She will doe him good and not evil all the dayes of his life. God did make man and woman for the good each of other, her to be his helper, and him to be her guide. This trusty helpfulnesse must be to each others bodies, souls, names and states. Bodies, in the carefull avoiding of all things whereby they may bring sicknesses or diseases each on other, and the willing and ready providing of all things that may continue health and recover it, as atten-

Gen.2.18. It is not said a help onely, for so are the living creatures, and therefore called Jumenta à jurando, but a fit or meet help.

In the original it is, before him, and with a note of similitude, as before him, that is, answering to him.

danec

dance, phyſick, and the like. Souls, in ſhunning all ſuch carriages as may provoke each others paſſions or other infirmities, and uſing all good means of loving advice and admonition to help each other out of the ſame. Namely, in concealing each others infirmities, and keeping each others ſecrets. States, in joyning together in diligent labour, wiſe fore-caſt, and vertuous thriftineſſe. Thus for themſelves.

Now in regard of their Families they muſt joyne together in the planting of Religion amongſt them, by inſtructing and teaching them, and by reading and praying with them, the man as chief, the wife as his deputy in his abſence; alſo they muſt overſee the wayes of their Family, by looking what is done by them, and ſeeking to redreſſe by admoniſhing and correcting what is amiſſe.

In regard of children they are,

1. To bear moderate affections toward them; Rachel and Hannah immoderately deſired them; others mutter becauſe they have ſo many.

2. To train them up in the fear of God; Solomon, who was the tender beloved, the darling of his parents, makes this the inſtance of their love, in that they taught him wiſdom, and acquainted him with the Laws of God. It was ſaid of Herod, that it was better to be his hog than his ſon. Prov. 31. 1.

3. To reprove and chaſten them for their iniquities; Eli, a good man, came to a fearfull end for neglecting this.

So much for their joynt duties. Now the ſeveral duties of each come to be handled; and firſt we begin with the Wife, and then proceed to the Husband.

The Wife owes in one word ſubjection, and this twofold, To the Husbands Perſon, and to his Authority. The wives relation-grace is ſubjection in the Lord, the Apoſtle twice or thrice cals for this ſubjection and obedience, 1 Pet. 3. 5, 6.

To his Perſon.

1. By acknowledging her ſelf to be his inferiour; God ſaith to Eve, Her deſire ſhall be ſubject to her huſband, and he ſhall rule over her. The female ſex is inferiour to the male, and every woman, as a woman, is lower and meaner than a man, as the Apoſtle proves, becauſe the woman was after the man, and for the man, and ſhe was firſt in the tranſgreſſion; therefore ſhe may not uſe Eccleſiaſtical Authority, not ſpeak in the Church as a Miniſter: But to her husband, not as a woman only, but as a wife, ſhe is inferiour, and bound in conſcience to be ſubject to his power and juriſdiction; for this is a word of eternal and conſtant truth, He ſhall rule over thee; which ſhe that will not yeeld to, is an enemy to God and nature, and cannot be a good wife. 1. This is there made the great ornament. 2. The Apoſtle ſhews there the benefit of this ſubjection. The titles and names whereby an huſband is ſet forth, do imply a ſuperiority and authority in him, as Lord, 1 Pet. 3. 6. Maſter. Eſth. 1. 17. Guide, Prov. 2. 15. Head, 1 Cor. 11. 3. 1 Pet. 3. 2.

2. She is to reverence her husbands perſon, both inwardly in heart, and outwardly. Inwardly, Eph. 5. ult. ſhe muſt fear him, not with a ſlaviſh but awfull fear; that is, ſhe muſt have her ſoul ſo diſpoſed to him, as to be afraid to offend or diſpleaſe him. She muſt ſhew outward reverence in all her geſture, behaviour and ſpeech. Sarah called Abraham Lord.

This is ſubjection to the husbands perſon.

Now to his Authority. She ows,

1. Cheerfull obedience to all his lawfull commands, as the Church obeyes Chriſt.

2. A quiet and fruitfull receiving of his reprehenſions, as the Church alſo is patient toward Chriſt. Epheſ. 5. 24.

Thus we have heard the wives duty.

The husbands duties are:

1. Wiſely to maintain his authority, not ſo much by force as by vertuous behaviour, avoiding eſpecially bitterneſſe and unthriftineſſe. 1 Cor. 11. 7.

2. He muſt wiſely manage his authority: The end of uſing his authority muſt be the good, benefit, and comfort of his wife and family, for all government is by God ordained for the good of the whole, not the pleasure of the Governor. The husband must use his authority to edification, and hearken to her when she speaks the word of God, as Abraham to Sarah. Isa.11.6.

2. The things in which he is to use his authority, he is to command what is to be done, and forbid what is not to be done, and reprehend where she offends.

3. The manner of using his authority is with three vertues, Wisdom, Mildnesse, Justice.

1. Wisdom, in commanding nothing but what is usefull and weighty, and grounded upon good and due reason. 2. In his reproofs he must choose fit time when he and she are calm; and fit place, when none is present.

2. Mildnesse or gentlenesse, rather perswade than command; if he chide her, let it be with compassion and without bitternesse.

3. Justice, in willing allowing of maintenance to her according to his place and means, in cherishing what is good, and seeking to reform what is evil. He must walk in all wisdom and knowledge, 1 Pet. 3. 7. he should be an example of judgement, gravity, holinesse, and wisely passe by many imperfections, because they are fellow-heirs of grace: if there be not this wise carriage their prayers will be hindered, contentions hinder such duties.

1 Cor.14.25.

Thus much for private persons, viz. Parents and Children, Masters and Servants, Husband and Wife.

Now follow the duties belonging to publick persons, which are either in Church or Commonwealth.

In Church, as { Minister. / People.

In Commonwealth, as { Magistrate. / Subject.

Of Ministers and People.

The duty of the people:

Men are commanded to receive them in the Lord, to hold them in reputation, to know them as over them in the Lord, to esteem them very highly in love for their works sake, to hold them worthy double honour, and to obey them, Phil. 2.29.

1. They ought to reverence their Ministers for the place in which God hath set them, Esay 52.7. *Rom.*20.15.

2. They ought exceedingly to love them, *Gal.*4.14,15. 1 *Thess.*5.12,13.

3. They must obey their Doctrine taught truly out of the word of God, Heb. 13. 17.

4. They must yeeld sufficient maintenance unto them, 1 *Cor.*9.11. Rom. 15.27 *Gal.*6.6. 1 *Tim.*5.17,18. The Anabaptists deny that Ministers may receive a stipend so doth Weigelius, he cals them, Stipendiarios praecones. Vide Crocii Ante-Weigel part. 2. *cap. Quest.*2.

5. They must defend them against the wrongs of bad men, Rom. 16.4.

The duty of Ministers to their people.

Their duty is laid forth,

1. By Titles, as Watchmen, Ezek.3.17. Labourers, Matth.9.37. Light and Salt, *Mat.*5.13,14. Shepherds, John 21.15. Good Scribes, Mat.13. Stewards, 1 Cor.4.1. Nurses, 1 Thess.2.7.

2. In Commandments, Acts 20.28. 2 Tim. 4. 1,2.

Ministers must be faithfull in their Calling.

Faithfulnesse is a constant and diligent performing of all the parts of the duty of a Minister from the right grounds, and for the right ends sincerely, because God requireth, and for his glory, and the salvation of the people. It was a wonderfull thing in Paul, 1 Cor.4.4. that he knew nothing by himself, that is, no notorious defect in regard of his Ministry.

He should have Thummim integrity of life, as well as Urim, light of learning.

1. He is to be a good example and pattern unto his people, in love, faith, patience, and in every good work, 1 *Tim.*4.12. 1 Peter 5.3. ὀρθοποδεῖν, walk aright, Gal. 2.14.

2. He is to feed the flock diligently and faithfully, To divide the Word of truth aright, 2 Tim. 2. 15. ὀρθοτομεῖν, talk aright, Matth. 28. 19. Woe to me

me if I preach not the Gospel. Popish Writers call our Ministers in disdain, Prædicantici.

3. To dispense the Sacraments, Go teach and baptize.

4. To go before them, and take heed to the flock.

It was said heretofore, Stupor mundi Clerus Britannicus, The wonder of the world is the Clergy of Britain. 1 Tim. 4.13. Jeroboam made the basest of the people to be Priests, 1 Kin. 12.31. & 13.33. and some would make the Priests to be the basest of the people. Sanè si omnes, qui Christiani dicimur, Canonici esse, hoc est, secundùm Canona Christi vivere debemus: quanto id strictiùs agendum ijs, qui singulari ratione Canonici vocantur, ut & alijs præluceant vitæ exemplo, & bene de sæculo, & qua possunt, bene etiam de sæculuris mereantur exemplis. Vossius de vitijs Sermonis, l. 4 c. 3.

One saith, A good Minister should have five properties: 1. Be sound in the faith. 2. Of an unblameable conversation, 1 Tim. 3.2. Acts 20.28. 3. Of competent abilities. 4. Diligent and painfull, Verbi Minister es, hoc age, was Mr Perkins Motto. 5. Not usurp the Office, but be called in an orderly way, John 3.26. Rom. 10.14. Jer. 14.14. Heb. 5.4.

Ministers should be carefull to do good to their people, when they are departing out of the world, 2 Peter 1.14,15. 2 Tim. 2.2. Elijah visited the Universities before he was to be carried up to Heaven, 2 Sam. 2. and instructed the sons of the Prophets, 2 Kings 2.9.

Papists say our Ministry is a nullity, the Separatists say it is of the Devil and Antichrist.

There is first the inward calling of a Minister, a work of Gods Spirit inwardly inclining a man to imbrace this Function for the right ends, Gods glory and mans salvation. Not sufficient inward gifts of mind, of knowledge, learning and vertue is the inward calling to the Ministry, because all these things may befall such a one as ought not to undertake the Ministry at all, as a King, but should sin grievously against God if he undertake that Function; yea all these may befall a woman, who may not be a Minister; I permit not a Woman to exercise authority, or to speake in the Church.

Secondly, Outward, to be appointed to this Office by such who are entrusted with this care. Paul left Titus in Crete to ordain Elders; that is, Ministers. The nature of this Call consists in two main things, Election and Ordination.

Thus much for those Superiours which have authority in the Church, and their Inferiours. The Superiours and Inferiours in Commonwealth follow; and those are Magistrates and Subjects.

See Bishop Ushers Power communicated by God to the Prince, and the Obedience required of the Subject confirmed out of holy Scriptures, the Testimony of the Primitive Church, Dictates of right Reason, and Opinion of the wisest among the Heathen Writers.

The chief duties of the Subject are Honour and Submission, Command. 5. & Rom. 13.1. In heart to reverence, and outwardly to obey the Magistrate. Prov. 24.21. 1 Pet. 2.17.

This honour and reverence includes within it a triple act: See Tit. 3.1. Rom. 13.5.

1. Of the Minde, in a due estimation and valuing of their place and dignity. What one doth for conscience sake, one should do willingly.

Secondly, Of the Will, in an humble inclination thereof unto them, because of their excellency.

Thirdly, Of the Body, in outward behaviour and carriage towards them.

Good Subjects must willingly obey the supreme and lawfull Magistrate.

Reasons.

First, From the Authority put upon him by God, he hath entrusted them with a portion of his own Authority, and made him Commander in his own stead; in obeying A great burden lies on the Magistrate. Unicus tantum est subjectus in civitate Magistratus, Luther. Psalm 82. 5,10. Zech. 7. 4. Act. 4. 19,20. Julianus Imperator, quamvis esset apostata, habuit tamen sub se Christianos milites, quibus cùm dicebat, Producite aciem pro defensione Ecclesiæ, obediebant ei; cùm autem diceret eis, Producite arma in Christianos, tunc agnoscebant Imperatorem Cæli. Grot. de jure belli ac pacis, l. 1. c. 2. ex Ambrosio. Omni lege, divinâ, naturali, nationali, licitè semper Reges & Principes, suis subditis tributa & imposuerunt, & licitè quoque exegerunt, cùm ad patriæ & reipublicæ defensionem, tum ad ipsorum & familiæ honestam procurationem. Montac. Orig. Eccles. parte priore.

ing

ing him we obey God, if he abuſe not his Authority againſt him, and contrary to his will, and the truſt repoſed in him.

Secondly, From the end of Government, the common good and the preſervation of the welfare and ſociety of the good. But

1. This Obedience muſt not be abſolute and illimited; God only hath an authority over us, It is better to obey God than man.

2. So far muſt Obedience be yeelded to their commands, as they do not evidently tend to the overthrow and ruine of the common ſociety.

Subjects are willingly to pay Tribute to a Prince or State. David had Tribute. Rom. 13.6,7. Render to Caſar the things that are Caſars.

Reaſons.

1. The ſtate of Prinees need ſuch ſupport and ſupply.

2. The fruit, profit and benefit of his labours redoundeth to his Subjects.

2. The duty of Magiſtrates.

1. That there ſhould be Magiſtrates.

2. What is their duty.

It is a Divine Inſtitution, that there ſhould be regimen politicum, a rule and government among men.

It is the will of God that ſome men ſhould rule over others, 2 Samuel 23. 3,4. Civil Magiſtracy is a Divine Inſtitution, Daniel 4. lat. end, Prov. 8.16. Rom. 13.1,2.

Mr Douglaſſe in his Sermon preacht before the Parliament of Scotland, proves,

1. That Magiſtracy is the Ordinance of God.

2. That Magiſtrates are ſacred perſons.

3. That Subjection and Obedience ſhould be yeelded to them.

4. That Magiſtrates have a power about the affairs of God.

Dr Gouge on the 7th Chapter to the Hebrews ver. 11. Sect. 3. writes for Monarchical Government.

Reaſons.

1. God hath given ſome more eminent Titles than others; they are called, The foundations of the earth, Pſalm 82.5. The pillars and ſhields of the earth, Paſtors, Shepherds, Saviours, the Stay of our Tribes, Cyrus my Shepherd, Fathers; Job ſaith, I was a Father to the poor.

2. Gods appointment, By me Kings reign; God led Iſrael by Moſes, ruled them by Judges and Kings.

All civil ſubjection of man to man came in by ſin. God ſubjected other creatures to man, but not one man to another; there ſhould have been a natural ſubjection of the Son to the Father, but not civil, Nomen iſtud culpa meruit, non natura. Aug. cited before in ſervants. It is an Ordinance under Chriſt as Mediator, yet (though civil Government came in by ſin) it is Gods Ordinance. Omnis poteſtas eſt à ſumma poteſtate.

3. He hath given them authority; The judgement is not yours but Gods.

4. He gives them ability to rule.

In the Heavens there are two great lights, and they not equal; in the Earth there is the Lion among Beaſts; in the Sea the Leviathan among fiſhes; in the air the Eagle among the Fowls.

God hath not equalled men in their naturals, ſtature, ſenſes, in their intellectuals nor graces.

Government was neceſſary,

1. In innocency; God appointed order among Angels.

2. In the corrupt eſtate; Societies need it for reſtraining evil, Hab. 1.14,15. ſupporting good, elſe ſhame and fear, the curbs of ſin, will be taken away. Man is a ſociable creature.

3. In the ſtate of grace, Titus 3.1.

Object. The Apoſtle Peter, 1 Pet. 2.13. cals Magiſtracy a humane Ordinance, or creature.

See Biſield in loc.

Sol. It is Ordinatio Divina ſecundum ſubſtantiam, humana ſecundum modum & finem: It is Divine in regard of the chief Author, but humane ſubjectively or objectively, becauſe it is about the ſociety of men; and finally becauſe it was inſtituted for the good of men. Magiſtracy in general is appointed by God, but the particular form (whether Monarchy, Ariſtocracy, or Democracy) is a humane Inſtitution.

Crocius

Crocius in his Antiweigelius, par.2.c.9.quæſt.1. proves that, Verè fidelis Magiſtratum poteſt gerere, and answers the Arguments againſt Magiſtrates.

The Ancients were wont to place the Statues of their Princes and Patriots near their Fountains; intimating thereby, that if their Magiſtrates were good, they were the ſpring heads of much happineſſe to the people; but if wicked, the original of miſery and miſchief. Beadles Diary of a Thankfull Chriſtian, c.2.

Evil Magiſtrates are a ſcourge to a people. A certain holy man, they ſay, expoſtulated on a time with God, why he had permitted Phocas, being ſo cruel a man, to be Emperour? To whom a voice anſwered, That if a worſe man could have been found, he ſhould have been ſet over them, the wickedneſſe of the world requiring it.

Government often falls into the hands of evil men, Dan. 4.17. *Pſ.*12.8. Job 34. 30.

Every Government (ſay ſome) doth ſtand upon a double Covenant.

1. Between God and the Magiſtrate.
2. Between the Magiſtrate and the people, 2 Kings 11.17.

In all Governments there are theſe things to be conſidered, Poteſtas, The Power to be exerciſed in Government. Ordo, The Order whereby Inferiours are ſubordinate to Superiours. Forma vel Modus, The forme and the manner of Government; as, Whether it be a Monarchy, where the Power is in one; or an Ariſtocracy, where it is in few; or a Democracy, where it is in the multitude, and how each Government is ordered, Titulus, ſine applicatio poteſtatis ad perſonam, & uſus: As, Whether the Governours are put in and Intituled to their Power and Authority, by ſucceſſion, or by election or inſtitution; and after how they uſe and exerciſe their Authority. Of theſe, The two firſt, That there ſhould be Power of Government, and order therein; and in the people governed, are eſſential and perpetual, as the immutable Ordinances of God. The other, many wayes are accidental and variable. But yet, If Queſtion be made, What forme of Government in the Common-wealth is the beſt, and hath the beſt warrant? I would ſay, Monarchy, as having Divine, both Inſtitution and Approbation. But yet ſo, as where this cannot ſo well be had, the other forms of Government are lawfull. BP Down. Defence of his Sermon, lib.4.cap.4. See Mr Vines his three Sermons Of Obedience due to Magiſtrates.

King is a Title of Soveraignty and Superiority, as the notation of the word in all the three learned Languages implyeth. Government by Kings is warrantable, and Monarchical Government is the beſt kind of Government. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 7.1,2. Sect.3.

2. The duties of the Magiſtrate.

A great Prince asking his Counceller how he might govern his people, he wrote at the top and middle and bottome of a leaf of Paper Moderatio.

Zanchius ſaith there are three Offices of a Magiſtrate:

1. To ordain both thoſe things which belong to Religion and the Worſhip of God, and to publick peace, honeſty, and juſtice.

Zanchius de Magiſtratu.

2. To judg impartially, or (as the Prophets ſpeak) to do juſtice and judgment. Magiſtrates of all men ſhould be juſt, 2 *Sam.*23.3. in regard of their eminent place, juſtice will ſecure them.

It is obſervable in all the Kings of Iſrael and Judah, in the Kings and Chronicles, that their ſtories begin with this obſervation, as with a thing firſt worthy to be Chronicled, how they dealt in matters of Religion; ſuch a King did that which was right in the ſight of the Lord, and ſuch a King did that which was evil in the ſight of the Lord, and walked in the wayes of Jeroboam the ſonne of Nebat that made Iſrael to ſinne. See 2 Chron. 30. 22. It was an ancient Ceremony in the Church of Iſrael, that at the Kings Coronation the Book of God ſhould be given into his hands, 2 Kings 11.12. Deut. 17, 18. to ſhew that God committed the care of Religion principally to the King, that by the uttermoſt of his power and authority it might be eſtabliſhed in his Dominions. The Nicene Counſel was called to convince the Arians, the Synod of Dort to convince the Arminians. They ſhould, 1. Provide juſt Laws, not Rule by their will. 2. Obſerve them themſelves, and ſee they be obſerved by others. 3. Rule by love, and ſeek the welfare of the people, Pſal. 78. 71. Eſth. 10. 2. 1 Tim. 2. 2. Eſth. 10. ult. Lovangus King of China (when the Tartars came againſt them) gave ſuch an example of his humanity and piety, as Europe never ſaw, for he mounted upon the walls of the City Hangchen, and calling (upon his knees to the Tartarian Captains) begged the life of his Subjects, Spare not me (quoth he) I will willingly be my Subjects victime; and having ſaid thus, he preſently went out to the Tartars Army and was taken. Bellum Tartaricum.

3. To puniſh evil doers with the Sword, *Rom.*13.4.

The

The Magiſtrate may do much,

Firſt, For propagation of Religion, and the truths of Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Chron. 17.8,9.

Secondly, For protection and ſupportation, 2 Chron. 20.22.

Thirdly, For reformation. Mr Lyford on Dan. 3.14.

Caſaubon in his Commentaries upon Polybius, reports of one Hiero King of Syracuſe, that he obtained that large Empire not by right of ſucceſſion (although in times paſt poſſeſſed by his Anceſtors) nor by violence, but from the admiration of his virtue; and that he adminiſtred that Kingdom after he had got it, always with clemency, dexterity, and faith, and lived about 90. years integris omnibus ſenſibus.

Sub Alexandro militabant plurimi. Sub Auguſto nemo non canebat carmen. Neronis tempore multi per urbem cantores, biſtriones, phonaſci, multi Magi. Adrianus omnes faciebat obſervatores veterum Scriptorum. Lud. Viv. de cauſ. corrupt. art. lib. 1.

It may be queſtioned how far the Magiſtrate may uſe compulſory power for ſuppreſſing of Hereſis and groſſe errors.

Prima Magiſtratus cura debet eſſe, religionem veram promovere, & impietatem prohibere, Iſa. 49.23. Iſa. 2.11. Exempla hujus cura laudantur in Davide, Solomone, Joſaphat, Hezekia, Joſia, &c. Ames. de conſc lib.5. cap. 25. Vide Ames. de conſc. lib. 4. cap. 3. Quaſt. 3. Dr Hill on Jer. 6.16. See 2 Chron. 34.33.

1. He muſt uſe no violent courſe till care be had of an inſtruction, Tit. 3.10.

2. In things indifferent, and matters of leſſe moment, Chriſtian toleration takes place, Rom. 15.14. Epheſ. 4.2. ſo far as it may ſtand with faith, ſalva fidei compage, Aug.

3. A groſſe error kept ſecret comes not under the Magiſtrates cognizance, Cogitationis pœnam nemo patitur, ſaith the Civil Law, while it is kept in.

4. Errors according to their different nature and degree, meet with different puniſhments, Ezra 7.26.

5. Blaſphemies, Idolatry, and groſſe Hereſies, are to be put in the ſame rank with groſſe breaches of the ſecond Table, becauſe it is to be ſuppoſed, they ſin againſt the light of their conſciences, Tit. 3.9,11. that therefore they are not puniſht for their conſciences, but for going againſt their conſciences. Baals Prophets were ſlain, 1 King. 18.18. See Exod. 21.20. Lev. 24.10.

Gerh. loc. com mun. Crocii Anti-Weigel. art. 2. lib. 9. cap. 7. Grocius in his Anti-Weigel. p. 552. hath this queſtion, An Magiſtratui Chriſtiano liceat hæreticos coercere, and holds the affirmative in ſome caſes, par. 2. cap. 9. quaſt. 8. ſect. 1. and anſwers the contrary Argum. ſect. 2. Object. The Kings of Judah had the Prophets of God with them, who had an infallible Spirit. Anſw. The Kings of Judah had infallible Prophets among them, but they did not believe them. We have as infallible a rule as they had, Gal 6.16. That principle of infallibility of ſome external viſible Judg, brought Popery into the world, and brings in Scepticiſm and practical Atheiſm. Errores enim adjuvari præſidio Magiſtratus ac patrocinio, ut invaleſcant, & veritatis doctores ſectatoreſque turbent, inquietent, contriſtent, id ipſum eſt, quod & nos iniquiſſimum putamus. Non inepte quis opinetur, Salomonem nulla alia re Idololatriæ crimen contraxiſſe, quàm quod ipſius conniventia & patrocinio opibus regni fana idolis ædificata & ea impunè adorata ſint. Nam qui vult talia fieri, quare non ipſe feciſſe videatur, cauſa dici non poteſt. Coccei Examen. Apol. Equitis Polon p. 281.

Magiſtrates ought not to plant or propagate Religion by Arms. The cruelty of the Spaniards upon the Indians is abhorred by all. True Religion ſhould be planted by true Doctrine, Inſtruction, Example, but it may be defended by Armes, ſay ſome Divines.

There be two extreames, ſome think the Magiſtrate hath nothing to do in matters of Religion; others, that he may do what he liſt. Some claime an abſolute freedom from all Civil Power, as being for matter of Faith and Worſhip under Chriſt their King alone.

Others challenge to the Magiſtrate a Power of Impoſing the publickly owned and eſtabliſhed Religion: The one is too looſe, the other too rigid. Mr Lyford on Dan. 3.14.

Mariana the Jeſuite ſaith, Princeps nihil ſtatuat de Religione. But the publick Magiſtrates chief care ſhould be concerning God and the things of God, Job 31.26,27,28. Ezra 7.25,26,27. It is propheſied of the New Teſtament, Iſa. 44.28. & Iſa. 49.23. that Magiſtrates ſhall be nurſing Fathers to the Church. God promiſeth Zach. 13.2. to cauſe the Prophets, and the unclean ſpirit to paſſe out of the Land. See v. 3,4. They are Shepherds, Iſa. 44.29. Fathers of their Country, the Lords

Servants,

Servants, Rom. 13.3. Pollutions in Doctrine and Worſhip make way for the deſtruction of a State, and the ruine of the Governours thereof, Ezra 7. 23. Magiſtrates are Officers under Chriſt the Mediator, therefore as Chriſts Officers they muſt not only do his work, but aim at his end. They muſt ſerve God not only as men, but as Magiſtrates.

There is a twofold building of the Church.

1. Doctrinal and perſonal by the Miniſters.
2. Legal and coercive by Princes, Eſay 60. 10.

The connivance and toleration of Magiſtrates in things of Religion, hath brought in the greateſt judgments and cruelleſt perſecutions. The Chriſtian Emperours connived at the Arian Hereſie, and when they got head, they more cruelly perſecuted the Orthodox Chriſtians, then the Pagans or Turks. Julianus hæreticis libertatem perditionis permiſit. Aug. in Epiſt. That is now ſtiled liberty of conſcience. The inſurrection of the Arminians in the Netherlands, and of the Anabaptiſts in Germany, is ſufficiently known.

Object. This is to make the Magiſtrates judgment a rule in matters of Religion, and will ſubject us to a continual change.

Anſw. There is a threefold judgment in matters of Religion, 1. Propheticum. 2. Politicum, a Magiſtrate muſt know how God will be worſhipt. 3. Privatæ diſcretionis, as a man muſt believe for himſelf, ſo he muſt know for himſelf.

Object. 2. This is to teach men to perſecute the Saints.

Anſw. Perſecution is ſuffering for righteouſneſſe ſake, not for poyſoning mens ſouls.

Some ſay, Magiſtrates have nothing to do with the firſt Table; others ſay, they have nothing to do againſt the ſecond Commandment; others ſay, they have nothing to do in ſupernaturall revelations.

The Magiſtrate is not to determine matters of faith, there is one rule for him and the people, To the Law and to the Teſtimony, Iſa. 8. 20. But he ought to ſee that the rules of the Goſpel be obſerved, 1. None are to Preach but Prophets. 2. The ſpirits of the Prophets are ſubject to the Prophets, 1 Cor. 14. 32.

Magiſtrates ſhould take care of the people when they dye, ſo did Moſes, Numb. 27. 16, 17. and Joſhuah, the good Kings of Judah had a great care of their ſucceſſours.

Magiſtrates ſometimes uſe their authority againſt Gods people, Pſal. 119. 23. 1 Joh. 11. 47. Act. 4. 27, 28. Exod. 1. 10. Dan. 5. 16, 17.

Reaſons.

Firſt, On Gods part.

1. To ſhew that he can carry on his work, though authority be againſt him, Micah 5. 7. as in the Primitive times, when the Powers were againſt the Chriſtians.

2. That the patience of his people may be put to the utmoſt trial.

3. That they may be weaned from carnal helps, and depend onely on God, Pſal. 94. 20, 21.

4 That their teſtimonies to Gods truths may be more publick and authentick, Matth. 10 8.

Secondly, On the Perſecutors part.

1. Their ignorance and blind zeal, Joh. 16. 2.

2. Prejudices and taking up falſe reports lightly, Chriſtians were condemned, becauſe of the fame without inquiring into things, Nolentes audire quod auditum damnare non poſſunt. Tertul.

3. An erroneous principle, as if Chriſts Kingdom could not conſiſt with ſecular government, Eſth. 3. 8. Joh. 11. 48.

So much for Superiours Authority. The Superiours without Authority follow, and their Inferiours.

Which are either in { Gifts. / Age.

Duties of Inferiours are:

1. To acknowledg their gift and reverence them for the same.
2. To imitate them.

Duties of Superiours.

They must use their gifts for the good of others, Rom. 15. 1.

Thus much for Superiours and Inferiours in Gifts, those in Age follow.

Duties of younger persons to those that are ancient.

1. To conceive reverently of them, and to carry our selves respectively toward them, Lev. 19. 32.

Duties of elder persons are:

To give a good example, Tit. 2. 2. and by a wise and grave carriage to procure reverence to themselves.

The Duty of Equals,

Is to live together sociably and comfortably, not to exalt themselves above their fellows, but in giving honour to go one before another, Rom. 12. 10.

Chap. VII.

The sixth Commandment.

Thou shalt not kill, or rather, Thou shalt do no murther.

This Commandment respects the person of our neighbour, requiring us to procure his welfare and safety both in soul and body, and to avoid all kind [a] of cruelty [b], and unmercifulnesse.

We are forbidden to do any violence, injury or wrong to the body and life of our neighbour, and commanded to defend, maintain and cherish the same. Knewstubs Lect. 6. on Exod. 20. See more there.

[a] Mr Dod.
[b] Murder is the unjust taking away of the life of a man. It is unjust when it is without due ground and warrant from God. Ford of the Covenant between God and man. Violentia omnis & injuria, ac omnino quævis noxa, qua proximi corpus ladatur, interdicitur. Calv. Instit. lib. 2. cap. 8. Homicidium est injusta hominis occisio. Illa autem occisio, atque etiam læsio est injusta, quæ vel non sit auctoritate justa, id est, publica vel publicæ æquipollente, vel non ex justa causa, vel non ordine justo, vel ex intentione non justa. Amef. Medul. Theol. lib. 2. cap. 18. Non actus omnis sed illicitus hic significatur, qui solet esse significatus vocis Hebraæ Ratsach. Grotius. Summa hujus præcepti est, ne cui injustam vim afferamus. Calvinus Deus nobis præcipit generatim proximi Dilectionem speciatim omnes virtutes sub proximi dilectione comprehensas. Fabrit. in Decal. Omnium injuriarum atrocissima est, homicidium: quanquam homicidij nomine continentur omnes affectus, qui huc tendunt: quorum primus gradus est, ira in animo concepta, & odium. Eras. explanat. Decal.

Mr Wheatley of the Comm.

It enjoyns all such common duties as appertain to our selves and our neighbours, in regard of their and our person. The substance is, Thou shalt by all good means procure, and by no ill means hinder thine own or thy neighbours personal safety.

There is no lawful taking away of life but in these three cases:

See Elton on this Comman. p. 208, 209.

1. Of enemies to ones Countrey in a just Warre by Souldiers appointed to that end.
2. By the Magistrate.
3. By a private man in his own true and just defence.

This Commandment is set next to the former for two reasons:

Elton.

1. Because the Lord having in that established degrees amongst men and humane societies, nothing is more necessary for the continuance and safeguard of humane societies, then that the life of man be preserved:

2. Because

2. Becauſe murder commonly comes from the breach of the fifth Commandment. Cains murder came from a deſire of ſuperiority, becauſe he thought himſelf not ſo greatly favoured of God as Abel, ſo Eſau, ſo Joſephs brethren. Gen.4.5. Gen.27.41. & 37.4,5,8,20.

And it is ſet before the other four, becauſe the greateſt hurt and wrong that can be done to a man is touching his life, Job 2.4. death taking away a mans being ſimply which other wrongs do not. Quia in quinto Præcepto Deus premij loco inferioribus promittit longam vitam, tanquam præclarum ſuum donum, & inter omnia, quæ nobis divino munere veniunt, vita ſit chariſſima: ideo nunc ſapientiſſimo ordine divino ſubjicitur ſextum præceptum, de conſervanda vita, tum proximi, tum noſtra. Fabrit. Conc. in Decal.

This Commandment and the reſt following are all negatives, and the Lord beginning here with the greateſt treſpaſſe that one man can poſſibly commit againſt another, even murder; proceedeth by degrees downward, from a great offence to a leſſer, till he come to the leaſt deſire that is in mans heart to covet any thing that belongs to our neighbour, and forbiddeth them all.

He forbids here the killing of a man, not of a beaſt or plant, as the Manichees underſtood it (Vide Auguſt. de civit. Dei, l.1.c.20, & 21.) and that appears from the Hebrew word, for Ratſach agrees to man alone, whereas Charag is uſed generally. Our neighbour is the object of the ſecond Table whoſe life is provided for, all the interpretations of this Law are referred to man only, yea it ſeems to be a repetition of the Law given, *Gen.*9.6. Vide Brochm. *Syſtem. Theol. Tom.*2. *De Lege cap.*11. *Sect.*1, 2, 3, 4.

This word ſometimes comprehends all the cauſes and occaſions of murder, and all ill will conceiv'd againſt the life and health of my neighbour. Therefore in this he treats of all thoſe things which are called man-ſlaughter in the Scripture. Chriſt in *Matth.*5.21,22,23,24,25. ſhews, that this precept is violated not by outward works only, but alſo by the inward motions of the heart, by words and geſtures, anger, malice, envy and deſire of revenge are the inward things that hurt and hinder the life of man.

Mark 10.19. Luke 18.20. & Rom. 13.9. the ſixth and ſeventh precepts are brought in, in an inverted order, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, thou ſhalt not kill, and ſo Exod. 20.13. The order of the precepts is inverted by the LXX, the ſeventh and eighth Commandments are ſet before this ſixth, but it is not ſo in the Hebrew, nor the other Verſions. Yet Deut. 5. the due order is obſerved by the LXX. Matrimonium totius civilis ſocietatis fundamentum eſt. Buxtorf. de Decal.

In the Hebrew Books they are conſtantly rehearſed in this order that they are placed in the Decalogue, as Matthew hath diſpoſed them, Chap. 19.18. The tranſpoſition of them is free out of the Tables of the Law, where the things themſelves onely are conſidered, and many precepts heaped together in one Verſe. Vide Grot. in explicat. Decal.

1. We are forbid to kill without any ſpecifical determination either of perſons, manner, number or inſtrument: for the Law-giver doth not ſay, let not the man kill, or, let not the woman kill; or, kill not thy Father, kill not a Citizen. Thou ſhalt not kill publickly, thou ſhalt not kill with a Sword or Club; or, thou ſhalt not kill many, but in general, thou ſhalt not kill, that killing in general may be underſtood to be forbidden. Gerh. *loc. com. Tom.*3. & Fabritius. Conc. in Decal.

2. The Commandment being negative accuſeth the corruption of our nature, by which we are prone to kill. The affirmative meaning of this precept is propounded in that Epitome of the whole ſecond Table, To love my neighbour as my ſelf.

See thoſe Scriptures, *Numb.*35.30,31,32. 2 *King.*24.4.

Object. God commands Abraham to kill his ſon Iſaac, Gen.22.2.

Anſw. God is an abſolute Soveraign over all the creatures, his Law is grounded in his Soveraignty, to give a Law is an act of Soveraignty, his Soveraignty is not bound by the Laws he gives, as he works miracles ſometimes, and goes beyond the rule in natural things, the fire burns not, the Sun ſtands ſtill, nay goes backward, ſo in moral things.

2. The will of God is the rule of goodneſſe, 1 John 3.4 In actionibus divinis nihil Voluntas divina eſt natura prima lex. Gerſon.

nihil eſt juſtum niſi quia volitum, therefore that may be a duty to one which is a ſinne to another, and a duty at one time, but a ſinne at another, as in circumciſion.

3. Divers acts in Scripture declare, that what is by a general rule a duty, may be ſometimes a ſinne, and ſo on the contrary, Gods immediate diſcovery was loco ſpecialis mandati, as in that of Ehuds ſtabbing Eglon, Moſes killing the Ægyptian, Samſons killing himſelf, Eliahs calling for fire from Heaven, Luke 9. 53. yet Gods will is not changed though he change his commands.

4. This croſſeth not the ſixth Commandment which forbids me to take away the life of my neighbour unjuſtly.

5. God had moſt holy ends in this Commandment,

I. To ſhew that his Soveraignty over the creature is not bound by the Laws he gives, Gods Laws ſet bounds to us, not to him.

II. He did it to try the faith and obedience of Abraham, Gen. 22. Heb. 11. 17.

III. That he might give to the world example of an experiment of the power of grace, it will obey not only in ordinary but in extraordinary caſes, as God dealt not with Job in his afflictions according to a ruled caſe, Job 5. 1. to give the world an experiment of his patience.

Murder is a grievious ſin, and will lye upon a mans conſcience, as may be ſeen in the example of Cain, Abimelech, Saul, Abſalom, and ſpecially of Judas. Pſal. 51. 14.

Clamitat in Cœlum vox ſanguinis, & Sodomorum
Vox oppreſſorum: merces retenta laborum.

Geneſis 4. 10. and 18. 21. Exodus 2. 23. James 5. 4.

In Gallia & in Italli Aſſaſini dicuntur, qui homicidia perpetrant nulla perturbatione commoti. Menagius in orig. Gall.

Aſſaſſinorum vocabulum Turcis debemus; à quibus & res ipſa. Sic autem dicuntur conducti ad alios interimendos, præcipuè viros principes. Voſſius de Vitijs Sermonis, l. 2. c. 2.

There lived in the Eaſt a kind of men called Aſſaſſins, dwelling upon certain woody mountains under the ſubjection of a Lord, that had no other name but the Old and Great of the Mountain. This Lord (by the skilfull making of a fools-paradiſe of carnal delights and pleaſures wherewith he held his Subjects bewitched) had gotten ſuch a hand of them, being very many in number, that they made him a ſolemn promiſe to kill all the Princes that were adverſaries to their Religion: many of the Chriſtian Princes in their Voyage for the winning of Jeruſalem and the holy Land, were much annoyed by them. Therefore the Italians and French have ever ſince (for their ſakes) called all thoſe that wilfully attempt or execute any murder, Aſſaſſins. Camerar. Hiſtoric. Medit. l. 2. c. 10.

An Italian having nouriſhed malice and rancour in his mind for the ſpace of ten years together, diſſembling all the while to be friends with his foe; as he was walking on a time with him in a by-place, came behind him and threw him down, and holding his Dagger to his throate, told him, that if he would not renounce God, he would kill him. The man being at the firſt very loath to commit ſo horrible a ſinne, yet in the end yielded to it rather than to loſe his life, and ſo renounced God; whereupon the wicked wretch having his deſire, ſtabbed him with his Dagger, which he held to his throate, and afterward bragged, that he had taken the kindlieſt and braveſt revenge of his enemy that ever man did, in that he had deſtroyed him both body and ſoul. World of Wonders, l. 1. c. 18.

Reaſons why murder is a grievous ſin.

Firſt, It is a moſt manifeſt ſinne evidently diſcovered to the conſcience of every man, not alone by the clear prohibitions of it in Scripture, but alſo by the very light of nature, as appears by the Laws made againſt it in all Common-wealths, and becauſe it manifeſtly contradicts the moſt undeniable principle of practice, which is engraven in every mans heart, Do as you would be done to. Now it is certain every mans ſoul tels him that he would not have his bloud cauſleſly ſhed by another.

Secondly, The effects of murder are exceeding bad, the chief of them may be referred referred to two heads, injuriousneſſe to many, miſchievouſneſſe to the committer.

Firſt, It is very injurious to God and alſo to men, to God in three reſpects:

1. It tranſgreſſeth his Law and violateth his authority, by doing that which he hath abſolutely forbidden to be done.

2. In that it defaceth his Image, for man was made after Gods image, and doth yet retain ſome lineaments thereof (as I may call them) though very much blotted and blurred by his fall, yet ſuch as ſhould make every man to ſhew more reſpect unto them then in a rage or otherwiſe to cancel and demoliſh it quite, that which is yet in ſome degree a repreſentation of the glory of God.

3. It uſurps upon Gods royal and divine Prerogative, for as he alone can make a man, ſo hath he aſſumed to himſelf the priviledge or power of unmaking men, no man ſhould adventure to do it without his ſpecial warrant and appointment.

Secondly, It is injurious alſo to men as well as to God, both to private perſons, and alſo to publick.

To private perſons:

Firſt, The perſon murdered is wronged with a great wrong, and that which goes beyond all ſatisfaction, in that he is at once robbed of friends, and goods, and honours, and all the benefits of this life, which in the taking away of life are taken away from him, and he from them; and alſo for that his ſoul is either deprived of that increaſe of glory which he might have had in Heaven by the continuance of his life, if being godly he had lived, or elſe deprived of that poſſibility which during life remained to him if he were not yet godly.

Next the friends and well-willers, brethren, kindred, wife, children of the murdered are greatly wronged, in that both their hearts are filled full of grief and heavineſs, for the untimely and violent death of one that was near unto them, and alſo deprived of all that good they had by him, or of all that they might have hoped to have enjoyed by his means if he had lived.

Furthermore publick perſons are injured, both the Magiſtrate, in that the Laws and orders by him juſtly made are like mounds by an unruly beaſt trodden down and broken; and the whole Common-weal, in that both the peace and quietneſſe thereof is diſturbed, and ſeeds of diſcord and enmity ſown among the members thereof, for moſt times the murder of one breeds a quarrel amongſt many that ſurvive, and alſo a member thereof is cut away, to the hindring it of that ſervice which his ſufficiencies either for the preſent die, or for the future might have afforded it.

And laſtly, A ſtain and blot is caſt upon the face thereof, and that ſuch a ſtain as cannot be waſhed away but by the bloud of him that did caſt it on.

It is alſo miſchievous to the committer, expoſing him either to a violent death by the hand of the Magiſtrate, or to fearfull puniſhments * by Gods hand, For the bloud-thirſty man ſhall not live out half his dayes, and to everlaſting damnation at laſt, for murderers muſt be without unleſſe repentance come betwixt. Murder hath often been ſtrangely diſcovered, by Dogs, Cranes, Crows. See the Theatre of Gods Judgements, Chap. 11. and Camer. Hiſtor. Meditat. lib. 2. cap. 6. And Pierius Valerianus 5th Book of his Hieroglyphickes, c. 10. And Bonfrerius on the 9th Chapter of Geneſis verſ. 5. Numb. 35. 31, 33.

* Non deſunt teſte R. S. qui putant terram quocunque locorum venerit. Cain, ſub eo tremuiſſe, quo conſpecto homines dixere, fugite, is eſt crudelis ille homicida qui fratrem ſuum occidit. P. Fag. in Gen. 4. 16. Neque enim fruſtra in ſanctis Canonicisque libris nuſquam nobis divinitus præceptum permiſſumve reperiri poteſt: ut vel ipſum adipiſcenda immortalitatis, vel ullum carendi cavendive mali cauſa, nobiſmetipſis necem inferamus. Auguſt. de civitate Dei, lib. 1. cap. 20. Vide plura ibid. cap. 19, 21, 22, 23. Pſal. 9. 12. Hab. 2. 11. Si l'on trouue un homme tué dans les ruës, les habitans du quartier où il eſt è commis le meurtre ſont reſponſables de ce crime & doiuent en liurer l'homicide à la Juſtice, ou pour ſe rachepter de la punition, qu' ils meritent, & payer le ſang du mort, ils ſont obligez de donner quarante mil eſpres. Relation du Voyage de Leuant Du Sieur Du Loir Lettre Sixieſme à Monſieur le Paielleur.

Henry the 3d King of France being brother to Charles the 9th, and then Duke of Anjou, had a great hand in murthering Gaſper Coligni Admiral of France, and a great a great number of the chiefeſt Nobility of the Realm. The Admiral and his fellows being dead, were after carried to be hanged at the place where men executed for exemplary juſtice are hanged in Chains, called Mount faucon, which lieth right againſt the place where King Henry was murthered by Frier James Clement. This King never proſpered after that murder, and from the Lord delivered into the hands of vile and baſe men whom he truſted, was brought to receive puniſhment for it, nigh to that place where they had executed the uttermoſt point of infamy, upon the bodies of the ſaid Admiral and other Noble men. Colynet of the Civil Wars of France, l. 6.

See the Relation of that horrid murther lately committed upon Prince Coſuma Albertus, by his own Attendants near Rocheſter in Kent.

Luther reciteth a ſtory of a certain Almaigne, who in travelling fell among thieves, which being about to cut his throat, the poor man eſpied a flight of Crows, and ſaid, O Crows, I take you for witneſſes and revengers of my death. About two or three dayes after, theſe murdering thieves drinking in an Inne, a company of Crows came and lighted upon the top of the houſe, whereupon the thieves began to laugh, and ſay one to another, Look yonder are they which muſt revenge his death, whom we diſpatched the other day. The Tapſter over-hearing them told it to the Magiſtrate, who preſently cauſed them to be apprehended, and upon their diſagreeing in ſpeeches and contrary anſwers, urged them ſo far, that they confeſſed the truth, and received their deſerved puniſhment. See Goulart's memorable Hiſtories, p. 415, 416, to 429.

Occidere ſemetipſum ex intentione directa eſt inter graviſſima homicidij peccata. Quia ſic faciens,
1. Graviter peccat adverſus authoritatem Dei, qui ſolus eſt Dominus vitæ.
2. Adverſus bonitatem Dei, cujus tantum beneficium contemnit.

Self-murder is a great ſin, and a manifeſt breaking of this Commandment. For as in all the other Commandments the Lord doth forbid men to wrong themſelves as well as their Brethren, ſo likewiſe in this, no man may ſin againſt his own honour and dignity, no more than againſt the honour and dignity of another. No man may defile his own body, nor waſte his own goods, nor blemiſh his own name more than his neighbours, therefore neither may he kill himſelf.

The killing of ones ſelf is the higheſt degree of violating this Commandment, becauſe it croſſeth the neareſt of all bonds, and obſerves not the rule of charity there where moſt charity is due, for love ſhould alwayes begin at home.

2. This fact croſſeth the ſtrongeſt inclination of nature and cleareſt principles of reaſon, for nature makes a man deſirous of his own being, and ſtudious of his own preſervation. This is then contrary to the two ſtrongeſt laws and rules of life, the Law of God and nature.

3. The cauſes of doing it are very naught.

3. Adverſus providentiam Dei, cujus ordinem turbare conatur. 4. Adverſus charitatem, qua non minus tenetur ſe quam proximum in vita conſervare. 5. Adverſus juſtitiam, qua non patitur quenquam reipublicæ & aliis ſocietatibus humanis, quarum pars eſt quiſque, membro aliquo ex arbitrio privato ſpoliare. 6. Adverſus communem naturæ inclinationem, atque adeo legem naturæ. Ames. l. 5. de conſc. c. 31. Vide Aquin. 2a, 2æ. Qu. 64. Art. 5. Lactanc. Divin. Inſtit. l. 3. de falſa Sapientia, p. 193. Vide Pet. Mart. in 1 lib. Sam. c. 31. An liceat cuiquam ſibi adferre manum. Et Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Tom. 2. De Lege, c. 11. Queſt. 1.

It is obſervable, that although God ſaid Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſſe againſt thy neighbour, yet he did not in this Commandment adde that clauſe of (contra proximum) nor in that of adultery, intimating that we muſt neither pollute nor deſtroy our own bodies any more than the body of our neighbour. Dr Taylors Ductor Dubitantium, l. 3. c. 2. See more there.

Firſt, It comes from extremity of pride and impatiency. He will not be at Gods command, nor at his direction, nor be at all unleſſe he may be as he will himſelf, and ſo it ariſeth from an untoward mixture of high-mindedneſſe and baſe-mindedneſſe. Baſe-mindedneſſe becauſe he hath not ſtrength enough of reſolution to bear ſome evil which he feels or foreſees: high-mindedneſſe, becauſe he will not ſtoop unto the ruler of all things, to bear the burden which he layes upon him.

2. Another cauſe of this ſin is horrible deſpair, infidelity.

A third cauſe of it is an enraged conſcience, as in Saul, Judas, Achitophel.

4. The

4. The vehement temptation of Satan taking advantage either of a melancholick constitution of body, or of the affrightments of conscience.

Thirdly, The effects of it are bad, for by this means a man wrongs God, himself and the world.

He wrongs God,

1. By breaking his Commandment.
2. By defacing his Image.
3. By leaving his standing wherein he was placed by him without and against his will.

Secondly, He wrongs himself, for he extreamly hazards himself to damnation, if not certainly casts himself into Hell, for he runs upon a most palpable and fearfull crime, and leaves himself no leisure at all to repent of it. It is a hard thing to hope that he should be pardoned, who willingly thrusts himself out of the way of repentance, and doth commit such a fault that we never read of any in Scripture * that did commit it, but damned reprobates.

* Saul is the first man whom the Scripture sets forth to us, for an example of this worse then beastly rage and unnaturalnesse. He by his example drew his Armour-bearer to it, these two with Achitophel and Judas are all which the Scripture mentions to have murdered themselves; these were all evil men except the Armour-bearer, in whom was little good as is likely. Self-murder in some cases was held commendable and honourable by the Romans. See Dr Hackw. Apol. of Gods provid. in the governm. of the world, l. 4. c. 3. Sect. 11.

Lastly, He doth great wrong to others also, his friends and well-willers, to whom he gives occasion of the greatest grief that can possibly befall them about the death of their friend, in that the manner of dying is so uncomfortably wretched.

Besides to all the world it leaves a miserable scandal, seeing all think and speak hardly of him that hath so done, and it leaves a bad example to others. Sauls murdering of himself made his own armour-bearer do it.

Judg. 16. 30. Samson by publick calling as a Judg, and singular divine calling, as a Type of Christ and deliverer of the Church, did pull the house down on himself and the Philistims, that by his death he might deliver unto death the publick enemies of the Church, Heb. 11. 32. Besides, it cannot be said that Samson killed himself, indeed he died with them, but the end he propounded, was not that he might dye, but he sought revenge upon the enemies of God, which was the work of his calling, and that which was like to bring and procure it. As a zealous and diligent Preacher, who by his pains and study in his Ministry impaireth and spendeth his health and strength, cannot be said to be the procurer of his own untimely death, for he hath spent his strength in his calling to which end God gave it him. See Elton on this Commandm. and Mr Baxters Saints Everlasting Rest, part 1. Sect. 6. Dr Gouge on Heb. 11. 32. Sect. 203, 204, 205.

Nec Samson aliter excusatur, quod seipsum cum hostibus ruina domus oppressit, nisi quia Spiritus latenter hoc jusserat, qui per illum miracula faciebat. Aug. de civit. Dei, lib. 1. cap. 21. Vide Grot. Samson (ex singulari instinctu) directè intendebat Philistæos occidere, non semetipsum, quamvis præviderit suam mortem inde secuturam. Jud. 16. 30. Similis ferè est ratio eorum qui pulvere tormentario accendunt navem qua feruntur, ne perveniat in hostiu possessionem. Ames. de consc. l. 5. c. 31. Heroica mors erat, & vides hic contemptum mortis, in eo quòd se propter causam Dei in mortem conjicit, & se cum hostibus occidit: tempus ejus tunc advenerat. Per se enim non est malum sibi mortem asciscere: sed injussu Dei, vel privato affectu facere, hoc malum est. Bucerus in Jud. 16. 30. Vide Pet. Mart. in-jussu in loc.

The Heathen Philosophers have ardorned this fact, as Cato is extolled for it, see therein the vanity of mans reason and wit that can fall in love and liking, yea admiration with such a monstrous wickednesse. Amongst the Donatists there were the Circumcelliones * who gloried in casting themselves down from rocks, into the fire, or by yielding themselves to death other wayes, because it is written that the flesh is to be mortified, and he that hates his life shall find it.

Judge Hales drowned himself. See Foxes third Volume, pag. 146. Whereupon Bishop Gardner called the Gospel, the Doctrine of Desperation. * Chemnit. loc. communi.

With us the self-murderers are accuſtomed to be caſt out in high-wayes, or elſe in places where none elſe are uſually buried, and to have a ſtake knocked into them for the great horrour of the fact, and to warn others.

Helps againſt this ſin:

1. Maintain the peaceable and pure eſtate of your conſciences, this will make life ſweet to him that hath it.

2. Endeavour to confirme your faith in Gods gracious promiſes both for pardon of ſinne and deliverance out of all afflictions, for this faith will hold up the chearfulneſſe of the Spirit, and ſo make it able to ſuſtain it ſelf in all hard times.

3. Labour for an humble and patient heart, be willing to bear any croſſe.

4. Take heed of carnal ſorrow and diſcontent. It becomes Chriſtians to be ſerious, but melancholly is dangerous.

5. If this temptation begin to ſeize upon you, ſpeedily reveal it, and carefully reſiſt it by oppoſing the ſixth Commandement, and by hearty requeſts to God to keep you from murder. Luther ſaith, he was ſo tempted to ſelfe-murder that he repeated this Commandement three houres together.

Never keep the Devils Counſel.

Firſt, If you be troubled in conſcience, reveal it to ſome honeſt and faithfull Miniſter.

Secondly, Take heed of truſting to your own ſtrength, 2 Cor. 12. 10.

Thirdly, Be watchfull againſt the Devil and his temptation, and pray againſt them.

It is a Queſtion worth reſolving, Whether a Duel or ſingle Combate be lawfull? Vide Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Tom 2. l. 11. Sect. 4. Quæſt. 4.

Amef. lib. 5. de conſc. cap. 32. See Elton on this Commandment, p. 210, to 213. Whereas there are two acts, as introductions into the field, a Challenge and an Acceptation; both of them have their guilt, but the former ſo much the more, as it hath in it more provocation to evil.

By a Duel in this Queſtion every ſingle Combate, or Monomachy, or Fight betwixt two is not to be underſtood (for ſo the neceſſary defence of ones own life againſt the invader of it ſhould be called into queſtion. See Voet. de Duellis, cap. 15, & 20.) but onely that ſingle Combate which is directly and voluntarily undertaken upon compact, with the danger of killing or laming. That kind of Duel is ſimply to be condemned, both in the accepter and challenger, although the fault of the challenger be the greater.

There are

1. Publick Combates undertaken in publick quarrels, as to finiſh a battle by Duels, and ſo ſave bloud, there is no example found of this in all the holy Wars of good men, therefore not ſafe.

2. It may ſeem to be weakneſſe in men to refuſe the battel, for why ſhould not every man be couragious as well as one? But if the Armies cannot agree to fight o-

Dr Halls Caſe of Conſcience reſolved, Caſe 2. There were but two practices of this in Scripture, 1. That famous Challenge of Goliah, which that proud Philiſtim had not made, if he had not preſumed of his Giandy ſtrength and ſtature, ſo utterly unmatchable by all Iſrael, that the whole Hoſt was ready to give back upon his appearance, 1 Sam. 17. 24. The other was in that mortal quarrel betwixt Joab and Abner, on the behalf of their two Maſters, David and Iſhboſheth, 2 Sam. 2. 14. wherein Abner invites his rival in honour, to a Tragical Play (as he terms it) a monomachy of twelve ſingle Combatants on either part, which was ſo Acted, that no man went Victor away from that bloudy Theatre; only it is obſervable, that in both theſe conflicts ſtill the Challengers had the worſt. Dr Hall ubi ſupra. See Mr Hales his Sermon of Duels on Numb. 35. 33. His Majeſty hath already teſtified his abhorrency of Duelling; that infamous and diſhonourable Gallantry, as Mr Evelyn (in his Panegyrick of him) ſtiles it. Fournier the Jeſuite, in his Preface to his Traitté Des Fortifications, chap. 5. ſhews, That Councels do anathematize Duelliſts, and that Les Nations les plus genereuſes du monde, n'ont iamais baillé le nom de valeur à cette brutale ferocité. The moſt generous Nations of the world have never given the name of Valour to this brutiſh Cruelty. In the 6th Chapter he preſcribes a good remedy againſt this diſorder, that Princes content not themſelves by many edicts to forbid Duels, but that they and their chief Officers blame and diſcountenance, and puniſh ſeverely ſuch perſons, as engage in any ſuch Quarrels. Paul Voet hath written a Book De Duellis, ch. 1, He defines it to be Certamen duorum de victoriâ citra belli formam decertantium, ch. 2. He diſlikeths the torneaments and ludicrous Duels. ch. 9. the Duels of ſuch as are condemned to dye, ch. 29. He mentions the occaſion of Duels, and ch. 32. ſhews how many wayes Duelliſts offend, ch. 34. He gives reaſons againſt Duels, and ch. 35. remedies againſt them.

ther

ther wayes, they ſhall not offend in uſing Duels, and he of the Combatants which hath right on his ſide ſinneth not that killeth the other, for he goeth armed with publick authority to do what he doth.

Inepti atque iniqui ſunt arbitratores, qui dubium martis eventum, ſuper Duelli aleâ conſtitutum eſſe volunt. Voet. de Duellis c.8.

Secondly, Private, undertaken in private quarrels, which is twofold:

1. Legal, ſuch as the Laws of Countries allow, as ours doth in ſome caſes, when a man according to the Law doth challenge his adverſary in caſe of tryal of right or of appeal.

This legal trial by Combate ſeems unlawfull:

I. Becauſe in them the Magiſtrate reſigneth over his right to the Subject, who is thereby made malicious and revengefull.

II. The Scripture doth not at all lead us to any ſuch trial, yea it forbids private men to meddle with the ſword in their own cauſes, therefore the Magiſtrate may not bid them kill one another if they can.

III. In caſes of diviſion a Lot would do better than the ſword, and would more eaſily and ſafely determine the buſineſſe.

2. Irregular and lawleſſe, when one man of his own head for a particular wrong challengeth another, ſuch challenges are ſinnefull, againſt the Law of God, Matth. 5.44. being meer acts of vain-glory and revenge, Deut. 32. 35. Rom. 12. 19. the Laws of the * Countrey which puniſh the doers of ſuch deeds.

3. The Law of Nature, becauſe they attempt to puniſh a little wrong with the greateſt of all puniſhments, Ubi moriuntur homicida, as S^t Bernard expreſſeth it, Occiſor lethaliter peccat, occiſus æternaliter perit. He that lives lives a murderer, he that is murdered dies a murderer, becauſe he would have been one.

Two entirely loving brothers in Italy walking one Evening, and beholding the Sky full of Stars, one of them jeſting ſaid, Utinam mihi tantum eſſet Bovum, quantum in Cœlo ſtellarum, I would I had as many Oxen as there are ſtars in the firmament: the other merrily anſwered; Utinam verò mihi potum eſſet Cœli amplitudine, I would I had a paſture as large as the Element; and then turning to his brother, ſaith he, Ubi tuis bobus ſis inventurus paſcua? Where will you find paſture for your Oxen? In tuo prato, ſaid the other, in thy Medow. His brother replied, Quid ſi nollem? What if I will not? Etiam te invito paſcerem, ſaid the other, I would have paſture there whether thou wouldſt or no. And ſo differing, they grew to that paſſion at laſt, that they drew out their weapons and became each others murderer *.

Object. A man is utterly diſgraced if he decline the combate when he is challenged. Exiſtimatio mea & fama læditur apud homines, ſi non compaream provocatus, & ignominiam mihi illa tam toti inuro familiæ.

Anſw. To a Chriſtian this ſhould be enough, Prov. 19.11. & 16.32. ſin againſt God is more to be feared than ſhame amongſt men, and true Chriſtianity is to be preferred before idle manhood.

Non amittit vel minimum honoris gradum, qui temere, & contra omnia jura, divina atque humana provocanti non obtemperat. Voet. de Duellis c. 32.

Voet de Duellis, ch. 6. handleth this Queſtion, Utrum Duella judicialia admittenda, and ſaith, Modus ille veritatem explorandi iniquus See more there.

* See Cook on Lit. p. 294. B. & 3. par. Inſtit. chap. 72. Sir Wal. Rawleighs Hiſt. Sir Fr. Bacon. One M^r Pb. of Merton Colledg propoſed this for an Act queſtion, An liceat pro parvo rerum honoris alicujus interficere, wherein he held the affirmative, divers learned and conſcientious men were diſpleaſed with it. M^r Ley of Diſputat. ch. 4. * Lanſij orat. contra Italiam ex Camerar. & alios. Hanc hiſtoriam refert Cardeonius libro, quem de claris civibus S. Petavinis edidit, folio, ut loquuntur. 333.

Chap. VIII.

The seventh Commandment.

Thou shalt not commit adultery.

Ut Sexto præcepto Deus prospexit vitæ tum proximi, tum nostræ, ne quovis pacto lædatur, sed omnibus modis conservetur: ita septimo conjugium, tanquam medium generis humani propagandi & conservandi, sanxit. Adeoque omnia prohibet quæ huic sanctæ justæ & legitimæ mari & fœminæ conjunctioni adversantur vult enim generis humani honestissimam ac sanctissimam esse propagationem. Fabric. Conc. in Decal. Lo tinea ph ad verbum, non adulterabis. Brevissimum verbum (inquit Lutherus) sed latissima sententia, Psa. 119. 96. Natph

THese two Commandments the sixth and seventh are immediate to each other, and of the greatest cognation, for anger and lust work upon one subject, and the same fervour of bloud which makes men revengefull will also make them unchaste.

Because next to a man himself, his wife ought to be most dear unto him, in the wrong that is done to another, it cannot but have next place unto the sin of murder. Knewstub on 20. of Exod.

Some have observed, that the sixth and seventh Commandment are rightly joyned together, because adultery and murther often go together. Adultery in either party is a grievous sin, but especially in the wife, because it may bring in a Bastard, and a spurious brood to inherit her Husbands estate.

This Commandment enjoyns the right ordering of our selves in regard of the power of propagation. Some things it requireth directly, some indirectly. Directly it commands some things inward, and some things outward. Inward, it enjoyneth an ability to restrain that desire even in the very heart and the thoughts of it, that it be not excessive and vehement, and inordinate, carried toward any whom God hath not granted particular leave and license to desire or enjoy. The Lord would have mans desires of this kind coole and moderate, and so well ordered that they might be under the command of his own will, and subject to the power of his reason, arising no further, nor to none other than the Lord shall give allowance: for seeing by his gracious gift mankind is increased, and the increase of mankind is the end of this action, and it is not fit that mankind should increase, but according to his pleasure, therefore he would have the heart carried even in this matter, and able to hold its thoughts and inclinations in due compasse for object and measure. This grace is called continency in Scripture, a power of keeping our thoughts from unlawful ranging in this kind, and this is the grace which the Apostle commends, saying, We should be able to possesse our vessel, that is, our body, in holinesse and honour, and not in the lust of uncleannesse or passion of lust, as the Gentiles. And this is the virtue of the heart: that of the outward man is double.

proprie est adulterare. Aliud enim habent verbum Hebræi, quo scortationem in genere significent. Nempe Zanah, quod discrimen notatur, Hos. 4. 14. Peccatum quod prohibetur est alieni thori violatio. Latini utuntur voce mœchari & mœchissare, à nomine mœchus, quod Græcum est μοιχός. Mœchia proprie dicitur adulterium viri. Adulterium est omnis inordinatus concubitus mariti & fœminæ, quo conjugalis thorus violatur. Nider. Adluterium quasi ad alterius torum. Triplici modo fit adulterium, 1. Quando conjugatus rem habet cum soluta. 2. Solutus cum conjugata. 3. Conjugatus cum conjugata. Postremum gravius est, quod nonnulli etiam duplex adulterium appellant: secundum etiam est gravius primo, propter suppositionem aliani fœtus. Rivet. in Exod. 20. 9. Vide Cartw. in loc. Castitas à κατέχω orno quia præcipuum est hominis ornamentum. Rivet. Chastity is a virtue of ordering ones self aright in regard of the faculty of generation. It is two-fold, 1. In a single life, which is the abstaining from the inordinate desire of exercising that faculty commonly called virginity. 2. In the married estate, a keeping ones self entirely to his yoke-fellow. See of the admirable continency both of Alexander and of Scipio, in the Treasury of Ancient and Modern Times, l. 7. c. 4.

1. Out of Marriage.
2. In Marriage.

Out of Marriage, something is required in regard of the means inducing to this act, something in regard of the act it self.

In

In regard of the things inducing to it in word and in deed. In word, modesty of speech, that is, an abstinence from all grosse and broad words and phrases either in speaking or writing, which have an aptnesse in them to provoke or satisfie this desire in our selves or others, and a care of using such phrases when we have need to expresse this action as may be far from stirring up evil desires in us, even an affected purity of phrase, whereof we have clear example in the Scripture.

Also in deed there is required a carefull holding of the whole body and all the members of it from all gestures and motions that may stir up, provoke and incite this desire in our selves and others.

Secondly, In regard of the act it self there is required an utter abstinence from using that power so long as a man continues in single life, and a preserving our selves pure and untouched, as it is spoken of the virginity of Rebekah, That she had not known man. And these be the duties out of marriage, now in marriage there are required,

1. A right contracting of it.
2. A right use of it.

First, I say, a right contracting of it: for it is not in the power of a man or woman whether they will marry or no, but if they cannot contain, let them marry, for it is better to marry than to burn. If any man or woman find themselves unable to hold their desires in due measure and compasse, they are then bound in conscience to pray to God, and use means to attain the help of a lawfull yoke-fellow.

Innumeros Episcopos & Presbyteros in vetere Ecclesia per 400 annos post Christum uxoratos fuisse testantur Ecclesiastii scriptores: ad quos provocamus. Goulartius in Cypr. Epist. 19.

Untill the year 1102. Priests in England were not forbidden to have their wives. Then Anselme Archbishop of Canterbury violently forced both the sacred Scripture and nature also, as our Writers in those dayes do complain. Camdens Britannia in Denshire. See Haywards Life of Henry the first, *p.*286.

Eodem anno ad festum S. Michaelis tenuit Anselmus Archiepiscopus Concilium apud Londoniam, in qua prohibuit uxores sacerdotibus Anglorum ante non prohibitas. Quod quibusdam mundissimum visum est, quibusdam periculosum, ne dum munditias viribus majores appeterent, in immunditias horribiles ad Christiani nominis summum dedecus inciderent. Huntindon. *Hist. l.*7. See *Marcus Antonius de Dom. de Repub. Eccles. l.*2. *c.*x,xi.

It is certain (saith Hayward there, *pag.*296.) that in this Kings dayes Jo. Cremensis a Priest Cardinal, by the Kings Licence came into England, and held a solemn Synod at London, where having most sharply inveighed against the marriage of Priests, the night following he was taken in adultery, and so with shame departed the Realm. It is certain also that Anselme, the most earnest enforcer of single life, died not a virgin, as by the Lamentation which he wrote for the losse thereof it may appear.

See Hayward of William the first, *pag.*2. & *pag.*183. a strange Law of Scotland, that the Lord enjoyed the first night with any new married woman within his Dominion.

If God have called any man to a single life, in regard that he cannot attain an help this way, doubtlesse he will help and assist him in a single life; but when God leaves it at his choice, and gives him not the gift of continency, then doth he call him to another estate, and he must know that he shall sinne, if upon unbelief, or worldly considerations he refrain from following Gods Ordinance. In contracting Matrimony, he must proceed according to Gods direction, in making a right choice of a yoke-fellow, and in making a right proceeding in it, not marry another of a contrary Religion, nor within degrees of the consanguinity or affinity forbidden, or without consent of Parents.

Dr Taylor in his Ductor Dubitantium, l. 2. ch. 2. holds it lawfull for Cosen-Germans to marry.

Butler in his Syngenia, pag. 77. to the end, shews that marrying with Cosen-

Germans is not forbidden by the Law of God, the Civil Law, nor our Common Law; and answers the Objections against it. Yet there being enow besides, were it not better to forbear? Quod licitum erat propter vicinitatem horrebatur illiciti. August.

Some things are necessary for the proceeding, the agreement of the parties, and a contract (as some hold) which is a passing of the right of two fit persons either to other by a serious promise of marriage.

There is likewise required a right use of Matrimony, which consists in a communicating of themselves to each other in the Marriage-bed, and a mutual dwelling and abiding together for that purpose; and a total abstinence from all dallying behaviour toward any other whatsoever.

This is the chastity of the married estate, and these things are directly commanded.

Indirectly there are commanded in regard of our selves:

1. Shamefac'dnesse.
2. Temperance.
3. Painfulnesse.
4. Shunning occasions of time, place and company that may solicit. In regard of others, sober and modest carriage and attire.

Duke Robert passing thorow Felaise in France, and seeing Allotte a Skinners daughter, he took such notice of her (as he beheld her in a dance among other Damsels) that he sent for her to accompany him that night in bed, and begot on her William the bastard Duke of Normandy, and King of England. Her immodesty that night is said to be so great, that either in regard thereof, or in spight to her son, the English called all Strumpets by the name of Harlots, the word continuing to this day. Polydorus Virgilis Urbinas Historiæ Anglicanæ futilis author, alias non indoctus apud nos haerebat sub Maria Principe & per libellum supplicem ab illa petebat, ut liceret ipsi suo more vivere; hoc est, alere concubinam, ut se ipse explicabat. Montac. Antidiat. ad Diat. 3. Bulengeri. Hoc est quod pudet, hoc est quod intuentium oculos erubescendo devitat: magisque fert homo spectantium multitudinem, quando injustè irascitur homini, quàm vel unius spectum, quando justè maledicit uxori. August. de civit. Dei, l. 14. c. 19. Il est certain que le mot de courtisane (qui est le moins deshonneste Synonyme de putain) a pris son origine de la cour de Rome, assavoir, des premieres devotes qui frequentoyent, plus que tres-familierement nuit & nuict avec les Prelats de Rome. Traitté preparatif à l'Apologie pour Herodote par Henry Estienne l. 1. c. 38.

First, Shamefac'dnesse is a disposition whereby a mans heart irks and refuseth to give him leave for blushing to doe any act that may savour of uncleanesse, chiefly in the presence and sight of others, a great curb to restrain lust, and must be maintained; the contrary being condemned in the leud woman, that she had an impudent countenance, and shamed not to utter her evil passions.

Secondly, Painfulnesse is a constant attendance upon the works of a mans calling, whereby one is so imployed that he hath no leisure to be inordinate this way.

1 Cor. 6. 6. Sine Cerere, & Baccho friget Venus. Prov. 23. 33. See Gen. 19. 32, 39.

Thirdly, Temperance is moderation in meats and drinks, framing our selves to such a measure and quality or way, as may be most fit to give strength to the body without increasing evil desires; and for shunning evil company, places, times, who cannot tell what it is, and how needfull, that hears Solomon giving warning of the corner of her house?

The last thing is a soberne sse and modesty of carriage and attire, such as may expresse gravity, and a disposition far from willingnesse to be that way either assaulted or overcome.

It is called Temperance, because it restraineth a man of his liberty. Moderation and Temperance is the health and soundnesse of the mind. In Greek the word hath its name from its effect, the preservation and safety of the mind.

These be the Duties which this Commandment requires; it forbids many sinnes.

Some things it forbdideth directly, some things indirectly.

Directly it forbids some things inwardly, some things outwardly.

Inwardly it condemns inordinate lust.

Lust is inordinate in three respects:

1. For the Degree of it.

2. For

2. For the Object.
3. For the End.

For the Degree, when it comes to be burning, that is, a deſire ſo ſharp and eager, that it is not under the power of will and reaſon, yea that it detains the ſoul under its tyranny, and makes the will to runne along with it ſo vehemently, that all other thoughts and deſires are almoſt devoured by it. For ſeeing the action is a mean action and ſhamefull, and a meer bodily action, and doth not eſſentially pertain to the felicity of man, therefore the deſire of it ſhould be moderate, and give place to other more neceſſary deſires; but when it waſtes the ſoul, takes up all the room to it ſelf, conſumes all holy inclinations and deſires, and carries away the ſoul with a kind of irreſiſtible violence, this is ſinfull and diſpleaſing to God, though it be not directed to any particular perſon, but much more when it is to a particular perſon, which is that thing men uſually call being in love with ſome body, as Amnon and Joſephs Miſtreſſe were ſick with their luſt after others. When luſt grows ſo violent that a man cannot repreſſe it without diſtemperature and unquietneſſe of mind, winning the conſent of his will to evil, and carries his deſire headlong, then it is ſinfull, and this is that the Apoſtle means by the paſſion of luſt.

The Grand Turk hath three hundred women at his diſpoſe and pleaſure, in his Seraglio.

Stews are tolerated at Rome, but Mr Dudley Fenner in his Anſwer unto the Confutation of Nichols Recantation, proves, that the Stews are not to be permitted by a Chriſtian Magiſtrate.

Secondly, This inclination is inordinate for the object, when it tends to one whom God hath not authorized a man to deſire, viz. any but that woman who is at leaſt in the mutual purpoſe of both ſides with the allowance of Superiours aſſigned to be his wife; for God hath limited the deſires of a man to one woman alone, and of a woman to one man alone; and he that is deſtitute of a yoke-fellow, may lawfully wiſh, that he had ſuch a ſingle woman to his wife; and having hers and her friends conſent, may lawfully deſire in due time to enjoy her; neither are thoſe inclinations which he ſhall finde toward her in the interim betwixt the motioning and conſummating ſinfull; but all deſires aſſented to that one would put in practice if he had means towards any other but a party to whom he is thus intereſſed, are ſinfull and wicked; For he that looks upon a Woman to luſt after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

Thirdly, There is an inordinateneſſe in luſt in regard of the end, when a mans deſires of that way tend not to the lawfull ends of procreation, and of preventing fornication, but alone to the pleaſure of the action, and ſatisfying the voluptuous motions of his heart without any more ado. For this is to be bruitiſh; the unreaſonable creatures that have not capacity to conceive of the end of their actions, are carried to them by a kinde of violence; a ſtrong motion in which the pleaſure of their ſenſes over-rules them; but man ſhould not be ſo ſenſual, yea his deſires ſhould be ordered by his reaſon, and he ſhould know and conſider why he deſireth any thing, and be carried in his deſires by right motives and inducements.

Theſe be the diſorders of luſt, or deſire of generation, in regard of the Meaſure, Object, and End thereof. Now follow the outward diſorders, in Word and Deed.

In word, all ribald ſpeeches, phraſes, ſongs, that may be and is called wanton, which tends to ſatisfie unlawfull luſt in ones ſelf, and to provoke it in another. Words that may enkindle and enflame, groſſe words, tales of unclean acts, and ſonnets that have ſuch a kinde of deſcription of thoſe actions as tend to ſet the minde on fire with them. This is that which the Apoſtle cals rotten communication; when he ſaith, Let no corrupt, or rotten communication come out of your mouths: and again, It is a ſhame to name the things that are done of them

Cor & oculi duo ſunt proxenetæ tranſgreſſionis, Nnm. 15. 39. Primi capiuntur oculi: inde in corde exoritur appetitus ſive concupiſcentia: juxta illud Poeta, —— Occuli ſunt in amore duces, ἐν τῷ ὁρᾶν τὸ ἐρᾶν, as eſt in vetori verbo. Voſ. in Maimon. de Idolol. c. 2.

in

in ſecret. When a man talks of any impure action with delight, when he maketh mention of any impure part or deed with intent to ſtirre up others, eſpecially when he doth ſollicite another unto this deed by ſuch ſpeeches or means; this is an horrible ſinne, for nothing then ſtands betwixt words and deeds, but want of opportunity.

This is the breach of this Commandment in Word. Now follows the breach of it in Act or in Deed. And that is in regard of things leading to the Action, or the Action it ſelf.

1. In regard of things leading to the action, there is wantonneſſe or laſciviouſneſſe, ſo the Scripture cals it, in the ſeveral parts of the body, the eye, the ear, the foot, the hand, the breſts. Mamillarum nudarum oſtentatio in puellis, per Magiſtratus Eccleſiaſticos & ſeculares meritò reprimi deberet, Fromondus Philoſ. Chriſt. de Anima l.2. c.6. art.13.

Quid ego de cynicis loquar, quibus in propatulo coire cum conjugibus mos fuit? Quid mirum, ſi à canibus, quorum vitam imitantur etiam vocabulum nomenque traxerunt? Lactant. Div. Inſtit. lib. 3. de falſa ſapientia.

2. In the whole body, as all impure imbracings and kiſſings, which is called by the Apoſtle dalliance or chambring, and mixed dancing [a] of men and women, eſpecially if it be a wanton dance with a wanton ditty.

[a] Gulielmus Pariſienſis dixit choream eſſe circulum, cujus centrum ſit Diabolus. Urbs eſt in Brabantia Buſcunducis, in qua ut in aliis ejuſdem terræ ſtato anno die, quo ferunt, Maximum urbis Templum dedicatum, publice ſupplicatur, ludique variis divis exhibentur. Sunt qui tunc perſonas divorum induant: ſunt qui dæmonum. Ex his unum quum viſa puella exarſiſſet, domum ſaltitando ſe ſubdiviſſe, & correptam ut erat perſonatu uxorem ſuam in lectum conjecit, ſe ex ea dæmoniam velle gignere dicens, concubuit. Concepit mulier, & infans quem peperit, ſimul primum editus eſt, ſaltitare cœpit, forma quali dæmones pinguntur. Hac Margareta Auguſta Maximiliani filia, hujus Caroli amita narravit Joanni Lanucæ, homine prudentia incredibili, qui tum erat hic legatus à Ferdinando Rege. Nunc eſt hujus Cæſaris præfectus in Arragnica vir, qui non modo præfecti nomen & perſonam, ſed Regis quoque poſſet ſuſtinere. Ludovic. Viv. in lib. 12. cap. 25. Auguſt. de civit. Dei.

Thus is this Commandment broken by actions leading to the leud deed. Now by the deed it ſelf, either out of Matrimony or in Matrimony.

Out of Matrimony by two ſins:

1. Uncleanneſſe.
2. Fornication.

Uncleanneſſe is all ſtrange kinde of pleaſure by this act where it is done otherwiſe than according to the rule of nature; this is either with others, or with ones ſelf.

There is a ſelf-pollution:

1. Speculative, in wicked and unclean thoughts, therefore God is ſaid to be The ſearcher of the heart and reins, which are the center of thoſe luſts, Matth.5.28.

2. Practical, in unclean acts. Some Divines ſay, polluting of ones ſelf is a greater ſinne than the polluting of others, becauſe it is againſt a greater relation, but in polluting others they pollute themſelves, therefore that is the greateſt ſinne.

Simple fornication is ſoluti cum ſoluta.

Fornication is, when two ſingle perſons that have not entred into a Covenant of Marriage do abuſe each others bodies. It is called Fornication [b] à fornicibus in quibus Romæ ſolebant meretrices proſtrare, from the vaulted houſes or caves where ſuch ſtrumpets at Rome uſed to proſtitute themſelves; they were not permitted openly. See Dr Gels Eſſay on Numb. 25.8. pag. 5581. In Latine the little rooms of harlots wherein they filthily proſtituted their bodies to ſale are called Lupanaria, becauſe they after the manner of ravening ſhe-wolves catch hold of ſilly wretched men, and pluck them into their holes.

[b] Beza in Mat. 19.9. Fornicari uſitatum eſt bodiè pro ſcortari: ſæpéque ea eſt locutus modo verum Bibliorum interpres: Ut Ezechielis cap. 6, 16, 20, 23. Hoſeæ cap. 1, 2, 3, 4. & 1 Cor. cap. 5. à fornix, quæ ſignificat lupanar. (Ito uſi præter cæteros Horatius, Seneca, Juvenalis) fornicari pro ſcortari dixerim citra auctoritatem probati cujuſquam ſcriptoris. Nec idcirco vulgatum damnem interpretem. Loquebatur ille conſuetudine ſui ſæculi, nobis, poſtquam deſiit in vulgo Latine loquendi conſuetudo, boni ævi ſcriptores, non illi magnis paſſibus ad barbariem graſſantes formare ſtylum debent. Voſſius de vitiis Sermonis l.1. c.23.

1 Cor. 6. The Apoſtle hath ſeveral arguments there to prove Fornication to be a great ſin, *verſ.*13. 1. It croſſeth the end of Gods Creation, The body is not for fornication.

fornication, but for the Lord. A third Argument is drawn from the glorious reſurrection, verſ. 14. glory and immortality ſhall be put on the body, therefore it ſhould not be polluted here. A fourth Argument is drawn from the ſpiritual relation between the body and Jeſus Chriſt, it is a member of his myſtical body, ver. 15. A fifth from the ſpiritual Union between the body and the Lord, ver. 16,17. A ſixth from the intrinſecal pollution that is in the ſinne of fornication above other ſins, verſ. 18. No ſins are more againſt ones own body. A ſeventh Argument is taken from the inhabitation of the Spirit in them, verſ. 19. They are dedicated to the Lord; no unclean thing might come into the Temple when it was dedicated to the Lord, 1 Cor. 3. 17. The eighth is drawn from the voluntary reſignation that the people of God have made of themſelves, ſoul and body unto God, Ye are not your own, verſ. 19. therefore Gods; it is an act of juſtice, ſuum cuique tribuere. The ninth is drawn from the act of redemption, v. 20. You are bought with a price. Chriſt hath purchaſed the body as well as the ſoul, therefore you ſhould glorifie God with both.

It is a fearfull ſinne, No fornicator ſhall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, 1 Cor. 5.11. & 6.9. See Rom. 1.29 & Dr Sclater upon it, Epheſ. 5. 3,4.

Reaſons.

1. It is a cauſe of many other ſins, Prov. 23. 28.
2. A puniſhment of other ſin, Eccl. 7.26. Prov. 22. 14. Rom. 1.24,26,28.
3. It is directly oppoſite to ſanctification, 1 Theſſ 4.3,4,5,7.

If both be ſingle it is Fornication, if one be married it is Adultery, when with many Whoredom, if with a Virgin Stuprum, if with a near Kinſwoman Incеſt, if there be force a Rape. See Dr Gouge of right conjunction of man and wife. Sect. 7.

4. No ſin is committed with ſuch delight and pleaſure as this is, and therefore it muſt bring in the end more bitterneſſe to the ſoul; therefore the Scripture ſpeaks ſo often of the bitterneſſe of this ſin, Heb. 12.15,16. Job 13.26. Theſe tricks of youth will be bitter to men one day, Prov. 5 3,4. Eccl. 7.27,28. See Job 3.12. Prov. 6.30,31. Heb. 13.4. Rev. 21.8.

Non eſt flagitium (mihi crede) adoleſcentulum ſectari. Terent.

Brevis eſt voluptas fornicationis, aterna pœna fornicatorii.

The word Inceſt is not a Scripture word, but wholly Heathen; and ſignified amongſt them all unchaſte and forbidden marriages, ſuch which were not hallowed by Law and honour; an inauſpicious conjunction ſine ceſto Veneris, in which their Goddeſſe of Love was not Preſident. Dr Taylors Ductor Dubitantium, lib. 2. chap. 2.

Stuprum dicitur à ſtupeo, & forte ita dicitur quod ſit facinus ſtupentis & bruti animi, ſanæ rationi contrarium. Mareſ. in Inſtitut. Juris Canonici, Lib. 4. Tit. 9.

The Turks thus puniſh whoredom, they take the panch of a beaſt new killed, and cutting a hole thorow, thruſt the adulterers head in this dung-wallet, and ſo carry him in pomp thorow the ſtreets.

Many Heathen States made it capital.

Some Countreys puniſh it with whipping, others with death. See Peter Martyr on 2 Sam. 12. 14. De pœnis Adulterij. Dr Willet on 2 Sam. 12. Quæſt 12, 13, 14,15,16,17. Brochm. Syſtem. Theol. Tom. 2. De Lege cap. 12. Sect. 2. Quæſt. 4. An Magiſtratus bona conſcientiâ in adulteras pœna capitali hodiè animadvertere poſſit? Purchaſe his Pilgr. *l.*3.*c.*10.

The puniſhment which in the Old Teſtament was appointed to be executed againſt it by the Civil Magiſtrate, was death, Lev. 20.10.

Thus is this Commandment broken out of marriage; in marriage it is broken by the married in regard of others or themſelves. In regard of others by the ſin of Adultery, which is coming near another mans husband or wife; For whoremongers and adulterers God will judge; and thoſe that do ſuch things ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of Heaven. Jer. 5.6,7,8. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 13.4. Mr Hilderſam on Pſal. 51.4. Willet on Levit. 20.10. p. 492. & Burr. on Hoſ. 2.5. p. 294.

He that committeth this ſinne doth his neighbour greater wrong than if he had robbed and ſpoiled him of all other his goods and poſſeſſions whatſoever. Therefore the Lord in the Decalogue hath placed that Commandment as a greater before that of theft; and Salomon, Prov. 6. 30, 35. maketh the Adulterer er farre worſe than a thief, becauſe he may make ſatisfaction to a man for the wrong he hath done him, ſo cannot the Adulterer. That is a dreadfull Text, Prov. 2.19.

The mother of Peter Lombard the Maſter of the Sentences, and Gratian the Collector of the Decrees, and Peter Comeſtor an Author of School-Divinity, was but a whore; and ſhe being near unto death, confeſſed her ſin; and her Confeſſor reproving the crime of her Adultery committed, and exhorting her to ſerious repentance; ſhe anſwered, She confeſſed Adultery was a great ſin, but when ſhe conſidered how great a good followed thence, ſince thoſe her ſons were great Lights in the Church, ſhe could not repent of it.

Rivet. in Gen. 30. Exerc. 13.

A Papiſt in Queen Maries time taken in adultery in Red-croſſe-ſtreet, ſaid, Yet I thank God I am a good Catholicke.

Sylla ſirnamed Fauſtus, hearing that his Siſter had entertained two Adulterers into her ſervice at once, which were Fulvius Fullo, and Pomponius whoſe ſirname was Macula, he put it off with a jeſt upon their names, Miror (inquit) ſororem meam maculam habere cum Fullonem habet.

Of this ſin there are two kinds:

First, Single Adultery, when one alone, either man or woman is married, and the other not married, as if Joſeph had abuſed his Miſtreſſe; here if the woman were either married or contracted, both were to die: if the woman be ſingle we read no Law of death: there is alſo a double Adultery, when both the man and woman are married; as David and Bathſheba, which deſerves death alſo by the Law, ſo married folks do break this Law in regard of others.

Levit. 20.10. Deut. 22.22, 23.

Alſo ſecondly, In regard of themſelves, both for the entrance into Matrimony and uſe of it; for entrance by a ſinfull choice, and a ſinfull proceeding. Choice, if one chooſe one within degrees prohibited, as he in Corinth his fathers wife, his ſtepmother, or one formerly contracted, and not juſtly ſevered from another. Alſo for manner of proceeding, when it is without conſent of Parents, ſuch a marriage is unlawfull.

We read in the Queen of Navarres Narrations, of one who lying with his Mother (thinking he had lain with her Gentlewoman) had a childe by her, which was his Siſter and Daughter, and afterwards his Wife. World of Wonders, lib. 2. cap. 12. See more there, and in Dr Halls Caſes.

And ſo much for the breach in the entrance, in the uſe it is by averſneſſe to each other, and by abuſe.

These are the things directly forbidden in this Commandment; indirectly there are forbidden all occaſions of filthineſſe, and all appearances of it: occaſions to ones ſelf and others. To others, by gariſh and overcoſtly attire, eſpecially the manner of the attire, when it is light and fantaſtical; alſo by impudent and immodeſt carriage.

Isa. 3.16.

Occaſions of luſt to ones ſelf are chiefly three:

First, Idleneſſe and ſloth, when men do give themſelves leave to neglect their calling; this we have examples of in Sodom, David; and this the Heathens by light of nature have diſcovered, Ovid.

Quaritur, Ægyſtus quare ſit factus adulter:
In promptu cauſa eſt, deſidioſus erat.

Jer. 7.6,7. See Prov. 23. 31. & Jude 8, to 13.

The Poets therefore did well to feign all Shepherds Lovers, to give themſelves to Songs and Dalliances, becauſe they lived ſuch idle lives. Savanarala appropriates it almoſt to Monks, Friers, and religious perſons, becauſe they live ſolitary, fare daintily, and do nothing.

Secondly, Intemperance provokes and nouriſheth luſt, whether it be in meat or drink; the Sodomites after fulneſſe of bread fell to ſtrange fleſh, eſpecially drinking wine and ſtrong drink to the inflaming of the body. Drunkenneſſe and uncleanneſſe commonly go together, Hoſ. 4. 11. Eph. 5.18. Jam. 5.5. 1 Pet. 4.4.

Salt by reaſon of its Heat and Acrimony provokes to luſt thoſe that eat it in any great quantity. Therefore the Ægyptian Prieſts were wont to abſtain from all manner manner of Salt meats; for this reaſon fiſhes are more fruitfull, and multiply faſter than any other living creatures whatſoever. Salacitas alſo comes from Sal. Ferrands Love Melanch.

Reaſons.

1. The body is enflamed, and the minde then made uncapable of thoſe wiſe and holy conſiderations which ſhould reſiſt Satans temptations; wine takes away the heart, the reaſon, turns a man into a Swine, and then into a Goat, or Horſe.

Venter mero æſtuans facilè deſpumat in libidinem. Hieron.

2. Intemperance baniſheth modeſty which is the keeper of chaſtity, Prov. 4.7,8, 13. Tit. 2.3.

Lots daughters had no other way to overcome the chaſtity of their aged father, but by making him drink wine.

Thirdly, Another occaſion of luſt to ones ſelf is indiſcreet venturing upon ſolitary places, chiefly in the dark, and converſing with ſuch perſons as a man findes himſelf inclin'd unto in this affection; for then is a man out of Gods protection, then the Angels ceaſe to guard him, and the Spirit to confirm him.

Theſe be occaſions of evil, appearances alſo are light behaviour, light attire, ſuſpected company.

Dr Taylor in his Great Exemplar, Part 2. Sect. 12. mentions wanton words, geſtures, balls, revellings, wanton diet, gariſh and laſcivious dreſſings, and trimmings of the body, looſer banquettings.

Luſt is,

1. Unſeemly for man, it makes us unlike God and the holy Angels. Alexander knew by two things that he was not God, by his luſt and ſleep.

Theonius inſanus & uxorius homo de quo Ambroſius, Cùm gravi oculorum incommodo laboraret, & amaret uxorem, interdicta ſibi à medico facultate coeundi, cupiditatis impatiens ſibi moderari non potuit, oculos amittere, quam aſtum & impetum ſuæ libidinis reprimere maluit; Vale, inquit, amicum lumen. Humfr. de Jeſuit. part. 2. rat. 4. de Patribus, Joan. à Caſa Florentinus Sodomiæ laudes rythmis Illiricis celebravit, divinum opus appellans, nec aliam ſe venerem expertum ait. Ad. Hamilton. Apoſtat. Smetonii Orthod. Reſp. Sixtus quartus Cardinalis, cuidam ſanctæ Luciæ, niſi fallor, indulgentiam fecit clauſula illa, fiat ut petitur, præpoſtera venere per tres æſtivos anni menſes. Montmc. Antidiat. Ignatius Loiola, proſtitutæ pudicitiæ fœminis Romæ Xenodochium extrui curavit, in quibus aluntur iſtæ, quæ vel per ætatem, vel propter Gallicum morbum, nec Veneri Caſtra amplius ſequi, neque Pontifici Romano cenſum efferre poſſunt. Haſenmulleri Hiſtoria Jeſuitici ordinis. cap. 6. Vide plura ibid. Eſt Canon Concilij Aurelianenſis; ſi quis de Laicis poſt uxorem ſuam aliam cujuſcunque conditionis cognoverit mulierem, in clerum nullatenus admittatur. Sed Pelagius Epiſcopus Romanus (qui vixit anno Chriſti D.LV.) adebat corruptelam ſuorum temporum ſeveritatem hujus Canonis ferre non poſſe: Quamvis (ait) multa ſint quæ in ejuſmodi caſibus obſervare Canonicæ jubeat ſublimitatis autoritas, tamen defectus noſtri temporis diſtrictionis illius non patitur manere cenſuram. Gentiletti Apol. pro Chriſtianis Gallis Religionis Evangel. cap. 5.

2. It makes us unlike Chriſtians and like Heathens, 1 Theſſ. 4.5. The Turks keep their Feſtival-day on Veneris-day, and the happineſſe they look for is a Paradiſe of bodily pleaſures, nay this makes you like the beaſts.

2. Full of vanity, it doth not ſatisfie, Ezek. 16.18,29,30. Meſſalina was tired, but not ſatisfied with her luſt.

3. Full of vexation, how many are the fears, jealouſies and quarrels, in the pleaſures of luſt!

Chap. IX.

The eighth Commandment.

Thou ſhalt not ſteal.

THe ſixth Commandment gave charge for preſervation of mans life, the ſeventh for the honeſty and chaſtity of the body, to keep it holy and undefiled: Now the Lord cometh a degree lower, and ſheweth, That he doth not onely care for our lives, and for our bodies that they may be kept holy; but alſo for our goods and cattel, our corn, our wares, our gold and ſilver, and whatſoever they have, that they may be in ſafety.

Hinc conſtat omnia non debere eſſe communia. Ratio eſt, quia nullum furtum committi poſſet, nec opus eſſet præcepto de furto prohibendo. Macrov. loc. com. c. 9.

This Commandment enjoyneth men a due carriage in regard of worldly goods.

This carriage is,

1. Inward, in judgment, will, thought, affections.

2. Outward, which concerns the goods of every mans ſelf and of others. For our own goods, in regard of getting, keeping, uſing. For getting, here is required the having of a lawfull Calling, and uſing it lawfully, with diligence, diſcretion, cheerfulneſſe and moderation. For keeping, is required thrift; for uſing, liberality. Now for the goods of others, there is required Juſtice; that is, the vertue of giving every one his own. The common rules of which are, Do as you would be done to, and, Serve each other in love; and the parts are, Truth and Fidelity, Plainneſſe and Equity.

Ford of the Covenant between God and man.

Summa eſt, omnem injuſtitiam, quâ quovis modo proximi bona læsi & alienari poſſunt, ſummo ſtudio cavendam ac fugiendam. Fabric. in Decal. Vetatur hic omnis illicita uſurpatio rei alienæ. Auguſt. Vide Auguſt. confeſ. lib. 2. c. 4. & 6. Furtum eſt ablatio injuſta rei alienæ invito Domino. Epheſ. 4. 28. Amef. Medul. lib. 2. cap. 20. Gnanab propriè eſt clam ſurripere, vel occultè ſubducere. Unde & ad alias doloſas & clandeſtinas actiones transfertur, ut 1 Sam. 1. 6. & 2 Sam. 19. 2. Rivet in Exod 2. Varro l. 4. rerum divinarum, furem ex eo dictum ait, quod furvum atrorum appellaverint, & fures per obſcuras noctes atque atras facilius furentur. Quidam tamen à fero dictum volunt, quod ferat, id eſt, auferat res alienas. Furari igitur tam apud Hebræos & Græcos quàm apud Latinos, propriè eſt, res alienas clanculum auferre. Zanch. Miſcel. de furto. Furtum propriè eſt actio adverſans legi Dei, quâ res aliena inſcio & invito Domino clanculum auferur. Ubi vox, inſcio Domino & clanculum diſcriminat furtum à rapina. Rapina enim eſt actio, qua res aliena, invito Domino, apertâ vi auferur. Id. ibid. From the Arabick Verb to ſteal Saraka uſed in this Commandment, comes our Engliſh word Shark. See Dr Willet on Exod. 32. 1. and on Exod. 22. queſt. 3. and Eſtius on Gen. 31. 32. and on Exod. 22.

There are ſeveral kinds of Juſtice:

1. Commutative, conſiſting in a right exchange of one thing for another; The principal ſorts of which are, 1. Buying and ſelling. 2. Setting and letting, with taking. 3. Borrowing and lending. 4. Hiring, and labouring for hire. 5. Partnerſhip.

Latrocinium eſt quando aliquis Domino præſente & manifeſta vi rapit alienum, ſi ſit in rebus privatorum eſt furtum ſimplex, ſi in rebus ſacris ſacrilegium, ſi in re publica, peculatus; ſi in ablatione jumentorum & pecorum, abigeatus; ſi in ablatione hominum Plagiarius. Lutherus in octavum præceptum. Robbery is derived de la Robe, becauſe in ancient times they bereaved the true man of ſome of his robes or garments, or money and goods, out of ſome part of his garment or robe about his perſon. Sir Edward Cook.

2. Diſtributive Juſtice ſtands in a right diviſion and parting of things; all things civil, in four chief things; matter of Law about Meum and Tuum, publick Lands and Stocks, publick Payments and Forfeitures; and in things ſacred.

ſacred. Things prophane and common, wherein we have to deal with man, muſt be rightly diſtributed; and ſo muſt things ſacred, wherein the Lord of Heaven is intereſſed. But one [a] obſerves, That it is an errour to be noted among the Expoſitors of the Decalogue, that they rank Sacriledge as a ſinne of the eighth Commandment, when it is a ſinne of the firſt Table, and not of the ſecond; a breach of the loyalty we immediately owe to God, and not of the duty we owe to our neighbour. To ſteal or alienate that which is ſacred, is to rob God not man, for he is the proprietary of things ſacred, Mal. 3.8,9. He that commits this ſin, indirectly and by conſequent robbeth men too, viz. thoſe who live of Gods proviſion.

[a] Mr Mede on Act. 5.3,4,5.

Julian the Apoſtate robbed the Church of the Revennes thereof, and took away all contributions to Schools of learning, that children might not be inſtructed in the liberal Arts, nor in any other good literature. He aggravated alſo his Sacriledge with ſcornfull jeſts, ſaying, That he did further their ſalvation by making them poor; ſeeing it was written in their own Bibles, Bleſſed are the poor in ſpirit, for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven.

I have ſeen divers young men, of good houſes, ſo given to ſtealing and filching, that no correction could divert them from it. I have ſeen divers ſo inured to that vice, that amongſt their companions, they would ordinarily ſteal ſuch things, as they would reſtore again. There is no vice wherein I have leſſe skill: I do not ſo much as deſire another mans goods. Montaign his Eſſayes, *l.*2. *c.*8.

Theft is taking away ſecretly of another mans goods, the owner not knowing of it.

It is a ſecret cloſe putting to our hand to our neighbours goods, the withdrawing and taking them away without their allowance, and applying them to our own uſe. A ſinne,

1. Expreſly forbidden in the Law of God, not only in the judicial Law, but in the moral Law, the Law of Nature.

2. 'Tis not forbidden by way of conſequence and deduction, as ſome ſins are (as the ſins of Drunkenneſſe, Inceſt, Uſury, Oppreſſion) but 'tis ſet in the front of the Commandment in Text-letters.

3. 'Tis not onely forbidden in the Law: but the Goſpel, that enforces that Commandment: Let him that ſtole, ſteal no more, Epheſ. 4. 28.

4. 'Tis forbidden in the dreadfulleſt manner, upon the peril of damnation, 1 Cor. 6. 10. B. Brownrig on Prov. 30. 9. He there alſo anſwers five ſeveral Pleas for Theft.

One is guilty by conſenting and agreeing with a thief, Rom. 2. or giving him counſel, or hiding his fact.

This is ſo peculiar a ſin in ſervants, as the Latine words which now ſignifie thieves, did at firſt ſignifie ſervants only, as fur was a ſervant.

Quid facient Domini audent cum talia fures?

So latrones, robbers, were firſt thoſe which did à latere ſtipare.

The Greek Proverb is, Quot ſervi tot fures.

Object. God commands the Iſraelites to borrow of the Ægyptians, Exod. 3.22. to borrow and not to pay is a ſinne againſt this Commandment, Pſalm 37.21.

Anſw. 1. The uſe onely of things is in us, the propriety is ſtill in God, 1 Sam. 2.7. Hoſ. 2.9. therefore God may take away one mans eſtate, and give it to another.

See Dr Gouge on Heb. 7. v. 5, 6, 7. Sect. 30.

Secondly, The Ægyptians had forfeited what God had given them, therefore it was juſt with the Lord to take it away.

Thirdly, He might doe it not onely as an act of vindicative juſtice to the Ægyptians, but as an act of remunerating juſtice to the Iſraelites, there being no Magiſtrates to do them juſtice, and reward them for their ſervice, Geneſis 31.9, 16.

Fourthly, The Hebrew word there uſed, ſignifies to ask or deſire, and Junius and Ainſw. on 12.36. render it not to borrow.

A lewd Priest when he was caught stealing, contrary to his own Doctrine, could presently tell the reprover, the eighth Commandment doth not say, I shall not steal, but, Thou shalt not steal.

It may be questioned whether it be just to punish thieves with hanging, when the Law of God hath not appointed this punishment, Exod. 22. Some therefore think our Law hath been too severe that way, and too remisse in case of Adultery. Chrysostom saith, Ubi damnum resarciri potest non est homini adimenda vita, yet by the Law of Moses, he that stole a man, though he could restore him, was put to death with death.

But there is no comparison (say some) between goods and the life of a man: yet those thieves that either assault a mans person on the high-way, or break open a mans house to rob him, are great * offendors.

* Vide Chemnit. & Gerh. loc. commun. Demosthenes said to him that objected that his speeches smelt of a candle, I know my candle stands in your light, the man being suspected for a thief. Varro said that fur was derived à furvo (that is, dark) because thieves do willingly work by night,

Ut jugulent homines surgunt de nocte latrones.

Latro fortè à latendo dictus; quia latebras quærit, ubi insidietur: ut & fur à furvus juxta Grammaticos, quia furvum & obscurum tempus furto accomodum. (nisi potius utraq; vox Græca: Latro à λάτεις fur à φώρ.) Quin & Nebulo etiam à nebula ob eandem rationem. Trinum hoc etymon Latronis, Nebulonis & Furis; quid ni, memoriæ ergò, in unum Distichon compingere liceat?

Latro latet: Nebulo nebulâ & caligine gaudet:
Et furvum tempus Fur (& adulter) amat. D Duporti Gnomologia Homerica.

The Theatre of Gods judgments, part 1. cap. 38.

Draco the Law-giver of Athens, appointed death to be the punishment of theft. Solon mitigated that rigour, and punished it with double restitution. The Locrians put out his eyes that had stollen ought from his neighbour. The Hetrurians stoned them to death. There was no Commonwealth where this sinne was not highly detested, and sharply punished, except the Lacedemonians, where it was permitted and tollerated for their exercise of warlike Discipline.

Mr Gage in his Survey of the West-Indies, c. 12. saith, In Nicaragua they adjudged not a thief to death, but to be a slave to that man whom he had robbed, till by his service he had made satisfaction: A course (saith he) truly more mercifull, and not lesse just, than the losse of life.

Mens excuses for it.

First, It is but a small matter:

1. Thou art the more to be condemned; Is it but a little matter, and wilt thou venture that which is more worth than all the world, thine own soul for it?

2. Thou then maist the better forbear it.

3. Hadst thou a tender conscience, it would much trouble thee; Austin was troubled for his stealing of Apples when he was a Boy; and this he records in his Confessions too, he thought it so much.

4. By this little the Devil will carry thee to greater; it may be in consequence great; a great Tree groweth from a little Mustard-seed.

Secondly, They do it for necessity.

Solomon saith, If a man steal for necessity, men will not much condemn him; but he speaks it comparatively with the sinne of adultery; there can be no necessity to sinne, though when a man steals that hath enough, it is a greater offence.

Thirdly, They have enough from whom they steal.

This doth not therefore warrant them to pervert all right and justice, as if they were Magistrates, or God himself, to appoint how much every one should have.

Fourthly, They do it secretly, they shall not be known nor discovered.

God and thy own conscience are enough to manifest it to all.

CHAP. X.

The ninth Commandment.

THou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſſe againſt thy Neighbour. Hebr. word for word, Thou ſhalt not anſwer about thy Neighbour a teſtimony of falſhood. That is, Thou ſhalt not anſwer in Judgment either for or againſt thy Neighbour falſly. Becauſe this teſtimony is given upon examination and interrogation.

THe word [anſwer] is ſometimes in Scripture taken more generally for [ſpeak] as Prov. 15.1. Matth. 11.25. and ſo it is here to be taken; as if it had been ſaid, Thou ſhalt not ſpeak any thing whereby thou maiſt hurt the good name and credit of thy neighbour.

Ad verbum legi poteſt, non reſpondebis teſtis falſus contra proximum tuum, tunc ſubaudenda eſt particula ut Calvinus.

The former Commandment was concerning our own and our neighbours goods; this requireth, that we hurt not our neighbours nor our own good name, but (as occaſion ſhall be given) maintain and increaſe it.

By neighbour he underſtands any man, for every man is near to thee by nature, of the ſame bloud and fleſh, Act. 17.26. Iſa. 58.7.

Gnanah reſpondere ſignificat, nominatim igitur de ea teſtimonij ſpecie agitur, quod in judiciis de cauſa aliqua interrogati proferimus. Gerh. loc. commun.

The ſecret and inward breach of this Commandment conſiſteth in ungrounded ſuſpition, and unjuſt judging and condemning of our neighbours, contrary to the expreſſe Commandment of our Saviour, Mat. 7.1.

The outward breach of it is either without ſpeech or with ſpeech.

Without ſpeech, either by geſture or ſilence.

By geſture, when one uſeth ſuch a kind of behaviour as tends to vilifie, mock and diſgrace his brother, Pſal. 22.7.

Quia adjurati & interrogati perhibebant teſtimonium.

By ſilence, when one holds his peace, though he heareth his neighbour ſlandered, and he can teſtifie of his own knowledge, that the things ſpoken are falſe and injurious.

Grotius in Exod. c. 20. Synecdochice ſub una falſi teſtimonij forenſis ſpecie (quod reliquis peſtilentius) continetur in genere deteſtatio omnis mendacii, Lev. 19.11. Matth. 19.18. Marc. 10.19. Rom. 3.19. Chaldæus vertit non teſtaberis, Græci uno verbo dixerunt ὐ ψευδομαρτυρήσεις non falsò teſtaberis. Teſtes falſi ſunt, qui non tantùm falſa fingunt, verum etiam qui vera depravant, Matth. 26.61. vel affirmant incomperta, vel qui veritatem malitioſè occultant, ita 3 Reg. 21.11. Matth. 27.13. Act. 7.6. Dan. 6.13. & 13.36. Prov. 25.18. Chemnit. loc. commun. Hic Deus cujuſq; famæ & exiſtimationi conſulit, ne quis calumniis & falſis criminibus immeritò gravetur. Calvinus. Scopus finis & ſumma præcepti eſt: ut proximi juxta & noſtram famam illibatam conſervemus: adeoq; veritas in humana ſocietate dominetur, Falſitas contrà omnis exulare cogatur. Fabrit. in Decal. The true ſcope of this Commandment is to eſtabliſh juſt judgement; ſaith Mr Lawſon in his Body of Divinity.

By ſpeech this Commandment is broken, either by giving or receiving.

By giving out ſpeech either true or falſe. One may ſlander another by reporting the truth, if one ſpeak it unſeaſonably, and his end be evil and malicious; this was Doegs fault, 1 Sam. 22.21. In ſpeaking that which is falſe, either concerning ones own ſelf or another.

Concerning himſelf.

1. In boaſting and bragging, Rom. 1.30.
2. By excuſing thoſe faults we are charged with, or are guilty of.
3. By * accuſing, as when men in a kind of proud humility will deny their gifts, with an intent to get more praiſe.

* The godly in time of temptation think themſelves to be but hypocrites, and that they have no true grace in them at all, and ſo they bear falſe witneſſe againſt themſelves. Elton on this Commandment.

So much for breaking this Commandment, by ſpeaking that which is falſe concerning themſelves.

Now

Now it follows concerning others, and that is either publick or private.

Isaiah 5. 20.

Publick, when the Magistrate or Judg passeth false sentence, in any cause that comes to be heard before him. Herein also may Counsellors offend, when they uphold and maintain an evil Cause for their Fee. Witnesses also do offend this way, when they come before the Judges, and give a false and lying testimony. This is a hainous sin, as appears by the punishment, Deut. 19. 18, 19.

Prov. 19. 5, 9. and 6. 19. and 21. 28.

2. Private, either in unjust accusing, or unjust defending.

That unjust accusing privately is called slandering and back-biting; when one will speak ill of his neighbour and falsely behind his back.

Goods are necessary for life, truth and good name for comfortable life, therefore is this Commandment set after the former. Esty.

The causes of detracting or back-biting are:

1. Want of consideration of our selves, Gal. 6. 1. We are not humbled for the world of corruption that is in-bred in us.

2. Uncharitableness and malice, Jam. 3. a malicious heart and reviling tongue go together.

3. Pride and envy, the Pharises could not give our Saviour one good word, because of their envy against him, whose way, Doctrine, and conversation, did contradict and obscure theirs.

Of tame beasts (saith Diogenes) a flatterer is worst, and of wild beasts a back-biter or slanderer.

4. An hypocritical affectation of holiness above others, Ex hoc uno pij sumus, quod alios impietatis damnamus, so the Pharisee dealt with the Publican, so the Papists traduce us as vile, they are the onely Saints.

See Dr Sclater on Rom. 1. 29.

There are divers wayes of back-biting or detracting.

1. To impose falsely a fault upon the innocent party, as when the Pharisees charged Christ, that he was an Impostor and wine-bibber; so when Potiphar's wife forged that tale against Joseph, that he would have been naught with her. Psal. 35. 11, 12.

Hebræi vocant linguam syco-phantam linguam tertiam: Linguam tertiam memorat autor translationis Chaldaicæ, Psal. 10. 15. & 140. 12. Vir qui loquitur lingua tertia, id est, delator, qui tribus nocet, deferenti, accipienti, & ei de quo. Drus. Quæst. Ebraic. l. 2. Quæst. 4. The Chaldee Paraphrast calleth a back-biter a man with a threefold tongue, or a tongue which hath three strings. The Jews give an example of it in Doeg, who killed three at once with his evil report; Saul, to whom he hade the evil report, the Priests of whom he made it, himself who made it. Weemes.

2. When it is a true fault, but secret, and they divulge it, Matth. 18. 15. they should first inform the party, to see whether he would be humbled or no, Publish it not in Askelon, nor tell it in Gath.

3. When they augment their faults, and make them worse, Lev. 19. 16.

4. When they deny their good actions to be done well.

5. When they interpret doubtful things in the worst part; charity is not suspicious, Jer. 40. 16.

6. When they acknowledg their good things, yet not heartily; to praise coldly is as bad as a vehement dispraise.

It is hard to tell (saith Bernard) whether the detector or he that hears him willingly shall burn hotter in Hell, the one hath the Devil in his tongue, and the other in his ear, Prov. 17. 4. Psal. 15. 3.

Thus this Law is broken by unjust accusing. 2. It is broken also by unjust defending of wicked men and bad causes, when one will use his wit, credit, and testimony, to grace evil men and dishonest causes, Prov. 17. 15. & 14. 24.

CHAP

CHAP. XI.

The tenth Commandment.

THou ſhalt not covet thy Neighbours Houſe, thou ſhalt not covet thy Neighbours Wife, nor his Man-ſervant, nor his Maid-ſervant, nor his Oxe, nor his Aſſe, nor any thing that is thy Neighbours.

THOu ſhalt not covet; that is, thou ſhalt not inwardly think on, and withall have thine heart inclined to with pleaſure and delight, and long after that which belongs to another or others, one or more, to his or their loſſe or hindrance, or miſliking, though they will give no aſſent to get it or to ſeek after it.

The word neighbour is here to be taken as in the ninth Commandment; for any one of the ſame fleſh, and of the ſame nature, which is any man or woman whatſoever. See Rom. 12. 18. Luk 10 30. Gal. 6, 10.

Six things are here named, (though by a Synecdoche others are alſo comprehended,) that theſe few might be for an example to other things, and becauſe men do more ardently and frequently deſire theſe here mentioned.

Houſe] This is put in the firſt place, not becauſe it is more dear and near than the wife, but becauſe this injury in deſiring the houſe, extendeth it ſelf to the huſband, to the wife, to the children and ſervants; yea to the Beaſt alſo and Cattel. The hurt thereof is more general than of the reſt, therefore it is placed in the firſt place.

Nor his wife] This is added as the next chief thing, in deſiring whereof our neighbour is grievouſly wronged. That which is forbidden the man, is alſo forbidden the woman, as inferiour.

Nor his Man-ſervant, nor his Maid-ſervant] God ſets down the Servants before the Cattle or any other wealth, becauſe they are more to be accounted of than Riches.

Nor his Ox, nor his Aſſe] Hæc animantium genera lex nominavit, quæ Hebræis eſſent uſitatoria atque utiliora. Bos enim homini Colonus eſt, & ſocius agriculturæ, & quæſtus ex aſino opima præda exſuperat, ait Plin. l. 8. Rami Comment. de Doctrina Chriſtiana, l. 2. c. 12.

Theſe two creatures, the Oxe and the Aſſe, are in the Scriptures frequently mentioned together, Exod 23. 4. & 12. 1. 1 Sam. 12. 3. Iſai. 1. 3. Job 1. 3. Luke 13. 15. and reckoned together as a principal part of mans wealth, and by way of Exod. 20. 17. but Deut. 5. 21. it is, Thou ſhalt not covet thy Neighbours Wife, Thou ſhalt not covet thy Neighbours houſe. In both places the wife is preferred before the houſe by the Septuagint. Significat ea vox & alium doloſos quibus alienum invertunt & ſenſu ſublimiore, appetitus etiam. Hunc ſenſum quia ferme negligebant Hebræi, ideo Chriſtus oſtendit talem appetitum non modò Deo diſplicere, ſed & ſi foveatur, gehennæ obnoxium. Grotius in Exod. cap. 20. Elton. Maſter Dod,

God repeating this Commandment, Deut. 5. 21. and ſetting down all things according to their due eſtimation, puts the Wife in the firſt place. Barker. Prov. 16. 14. Exod. 21. 19. Chamad in genere eſt deſiderare, concupiſcere, optare, quod jucundum eſt, gratum, utile & voluptuoſum, quæ actio per ſe non eſt mala, ſed tantum propter inordinationem. quæ naturæ rectè à Deo poſitæ conſtitutio turbatur & violatur, unde Ebræi dicere ſolent, hoc verbum concupiſcere edificaſſe inferos: obje&a concupiſcentiæ hic exprimuntur nonnulla exempli gratia, ſed quia plura ſunt, tandem ſub univerſali regula continentur, & omne quod eſt proximi tui. Scopus ergo præcepti eſt prohibere omnem rei malæ contra nos & proximum appetitionem; atque etiam rei bonæ malam cupiditatem, cum ſcilicet à debito fine & bono diſceditur. Itaq; non abſolutè dicitur non concupiſces, ſed non concupiſces domum, uxorem, &c. Rivetus in Exod. Hoc præcepto Deus duorum peccatorum ſupra prohibitorum, nimirum furti & adulterij fontem atque originem extirpare inſtituit. Interdicit enim hoc loco cupiditatem neſariam, ex qua utrumque flagitium naſcitur. Concupiſcere quippe alterius uxorem atque bona aliena, hoc loco, eſt id animo agitare, deliberataq; voluntate in id incumbere, ut quocunq; tandem pacto illis perfrui poſſis. Volkelius de vera religione, l. 4. c. 8. Summa ſcopuſq; hujus præcepti eſt: ut animus eâ charitate ſit imbutus, quæ cogitationibus aut cupiditatibus ab illa vel tantillum deflectentibus nullum prorſus locum relinquat. Fabrit. Conc. in Decal. Deus prohibet omnem pravam concupiſcentiam, generatim quidem adverſus univerſam ſuam legem, ſpecialim verò adverſus quinq; præcedentiæ ſecundæ Tabulæ præcepta, præcipit originalem juſtitiam rectitudinem affectuum. Id. ib. Vide Amyraldum de peccato originis, p. 286.

Synec-

Synecdoche put for a mans whole ſubſtance or eſtate, becauſe of their great uſefulneſſe; the ſtrength of the Oxe, and the patience of the Aſſe enabling them, the one for labour, the other for carriage. For in thoſe times and contries they uſed Aſſes altogether, for journeys and for burdens; as we (now adayes and in theſe parts of the world) do Horſes; whereof in old time we find very little ſpeech of any other uſe, then for the ſervices of War only. See Deut. 17. 16. Prov. 21. 31. Gen. 32. 5.

Nor any thing that is his] The Lord comprehends in theſe words every thing, how ſmall ſoever in our account, that belongs to our neighbour. Sive ad ſtatum, ſive ad vitam, ſive ad coniugium, ſive ad bona externa, ſive ad exiſtimationem pertineat. Fabritius.

This Commandment is no where repeated in the Goſpel by our bleſſed Saviour, but it is inſerted in the repetition of the ſecond Table, which S^t Paul mentioned to the Romans.

The thing here forbidden (ſaith D^r Abbot againſt Biſhop) is luſt and concupiſcence, as the root and fountain of all ſin and wickedneſſe, and therefore the Apoſtle ſetteth down for the whole effect of this Commandment, Thou ſhalt not luſt, Rom. 7: 7. and calleth it often, the Commandment, verſ. 8, 9, 10. to note that it is but one Commandment, which ſaith, Thou ſhalt not luſt. He exemplifieth luſt in the Commandment by ſome objects, leaving the reſt to be underſtod; but if we will divide the Commandment of luſting, becauſe the things are divers which are luſted after, there muſt be a neceſſity of making more Commandments, becauſe as there are luſts tending to covetouſneſſe and lechery, ſo there are alſo which tend to diſobedience, to lying, and ſlandering, and ſuch like.

Abbot againſt Biſhop. See alſo Lakes Theolog. Probe. Vide Spelm. de Concil. p. 363. Et Fabritius in Decal. Et Urſini Explicat. Catechet. par. 3^tia Quæſt. 1. cap. 13. Tam differunt non concupiſces uxorem proximi, & non concupiſces bona proximi, quam diſſerunt non machaberis, & non facies furtum. Cornel. à Lap. in Deut. 5. 7. Vide Ames. Medul Theol. l. 2. c. 22. See Elton alſo on this Commandment.

Whereas the Papiſts make the ninth Commandment, Thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbours wife, and the tenth, Thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbours houſe, which order may not be broken according to their diviſion; yet Moſes himſelf alters it Exod 20. 17. though Deut. 5. 27. it be ſo; which indifferent placing of thoſe two branches, infallibly prove that they are not two Commandments, but one onely.

Although Thou ſhalt not covet, be repeated, yet Lyra witneſſeth, that according to the Hebrew, one Commandment only is contained.

This laſt Commandment (ſaith M^r Dod) forbids the leaſt thoughts and motions of the heart againſt our neighbour, though there be neither conſent nor yielding of the will. And requireth ſuch a contentedneſſe with our eſtate, as that we never have the finalleſt motion tending to the hurt of onr neighbour in any ſort. Yea, that we have ſuch a love of our neighbour, as never to think of him, or any thing belonging to him, but with deſire of his good every way. To covet (ſaith he)

The laſt precept of the Decalogue, according to the Letter, forbiddeth only compaſſing that which is another mans; counting his wife in that number, becauſe there was then means to compaſſe another mans wife, without breaking the Law, which allowed of divorces. M^r Thorndike of the Covenant of Grace, ch. 32. In all the former Commandments, ſome outward act or deed was commanded or forbidden; but in this laſt the Lord forbiddeth onely the deſire of the heart. Ford of the Covenant between God and man. The thing forbidden here is a roving and ranging luſt, with a general conſent of the heart to wiſh it, yet ſo that a man would check and reprove his own heart rather than his deſire ſhould be accompliſhed. Id. ib. This laſt Commandment pierceth deeper than the former; before the deed was condemned that was hurtfull to our neighbour, and the ſetled will alſo and reſolved determinations; theſe were forbidden in the other Commandments: but now the Holy Ghoſt reproveth the deſire and luſt toward any thing of our neighbours, notwithſtanding there be no full reſolution nor ſetled conſent given thereunto. Knewſtubs Lectures on Exod. 20. 17. In the former Commandments is forbidden both the evil act, and alſo the evil thought ſetled, and with full and deliberate conſent of will; but in the tenth Commandment is forbidden the evil thought, and every motion and ſtirring in the ſoul, that is contrary to charity and love of others, though no liking or conſent of will be given to it. Elton on the Commandments. It forbids all inward luſt, Rom. 7. 7. and all firſt motions of ſinne, verſ. 5. even before the conſent and allowance of the evil, verſ. 15. and all luſting after evil, 1 Cor. 10. 6. or after the good creatures of God in a carnal manner. Maſter Fenner on the Commandments. Quid enim exigit verbum decimum, non concupiſces, niſi ut nec ullus motus animæ ſit in nobis contra ullum præceptum Dei, & in ſpecie, ut integri ſimus cum Deo, carentes omni cupiditate mala, & habentes reſtitudinem imaginis Dei in qua primitus conditus eſt. Cocceius de Fœdere, cap. 12. It forbids, Ne vel minima cupiditate, aut cogitatione, adverſus ullum Dei præceptum corda noſtra unquam ſollicitemur: ſed ut perpetuo, & ex animo omne peccatum deteſtemur, contra, omni juſtitia delectemur. Urſini Explicat. Catech. pars 3^tia qu. 1. c. 13.

in

in this place ſignifies, to have a motion of the heart without any ſetled conſent of will.

Mr Lawſon ſaith in his Body of Divinity, that the principal thing here commanded, is the love of our neighbours, as our ſelves.

Here is a diſtinct precept from all the reſt, there coveting with conſent and deviſing of means to finiſh the deſire: here coveting, not going ſo farre, as to the conſent and diſcourſing about the means to effect it is forbidden. Lakes Theological Probs.

The firſt motions unto ſin are here forbidden, though we never purpoſe or conſent unto them. Mr Lyf. Principles of Faith and good conſcience. Here the Holy Ghoſt reproveth the deſire and luſt toward any thing of our neighbours, notwithſtanding there be no full reſolution nor ſetled conſent given thereunto. Knewſtub on 20. of Exod.

Primi motus, thoſe firſt motions or ſtirrings of ſin (which we call concupiſcence) are according to their ſeveral objects, (ſo farre as they can be ſuppoſed ſinfull) forbidden in every of the Ten Commandments reſpectively: even as the Acts are, to which they referre, and from which they differ, not ſo much in kinds as in degree.

The ſumme of the tenth Commandment (ſaith Mr Downame) is, that every one reſt fully pleaſed with that portion which God ſeeth good to beſtow upon him, rejoycing and taking comfort in it whether it be great or ſmall, Heb. 13. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 8. Phil. 4. 11. The contrary whereof is covetouſneſſe, longing after that which is our neighbours, or none of ours, though it be without ſeeking of any unlawful means to come by it, as Ahab did, 1 King. 21. 2.

This Commandment (ſaith he) hath commonly another ſenſe of forbidding onely the firſt luſts and motions of ſin, but the words are evident. The reſt of the Commandments of the ſecond Table have all of them a common and familiar underſtanding, ſuch as every man at the firſt hearing doth conceive. This therefore muſt have the like. The Law (ſay the Talmudiſts) ſpeaketh according to common uſe. Let any man indued onely with reaſon and underſtanding be asked what this ſhould mean, Thou ſhalt not covet thy neighbours houſe: he will certainly anſwer, We muſt be content with our own.

Downames ſumme of Divinity, l. 1. Contentatio eſt virtus, quâ animus acquieſcit in ſorte à Deo conceſſâ, 1 Tim. 6. 6. Heb. 13. 5. Phil. 4. 11. Præcipitur hæc contentatio in decimo mandato, ut ex verbis ipſis apparet, neque ullo modo conſentaneum eſt, mandatum iſtud immediatè referri ad puritatem iſtam juſtitiæ internam & originalem, quæ fons eſt omnis obedientiæ; illa enim non generaliter præcipitur in uno aliquo mandato, ſed in omnibus. Contentationi opponitur concupiſcentia, Heb. 13. 5. non tota inclinatio naturæ noſtræ, quæ eſt corrupta; quæ nullo uno præcepto ſingulariter damnatur, ſed tota lege; neque omnes actuales illæ cupiditates primæ, quæ ſunt inordinatæ, ſed illæ cupiditas, quâ animus primò inſtigatur ac titillatur deſiderio bonorum quæ ſunt proximi, quamvis eâdem illicitis mediis acquirere nondum in animum induxerit. 1 Reg. 21. 2. Marc. 10. 19. Ameſ. Medul. Theol. l. 2. c. 22. Vide plura ibid. Præcipua hujus præcepti virtus eſt αὐτάρκεια, quam contentationem nonnulli appellant, quâ animus ſorte ſuâ à Deo datâ acquieſcit, & plura vel aliena injuſtè non expetit. Wendelinus Chriſt. Theol. l. 2. c. 4. Id quod prohibetur, eſt concupiſcentia alieni, ſeu ejus quod eſt proximi noſtri, quodque alienare vel non vult, vel per legem non poteſt. Id. ib.

In three things joyntly conſiſteth the nature of true contentment; that man hath onely learned to be content, which can ſuffice himſelf with his own eſtate, with the preſent eſtate, with any eſtate. The very thing (to my ſeeming) principally intended in the laſt Commandment of the Decalogue. Which forbiddeth expreſly the coveting of our neighbours houſe, his Wife, his Cattel: and proportionably, the coveting of his farm, his office, his honour, his kingdom, and generally the covering of any thing that is anothers. Which is as much in effect, as to require every man to reſt fully ſatisfied with that portion of outward things, which God hath been pleaſed by fair and juſtifiable wayes to derive upon him, without a greedy deſire of that which is anothers. Doctor Sanderſon on Phil. 4. 11.

The duties required in the tenth Commandment are, ſuch a full contentment with our own condition, and ſuch a charitable frame of the whole ſoul toward our neighbour, as that all our inward motions and affections touching him, tend unto and further all that good which is his. The Aſſembly of Divines in their larger Catechiſme. The general duty required in this tenth Commandment is, that we be truly contented with our own outward condition, and heartily deſire the good of our neighbour in all things belonging unto him. Mr Ball in his Catechiſme. See his Power of Godlineſſe, lib. 2. chap. 4. of Thought or Cogitation. We are here commanded contentation in our preſent eſtate, and are forbidden deſiring of, or envying the good of our neighbour. Mr Nortons Doctrine of Godlineſſe.

Socrates seeing great store of riches, jewels and precious stuffe carried in pomp through his City, Oh how many things (quoth he) do I not desire. See more there in Dr Sanderson.

2. The Hebrew word that Moses hath Deut. 5.27. signifies to long after a thing, and to have ones teeth water at it; so it is used Micah 7. 1. and in many other places.

3. The particular instances, Thy neighbours house, wife, man-servant, maid, oxe, asse, or any thing that is his, declare manifestly, that goods and possessions are the proper subject of this Commandment, for which cause, Exod. 20. 17. the wife of our neighbour (his most precious possession, Prov. 19. 4.) cometh not in the first place, but is set in the midst of other possessions; that by the very marshalling of the words it might appear that this Commandment reacheth not to the desiring of ones wife for filthinesse and uncleanesse sake.

4. The order of the Commandments going by degrees from the greater to the lesse, and so continually falling, till you come to this sin of coveting; which is the first step and beginning of all wrong and deceit, and yet differeth in nature from them both.

5. The corruption both of nature and desire is forbidden in every one, so as this cannot be restrained to a several degree of sin, but a differing and distinct kind of sin from those that went before.

Downame ubi supra. And Finches little book of Div. c. 12.

6. Our Saviour Christ, the best interpreter of the Law, doth so expound it, Mark 10. 9. when reckoning up all the Commandments of the second Table, instead of Thou shalt not covet, he saith, Thou shalt not deprive, (or, bereave a man of ought he hath) that is, covet or desire to have any thing that is his, though it be neither by wrong nor fraud, which two are forbidden in the words next before, but rest in that which God hath given thee. Mr Lyford therefore adds, the particular coveting here forbidden is discontentednesse with that we have, wishing and longing after that which is anothers.

Mr Burroughs on Phil. 4. 11. Serm. 2. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 13. 5.

Christian contentation is the inward, quiet and gracious frame of spirit, freely submitting to, and taking complacency in Gods dispose in every condition.

Si ad naturam vives nunquam eris pauper, si ad opinionem nunquam dives. Exiguum natura desiderat, opinio immensum. Seneca Epist. 16.

It is said of Socrates (though he were but a Heathen) that whatever befel him, he would never so much as change his countenance; he got this power over his spirit meerly by strength of reason and morality. All contentment ariseth from conjunction of suitables. This is the difference between contentment and satisfaction; contentment is when my mind is framed according to my condition, satisfaction is of a higher nature, when a mans condition is fitted to his mind.

Motives to contentednesse,

1. From God.
2. From our selves.

First, From God.

Consider,

1. Whatsoever we have more or lesse, is the portion which God hath allotted us; and whatever portion he allots any, it is from his free grace.

2. He is infinitely wise, and regards not one man alone, but his purpose which he hath to all men, 1 Cor. 1.25.

3. He hath just reason to give us no more, because we provoke him.

4. God hath given to every Christian such things as they are bound to be content withal. He hath freely pardoned them, He hath given them the promise of eternal life, and He doth all this in a continual exercise of free and rich grace.

Secondly, In respect of our selves, we have reason to be contented.

Consider,

1. The good we have had from God already.

2. Remember

2. Remember the ſubmiſſion we made to God in the day of our converſion, Lev. 26.41,42,43. Luk. 19.23. & 14.33.

3. It is our wiſdome to be contented, becauſe it is to make a vertue of neceſſity.

4. There is nothing ſo unhappy, as for a man to have his portion in this life, Pſal. 17. lat. end.

5. We are freed from many and the worſt temptations if God keep us low, a full body is ſubject to diſeaſes.

6. We ſhall uſe the good things God gives us the better, Phil. 4.11.

7. We need not much, Give us this day our daily bread, nature is content with little, grace with leſſe.

The way to get contentedneſſe.

1. Aim at a right end in thy life, viz. The glory of God, this cannot be croſſed.

2. Get humility, think your ſelves worthy of no good, all evil.

3. Uſe diſcretion in conſidering indifferently both what good thou haſt as thou art, and what evil thou ſhouldſt have if thou hadſt thy deſerving, and weigh thy comforts and croſſes together.

Every Chriſtian is to make conſcience of his thoughts, Iſa. 55.7.

Reaſons.

1. They fall under the notice and judgement of God, Pſal. 139.2. Amos 4.13. Matth. 9.4.

2. Moſt of Gods diſpleaſure hath been declared on men for their evil thoughts, Gen. 6.5. Jer. 6.19. Luk. 1.51.

3. One of the chief things taken notice of in the day of judgment is, mens thoughts, 1 Cor. 4 5.

4. Becauſe of all ſins thoughts are moſt conſiderable.

Firſt, For the danger of them.

I. They beget carnal affections, firſt we think and then we love, they blow up the ſparks of luſt.

II. They are the ground of actions, Iſa. 59.4.

Secondly, In regard of their number, Iſa. 57.20.

5. Becauſe one is beſt known by his thoughts, Prov. 12.5. They are the moſt native off-ſpring of the mind, and freeſt from conſtraint, Iſa. 32.8. The principal luſt ingroſſeth the thoughts.

6. It is a great note of ſincerity to make conſcience of our thoughts, Phil. 2.10. Prov. 6.18. & 15.20. Pſal. 119.113.

7. Gods eye is eſpecially on them.

The cure of evil thoughts.

1. Pray for a new heart, a principle of regeneration, Eph. 4.23.

2. Get thoſe ſins mortified which ſpecially ingroſſe the thoughts, pride, envy, covetouſneſſe, uncleanneſſe, revenge, Prov. 6.14.

3. Get a ſtock or treaſure of ſound knowledge, the minde of man is alwayes working, My reins inſtruct me in the night ſeaſon, Prov. 6.22. Deut. 6.6, 7. Matth. 13.52.

4. Inure your ſelves to holy meditation, Pſal. 119.59,99.

5. Be diligent and induſtrious in ſome lawfull imployment, a ſoft and eaſie life is full of vanity and temptation; too much imployment hinders duty, and too little further's ſin.

6. Conſtantly watch over the heart for ſuppreſſing evil thoughts, Prov. 4.23. and over the ſenſes for preventing of them, Job 31.1.

7. Be much humbled for evil thoughts, they grieve the Spirit, his reſidence is in the mind, Act. 8.32. we ſhould labour to approve our thoughts to God, as well as our actions to men, Pſal. 139.23.

We ſhould be troubled for our evil thoughts, though we do not approve of them, Prov. 30.32.

The Law of God cannot be perfectly fulfilled in this life, Job 17.19. Act. 7.53. & 13.38. & 15.10. Rom. 8.3,7. Gal. 3.21. The Saints confeſſe as much, Exod. 34.7. 1 King. 8.46. Job 9.2,3,28. & 15.15. Pſalm 19.13. & 32.6. Pſalm

139. 2. & 142. 2. Proverbs 20. 9. Isaiah 64. 6. Daniel 9. 5, 7, 18. Romans 7. 14, 18.

Vide Bellarm. de Justificat. lib. 4. cap. 11, 12, 13, 14. Brochm. System. Theol. Tom. 2. De Lege, cap. 6. Quæst. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6. Fabrit. Conciones, De Legis Impletione.

The Papists say a man may fulfil the Law, and that he may do greater and more holy works than the Law prescribes: so that those works of supererogation (as they call them) may be sold to others for money.

We say the perfect fulfilling of the Law to man fallen is impossible; originally it was not so, but accidentally it is. See Down. of Justification, l. 7. c. 6.

There is a difference between the keeping or observing of the Law, and the fulfilling of it, which the Papists seem to confound. All the faithfull by their new obedience keep the Law according to the measure of Grace received, Ephes. 4. 7. but none fulfill it, 1 Joh 2. 3, 4, 5. & 3. 22, 24.

See Mr Pemble of Justificat. Sect. 3. cap. 1. pag. 70, 71. & cap. 2. pag. 83, &c. See Finches Sacred Doctrine of Divinity, cap. 12. Sclater on Rom. 3. pag. 289. See Mr Farindons Sermon part 3d 23th Sermon on Micah 6. 8. He seems to maintain the affirmative in some sense.

Or there is,

1. A Legal keeping the Law, when we performe the Commandments exactly Gal. 3. 10.

2. Evangelical keeping the precepts in a way of filial and sincere obedience.

See Mr Thorndike of the Covenant of Grace, ch. 32. pag. 285.

They have received a new and Divine Nature, by which they are made like unto God and Christ; God puts his Spirit within them, and enableth them to keep his Commandements, and to walke in his Judgements, and to do them.

Their new obedience consists in studio pietatis & justitiæ, in the study of piety and righteousnesse, whereby they are carefull to performe good works. This study stands in a sincere desire, an unfeigned purpose, an upright endeavour, to walk in the obedience of all Gods Commandments. The Law is kept with the heart, Psalm 119. 34, 69, 129. but not fulfilled, but by the whole man performing the whole Law alwayes. Downame of Justification, lib. 7. cap. 6. Cartwright on Matth. 11. 30. See Mr Cartw. Rejoynd. pag. 196. Every godly man is perfect in his state, Psal. 37. 37. relatively as he is united to Christ, not absolutely, the Lord chargeth no sinne on him; evangelically, not legally perfect.

Compare two Scriptures together, Gen. 6. 5. with Gal. 3. 10. the last place shews, that perfection is required by the Law.

1. We must do the duty there prescribed.
2. Every duty.
3. Continue to do it.

The first place shews the estate of the natural mans heart.

It is,
First, Evil.
Secondly, Onely evil.
Thirdly, Continually evil.

The Law is spiritual, Rom. 7. 14.

1. It requires a holy nature, Luk. 10. 27. with all thy strength that God gave thee.

* Ubi requiritur perfectio tum essentialis, ex tota anima & omnibus viribus, tum integralis juxta omnia & singula mandata; tum accidentalis omni tempore. Gerh. Confess. Cathol. contra Pontif. l. 2. par. 3. Art. 23. c. 7.

2. It requires holy inward dispositions, Deut. 6. * 5.

3. Holy Actions, Gal. 3. 10, 11, 12.

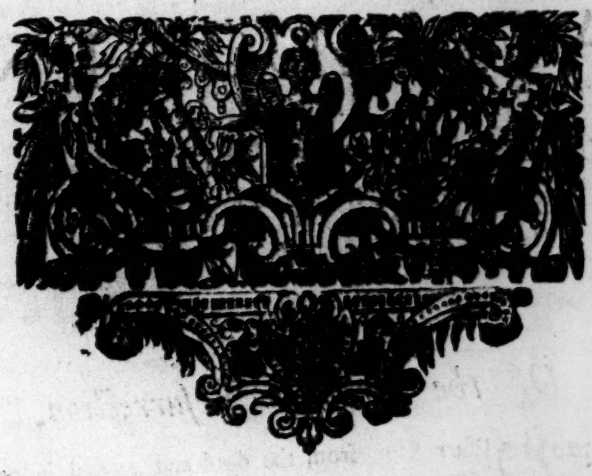
There is more required of an unregenerate man, than of Adam in his innocency, as the righteousnesse which will justifie an Angel will not justifie a sinner.

The Precept of the first Covenant is not abolished by the Law, but the Lord requires of every man out of Christ, perfect, personal and perpetual obedience, as he did of Adam in the state of innocency.

1. Because

1. Because the Soveraignty of God is still the same: when he gave Adam a Law, it was an act of Soveraignty.
2. The Law is the same it was before the fall, just, holy, and good.
3. Mans obligation to God under the Law is the same.
4. God ever intended to keep up the Authority of the Law.

The End of the ninth Book.



THE

THE TENTH BOOK. OF Glorification,

OF THE General Resurrection, THE LAST JUDGMENT, AND Everlasting Misery of the wicked, and Happiness of the Godly.

Chap. I.

Of the General Resurrection.

See Dr Prid. Sermon on 1 Cor. 15. 20. Crocius his Syntag. Theol. l. 11. c. 7. ad 13. Resurrectionem mortuorum futuram esse in carne, quando Christus venturus est vivos judicaturus, & mortuos: oportet si Christiani esse volumus ut credamus. Sed non ideo de hac re inanis est fides nostra, si quemadmodum futura sit, perfectè comprehendere non valemus. Aug. de civit. Dei, l. 20. c. 20.

RESurrection from the dead and eternal judgement, are two of the principles of the Apostles Catechisme, Heb. 6. 1.

There shall be a Resurrection of the body. In the New Testament the thing is so perspicuous and obvious, that it would be too long to rehearse the several places. Mat. 22. 32. John 5. 28, 29. Acts 17. 31 & 24. 16. Revel. 20. 12, 13. Paul proves it by divers Arguments, 1 Cor. 15.

Tertullian hath written a famous Book of this subject, and begins his Book thus, Fiducia Chriſtianorum reſurrectio mortuorum. The confidence of Chriſtians, is the Reſurrection of the dead. 1 Theſſ. 4.18.

and

The Reſurrection is,

1. A main ground of comfort to believers, 1 Cor. 15.
2. It may comfort them in their greateſt troubles, *Heb.*11.35.
3. It is their heritage, 1 Peter 1.3,4,5,6.

This aſſures them,

1. Of the immortality of the ſoul, The body ſhall be raiſed to be joyned to the ſoul.
2. It is univerſal to all believers, the poor as well as the rich; The Sea ſhall give up her dead, and the grave, all thoſe that ſleep in Jeſus, ſhall he bring with him.
3. From Chriſts Reſurrection, 1 *Cor.*15.13.

His Reſurrection makes their Reſurrection

1. Sure; the Head being riſen, the members ſhall riſe, 1 *Cor.*15.20.
2. Safe; they ſhall riſe to glory, *Col.*3.4.

4. This is a confirmation of their faith, 1 *Cor.*15.14. 1 *Tim.*2.18. and hope, 1 *Cor.*15 19. Acts 24.15.

2. There ſhall be a reſurrection of the ſelf-ſame body; the Apoſtle 1 *Cor.*15.53. ſpeaks by way of demonſtration, and as it were pointing at his own body, This corruption muſt put on incorruption.

Credo reſurrectionem hujus carnis, ſaid the old Chriſtians, Job 19.25. Non enim reſurrectio dici poteſt, niſi anima ad idem corpus redeat, quia reſurrectio eſt iterata ſurrectio: ejuſdem autem eſt ſurgere & cadere. Aquinas *Supplem.*3. *part. Quaſt.*78. *Artic.*1.

Abarbanel treates largely, and ex profeſſo concerning the reſurrection of the dead, Præfatione in Eſaiam, where he ſaith, that Eſay ſaw and taught it more clearly, than all the other Prophets. Buxtorf. in Not. in Coſri. parte 1ª.

Dr More in his Explanation of the Grand Myſtery of Godlineſſe, *lib.*6. *chap.*4 ſaith, There ſhall be the ſame numerical perſons, but not the ſame numerical bodies. If the ſame body be not raiſed, it's a new creation, not a reſurrection.

The Authour of the Letter of Reſolution concerning Origen, and the chief of his Opinions, ſaith more that way: And whereas Jerome ſpeaking of that knowne place in the 19th of Job before-quoted, ſaith, Nullus tam apertè poſt Chriſtum quàm iſte ante Chriſtum de reſurrectione loquitur. He replies: But he that ſhall conſider how many ſeveral wayes that place is tranſlated and interpreted by ſuch as are famous for their skill in the language, and how many words they are fain to ſupply by meer gueſſe to make any ſentence in it entire and perfect, and with what ſuſpence of mind they propound to their Readers either this or that ſenſe ſo patcht up by them, will be very difficultly drawn to believe the riſing again of fleſh upon the authority of Job, unleſſe he be intereſſed by a former perſwaſion, and ſo think that all things he reads without, chime after the meaſures of his inward fancy. Mercer (a learned Hebrician) on the place renders it much as we do, and ſaith, Noſtri ferè omnes tam veteres quàm recentiores hunc verſiculum cum duobus ſequentibus ad reſurrectionem referunt, quam hoc loco Job adſtruat, & per Redemptorem Chriſtum intelligunt. Though he confeſſe that he and the Hebrews interpret it otherwiſe.

In voce illâ reſurrectionem, ſignificant Apoſtoli, carnem in reſurrectione non ſolum futuram eſſe veram carnem, ſed eandem ipſam, quæ antea erat: alioqui enim non poſſet dici Reſurrectio, ſed novæ rei productio; ex quo etiam intelligimus, viros reſurrecturos in corpore virili, & mulieres in corpore muliebri: erit igitur carnis reſurrectio, & carnis ejuſdem, & in ſexu eodem. Bellarmini Explicat. Symb. Apoſt. This is properly a reſurrection, when the ſame thing that fell, is ſet up again, not another in ſtead of it, John 2.19.

3. It ſhall be general, of the good and bad, Matth. 22.31, 33. Daniel 12.2. John 5.28,29. The wicked riſe in virtute Chriſti Judicis, the godly in virtute Chriſti capitis; the wicked ſhall ariſe to death and ſhame, The Reſurrection of the Saints ſhall be glorious; they ſhall riſe firſt, 1 *Cor.*15. 2. Every one of the Saints ſhall have a perfect body without defect or deformity, they ſhall ariſe in perfect beauty.

beauty. 3. Their body ſhall be immortal. 4. Spiritual and glorious, like Chriſts body, Phil.4.ult.

Articulus intelligi debet de reſurrectione glorioſâ quæ eſt ad vitam. Nam ſolitus Eccleſia privilegia commemorantur: Unde nec mortis æterna mentio fit, quia reprobos ea manet, non electos Dei. Voſſius Diſputat. 13. de Baptiſmo.

Aquinas ſhews, that Subtilitas eſt proprietas corporis glorioſi, Supplem. 3. *part. Qu.*83. *Art.*1. and that it is Ratione ſubtilitatis impalpabile. Ib. *Art.*6. Vide ibid. Qu. 84. *Art.*1. *& Qu.*85. *Art.*1,2.

The Reſurrection may be proved by reaſon,

Et utique idoneus eſt reficere, qui fecit: quanto plus eſt feciſſe, quàm refeciſſe: initium dediſſe quàm reddidiſſe. Ita reſtitutionem carnis, facilioren credas inſtitutione.

First, From the power of God; he made us of nothing, therefore he can raiſe us out of the duſt. Facilius eſt reſtituere quàm conſtituere. Qui poteſt facere poteſt reficere, ſaith Tertullian. Mat.22.29. Phil.3.21.

Secondly, His juſtice; the body is partner with the ſoul in ſinne or holineſſe.

Thirdly, Chriſt roſe again, and he roſe as the publick Head of the Church, Luke 24. 46, 47. He roſe as the firſt-fruits, 1 Cor. 15. 21. He bought ſoul and body, 1 Corinth. 6. 20. He is united to a whole believer, John 6. 40.

Fourthly, That the Glory of God, and Chriſt, and the Saints may be manifeſted.

Aſpice nunc ad ipſa quoque exempla divinæ poteſtatis.

The world derides the Reſurrection of the body, the Philoſophers could not attain to it, but it is the Chriſtians chief conſolation, Job 19. 27. Hope and Reſurrection of the dead are joyned together, Acts 23.6. & 24.14.

Dies moritur in noctem & tenebris uſquequaq; ſepelitur.

There are as great things paſt as to come; our bodies may as well be in Heaven, as Chriſts body be in the grave, Rom. 8. 32. We may as well be raiſed from the grave, as from a death in ſin to the life of grace.

Funeſtatur mundi honor, omnis ſubſtantia denigratur. Tertul. de reſurrect. carnis.

Although the Reſurrection ſhall be by the power of the whole Trinity, yet it ſhall be peculiarly by the voice of Chriſt, The dead ſhall hear the voice of God, and live, by an Archangel miniſterially.

The end why Chriſt ſhall raiſe them all, is to bring them to Judgement.

This Article is moſt difficult to be believed, and moſt ſcoft at by the Heathen (yet ſome of them had ſome good ken, though at a diſtance, of the Reſurrection,) therefore moſt defended by Juſtin Martyr, Athenagoras, Lactantius, Tertullian.

The Schoolmen ſay, Omnes reſurgent in eâdem ætate, and urge Epheſ. 4. 13. but Chriſt roſe (ſay they) in his youthfull age about thirty three years; but the Fathers interpret that place otherwiſe.

The godly then need not fear perſecution, it toucheth but the body, *Mat.*10.28. nor death it ſelf: It is but a ſleep, Acts 7.* 60. 2 Theſſ. 4. 13. the grave a bed of reſt, Eſay 57.2. Thoſe that ſleep likely riſe, ſo ſhall thy body be raiſed up at the laſt day.

* See M^r Calamy on that Text. Decent burial is commendable, but Epitaphs are uſeleſſe. See Vulgar Errors in practice cenſured. ch.5. Dormientes videntur mortui apud homines, quemadmodum apud Deum mortui dormientes. Vita Bernardi.

None but the Sadducees among the Jewes (who alſo did deny the being of Angels and of Spirits) did make queſtion of the Reſurrection, who for this cauſe are branded every where in the Goſpel, with this mark upon them, That they ſaid there is no Reſurrection, as Matth. 22. 23. Mark 12. 19. Luke 20. 27. Acts 23. 8.

Chap. II.

Of the Last Judgement.

B*Ernard*[a] distinguisheth of a three-fold coming of Christ:
1. Ad Homines, John 1. 11.
2. In Homines, Matth. 28. ult.
3. Contra Homines, Revel. 1. 7.

The usual distinction is of his first coming in great humility, when he was incarnate, and his second coming in Majesty, when he shall openly manifest and declare his excellent glory in the sight of all his reasonable creatures, Angels and men, good and bad.

The knowledge of the time is reserved to God alone, Acts 1. 7. The day is appointed by God the Father, and not revealed to any creature saving the humanity of Christ, and was not revealed to that it seemeth while he lived in the earth in baseness.

The Jewish Rabbines, and many of the ancient Fathers say, the world shall last 6000 years. As God having in six dayes perfected all his works, rested on the seventh day; so the world (they say) shall last but 6000 years, and in the beginning of the seventh all things shall rest. See Gaffarels unheard of Curiosities, Vossii Isagoge Chronologica Dissertat. 1. chap. 2. Vide Lud. Capellus his Chronol. Sac. pag. 145, 146.

The Atheists took notice of a day of Judgement and stumbled at it, 2 Peter 3. 4.

The Heathens by natural light might know something of it, Prov. 1. 32. Heb. 2. 14, 15. Nature could never find out the circumstances of that day, by whom this judgment should be managed, and in what manner.

Mahomet in his Alcoran calls Diem Judicij diem deceptionis, the Day of Judgement a day of deceit, not that God shall deceive any, but that the wicked shall then be deceived.

[a] De Adventu Domini Serm. See Crocius his Syntagma Theol. l. 2. c. 13. Christs first and second coming agree in some things and differ in others. They agree in these: 1. At his first coming he came personally and visibly, and so shall at the last. 2. He came then, and so also the second time to advance his Church, and overthrow his enemies. They differ in four things: 1. His first coming (in respect of outward glory) was in a poor abased condition, Phil. 2. 7. The second in great glory, Mat. 24. 30. He shall be attended with innumerable Angels. He shall come in all the glory of the Father, Matth. 25. 31. & 16. 27. 2. His second coming will bring great joy to all his subjects, and terrour to all his enemies, 2 Thess. 1. 8, 9, 10, 11. 3. The good he did for his people at his first coming was but inchoate, at the last perfect. 4. Their communion with God was by Ordinances, which shall then be abolisht. When Christ came in the flesh, he came to be judged and condemned, therefore he came in a mean and contemptible way, but he shall come the second time to judge the world, John 5. 27. Hic ostendit, quod in ea carne veniet judicaturus, in qua venerat judicandus. Aug. de civ. Dei, l. 20. c. 6.

Christ shall suddenly descend from Heaven with the voice of an Archangel, with a mighty shout, and with the trump of God, and then shall he cause all the Saints to rise, and with the living Saints shall cause them to meet him in the clouds, and after he shall cause all the sinners to arise also, and there publickly shall adjudge all his Saints to his heavenly Kingdome, making known and rewarding all their good deeds, but shall adjudge all the wicked to eternal damnation, making known to all the world all their wicked and ungodly deeds, words and thoughts, even those which before were most secret, which having done, he shall then yeeld up the Kingdom to God his Father, not ceasing to be lesse glorious himself, because he hath shewed the infinite glory of God, to which all things are to be referred as their proper end, but perpetually enjoying glory and blisse with him in another manner, and in no lesse full measure; even as a mighty man under some great Prince, having conquered some Kingdom against whom his Prince did send him, then resigneth the Office of Lord General, because there is no farther use of it, but yet liveth in as much honour in the Kings Court, as that military Title and function would afford him. So our Lord and all his members with him after the last day shall remain for all eternity unspeakably glorious, though the manner of administration of things which is now in use by Gods appointment shall be finished and determined, that God may be all in all.

Two things are to be considered:

1. That all universally are to be judged.
2. That Christ shall be Judge of all.

For the former; there is a two-fold Judgement:

1. Particular and private, which is given concerning every one immediatly after death, Heb. 11.27.

2. Universal and publick, when all men shall be judged together, Acts 17.31. 2 Cor. 5.10. called the day of Revelation, Rom. 2.5. and of this judgement the Creed speaks, when it saith, From thence he shall come to judge the quick and dead. From thence, viz. Heaven; He, that is, Christ Jesus the second Person in Trinity; Shall come to judge the quick and dead, that is, all men that ever were or shall be.

There is,

1. A previous and preparatory Judgement in the Gospel.

2. Final and consummate at Christs second coming. This is the definitive or decisive sentence of God touching the everlasting estates of men in relation to misery or happinesse.

That in the end of the world there shall be a day of Judgment, and that all men shall then be judged, it appears

First, From Scripture, Eccles. 11.9. & 12.14. Matth. 10.15. & 12.36. & 25.32. Acts 17.30,31. Apocal. 20.12. Isaiah and Daniel write of it; Christ in his Sermons speaks of it. See Matth. 11.21,22. Matth. 12.41, [a] 42. Matth. 13. The Parable of the tares, Matth. 19.28. [b] he cals it Regeneration, not that men shall be then converted, but because all things then shall appear new. Enoch taught this Doctrine before the flood, *Jude v.*14. It is called that day, 2 Cor. 3.4. Rom. 2.4,5. Paul saith of Onesiphorus, God grant him mercy on that day, Gods day, 2 Peter 3.12. The day of the Lord, vers. 15. The day of Christ, Phlil. 1.6,10. The great and notable day of the Lord, Acts 2.20. A great day,

1. Because it is the consummation of Christs Regal Office, he shall then fully conquer his enemies, Revel 6.20. and reward his friends, Matth. 19.28.

2. In regard of the great things then done; Christ shall come in great glory, Matth. 16.28. & 24.30. attended with Angels and Saints, Matth. 25.31. 1 Thess. 4.17.

2. A notable, or bright and illustrious day; all veils shall be taken off then from Gods Decrees, the person of Christ, and the persons of the Saints.

It is called absolutely and simply Judgement, κατ' ἐξοχὴν, because it is that universal, final and ultimate Judgement, which God shall exercise in the end of the world, whose object shall be not some men onely, but all men altogether, Psalm 9.8. Eccles. 12.14. 2 Peter 2.9. and with an addition, the last Judgement, because it shall be that last and immutable Judgement of God, in which those which are acquitted shall be for ever acquitted, and those which are condemned, shall be for ever condemned. It is called the last Judgement also, because it shall be exercised in the last day, Heb. 6.2. It is reckoned amongst the Fundamentals, and called Eternal Judgement, because it shall stand to eternity. It was a sacred Proverb, 1 Cor. 16.22. Anathema Maranatha, Let the curse or judgement stand on him till that day; or let him be given over to the judgement of that day.

[a] Duas hoc loco res discimus, & venturum esse judicium, & cum mortuorum resurrectione venturum. De Nineviis enim & Regina Austri quando hæc dicebat, de mortuis sine dubio loquebatur, quos tamen in die judicii resurrecturos esse prædixit. Nec ideo dixit condemnabunt, quia & ipsi judicabunt, sed quia ex ipsorum comparatione isti meritò damnabuntur. Augustin. de civ. Dei. l. 20. c. 5.

[b] Quod autem ait, in regeneratione, proculdubio mortuorum resurrectionem nomine voluit regenerationis intelligi. Sic enim caro nostra regenerabitur per incorruptionem, quemadmodum est anima nostra regenerata per fidem. Aug. de civ. Dei, l. 20. c. 5.

1 John 3.20. Secondly, The very conscience of man which reproves the evil-doer, proves a judgement, Rom. 2.15. Neither are those infernal furies celebrated by the Poets any other thing than the terrours of conscience. Some deny the General Judgement, and say, there is no other judgement but what passeth in our own consciences.

A third

A third Reason is taken from God, the Saints, and the wicked,

First, From God,

1. That his Decree may be fulfilled, Acts 17.31.
2. That his Honour may be vindicated, Eccl. 3.16.
3. His Justice cleared, *Rom.*2.5. Esay 30.33. 2 *Tim.*4.8. *Eccl.*9.1,2. therefore God takes such exact notice of all the wayes of men, Job 31.11. *Deut.*32 34. because he will call them to an account for all. God will take away the disgrace cast upon his wayes, the mis-interpretations cast upon his Word, the reproach cast upon his people. Yet all things are not put under him, nor that place fully accomplisht, Phil. 2. 10.

Secondly, In respect of the Saints,

1. That their innocency here traduced may be made manifest.
2. That their works may be rewarded; therefore it is called a day of restoring all things, all things shall then be set straight.

Thirdly, In respect of the wicked, that their unrighteousnesse may be fully punished, 1 *Cor.*4.9,13. and that as the body did partake with the soul in sinning, so it may also share with it in punishment, 2 *Cor.*5.10. Nature had some blind knowledge of a day of recompence, the course of providence shews it; Vertue hath not yet a full reward, nor Vice a full punishment. Sinne is sometimes punished, to shew that there is a providence, and sometimes let alone, to shew that there is a Judgement to come. The course of Gods justice, and the wisdome of his counsels must be solidly applauded. The Judgement to come will work on shame, hell on fear.

God shall then have the glory of all his Attributes, and Christ of all his offices. Christ hath fullfilled all the other Articles in the Creed that concern him, therefore he will not fail also to accomplish this, being the last act of his Kingly office. All the creatures call for a day of judgement, *Rom.*8. 19, 20.

There are these properties of it: It is, 1. Certain, Acts 17.41. 2. Sodain, 1 *Thess.*5.3. 3. Speedy, 2 *Pet.*2.1. 4. Publick, Universal, 5. Righteous, *Rom.*2.21. 1 Cor. 4.5.

1. It is the second appearing of Christ, *Heb.*9.28.
2. A publick appearing, *Col.*3.4.
3. A glorious appearing, Titus 2.13. *Matth.*16.26. 1 *Tim.*6.14.

The ends of Christs coming are,

1. In general, to judge the world, *Matth.*25.31. 2 Thess. 1.10.
2. To convince the world of his love to the Saints, and to confound the wicked.

The Day of Judgement will be terrible to the wicked; it is called, The terrour of the Lord, 2 Cor.5.11. and by the ancient Fathers, Tremendum judicium Dei. See Psalm 1.5.

1. In respect of the manner of the Judges coming, with many thousands of Angels, *Mat.*16.27. & 25.31. Jude v. 14.
2. In respect of the Judge himself who hath infinite anger.
3. Both in the intention, extention and protention of the punishment.
   1. In the intention of it, it is without any stop or measure.
   2. The extention of it, to all the soul and body.
   3. In the protention of it, to all eternity.

Christ the Judge is,

1. Of infinite Power, no man can deliver himself by his strength, Esay 2. 10, 11,12. Rev 6.last end.
2. Of that integrity that he cannot be corrupted.
3. He cannot be deceived with fair pretences and pleas, John 2.25. *Heb.*4.12.
4. He is the supream Judge, there is no appeal from him.
5. His sentence will be irreversible, and he inexorable then.

It is terrible for wicked men to be judged by Christ, by whom they would not be saved, justified, ruled, governed, by him whom they have derided, whom they have blasphemed, crucified. The very sight of this Judge will be a hell to them. Jerome.

There are four times wherein God will be exceeding terrible to evil men:

1. When conscience judgeth inwardly.
2. In a day of outward publick judgments and calamities.
3. In the day of death.

4. In the day of Judgement. It is called the day of the perdition of the ungodly. They deſpiſed Chriſt and his Word, Revel. 6. 20. abuſed the Saints, Luke 24.49. their power to violence and oppreſſion.

The ſuddenneſſe alſo of it ſtrikes the greater fear and terrour into ungodly men, it is reſembled to three things, the firſt deluge, a thief, and a ſnare laid by the Fowler; all which come unexpectedly, and when there is greateſt indiſpoſition and ſecurity.

2 Pet. 3.10. Luke 21. 35. It is comfortable to the godly; the Scripture ſeldome ſpeaks of the Day of Judgement, but it cals on them to rejoyce, Lift up your heads, Luke 21. 28. It is a phraſe implying the comfort, hope and boldneſſe that the people of God have, or ought to have: Comfort your ſelves with theſe words. It is compared to a day of refreſhing, to the meeting of the Bridegroom; all which imply, that that time is matter of joy and conſolation to the godly; it is their marriage and coronation day.

Chriſt is their Judge, who in his own Perſon hath ſatisfied juſtice for them, who hath been their Advocate, who hath been judged and condemned for them. See 2 Tim. 4.8. Titus 2.14. Revel. 22.20. Col. 3.4. The Saints ſhall then be crowned with three Crowns, a Crown of Life, of Glory, of Righteouſneſſe. Their enemies ſhall for ever be removed from them, they ſhall ſit with Chriſt, and judge thoſe who have perſecuted them; their innocency ſhall be vindicated and rewarded.

All the reaſonable creatures ſhall then be judged, Angels and men, Do not ye know that we ſhall judge the Angels? We muſt all appear before the judgment ſeat of Chriſt. See Rev. 20.12.

Mat. 12.36. Eccleſ. 12.14. 1 Cor. 4.5. The things for which they are to be judged; all actions any way liable to a Law, all moral actions, for whatever they have done in the fleſh, whether it was good or evil, every ſecret thing, 2 Cor. 5.10.

Cunctaque cunctorum cunctis arcana patebunt

Chriſt will judge men according to their works, 1 Peter 1. 17. in their latitude: Good works are the rule, evil works the cauſe of his judgement. Evil works are from our ſelves, and meerly evil. Good works are,

1. From God, Phil. 2.12.
2. Have a mixture of much evil in them.
3. Are done upon a command, and ſo are a duty; evil works are againſt the Law.

God will regard the good works of the godly, though

1. Secret, Matth. 6.4,6,18.
2. Small, Matth. 10.42.
3. Miſunderſtood here, Pſalm 37.6.
4. For which they have ſuffered here, Eccleſ. 4.4.

He will alſo reward the evil works of the wicked, Rom. 2. 5. according to their degree, as much as they deſerve, Matth. 5.26. The words of men ſhall then be judged, Matth. 12. 36,37. The thoughts and purpoſes of men, their aims and deſigns, 1 Cor. 4.5. The ſtates of men, whether godly or ungodly, Mat. 25.32.

Cum ergo locus determinatus & tempus definitum ſapientia divinæ theſauris abſconditum lateat, temeraria eſſet de iis inquiſitio. Synopſ. Purior. Theol. Diſputat. 51.

No man knows the preciſe time of the day of judgment, Mat. 24.36. Mark 10 32. yet God hath appointed the ſet time, Acts 17.30.

1 Theſſ. 4.7. [d] Supplem. 3. part. Queſt. 88. Art. 4. Concerning the place, the Air, ſay moſt; the Rabbins generally ſay in the valley of Jehoſhaphat. So Aquinas [d] ſeems to hold, though there be little ground for it, Joel 2.12. is urged, and becauſe Chriſt aſcended from Mount Olivet, Act. 1. Chriſts great Throne ſhall be fixed in the Clouds, and the judgement ſhall be in the air.

Some ſpeak of fifteen ſigns before the Day of Judgment.

Others ſay, theſe great things are to be accompliſhed before the Day of Judgement.

1. The Goſpel is to be preacht more generally to all the world, not onely as the world world is taken in oppoſition to the Jewiſh Nation, but as it ſignifies the ſeveral Nations, the utmoſt parts of the earth muſt be given to Chriſt.

2. A National Converſion of the Jews, Rom. 11.25,26. 2 Cor. 3. 15,16. See Wendelines Contemplat. Phyſic. Sect. 11. ch. 19.

Cunradus Dietericus in his Analyſis Evangeliorum Dominicalium, p. 24, 25,26. reckons up ſeven ſigns which go before the deſtruction of the world.

Some [d] ſay the Jews ſhall be called by viſion and voice from Heaven, as Paul was, and that thoſe places, Zech. 12.10. Mat. 23.39. ſeem to imply it, though I concur not with them. See Daniel 7.13,14. and Philip de Mornay his Advertiſſement aux Juiffs ſur La Venue Du meſie, and Hornbecks Prolegomena to his Book contra Judæos.

Vide Mercer. in Amos 9.9. & 14 & ad Obad. 20. Capel. Spicileg. Matth. 17.3,4. ad Joan. 3.4. & Druſ. ad difficiliora loca, Gen. c. 18.

3. The falling of Antichriſt, the ten Kings that gave their power to him ſhall withdraw it from him, Revel. 17. 11. & 14. 16. & 18. 20. See Rom. 9. 13. & 16. 12.

4. More pure and glorious times in the Church, Eſay 30.26. Rev. 11.15. when the Jews and Gentiles ſhall be one flock, and more outward peace, Eſay 11.6. & 32. 18. & 33. 20,28. Ezekiel 12.14.

Some diſtinguiſh of two ſorts of ſigns before Chriſts coming.

1. Some are more remote and tranſient, the man of ſin to be revealed, that is paſt, falſe prophets ſhall ariſe, and ſay, I am Chriſt; wars and rumours of wars, Matth. 24.5,6.7,24. Great diviſions in matters of Religion; Men ſhall ſay, Lo here is Chriſt, and lo there is Chriſt, Mat. 24.12.

[c] Mr Medes Anſwer to Dr Twiſſe firſt letter. See his Anſwer alſo to the ſecond, and Mr Strongs Select Sermons on Rom. 11.26.

2. Some more immediate and near at hand, the general reſurrection, the conflagration of the whole frame of nature.

Wendeline in his Phyſical Contemplations, Chap. 16. ſpeaks of the time of the deſtruction of the world, Chap. 17, 18, 19. of the ſeveral ſigns going before the deſtruction of the world, paſt, preſent, future, Chap. 20. of the ſignes accompanying the deſtruction of the world, Chap. 21. of the manner of its deſtruction.

Some ſay, God hath promiſed to accompliſh ſix things in the latter end of the world.

1. He is pouring out his vials upon the Sun, Rev. 16. 1.

2. Is breaking the horn that puſht Jeruſalem, Zech. 1.21.

3. Is taking away the Images of jealouſie, Ezekiel 8. that is, ſome abuſe in the publick worſhip of God.

4. He will build Ezekiels Temple, a glorious Temple, in the latter end of Ezekiel, never yet ſeen in the world; it is ſpiritually to be underſtood, it ſhall be ſaid, The Tabernacle of the Lord is with men.

5. God is reforming of Government all the world over. Ezek 46.18. The Princes ſhall oppreſſe the people no more.

6. The Lord is making way for that glorious promiſe, Daniel 7. 18.

The ſolemn preparation to this judgment ſtands in

1. The ſolemn coming of the Judge to the Aſſizes; immediately before his coming ſhall be the ſigne of the Sonne of man, which what it is, is uncertain; whether ſome mighty brightneſſe to irradiate all the world, or what elſe, is a great Controverſie.

2. Chriſt ſhall come cloathed with all the Glory and Majeſty of Jehovah, Matth. 16.27. beſides the glory of his Perſon, he ſhall come accompanied with a moſt glorious train of millions of Angels, which ſhall come viſibly, and all the Saints departed: All the reſt alive ſhall likewiſe be caught up to come along with him; then he ſhall pitch his Throne in the Clouds. Daniel ſaith a fiery ſtream iſſued from it, Dan. 7 10. See Rev. 20.11.

The onely Judge at the great Day is Jeſus Chriſt, the ſecond Perſon in the ſacred Trinity, made Man, the Head and Spouſe of the Church. Daniel ſaith, The Sonne of man, the ancient of dayes. Chriſt ſaith often, He ſhall come to judge

Solus meritò conſtitutus eſt Judex vivorum & mortuorum, qui finxit ſigillatim corda univerſorum, & intelligit omnia opera eorum. Solum attendo Judicem, quem & ſolum juſtificatorem agnoſco. Bern. Epiſt. 42. Compare Phil. 2.9,10,11, with Rom. 14.10,11.

the

the quick and dead, Matth.25.31. Acts 17.31. & 10.42. It is called, The judgements ſeat of Chriſt, Rom,14.10. 2 Cor. 5.10.

It is part of his Kingly Office as he is the Fathers Prorex and rules for him: He that hath performed all the acts of Miniſtry, will not be wanting in that of Majeſty.

2. It is an Honour fit for none elſe, to be Judge of the whole world; as he is the King and Law-giver, ſo judgment belongs to him.

3. The Lord hath great ends in it:

1. That he may Honour the Son, John 5.23. He was abaſed and judged in the world; God will juſtifie him before all his enemies.

2. That Gods juſtice thereby may be made glorious, John 5.27. and the judicial proceſſe might appear in its viſible form, *Rev.*1.7.

3. That ſo deſtruction may be more terrible to the wicked, who have abuſed Chriſts patience, and deſpiſed his mercies, Luke 19.27.

4. For the greater comfort and honour of the Saints; their Husband is their Judge: Chriſt upon this ground preſſeth men to the greateſt ſervices, *Mat.*19.28. & 24.22. & 25.31. 2 *Cor.*5.11.

It is ſaid the Father judgeth, 1 Peter 1. 17. The outward acts of God upon the creature are common to all the three Perſons in the Trinity, yet with a ſpecialty to each of them.

2. The Father judgeth by appointing the Sonne to judge according to the oeconomy or diſpenſation among them, Acts 17. 3.

There are four things to be conſidered in judgment:

There are three properties eſpecially required to the Office of a Judge,
1. Knowledge to diſcern.
2. Power to determine.
3. Juſtice to execute; all which are in Chriſt.

1. Judiciary power.

2. The internal approbation of good, and deteſtation of evil.

3. The retribution of reward, all theſe agree to all and every Perſon in the Trinity.

4. External ſitting upon the Tribunal, and publiſhing of Sentence; and in this reſpect, The Father judgeth no man, but committeth all judgement to the Sonne, John 5.22.

Chriſt ſhall judge the world as God-man,

1. As God, elſe he could not know the Decrees of God, Revel. 20. 12. nor the ſecrets of men, Rom. 2.16.

2. He judgeth as man too, John 5.27.

God, Chriſt and the Saints, are ſaid to judge the world. God judgeth in reſpect of the authority of juriſdiction, Chriſt in reſpect of the promulgation of ſentence, Saints in reſpect of approbation. The authority is Gods, the execution Chriſts, the approbation the Saints.

1 Cor.6.2. Aquinas.

One may judge comparatively, ſee Mat. 12.41. after this manner even the wicked ſhall be able to judge, viz. others worſe than themſelves, *ver.*27. 2. Interpretativè, or by approbation. 3. Aſſeſſoriè, ſee *Mat.*19.28. 4. Authoritatively, ſo Chriſt alone ſhall judge.

The manner how this great judgment ſhall be carried on.

1. The Saints are to be judged, as they ſhall ariſe firſt, ſo they ſhall be firſt judged; the good and bad ſhall be all gathered and brought into one place, but yet ſeparated before the judgment begin; the godly ſhall be ſet all together, and the wicked all together.

The judgment of the godly, ſhall be an acknowledgment and rewarding of all the good that ever God wrought by them, every prayer, endeavour, ſhall be diſcovered, acknowledged, juſtified, rewarded, *Mat.*25.34,35,36,37. then being acquitted, they ſhall ſit down with Chriſt, and as aſſeſſours own and approve of his righteous judgment.

All the ſinnes which the wicked are guilty of; all the ſinnes that ever they committed with their aggravations, ſhall be brought to light, Eccleſ. 11.9. *Jude ver.*15. God will have all witneſſes heard againſt any wicked man, and they ſhall receive a juſt puniſhment according to the ſeveral degrees of their ſins, Matth. 25. 41, 42, 43.

The Conſequents of this Judgment:

1. Sendi

1. Sending of the perſons judged to their everlaſting eſtate, Matth. 25. 41, 44, 46.

2. Giving up the Kingdom to the Father, 1 Cor. 15, from 24, to 28. that is, the Church, Heb. 2. 13.

3. The burning of the world, 2 Peter 3. the fire there is taken literally, becauſe oppoſed to water uſed in the deſtroying of the old world, by which here the world is not deſtroyed, but purged and perfected, Rom. 8. 21.

There are two Books wherein all is recorded:

1. Every mans conſcience, it records all the actions that ever they did.

2. Gods Omniſcience, Theſe things thou haſt done.

It is a great Queſtion, Whether the ſins of Gods people ſhall be manifeſted at the Day of Judgment?

The Leyden Divines in Synopſ. Pur. Theol. ſeem to incline to the affirmative, and ſo do others of our Divines; they ſay, it ſhall be as a Bond cancelled. Others rather approve of the negative opinion.

Some think that all their ſecret ſins ſhall then be opened and brought to light, yet without the leaſt reproach, becauſe the Scripture ſpeaks of all giving an account, and for every ſecret thing, Eccl. 12. 14. 2 Cor. 5. 10.

Things ſhall not be ſuddenly hudled up, as carnal thoughts imagine, viz. at this day firſt Chriſt ſhall raiſe the dead, and then the ſeparation ſhall be made, and then the ſentence paſt, and then ſuddenly the judgment day is done. No, no, it muſt take up ſome large quantity of time, that all in the world may ſee the ſecret ſins of wicked men, the Kingly Office of Chriſt in judging the world may probably laſt longer than his private adminiſtration now in governing the world. Mr Sheph. Sinc. Convert, chap. 3.

See Mr Burgeſſe of Juſtification, Lect. 29. pag. 264. Nam per quot dies hoc judicium extendatur, incertum eſt: ſed Scripturarum more ſanctarum diem poni ſolere pro tempore; nemo qui illas literas quamlibet negligenter legerit, neſcit. Aug. de civit. Dei. l. 20. c. 1.

When the judgement is paſt, the godly ſhall go with Chriſt to Heaven, and the wicked be thruſt from him to Hell, never till then ſhall that Text, Phil. 2. 9, 10. be fulfill'd.

Corollaries from the laſt judgment:

We ſhould not only habitually yeeld to the truth of this opinion (that there is ſuch a dreadfull day of Judgment) but believe it ſo as to carry the thought of it in our minds, and walk as thoſe that do believe and expect a judgment to come, Job 19. 25. 2 Peter 3. 12, 13, 14. 1 Theſſ. 5. 2, 6.

We ſhould walk with a continual awe of it in our ſouls, Job 31. 13, 14. Luke 21. 24. Quoties diem illum conſidero, toto corpore contremiſco, ſive enim comedo, ſive bibo, ſive aliquid aliud facio, ſemper videtur illa tuba terribilis ſonare auribus meis, ſurgite mor tui, venite ad judicium. Hieron.

Tertullian (one of the ancienteſt of the Fathers) obſerved of all thoſe that profeſt Chriſtianity in his time, none lived looſly, but thoſe who either firmly believed not the Day of Judgement, or put the thought of it out of their mindes.

The conſcientious meditation of the Day of Judgement will wonderfully provoke us to repentance and amendment of life, Acts 17. 30, 31. See Matth. 12. 30.

Jerome tels a ſtory of a very good man, who being askt out of what Book he had got all his goodneſſe; anſwered, one Book of three leaves, The 1. Red leaves, of the paſſion of Chriſt; the ſecond White leaves, of the joyes of Heaven; the third Black leaves, of Death and Judgment.

Reſpexerunt huc pij veteres, dum librum quotidianarum noſtrarum meditationum tribus membranis, rubra, alba & nigra conſtare debere dixerunt. Ex rubra Dominicam paſſionem; ex alba, beatorum glorificationem; ex nigra impiorum nobis damnationem addiſcendam. Dieterici Anal. Evang. Domin. p. 495.

Bromiard tels us of a Lord in his time that had a fool in his houſe, to whom this Lord gave a ſtaff, and charged him to keep it till he ſhould meet with one that were more fool than himſelf; and if he met with ſuch a one, to deliver it to him. Not many years after this Lord fell ſick, and indeed was ſick unto death: His fool came

came to see him, and was told by his sick Lord, that he must now shortly leave him. And whither wilt thou go, said the fool? Into another world, said his Lord: And when wilt thou come again, within a moneth? No: Within a year? No: When then? Never, never: And what provision hast thou made for thy entertainment there whither thou goest? None at all: No, said the fool, none at all? Here take my staff; Art thou going away for ever, and hast taken no order nor care how thou shalt speed in that other world whence thou shalt never return? Take my staff, for I am not guilty of any such folly as this. B. Hall in his Remaining works on 1 Peter 1.17.

It is reported of a certain King of Hungary, who had a brother that was a gallant: the King being carefull about his soul, and sad when he thought of the Day of Judgment, his brother told him, These were but melancholy thoughts, and bad him be merry. The manner of that Countrey was, when the King sent his Trumpeter to sound at anothers door, he was presently to be led to execution; that night the King caused his Trumpeter to sound at his brothers door, wherat he was exceedingly astonished, and presently went to the King, and casting himself at his feet, askt him, What offence he had committed, that he should deal so with him, and humbly beseecht him to spare him. The King told him, he had committed no offence against him, but alwayes carried himself as a kind brother, but if he were so afraid of his Trumpet, why should not he much more fear when he thought of the Day of Gods Judgment?

If thou beest godly, the thought of the day of judgement will sweeten all reproaches and false censures here, 1 Cor. 4.3,4,5. 2 Thes. 1.6,7,8. and make thee more holy as well as more comfortable. A wicked Pope in the midst of all his jollity heard a voice in his Palace of Naples, saying, Veni miser in judicium Dei, and the next day he was found dead. Vide Camer. Medit. Hist. Cent. 3. c. 38.

Secondly, We should judge our selves, our estates and wayes, 1 Cor 11. 31.

Thirdly, Strive to get an interest in the Judge, and to evidence the same to our selves. Seek reconciliation with God by Christ, get into Christ, and abide in him, John 2.28. Rom. 8.1.

Fourthly, Lay up prayers for it, that we may find mercy by Christs means at that Day, 2 Tim. 1.18. We should not rashly and severely judge others, Matth. 7.1. Rom. 14.4,10. This is to usurp Gods Throne.

Fifthly, We should be industrious by imploying the talent the Lord hath given us. Matth. 25. Be holy, 2 Peter 3.12. Loving to the Saints, Rom. 8.19. He that had but one talent, and improved it not was cast into Hell. See 1 Cor. 15. ult. Be sober and watch, 1 Thess. 5.6. 1 Petr 4.7.

Sixthly, We should look for, wait and long for that Day, Rom. 8.23. Phil. 3.20. Rev. 22. 20. 2 Timothy 4. 8. Titus 2. 13. Thy Kingdome come. All Christian priviledges shall then be perfected; Regeneration, Matth. 19. 27. Adoption, 1 John 3.2. Justification, Acts 3. 19. Redemption, Luke 21. 28. Salvation. We should exercise Faith, Hope and Joy about this great Article of our Faith. As there was a promise of Christs first coming, so is there of his second, John 14. 3. 2 Peter 3. 4. It is part of the Gospel: Christ was called, The desire of all Nations, the Christians in the New Testament most passionately desired him, 2 Thess. 3. 5. Heb. 10. 36, 37.

CHAP. III.

Of Hell or Damnation.

THere is a Hell or ſtate of miſery to come after this life.

This is proved,

1. By Scripture: Our Saviour teacheth it in the Parable of Dives and Lazarus, and in that of the laſt judgement, Matth. 13. 30. and often in Revelations.

2. By the Conſcience: wicked men find in themſelves an apprehenſion of immortality, and a fear of ſome puniſhment after death.

3. The Heathens, though they have corrupted this truth with innumerable follies, yet held that there was a Hell, a being and place of miſery to wicked men after this preſent life.

4. Clear Reaſon proveth it; ſince God is juſt, therefore many abominable ſinners enjoying more proſperity in this life, than thoſe which live farre more innocently, muſt be puniſhed hereafter according to the multitude and hainouſneſſe of their ſins, Pſalm 73. 17.

Varie Infernus nuncupatur à Scriptoribus tam ſacris quàm prophanis. Latinis dicitur Infernus, quòd infero vel infimo loco ſit: Aliàs Orcus ab urgendo, quòd homines ſolicitet & urgeat. Apud Græcos dicitur ἅιδης, quaſi ἀϊδὴς, triſtis, obſcurus. Ibi enim ſumma anxietas, & tenebræ pluſquam Cimmeriæ. Aliàs τάρταρος appellatur à ταράττειν, quod perturbare vel terrere ſignificat: Ibi ſiquidem ſumma confuſio & perturbatio exiſtit. Cunradi Aſſlaci Bergenſis Oratio de Inferno. Infernus infimus eſt, & profundiſſimus locus totius mundi, id eſt centrum, atque ideo multis in locis Scriptura opponit Inferno Cœlum, velut locum altiſſimum loco infimo. Bellarm. Explicat. Doct. Chriſt. p. 29. Vide Crocii Syntag. Theol. l. 11. c. 15.

Secondly, The Nature of the miſery there ſuffered in regard of the matter or parts, properties and circumſtances. There are the eſſential puniſhments, and the Accidental, the loathſome place and ill company.

The parts are two, privative and poſitive; Loſſe and pain:

In ſinne there is an averſion from the Creator, and a converſion to the creature. To the averſion, the pœna damni anſwers; to the converſion pœna ſenſus. Mark 9. 48. God thus puniſheth the conſcience in Hell.

Firſt, Privative, Matth. 25. 41. Pœna damni, the abſence of all manner of comfort; here they drink the pure and unmixed cup of vengeance; it is a darkneſſe without any light, called outer darkneſſe, not a drop of cold water there to cool Dives his tongue. Divines unanimouſly concur, that this is the worſer part of Hell, to be for ever totally ſeparated from all gracious communion with God, 2 Theſſ. 1. But Dr Jackſon ſaith, theſe two are not altogether oppoſite, but coincident. The very conceit or remembrance of this infinite loſſe, and of their folly in procuring it, cannot but breed an unſufferable meaſure of grief and ſorrow unto the damned, which will be fully equivalent to all their bodily pain. Their being is upheld by Gods power, his wrath and vindictive juſtice are preſent with them, but they have no comfortable communion with him. Whence follows,

1. An everlaſting hardening in ſin, becauſe they are ſeparated from him which ſhould ſoften them.

2. Everlaſting deſpair, they ſhall have an apprehenſion of their loſſe, which ſhall be more than the ſenſe of pain.

1. Becauſe that faculty is the ſtrength of a man; a man will bear his infirmities, but a wounded ſpirit who can bear? 2. Becauſe it is the tendereſt part in a man. 3. It is the moſt active in ſinning, ſhall purge their conſciences from dead works, Heb. 4. Becauſe it hath the greateſt office and honour put upon it here. Optimum eſt tunc ſentiri vermem cum poſſit etiam ſuffocari. Itaq; mordent nunc ut moriatur, & paulatim deſinat mordere. Bern.

The damned ſhall in ſome ſort be ſenſible what a great and infinite good God was, of which they are deprived, they ſhall know that God was that that one good, Matth. 19. 17. that he was the true and proper good of the reaſonable creature, that all the good they hunted after in ſo many things, was to be found in him alone, that the Saints are happy in the enjoyment of God, Luke 13. 28, 29. that the torments of Hell are inflicted on them for their ſins, 2 Theſſ. 1. 9.

There are three things in the loſſe,

1. Memoria præteritorum, the remembrance of what is paſt, and the opportunities we had, the folly of our choice, former enjoyments, Luke 16. 25.

2. Senſus præſentium, a ſenſe of preſent pain.

3. Metus futurorum, their condition is hopeleſſe, Heb. 10. 27.

Heb. 10. 33. The Lord ſhall ſtir up all his wrath.

Secondly, Poſitive, Pœna ſenſus, the preſence of all manner of torments, which may be referred to two heads, the ſenſe of Gods anger, and the miſerable effects thereof, Eſay 30. 33. For theſe things ſake the wrath of God comes upon the children of diſobedience. Tribulation and wrath, indignation and anguiſh ſhall be upon the ſoul of man that doth evil. Three drops of brimſtone if it light upon any part of the fleſh, will make one ſo full of torment, that he cannot forbear roaring out for pain; How extreamly troubleſome will it be then, when the whole man is drowned in a lake or river of brimſtone? The wrath of God is inſupportable, and is therefore compared to fire, which is more hard to bear than any rack.

2. The effects of this anger on the ſoul and body of the ſinner, the ſoul is affected with the horrour of its own conſcience which takes Gods part againſt the ſinner, and in a moſt ragefull manner accuſeth him.

The worm of conſcience in Hell is the furious reflection of the ſoul upon it ſelf for its former offers, miſ-ſpent time, by-paſt joyes, and now miſerable, hopeleſſe condition. This (ſaith Dr Jackſon) ſhall be more grievous to impenitent Chriſtians.

They ſhall call to mind Gods condeſcenſion, the offers of ſalvation often rejected, and for what a ſmall matter they have loſt happineſſe. See Mr Wells his Proſpect of Eternity, ch. 19.

Zanchy would have the fire wherewith the wicked ſhall be tormented in Hell, to be underſtood not of the apprehenſion alone of Gods wrath againſt ſinne, but alſo of material fire, wherewith their bodies ſhall be tormented, and yet not conſumed. He addes, Si verò poterunt cruciari corpora, quidni & anima, propter conjunctionem cum corporibus ſympathiamque mutuam cruciari ab eodem poterunt igne? Zanch. de Oper. Dei part. 2. l. 2. c. 5. Theſ. 2.

Dr Gouge on Heb. 10. 27. Sect. 98. ſaith, It is no waſting or conſuming fire, but a torturing: and ſo farre corporeal as it tormenteth the body: and ſo farre incorporeal as it tormenteth the ſoul. See Matth. 25. 41.

Dr Jackſon ſaith, he will not meddle with this Queſtion, being impoſſible to be determined without ſight or experience, which God grant (ſaith he) we never have. Let them tell us (ſaith he) how it is poſſible that the ſoul of man which is an immortal ſubſtance, ſhould be truly wedded to the body or material ſubſtance; and I ſhall as eaſily anſwer them, that it is as poſſible for the ſame ſoul to be as eaſily wrought upon by a material fire

From the ſenſe of Gods anger, and this rage of conſcience, follow extremity of grief, fear and deſpair, than which the ſoul cannot meet with greater tormenters. The ſpirits grieve with the anguiſh of what they do feel, and fear and tremble at the apprehenſion of what they ſhall feel, and are in utter deſpair of eſcaping or well bearing, they cannot be hard-hearted there if they would. But when the ſoul and body ſhall be joyned, then ſhall the body bear a part in the torment, which flows from the ſenſe of Gods anger, and ſhall feel as much pain as any rack or fire could put it to, and both ſoul and body covered up with horrible ſhame and confuſion, in that it ſhall be made manifeſt to all creatures, how wicked they have been, and for what ſins the Lord doth ſo avenge himſelf upon them.

Secondly, The Properties of this miſery are chiefly two, Extremity and Eternity.

Prima mors animam dolentem pellit de corpore, ſecunda mors animam nolentem tenet in corpore. Auguſt. de civit. Dei, lib. 21. cap. 32. Matth. 25. 41. & ult. 2 Theſſ. 1. 10. Prov. 11. 7.

1. Extremity. The torments are great, as falling upon the whole ſoul and body without without any mitigation or comfort; the length of time makes not theſe pains ſeem leſſe, but ſtill they continue as extream as at the firſt to the ſenſe of the feeler, becauſe they do ſo far exceed his ſtrength, and the power of Gods anger doth ſo continually renew it ſelf againſt them.

Hell is called a bottomleſſe pit, Luk. 8. 31. Revel. 20. 3. The great gulf ſhews the eternity of that condition, they ſhall not come out till they have paid the utmoſt farthing. Ubi mors ſemper vivit, finis ſemper inſipit, ſpe ſublata ſola manet aterna deſperatio. Drexel.

2. Eternity, Mark 3. 29. & 9. 44. Jude v. 7. Revel. 20. 10. This miſery continues for ever in all extremity, the things that are not ſeen are eternal, theſe ſhall go into everlaſting puniſhment, their fire never goeth out, their worme never dieth; this is the hell of hell, endleſſe miſery muſt needs be hopeleſſe, and ſo comfortleſſe: it is juſt that he ſhould ſuffer for ever, who would have ſinned for ever, if he had not been cut off by puniſhment. See Jer. 15. 1. they wilfully refuſed happineſſe; if Heathens, they have wilfully tranſgreſt the light of nature; if Chriſtians, they have careleſly neglected the offers of grace, Jer. 3. 5. their deſires are infinite.

There is no Chriſtian, which doth not believe the fire of hell to be everlaſting. Dr Jackſon on the Creed, l. 11. c. 23.

Many do contend that the proper place of Hell is within the earth, which we neither affirme nor deny, but reprove their preſumption which without warrant will peremptorily maintain the ſame. Mr Pagets Meditat. of Death, part 1. chap. 8.

Some ſay, Hell is on high before the Throne of the Lamb, and within the view of the glorified Saints, Revel. 14. 10. Iſa. 66. 24. Biſhop Bilſon, Bellarmine, Aquinas, with Mr Wheatley and others, ſay it is below. Mr Philips in his Sermon on Pſal. 9. 17. gives his reaſons to prove that it is under the earth.

Nos ſi quis roget de loco beatorum & damnatorum poſt judicii diem, utrunque mundi ambitu continori reſpondebimus: illis enim Cœlum, quod ſumma mundi pars; iſtis terra viſcera, quæ ima mundi pars, deſtinari haud obſcurè Scriptura inſinuat. Wendel. Contemplat. Phyſ. Sect. 11. c. 21.

Socinians ſay, there will come a time when Angels and the wickedeſt men ſhall be freed. Auguſtine ſpeaks of ſome ſuch mercifull men in his time. Gods intention from everlaſting was to glorifie his juſtice as well as his mercy, Rom. 9. 22, 23. The Covenant under which unregenerate men ſtand, and by which they are bound over to this wrath is everlaſting. All a mans ſufferings are but againſt the good of the creature; every ſinne is againſt the glory of the Creatour. They will never repent of what they have done, Voluntas morientis confirmatur in eo ſtatu in quo moritur.

There are four reaſons why God puniſheth wicked men with eternal torments, though their ſins are committed but a ſhort time:

1. Quia peccaverunt contra bonum æternum, they have deſpiſed eternal life and happineſſe, Acts 13. 46.

2. Quia peccaverunt in ſuo æterno, they would ſinne alwayes, if they ſhould live alwayes.

3. Becauſe God againſt whom they have ſinn'd is an infinite and eternal Good, a finite creature cannot bear an infinite puniſhment intenſively, therefore he muſt extenſively.

4. Becauſe the guilt of their ſins ſtill remains, not one ſin is ſatisfied for all this while.

Thirdly, The circumſtances of theſe torments, are a miſerable place, and miſerable company, Matth. 25. 41. a pit, a dungeon, a lake, a pit of darkneſſe, and no light, which is below, as farre removed from God and good men as can be; the Scripture ſpeaks of Hell as a low place, 2 Pet. 2. 4. moſt remote from Heaven. Ubi eſt tacita antitheſis inter tartarum locum mundi infimum, tanquam locum cruciandorum, & cœlum tanquam locum beandorum. Piſcat. Exeg. Aphoriſ. 13. De Angelis. Vide Ruſcam De Infernol. 1. c. 47, 48, 49, 50, 51.

2. Not one perſon there free from the like torment, all wail, and weep, and gnaſh their teeth, they curſe and accuſe one another, as Divines generally ſpeak, this company adds to their miſery.

Of Purgatory, Limbus Infantum & Patrum.

Constituunt enim Scholastici communi consensu intra terram quatuor sinus sive unum in quatuor partes divisum, unum pro damnatis, alterum pro purgatorio, tertium pro infantibus sine baptismo obeuntibus, quartum pro justis, qui moriebantur ante Christi passionem, qui nunc vacuum remanet: quorum sufficientia sumitur penes genera panarum, sunt enim hæc omnia loca pœnalia, omnis autem pœna, aut est tantùm damni, aut etiam sensus; & rursus aut æterna, aut temporalis: pro pœna ergo solius damni æterna, est limbus puerorum; pro pœna solius damni temporali, erat limbus Patrum; pro pœna damni & sensus æterna, est infernus; pro pœna damni & sensus temporali, est Purgatorium. Bellarm. Tom. 2. controv. 3. l. 2. c. 6. de loco Purgatorij. In centro collocant infernum damnatorum: circa hunc Purgatorium, tum limbum puerorum: ad extremum limbum Patrum. Gamier. Tom. 2. l. 5. c. 8. Proxima pars gehennæ est Purgatorium, Purgatorio proximus limbus puerorum, puerorum limbo proximus Patrum limbus. Rainold de lib. Apoc. sect. 1. prælect 79.

The Papists divide Hell into four regions:

1. The Hell of the damned, the place of eternal torment.

2. Purgatory, where (they say) the souls of such are as were not sufficiently purged from their sinnes, while they were upon earth; and therefore for the thorow purging of them are there in torment, equal for the time to that of the damned.

3. Limbus Infantium, where they place such Infants as die without Baptisme, whom they make to suffer the losse of Heaven and heavenly happinesse, and no pain or torment.

4. Limbus Patrum, where in like manner the Fathers before Christ (as they hold) were, suffering no pain, but onely wanting the joyes of Heaven. Because I have not yet spoke of these, I shall handle them here, being willing to discusse most of the main controversies betwixt us and the Papists.

Of Purgatory.

This receptacle is so called à munere purgandi, saith Rusca De Inferno, lib. 1. cap. 1.

Tom. 2. controv. l. 1. de purgat. cap. 1.

Bellarmine saith, there are three things to which the purging of sins is attributed, and which may therefore be called Purgatories.

1. Christ himself, Heb. 1. 3.

2. The tribulations of this life, Mal. 3. 3. John 15. 2.

Purgatorij nomine Pontificij intelligunt tum purgationis medium, videlicet ignem illum, quo animas piorum à corporibus separatas ustulari arbitrantur, tum 3. A certain place, in which as in a prison souls are purged after this life, which were not fully purged in this life, that so they being cleansed may be able to enter Heaven, into which no unclean thing shall enter; about this (saith he) is all the controversie.

Therefore whereas we distinguish the Church into militant here on earth, and triumphant in Heaven, he adds, and labouring in Purgatory.

locum purgationis, quem inferno vicinum ac contiguum statuunt, Nos utrumq; negamus. Gerh. confess. Cathol. l. 2. Spec. parte 2da. Art. 9. Vide plura ibid.

Abbot against Bishop.

We believe no other purgation for sin, but only by the bloud of Jesus Christ, 1 Joh. 1. 7. through the sanctification of the holy Ghost, Tit. 3. 5.

The Papists charged Luther that he spake of Purgatory, such a Purgatory there is, said he, meaning temptation, Hoc Purgatorium non est fictum.

Clamandum ergo non modò vocis, sed gutturis ac laterum contentione, Purgatorium exitiale Satanæ esse commentum, quod Christi crucem evacuat, quod contumeliam Dei misericordiæ non formidans irrogat, quod fidem nostram labefacit & everti. Calv. Instit. l. 3. c. 5. sect. 6. 16. Duo sunt habitacula, unum in igne æterno, alterum in regno æterno. Aug. in lib. sup. de verbis Apost. 18. Serm. Nec est illi ullus medius locus ut possit esse nisi cum diabolo qui non est cum Christo l. 1. de peccat. meritis & remissione cont. Pelag. c. 28.

If there be a Purgatory, it should be as well for the body as the soul, because it hath been partaker of those pleasures and delights for which the souls pay dear in Purgatory-fire, but they deny any Purgatory for the body. Epiphanius saith, Thus shall the judgement of God be just, while both participate either punishment for sin, or reward for virtue.

Origen excepted, all the expressions of the Fathers this way, appear clearly to have been understood, not of a Purgatory, but only of a probatory fire; whether they meant

that of affliction, or of the Day of Judgement. My L. Digby in his anſwer to Sir Ken. Digby.

We ſay with Auguſtine (contra Pelag. Hypog. lib. 5.) We believe according to the authority of God, that the Kingdome of Heaven is in the firſt place appointed for Gods elect, and that Hell is the ſecond place where all the reprobates ſhall ſuffer eternal puniſhment, Tertium locum penitus ignoramus, imò nec eſſe in Scripturis ſanctis invenimus. The third place we are utterly ignorant of, and that it is not we finde in the holy Scriptures, Revel. 20. 15. ſo that there remains no third or middle place. See alſo Matth. 3. 12. & 13. 45, 50. & 25. 32.

It is not yet agreed among the Papiſts, either for the fire or the place, or the time of it, onely thus farre they ſeem at length to concurre, that ſouls do therein ſatisfie both for venial ſins, and for the guilt of puniſhment due unto mortal ſinnes, when the guilt of the ſinne it ſelf is forgiven. Dr Chaloner on Matth. 13. 27. See Dr Prid. Serm. 2. on Matth. 5. 25. pag. 58. to the end. Mr Cartwrights Rejoynd. pag. 340, &c.

Ezekiel 18. 22. Micah 7. 18. 1 John 1. 2. Rom. 8. 1. If our ſinnes ſhall not be ſo much as mentioned, ſurely they ſhall not be ſentenced to be puniſhed with fire, Jer. 50. 20. From which Text we thus argue, All their ſinnes * whom God pardoneth ſhall be found no more, then to be purged no more, eſpecially after this life.

* Dr Featleys Striſtura in Lindomaſtig. chap. of Indulg. Bellarm l. 2. de Purg. c. 14. ait poenas in purgatorio eſſe atrociſſimas, & cum illis nullas poenas hujus vitæ comparandas eſſe, docere conſtanter Patres, & ex Thoma minimam poenam purgatorii eſſe majorem maximâ poena hujus vitæ.

The learned Romaniſts generally accord, That Purgatory-fire differeth little from Hell but in time, that the one is eternal, the other temporal; they believe it to equalize, or rather exceed any fiery torment on earth.

The Apoſtle calleth the Church the whole family in heaven and earth, whence we reaſon thus, All the family whereof Chriſt is Head, is either in Heaven or upon earth. Now Purgatory is neither in Heaven nor upon the earth, but in hell: wherefore no part of the family of Chriſt is there.

Papiſts will not grant, that God imputeth to us the merits and ſufferings of his Son, although the Scripture is expreſſe for it; and yet they teach, that merits and ſatisfaction by the Pope may be applied to us, and that they ſatisfie for our temporal puniſhments.

Purgatory is deſcribed by Gregory de Valentia, and Bellarm. lib. 2. de Purgat. c. 10, 11, & 14. to be a fire of Hell adjoyning to the place of the damned, wherein the ſouls of the faithfull departing in the guilt of venial ſins (or for the more full ſatisfaction of mortal ſins which have been remitted) are tormented, which torment is nothing differing from the puniſhment of the damned, in reſpect of the extremity of pain, but onely in reſpect of continuance of time, which may be ten, or a hundred, or three hundred years, or longer, except they be delivered by the prayers, Sacrifices, or Almes of the living. And the confeſſion of this Purgatory (ſaith Bellarmine, lib. 1. de Purgat. cap. 11.) is a part of the Catholick Faith.

The principal places of Canonical Scripture which they urge for it, are theſe. In the Old Teſtament, Pſalm 66. 12. Eſay 9. 18. Micah 7. 8. Zechary 9. 11. Mal. 3. 2.

Vide Bellarm. l. 2. de purgat. c. 3

In the New, Mat. 5. 25, 26. Luke 16. 6. Acts 2. 24. 1 Cor. 3. 11, 13. 1 Cor. 15. 29. 1 Pet. 3. 19.

All which places have been taken off by learned men, and by Calvin in his Inſtitut. lib. 3. cap. 5. and Chemnit. in his Examinat. Concil. Trident. and others.

Vide Bellar. ib. c. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

When Pope Clement the 7th was beſieged in S. Angelo, and certain Prelates his friends with him, a Gentleman of Rome ſaid, He was ever perſwaded that the Pope could deliver ſouls out of Purgatory; but ſeeing (quoth he) he cannot deliver himſelf out of priſon, I can much leſſe think he ſhould deliver ſouls from thence. The World of Wonders, part 2. c. 39. See more there.

If

If the Scriptures before urged had been ſo evident for Purgatory, Father Cotton the Jeſuite needed not to have enquired of the Devil a plaine place to prove Purgatory, as ſome of the learned Proteſtant Divines in France affirm.

Petrus Cottonus Jeſuita in Chriſtianiſſimi Regis aula Patrum noſtrorum memoria nobiliſſimus, cum in quendam energumenam incidiſſet, neque tam opportunam occaſionem negligendam putaret homo diſcendi cupiditiſſimus, inter cætera, quæ à malo quidem, ſed tamen callido & docto dæmone ſciſcitanda in chartula quædam annotaverat, etiam diſertè præſcripſerit, Quis evidentiſſimus Scripturæ locus ad probandum purgatorium, & invocationem Sanctorum; ut eſt ab ampliſſimo viro Jacobo Auguſto Thuano in Hiſtoriarum libris proditum: Dallæus de pœnis & ſatisfact. l.1.c.18. Vide defenſe de la Fidelite de traduſtions de la S.Bible Faites à Geneve par Turretin, Preface au Lecteur, & verifications.43. Touchant le purgatoire. See Mr Leighs Souls Solace againſt Sorrow preached at Miſtreſs Katherin Bretergbs Funeral.

I ſhall conclude therefore with that ſaying of Biſhop Jewel in his Defence of the Apology of the Church of England, part 2.c.16. The phantaſie of Purgatory ſprang firſt from the Heathens, and was received amongſt them in that time of darkneſſe, long before the coming of Chriſt, as it may plainly appear by Plato and Virgil, in whom ye ſhall find deſcribed at large the whole Commonweal, and all the orders and degrees of Purgatory.

Spanheim (in his Commentaire Hiſtorique de la vie & de la Mort de Viconte de Dhona) hath a notable relation of a Princeſſe of Sueden, ſiſter to the King of Poland, which died at Strasbourg. Her Mother lying on her death-bed, being afraid of the flames of Purgatory, conjured a Jeſuite that was neer her bed-ſide, to tell her, whether there was indeed a Purgatory or no. This Queſtion being ſecretly propounded, all the hearers being commanded to depart, onely the young Princeſſe out of curioſity hiding her ſelf behinde the hangings, the Jeſuite anſwered, Qu'il n'y auroit point de Purgatoire en effect, mais qu'on jugè que ceſt invention ſeroit fort utile pour tenir la monde en devotion, par conſequent qu'elle eſtoit retenue à bonnes fines. That there was no Purgatory in deed, but this invention was very profitable to keep the world in devotion, by conſequent that it was retained for good ends.

Of Limbus Infantium & Patrum.

Limbus ſignifies a border or edge, hem or gard of a womans apparel, and is not uſed in the Scripture, nor any approved Author in their ſenſe, viz. to ſignifie that place which is the brim and skirts of hell.

Limbus Infantium is a peaceable receptacle for all Infants dying before Baptiſm. This is ſo groundleſſe a conceit, that the very rehearſal of it is a ſufficient refutation.

Limbus Patrum is a place where the Papiſts ſay the ſouls of the godly that died before Chriſt were. But Coloſ. 1.20. God could reconcile none to him in Heaven, but the faithfull which died before Chriſts aſcenſion, Revel. 14.13. Bleſſed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth, preſently, from the time of death.

Limbus accipitur proprie pro parte infima veſtis muliebris imos pedes contingente, vel pro faſcia extremitatem veſtium circumquaque ambiente. Si pro alterius cujuſdam rei margine accipiatur, id ſit metaphora quadam, in qua aliqua ſit analogia neceſſe eſt. Limbus verò Papiſticus cum juxta autores ſuos ſit pars inferni, ac ſecundum Bellarminum pars ſuperior, ſaltem ille qui patribus aſſignatur, debebant primo docere qualis ſit inferni figura, ut ſciri poſſit, num Limbus ſit ſuperior vel inferior, item an ſint duo, cum infantum Limbus habeatur pro inferiori. Rivet. in Catbol. Orthod.

See Dr Willets Limbomaſtix. De ſinu Abrahæ & Limbo Patrum. Vide Cam. myroth. & Capel. Spicileg. ad Luc.16.22. & Chamier. ad Heb.11.39,40

1. Chriſts death was efficacious to believers before his coming as well as ſince, Heb. 13.8.

2. The faithfull before Chriſt expected Heaven when this life was ended, Heb. 11.11,14,15,16.

3. The believing thief was with Chriſt in Paradiſe that day, Luke 23.43. which Bellarm. de Beat. Sanct. l. 1.*c.*3. interprets to be Heaven; this was before Chriſts Aſcenſion, Luke 16.23,26. Abrahams boſom is a place of comfort, for Abraham was there comforted.

2. There is a great Chaos, which ſignifies an infinite diſtance between Abraham and the rich glutton, which utterly overthrows the dream of Limbus, which ſignifies nifies a border or edge, and ſuppoſeth that place to be hard adjoyning to that of torment.

CHAP. IV.

Of Everlaſting Life.

THe laſt prerogative of the Church is Life Everlaſting, which being the ſum of all deſires, is fitly placed in the laſt place.

Here are two things:

1. Life it ſelf.
2. The continuance of life, noted in the word Everlaſting. See Acts 13.48.

Eternal Life is three wayes promiſed:

1. As the free gift of God, without any reſpect of any worthineſſe in us, Rom. 6. ult. James 1.12.
2. As our inheritance purchaſed by Chriſt, Epheſ. 1.14.
3. As a free reward promiſed and given to obedience, Rom. 6.22.

Quidam in Cœlo, quidam in Aſtris, quidam in Elyſiis campis, quidam in contemplatione præmium æternum poſſiciti ſunt; Quidam in metempſichoſi, quidam in inferno, aliquibus ardente, Chinenſibus fumoſo tantum, ſive in infernis quibuſdam; quidam in ipſa morte, quidam demum ad tempus, quidam æternam comminati ſunt pœnam. Sed præmium vel pœnam nos manere poſt hanc vitam tranſactam, omnis Religio, Lex, Philoſophia (& quod magis eſt) conſcientia docet apertè vel implicitè. D. Herbertus De veritate. Eſt præmium & pœna, notitiæ communis in quæſtione an, licet in quæſtione, quid, quale, quantum, quomodo, &c. ut plurimum diſceptetur. Id. ibid.

In the firſt reſpect our ſalvation, and all the degrees is wholly to be aſcribed to the gracious favour of God in Chriſt. In the ſecond to the mercy of God and merit of Chriſt. In the third, to the mercies of God redoubled and multiplied upon us, and not to any deſert of ours. Biſhop Down. of Juſtification, l. 2. c. 4.

Life is that whereby any thing acteth, liveth and moveth. It is either natural or ſpiritual, and that laſt hath two degrees, the Life of Grace and Glory.

Vocatur futura piorum gloria, 1. Vita ut diſtinguatur ab infœliciſſimo & miſerrimo damnatorum ſtatu, qui mortis nomine exprimitur. Intelligitur autem vitæ nomine non nuda viventis exiſtentia, ab anima & corporis unione dependens, ea enim & piis in Cœlo & damnatis in inferno erit communis, ſed beatiſſima & fœliciſſima viventis conditio, qua à beatifica Dei viventis viſione, & corporis, & animæ glorificatione dependet, per quam pij à damnatis vel maximè diſtinguuntur. Gerrh. loc. commun.

It is called Life eternal, not onely becauſe the Saints live for ever in another world, but becauſe of their bleſſed condition, 2 Cor. 4.17. 1 Pet. 5.10. See Crocius his Syntagma Theol. l. 2. c. 14.

Firſt, That there is everlaſting Life, is proved

1. From the love of God to his ſervants, that is everlaſting.
2. Becauſe God will be eternally glorified.
3. It is the aim of the Saints, 1 Cor. 1.18. 1 Pet. 1.9.
   1. There is another life immediately after this is ended.
   2. The life that is to come is unalterable.
   3. There is a different ſtate of men in the other world; ſome are everlaſtingly happy, others everlaſtingly miſerable.
   4. The number of the happy is ſmall in compariſon of the miſerable, Matth. 7.13,14. & 26.16. Rom. 9.27.

There is,

1. The light of Scripture to prove it: Enoch and Elijah in the Old Teſtament were tranſlated into it: In the New Teſtament Chriſt and Paul wept thither.

2. The

2. The light of Nature; The Heathens held that there were places of pleasure after this life for those that did well, and of torment for those that did ill.

3. The light of conscience; this truth will not be blotted out of it.

4. The light of Gods Spirit; many of Gods people have had prelibations of Heaven. Sanders professed of himself, when he was examined by Steven Gardiner, that he felt the joyes of Heaven in his soul.

It is, 1. A transcendent or surpassing life, it exceedeth natural and spiritual life.

2. A satisfying life, Psalm 17.15. there shall be all good, and perfect good, and perfectly enjoyed. God shall be all in all; he is a satisfaction to himself, much more to us.

3. A glorious life; there is a glorious God, a glorious Christ; there are the glorified Saints and Angels.

4. A most joyfull life; it is called glorified joy, 1 Peter 1.8. Enter thou into thy masters joy; we shall delight in God, and he in us.

The joyes of Heaven, are

1. Sure and certain, *Matth.*25.34.
2. Present and immediate, Esay 57.2.
3. Solid and substantial, Psalm 16. 11.
4. Great, 1. Because unmixt. 2. God is the authour of them, Matthew 5. 8.
5. Satisfying.
6. Uninterrupted.
7. Everlasting, Esay 35. ult.

5. Eternal life; eternity heightens either happinesse or misery.

It is called eternal life not properly but by a Catachresis, it hath a beginning but no end, it is not temporary, defined by any certain term, obnoxious to any change, it shall continue for ever without end.

Some question, Whether one may propound eternal life as an end to aim at?

Some conceive that not to be an ingenuous way of serving God.

Others say,

1. We may not respect the reward as the principal and ultimate end of our obedience, Esay 43.7. Col. 1.16. Revel. 4.11. Rom. 14. 8,9.

2. We must not respect the reward as the onely reason of our obedience; this is properly mercenary; God is to be served for his authority over us, relation to us, and the sweetnesse of holy duties; where there is an internal principle of holinesse, one will do holy actions, though there were no advantage to him.

3. We may not look upon the reward as a natural and necessary fruit of our obedience, both our obedience and salvation are effects of the free grace of God.

4. We may look at the reward of obedience as a secondary end to holy actions, our seeking of God excludes not our seeking of our selves in a regular way, Deut. 10. 3. Psalm 73. 28. 2 Cor. 7. 3.

All amor mercedis is not amor mercenarius.

1. From the glorious precepts of God obliging the soul to propound such an end, 1 *Tim.*6.12,19. *Phil.*2.12. 2 *Pet.*1.10. 1 Cor. 9.24.

2. The promises of God encouraging, Matth. 5. 11, 12. 1 Timothy 4. 8. Matth. 19. 28.

3. We have the presidents of believers that denied themselves in this world, Heb. 11.24,25,26. & *v.*35,36. *Jude v.*21.

4. Eternal life was Gods end, *Heb.*2. 10. 1 Pet. 3.8. It was the end of Christs Incarnation, Suffering, Ascension, Intercession, John 10.10. & 17.24. we should aim at Gods end.

5. It was Gods designe from all eternity, to bring men to eternal life, 1 *Cor.*2.7.

6. The great condition on which God promiseth eternal life, is that we might seek and endeavour after it, *Rom.*2.7.

7. We are much concerned in it; What proportion is there between time and eternity?

How

How to know whether we make eternal life the end of this life?

1. Then we will have high thoughts of eternity; the comforts that are eternal are worth regarding, and the miſeries that are eternal ſhould chiefly be avoided.

2. We will then ſeriouſly enquire after the way to Heaven, Jer. 50. 5. Pſalm 16. ult. David often begs of God to teach him his wayes.

3. We will then make it our main work to come to Heaven, Phil. 3. 11, 13, 14. One thing is neceſſary. Aſcendamus viventes, ut aſcendamus morientes. Bernard.

4. We will be content with no reward on this ſide eternal life, Pſalm 17. lat. end. & 41. 4.

5. We will rejoyce in the hope of the glory of God, Rom. 5. 2. 2 Tim. 4. 8. Tit. 2. 13. Jude v. 21.

6. It will be our aim then to overcome the fear of death.

7. We will often review our evidences for Heaven, Heb. 2. 11. and deſire God to ſearch and try us, Pſalm 139. ult.

We ſhould ſet eternal life much before us, 2 Cor. 4. 18.

2. We ſhould ſteer our preſent life in order to future life, Phil. 4. 17.

3. We ſhould labour to enter upon our future life with great advantage, 2 Pet. 1. 10.

4. We ſhould ſolace our ſelves much with the thoughts of future life, Rom. 5. 2. 1 John 2. 25. Col. 1. 5, 6.

5. We ſhould mind the day of Judgement, and meaſure all our actions by that day, 1 John 2. 28.

It is a Queſtion, An ſancti fruantur beatitudine ante ultimum judicium.

It was a current opinion among moſt of the Fathers, if not all, That the ſouls of men after their death do not go immediately to Heaven, but are in a receptacle or manſion-place till the day of Judgement, and ſome of late have followed it, eſpecially the Anabaptiſts.

Vide Montac. Apparat. 1. pag. 50, 51, 52, 53, &c. Antiqui certè patres unanimi concentu & conſenſu docent, antiquos ſanctos aut in loco aliquo ſubterraneo & ſecreto fuiſſe repoſitorio; aut alibi diſpoſitos ubi Deo viſum: non autem in Cœlo ſummo beato, & glorioſo, quem appellant Paradiſum. Montac. orig. Eccleſ. Tom. prior. parte poſteriore p. 418. See Heb. 11. 39. opened in my Annotat.

The ſouls immediately departed have not the compleat fulneſſe of that happineſs which they ſhall have, yet they are not excluded from the enjoying of God, Luk. 23. 43. 2 Cor. 5. 1. Phil. 1. 23.

See Dr Heylins Summe of Chriſtian Theol. Art 8. p. 317, 318, 319.

Some ſay, there is a difference of thoſe that are raiſed again, as Lazarus and ſome others; for it is likely (ſay they) that their ſouls went not into Heaven, but were detained by God, who would unite them again to ſhew forth his glory.

The accidental joy of the Saints (ſay the Schoolmen) ſhall be greater, both extenſively, becauſe it ſhall be in ſoul and body, and intenſively, becauſe the ſoul ſhall rejoyce to ſee the body glorified.

2. The eſſential glory ſhall increaſe extenſively, becauſe it ſhall redound unto the body.

The ſouls of the godly immediately after their departure hence from the body, are ſaid to be in reſt, Heb. 4. 11. in conſolation, Luke 16. 25. in ſecurity, John 11. 16, 18. therefore they preſently go to Heaven, to God and Chriſt. They ſhall enjoy God himſelf, 1 Cor. 15. 28. immediately, Revel. 21. 22, 23. See Dr Gouge on Heb. 2. 10. Sect. 93. & on Heb. 1. Sect. 159.

The Saints ſhall then be glorified:

Firſt, Becauſe of their relation to Chriſt; he is the Husband, and they his Spouſe, Heb. 2. 10 he their Maſter, and they his ſervants, John 12. 26. and not till then.

1. Becauſe now is the day of his trial, and then of his recompence.

2. It is meet that every coming of Chriſt ſhould have an anſwerable benefit, Heb. 11. 4.

3. That they may have new matter to glorifie God, as they enter into Heaven, 1 *Cor.*15.55,56,57.

Conſider the names given to the ſtate of glory: it is called Life, Theſe ſhall enter into life; Reſt, finde reſt, go to reſt; our home, our Fathers houſe, a purchaſed and glorious inheritance; A Kingdome, the Kingdome of Heaven; Joy, our Maſters joy, everlaſting joy; Glory, weight of glory, eternal weight of glory; the City of our God.

This glory may be known:

1. By the beginnings of it here in the peace of conſcience, *Rom.*8.23. when any promiſe is ſet home upon the heart.

2. By the external fore-pledges of it, in the transfiguration of Chriſt, Mat. 17. and in Pauls trance, 2 *Cor.*12.

3. In the preparation for it.

The Scripture cals it Paradiſe, a place of all delight and pleaſure, alluding to that Paradiſe planted by Gods own hand, to make it a delight for the innocent ſtate of man, and Abrahams boſom, wherein the Saints receive refreſhing; which is a borrowed ſpeech taken from Fathers carrying and cheriſhing their little ones in their boſoms; ſo the elect are cheriſhed in the boſome of the Father of all the faithfull.

There is perfection, perpetuity, immutability.

There is a two-fold glory of the Saints:

1. Relative and adherent; ſo their glory ſtands,
   1. In their abſolution from ſinne, Acts 3.19.
   2. In their participation and exerciſe of judicial power, 1 *Corinth.*6. 2, 3. Luke 22.30.
   3. In that they are publickly owned and preſented to God by Chriſt, Luke 12.18. *Heb.*2.13.
2. Inherent, *Rom.*8.18.
   1. In their body, *Matth.*13.43. *Phil.*3.21. in corruption, power, glory, ſpirituality, 1 *Cor.*15.42,43,44.
   2. In their ſouls.
      1. Compleat knowledge, 1 *Cor.*13.12.
      2. Compleat holineſſe, 1 John 3.2. See Mr Wells Proſpect of Eternity, chap. 20.
         1. Faith ſhall be heightned to viſion, Pſalm 17.15. *Revel.*22.4. We ſhall ſee God not with a comprehenſive, but with a beatifical and repleniſhing viſion.
         2. Hope to comprehenſion, it ſhall be accompliſht by our poſſeſſion of God and all good things. Yet ſome think that faith and hope ſhall retain their proper acts, though they receive new ones.
         3. There ſhall be a compleat ſimilitude and transformation of the ſoul into the Image of God, 1 John 3.2.
         4. A compleat delight ariſing from the three former, *Pſal.*16.11. Mat. 25.21. Tota virtus amare quod videas, ſumma fœlicitas habere quod amas.

The end of our faith is ſight, of our hope poſſeſſion, of our love enjoying. Ubi eſt ſummum bonum, ibi eſt ſumma fœlicitas, ſumma jucunditas, vera libertas, perfecta charitas, æterna ſecuritas, & ſecura æternitas. Bern. *Meditat. cap.*4.

Bleſſedneſſe is the fruition of the eſſential, abſolutely chief; firſt, Eternal, Independent, Perfect, onely ſufficient Good, and chiefly to be deſired, 1 John 3. 2. The object of this bleſſedneſſe is God himſelf, Pſalm 50. 23. & 33. 1 John 2. 3. for all theſe properies agree to him and none other, Gen. 15.1. Pſalm 16. 5. and he being the firſt cauſe of all things, muſt needs be the chief good and laſt end.

There the excellency of the poſſeſſed Goods, ſhall as much diſappoint our expectations, as in other fruitions, the emptineſſe is wont to do. Mr Boyles Seraphick Love.

Three things will be perfected at once, a

Bleſſedneſſe is two-fold:

1. Incompleat (Beatitudo via) as *Jam.*1.12.

2. Perfect

2. Perfect (Beatitudo Patriæ, as the Schools call it) which conſiſts in the enjoyment of a good commenſurate to all our deſires.

Nothing but the Divine Eſſence can make us happy in the life to come. Our eſſential happineſſe lies in the fruition of God, 1 Cor. 12.13. 1 John 3.2.

1. Not the glorious place of Heaven. Paul was taken up thither, yet after had a meſſenger of Satan to buffet him.

2. Not the company of Saints and Angels.

3. Not the perfection of grace, 1 Cor. 13.12. perfection of grace is rather a conſequent of felicity, 2 Cor. 5.17.

4. Not a perfect enjoying of Chriſt the Mediator, becauſe he as Mediator hath his happineſſe in another, Pſalm 16. ult. it is ſpoken of Chriſt. The higheſt object of faith muſt be to the ſoul the higheſt ground of joy; the eſſence of God is the ultimate object of faith, 1 Peter 1.21. This only perfects the graces, 1 John 3.3. Mat. 18.10. gives reſt and ſatisfaction to the ſoul, Pſalm 17. ult. In beatitudine complebitur omne deſiderium beatorum. Aquinas. The eſſence of God cannot be ſeen by creatures glorified with bodily eyes, 1 Tim. 6.16. (Vide Petav. de Deo l. 7. c. 2, 3.) Though the body then be ſpiritual, it ſhall not loſe its eſſential properties; we ſhall ſee Chriſt then, Job 19.26. It is an intellectual viſion, yet this is Cognitio apprehenſiva, not comprehenſiva, as the Schoolmen ſpeak, Job 11.2. There ſhall be fulneſſe of fruition, Frui eſt cum gaudio uti, to requieſce with delight in the thing obtained, therefore medio uti, fine frui dicimur, Pſal. 16. ult. Vide Aquin. Sum. part. 1, 2. Qu. 11. Art. 3, 4.

But though their ſolemne and ſubſtantial happineſſe lies in God, Pſalm 17.15. & Pſalm 73.25, 26. 1 Cor. 15.28. yet it is an additional comfort to enjoy the company of the Saints, all the Patriarchs, Prophets, Apoſtles and Martyrs, Matth. 8.11. Heb. 12.22. We love to be in the Aſſemblies of the Saints on earth, to pray, faſt and receive with them; then we ſhall more delight in them, when we ſhall converſe with none but real Saints (here the Sheep and Goats are mingled together) and they perfect, compleatly loving and lovely, we ſhall all agree in the ſame work and aime: communion with them will be conſtant.

The Communion between the bleſſed Spirits will not be mental onely but vocal, 2 Cor. 12.3. Paul ſpeaks not ſo much of what he ſaw as what he heard, whether every man ſhall be underſtood by others in his own tongue, or whether they ſhall ſpeak Hebrew, as Acts 26.14. is uncertain.

The place of this happineſſe is the higheſt Heavens, farre above all Heavens; a place that no Philoſopher ever wrote of; a place which God from all eternity appointed to be his Throne, where he would ſhew all his glory, and for a receptacle of his Saints.

Of the Cœlum Empyræum, ſee Wendelines Phyſical Contemplations, Sect. 3. c. 9. He ſaith there, It is called in Scripture the third Heaven, the Heaven of Heavens, Paradiſe, the houſe, habitation and throne of God, the ſeat and dwelling of bleſſed Angels and men, Abrahams boſome, the heavenly Jeruſalem, the heavenly Countrey, a City having foundations. By Chriſtian Philoſophers and School Doctors, the ſupream Heaven, and Heaven of the bleſſed, but moſt frequently Empyræum Cœlum, becauſe it is moſt bright and glorious.

The ſociety the Saints ſhall there have, are innumerable multitude of elect Angels, and all the glorified Saints which God hath called out of the world. All their knowledge ſhall be by viſion, ſight, not by faith, diſcourſe; the will perfectly conformable to God, the affections which have any perturbation ſhall ceaſe, as hope, deſire, care, grief: Love and Joy ſhall continue; the whole Church ſhall then ſee and enjoy God immediately; and this viſion and fruition of God is properly Heaven.

First, Viſion; they ſhall ſee his face, Mat. 5.8

The happineſſe of Heaven is often expreſt by knowledge, they ſhall ſee God; it mans ſanctification, communion and comfort.

We ſhall be made like unto God, 1 John 3.2. We ſhall be aſſured that our happineſſe ſhall continue for ever, as the miſery of the damned is to be without hope, ſo they ſhall be without fear.

John 14.2. The matter of the Saints communion in heaven ſhal be the redemption of Chriſt, the praiſing of his wiſdom and juſtice, Luke 9.31. Gods providence concerning them, Gods righteous judgments Revel. 5.9. See Dr Prid. on 2 Pet. 3.16. Death puts an end to ſinne, the beatifical viſion perfects our ſanctification, and makes the ſoul impeccable, ſay the Schoolmen.

Many of the Fathers believed, that the juſt were not admitted to the beatifical viſion before the day of Judgement, but kept in ſecret receptacles.

is called the beatifical vision. Fides justificat, charitas edificat, Spes latificat, Visio beatificat.

God is the adequate object of the creatures happineſſe. We know not what our portion is, till we come to a ſight of God in Heaven. He is not onely the firſt cauſe, but utmoſt end and perfection of the creature; the ſight of God is the means by which we come to enjoy him as our end. Our knowledge of God in Heaven ſhall be by intuition.

1. All the faculties ſhall be glorified; the mind is the moſt noble faculty, the ſoul enjoyes pure content in the contemplation of any truth, Pſalm 19. 19. God is a full object for the underſtanding, Excellens intelligibile perficit intellectum.

2. Our fruition increaſeth by light; as our light is, ſo is our love, John 4. 10. God preſents himſelf immediately to the underſtanding, 1 Cor. 13. 9. 1 John 3. 2. Perfect love is one great way of our union with God.

Secondly, Fruition; they ſhall enjoy God and poſſeſſe him, he ſhall be all in all. They ſhall not ſee him with bodily eyes (ſo the Deity cannot be ſeen) but with the ſoul ſo far as the underſtanding can be enlarged; it doth ſimul & ſemel behold all the glorious perfections of God, Chriſt and the Trinity, knows him as he knows us for the kind, 1 Cor. 13. 12.

The underſtanding of the elect ſhall be enlarged to know how great a good God is, and their good; of the wicked, to know how great a good he is, and that they are deprived of him.

The fruition or enjoyment of God in Heaven, conſiſts

1. In Gods actual communication of himſelf to be the happineſs of the creature, glorification is the execution of election.

2. It lies in the quiet and contentment the ſoul hath in God as its happineſſe, fruitio is quietatio voluntatis, John 17. 24.

3. In that infinite delight and ſweetneſſe which the ſoul finds by its conjunction with and poſſeſſion of him; he is a preſent and full good: the glorified Saints know they ſhall ever enjoy him, Pſalm 36. 8.

4. In the intimate adheſion or cleaving of the ſoul to him.

5. In the infinite delight and complacency that the ſoul ſees God takes in it.

There is,
1. Plena adeptio.
2. Summa delectatio.
3. Perfecta quietatio.

The true Chriſtian is thus diſpoſed toward Heaven, he prizeth it above all things, it is his inheritance, portion, he conceives of it as a place where God doth give himſelf to him fully.

2. He would willingly be there, it is the end of his race and hope, 2 Cor. 5. 1. if he might enjoy all the benefits of this world for ever according to his deſire, he would willingly leave all to be with Chriſt.

3. He hath his converſation in Heaven, travels the way that leads to it.

The way to obtain eternal life:

1. We muſt ſeek it of God in an earneſt and ſerious way, Mat. 11. 12. Luke 16. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 10 it is called ſtriving, 1 Cor. 9. 24, 25. We ſtrive for an incorruptible crown, ſaith Paul. See Phil. 2.

2. We muſt take great care leſt in this we come ſhort, 1 Cor. 9. ult.

3. We ſhould take heed of our darling ſin, 1 Cor. 9. 26, 27.

4. We muſt be guided in this life by the counſel of God, Pſalm 73. 24.

5. We ſhould have our converſation in Heaven beforehand.

6. We ſhould keep our ſpirits in a continual readineſſe, Luke 12. 36, 37. Col. 1. 12.

That there ſhall be different degrees of glory in Heaven.

Becauſe all that handle the Common-place of the glory of Heaven, handle that Queſtion, Whether the Saints there ſhall have the like degree of happineſſe, therefore I ſhall ſpeak ſomething of it.

It hath been the ancient and conſtant tradition of the Church, teſtified by the unanimous conſent of all the Fathers, was never queſtioned by any, untill that Peter Martyr in this laſt age firſt began to doubt thereof, and others ſince more boldly adventured to contradict it. Mr Mede on Mat. 10 41. See more there.

The generality of the Fathers, Schoolmen, and modern Divines, are for diverſity of degrees. The Papiſts lay the degrees of glory on the ſeveral merits of men, and tell us of ſeven Crowns.

This

This preheminence of glory the Schoolmen term Aureola, that is, an Additament of felicity to that eſſential glory in the viſion of God, which they term Aurea: This Aureola or Coronet to be added to the Crown of glory, they aſcribe to three ſorts of perſons; to Virgins, to Martyrs, and to Doctors or Prophets. Vide Aquin. Sup. 3. part. Quaſt. 96. Art. 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

Aureola deferuntur, 1. Martyribus propter victoriam de mundo. 2. Virginibus ob ſubjugatam carnem. 3. Pradicantibus propter proſligatum diabolum. D. Frid. Scholaſt. Theol. Syntag. Mnemon. c. 7.

We may pioufly believe, that it is conſonant to Scripture, as well as to the ſtream of Antiquity, that there are degrees of glory, but not according to the Roman ſcale, who have hammered and beaten out certain little Crowns, which they aſcribe only to Virgins, to Martyrs, to Doctors, and are produced from their own extraordinary merits, not from the immediate Rayes of Chriſts glory ſhed upon them. Dr Spurſtows Crown of Life on Rev. 2. 10.

God rewards a man not propter, but ſecundum opera; according to the matter of his work, ſo ſhall be the ſubſtance of his reward, according to the manner of his work, the kind of his reward, and according to the meaſure of his work the degree of his reward. As a man ſoweth, ſo ſhall he reap; that's for the kind; and he that ſoweth ſparingly ſhall reap ſparingly; he that ſoweth bountifully ſhall reap bountifully, that's for the degree. Dr Hackwell on Dan. 12. 3.

Thoſe Arguments that are uſually brought out of Scripture do not neceſſarily infer it; the places brought to prove it, are Dan. 12. 2. 1 Cor. 15. 42. Matth. 19. 28. John 15. 3. Some think that no places carry it more fully than thoſe, 1 Cor. 3. 8. 2 Cor. 9. 6. Every man (they ſay) ſhall receive a reward, not only according to the quality and kind of his works, but according to the meaſure and degree of them, which thoſe places ſeem to intimate; therfore there ſhall be different degrees of glory according to their different degrees of grace.

Dav. de juſtitia actuali, cap. 60.

Peter Martyr on 1 Cor. 15. 41. is againſt it, and a worthy Divine of our own follows him. Cameron diſputes this Queſtion at large. Tomo 2^do prælect. in Matth. 18. 2. and holds that there ſhall not be different degrees of glory. Spanhem. Dub. Evang. part. 3. Dub. 135. handleth the Queſtion learnedly and largely, and is for the negative.

Dicimus cum Calvino, quod pro gratia menſura in hac vita ſua conceſſa Deus quoque gloria gradum in futura diſtribuat. Vide Calvinum in Inſtit. l. 3. c. 25. Sect. 10. & in Mat. 13. 43. & Mat. 20. Scio alios Altingius in his 2^d Tome, part. 1. Probl. 64. diſputes this Queſtion, and holds the affirmative.

Cregutus, Davenant, Rivet, B Hall, Dr Hackwell, and divers others for the affirmative. As in Heaven there is gradus fœlicitatis, ſo cognitionis. Paræus.

It is ſuch a controverſie (as Rivet well obſerveth) in which men may hold either way, Salvo fidei fundamento, becauſe both ſides alledge probable reaſons.

doctos & pios viros in contrariam ſententiam conceſſiſſe, inter quos agmen ducit Petrus Martyr quem alij etiam hoc tempore ſequuntur. Talemq; eſſe controverſiam judico de quâ ſalvo fidei fundamento, in utramq; partem diſputari poſſit. Quia neutræ parti deſunt ſuæ rationes, quæ probabilitate ſua non carent. Rivet. in Cath. orthod.

Henry the 7th (as Sr Francis Bacon ſhews) had a three-fold right to his Crown, By Birth, Victory and Marriage. A Chriſtian hath a four-fold right to eternal life, 1. By Gift. 2. By Birth. 3. By Marriage. 4. By Victory.

Aquinas hath this Queſtion,

Suppl. 3. part. q. 94. Art. 1. Iſa. 66. 24.

Utrum beati qui erunt in Patriâ, videbunt pœnas damnatorum? and reſolves they ſhall, becauſe it makes to the perfection of their bleſſedneſſe, Oppoſita juxta ſe poſita magis eluceſcunt. They ſhall perfectly ſee the puniſhment of the wicked, that their bleſſedneſſe may the more content them, and they may give more abundant thanks to God.

The Schoolmen ſay at the day of Judgment the damned ſhall ſee the glory of the Saints, partly propter invidiam, becauſe they ſhall envy at their proſperity, and partly propter privationem.

That place, 1 Joh. 3. 15. to ſome ſeems unanſwerable, to prove that eternal life is

It is uſually ſaid, that grace and glory differ not ſpecifically but gradually, that grace is glory begun, and glory grace perfected: therfore grace is called glory, 2 Cor. 3. lat. end. But ſome ſay, there was perfect grace in Adam and Chriſt, though they were not received into glory, and that perfect grace is not glory, though it can be begun here, but perfected hereafter, therefore glory, wherein doth conſiſt the perfection of eternal life, doth but gradually differ from grace, wherein the inchoation of that life doth conſiſt.

in

in none but such as are glorified. Christ in respect of his soul was Comprehensor, though Viator in respect of his body. Vide Aquin. par. 3. Qu. 19. Art. 10. Adams grace was perfect in suo genere, but not simpliciter; the same also may be said of that grace, wherein the apostate Angels were created.

Whether the blessed Saints after the end of this world shall inhabit this earth, or at least often visit it? Curiosè quæritur & doctè ignoratur. Voet. Biblioth. Studios. Theol. l. 1. c. 9.

Dr Willet upon the Romans holds the affirmative (as I remember) and grounds it on that place of Mat. 5. 5. Some urge that place in Peter, A new Heaven and earth wherein dwelleth righteousnesse, that is, righteous persons.

FINIS.

A Post-

A Postscript to the Reader.

READER,

I Blesse God for his enabling me (after the space of as many moneths at least as there be Books) to finish this large Work. I read over several Books, either in order to the enlarging of my Body of Divinity, or in the printing of it; Petavius his Theologica Dogmata in four or five Folioes; Dr Jeremy Taylors Workes in four Folioes; Bishop Brownrigs and Mr Farindons Sermons in Folio; Crocius his Syntagma Theologiæ; Dr Owen De Theologia, with others. I hope as the Book hath been formerly well esteemed by the judicious, so it will still, though I expect not that all should be candid Readers. That distinction I give, pag. 2. Theology, or (so it should be) Divinity is two-fold, Archetypal or Ectypal, I had from my worthy Tutor Mr Pemble in his Latine Lectures to us: I believe that other Divines besides him make use of that distinction, and that he very well understood what he meant thereby, but since other Divines dislike the same, let the Reader either take or refuse it as he pleaseth. Some Divines make part of the Image of God, to be mans Dominion over the creatures, others deny it. Cocceius de Fœdere would have the Image of God to be in the soul onely: Crocius in his Syntagma Theologiæ would have it to be in the whole man. These and many other differences there are amongst Divines, in several points.

Mersennus on Gen. 1. 1. c. 8. speaking of Vaninus being put to death at Tholouse, because he would neither acknowledge God, nor Devils, or Angels; and being called humbly to ask pardon of God, justice from the King; he brake out into these words: Regem non offendi, Deum nullum agnosco, si verò Dæmones aliquot admiseritis, judices in orcum ferant. I have not offended the King, I acknowledge no God, but if you admit that there are Devils, let them carry my Judges away into hell.

We may see by the sad conclusion of this desperate Atheist, that men had need to oppose the thoughts and first motions in their hearts tending this way.

The Book-seller desiring I should not enlarge this Work any more hereafter, I was willing to make some Additions at the end thereof, either as a supply to some things that were omitted, or else because some things were not so easily reducible to the former Heads.

I might further relate what is observed by a learned * Doctor, That the preaching of the Word is the first and principal work of a Pastor, Jer. 3. 15. 2 Tim. 4. 2. 1 Pet. 5. 2. John 21. Christ gives it the first, second and third place. By the Decrees of the Council of Millain and Trent, the preaching of the Word of God is judged to be the chiefest work of a Bishop. In the Scripture often the first place is given to preaching. It hath the first place amongst those offices to which Christ was annointed by the holy Ghost, Esay 61. 1. and in those to which the Apostles were annointed by Christ, Mat. 28. 19. The Scripture it self constantly sets the work of Preaching before other Ecclesiastical exercises, before visitation of the sick, Luke 9. 2. The care of the poor, Act. 6. 2.

* Prælect. D. Holdsw. part. 1. Lect. 3.

This appears,

1. By induction of the several things.
2. By induction of the means.
3. By induction of persons, as he there amply shews. May therefore this principal work of a Pastors, of a Bishop be chiefly encouraged and countenanced by Authority, and chiefly intended by all such as have taken upon them that sacred function.

Thy hearty well-wisher

Edward Leigh.

AN

6 JA 70

AN Alphabetical Table OF THE Chiefeſt things contained in this TREATISE.

A

Barbanel commended, l.1.p.133, 134
Aben Ezra commended, 133

Actions.

How we diſhonour God in our common Actions, l.9.p.1089,1090
Acephali, a ſort of Hereticks ſo called, l.4. p 495

Acts.

Acts of the Apoſtles, why ſo called, l.1. p.57
Who are the beſt Expoſitors of it, ibid
Acceptation of our perſons and ſervices, l.7.p.724, 725

Adam.

His firſt ſin was a great ſin, l.4.p 381, to 384
The time of his fall uncertain, l.4 p. 380,381
The evil conſequents of that firſt ſinne, l.4 p. 382,383
Adamites, l.4.p.495
Adoption, l.7.p.707,708
Adultery, what. l.9.p.1134

Affections.

Affections, how they are called, and what they are, l.7.p.758
Thei ſinfulneſſe, l.7.p.758,759
Marks of ſanctified affections, and means to ſanctifie them, l.7.p.760,761
Particular affections, l.7.p.761, to 764
The ſimple affections, l.7.p.762,763
The compound, l.7.p.762,792
Affections in God, l.2.p.200
Agony, what, l.5.p.597
Air divided into three regions, and the uſe of it, l.3 p.298,299
All-heal, an herb very medicinal, l.3.p.318.m

Allmighty.

God is Allmighty, l.2.p.236,to 240,& l.5.p.531, 532
Alms, p.820,to 825

A

Allſufficient.

God is Allſufficient, l.2.p.171,172
Amazement double, l.5.p.597
Ambition, l.4.p.428,429
Amos, when he wrote, who beſt interpret him, l 1.p.50
Anabaptiſts confuted, l.3.p.495,496,& l.8.p.923, to 927

Amen.

Amen, an Hebrew word, and what it ſignifies, l.5.p.544,545,& l.8.p.906
We ſhould ſay Amen to others prayers, ibid.
Analogy of faith, what it is, l.1.p.132

Angels.

Angels, why not ſpoken of in the Creation, and when made, l.3.p.294
Their Names, Nature, and divers Queſtions about them, l.3.p.335,to 350
Do not move the Heavens. l.3.p.292
Angelici a ſect of Hereticks, l.4. p.344,496,& p. 843

Anger.

Anger, what in God, l.2.p.205,to 208
What in us, the ſeveral names of it, its rectitude, corruption, ſanctification, l.7.p.792,to 796
Annointing, what it ſignifies, l. 5. p. 566, 567
Antichriſtianiſm, l.4.p.496

Antichriſt.

Antichriſt, what it ſignifies, l.6.p.655,656
He uſurps Chriſts Offices, l.6.p.656
Several degrees of his diſcovery, ib.
Not one perſon, l.6.p.650
Corollaries from Antichriſt, l.6.p.669,670

Antinomians.

Antinomians, what they are, and who write beſt againſt them, l.1.p.35,36
Confuted, l.9.1024,to 1027.

Antiomianiſm a moſt dangerous error, l. 4. p. 496 497,
Antiſabbatarians, l. 4. p. 497
Antiſcripturiſts, l. 4. p. 497, 498
Antitrinitarians, l. 4. p. 498
Anthropomorphites, l. 2. p. 164, & l. 4. p. 498
Apparel, rules for it, l. 7. p. 805, 806
Appetite, its rectitude, corruption and ſanctification, l. 7. p. 799, 800
Appollinariſts, l. 4. p 488

Apocalyps.

Apocalyps, why ſo called, l. 1. p. 63
Queſtioned by ſome, but is canonical, l. 1. p. 64

Apocrypha.

Apocrypha, which books are ſo called, and why, l. 1. p. 66, 67
Reaſons why thoſe books are not divinely inſpired, nor canonical, l. 1. p. 67, 68, 69

Apoſtaſie.

Mans Apoſtaſie what, l. 4. p. 380
Apoſtaſie a ſin, l. 4. p. 429, to 433
Apoſtle, what it ſignifies, l. 1. p. 55. See m.
Apoſtolici, l. 4. p. 498
Aqua, whence derived, l. 3. p. 297. m.
Aquarij, why ſo called, l. 8. p. 953
Aquinas commended, l. 1. p. 139

Arabick.

The Arabick Tranſlation, l. 1. p. 76, 77
Arians confuted, l. 3. p. 281, & l. 4. p. 498, 499
Arius his perjury, l. 4. p. 464

Arminians.

Arminians confuted, l. 2. p. 210, 212, 213, 215, 221, l. 3. p. 276. l. 4. p. 416, 429, 430. l. 4 p. 499, 500. l. 7. p. 677. m.
Arminianiſm what, l. 4. p. 389. l. 5. p. 582

Article.

Article of faith, what it is, l. 5. p. 520
Why they are called Articles of the Creed, l. 5. p. 523
All Articles of faith may be proved out of the Scripture, l. 5. p. 562
Arts, all Arts come from God, l. 2. p. 154
Aſcend, Chriſt aſcended, and why, l. 5. p. 612, 614
Aſſaſſins, who are ſuch, l. 9. p. 1128

Aſſurance.

Aſſurance of ſalvation, l. 3. p. 274, 275
One may be certain of his juſtification, l. 7. p. 725, 726
Of Election and Salvation, l. 3. p. 272, to 280
The kinds and degrees of Aſſurance, l. 7. p. 725, 726
It is difficult to attain Aſſurance, l. 7. p. 728
The means to get and keep it, l. 7. p. 728, 729
Aſtrology and Aſtronomy what, l. 2. p. 151

Atheiſts.

Several ſorts of Atheiſts, l. 2. p. 155, 156, 157
Have come to ſome evil end, l. 2. p. 155, 156
Their Objections, that there is no God anſwered. l. 2 p. 153, 154

Attributes.

Attributes of God, why ſo called, l. 2 p. 159, 160
How diſtinguiſhed from Properties, l. 2. p. 159
What rules are to be obſerved about them, l. 2. p. 160, 161
How divided, and how they differ from thoſe Properties that are in men and Angels, l. 2. p. 161, 162
Auguſtine commended, l. 1. p. 136

Authentical.

Authentical, what it is, l. 1. p. 70
Authentical Edition of Scripture, l. 1. p. 70, to 73
The Hebrew for the Old Teſtament, and the Greek for the New Teſtament, l. 1. p 71, 72, 78, 79
Not the Tranſlation of the Septuagint, l. 1. p. 88, 89
Nor the Vulgar Latine, l. 1. p. 90, 91, 92

Authority.

The greatneſſe of Gods Authority, wherein it conſiſts, l. 2. p. 184, 185
The difference between power and Authority, l. 2. p. 238

B

Backſliding, l. 4. p. 429, 430

Baptiſm.

Baptiſm, what it ſignifies, and how it may be deſcribed, l. 8. p. 915, 916
The priviledges of Gods children by Baptiſm, l. 8. p 917
The duties Baptiſm engageth us to, l. 8. p. 917, 918
The eſſential parts of Baptiſm, l. 8. p. 918
Whether dipping or ſprinkling be to be uſed in Baptiſm, l. 8. p. 919
The neceſſity of Baptiſm, l. 8 p 920
Whether women and Laicks may baptize, l. 8. p. 920, 921
How Chriſts Baptiſm and Johns differ, l. 8 p. 921
Who are to be baptized, l. 8 p. 922
The baptizing of Infants proved, and the objections againſt it anſwered, l. 8. p. 923, to 927
It was a common practice in the primitive Church to deter their Baptiſm till they were old, and why, l. 8. p. 927
Baptiſm celebrated in the Church of Rome, true Baptiſm, l. 8. p. 930, 931
Whether immediate or remote parents give children right to Baptiſm, l. 8. p 928, 929
Whether the children of Infidels, Papiſts and excommunicated perſons may be baptized, l. 8. p. 930, 931
Whether the uſe of witneſſes be neceſſary in Baptiſm, l. 8. p. 928
Whether Miniſters may baptize with any thing but water, l. 8. p. 933

Private Baptism unfitting, l.8.p.931,932

Beasts.

Beasts, their usefulnesse, l.3.p 333,334
In the outward senses excel man, l.3.p.331
Bees for what they are notable, l.3. p.330
Belief, what it is, l.5.p.519,520
Beleevers, who called, l.5.p.521
To beleeve and beleeve in, what it is, l.5.p.526,527
Benefits by Christ, l.7.p 707
Bernard a devout man, and good for that corrupt age wherein he lived, l.1. p.137,138
Beza commended, l.1. p.138

Bible.

Bible, why so called, l.1. p.7.m.
Who first distinguished the Bible into Chapters and verses, l.1.p 40
Bishop, what he is, and whether above a Presbyter, l.6.p.647,to 652
Blasphemy, l.4.p.433,434. against the holy Ghost l.4.p.435,436,437

Blesse, &c.

Blesse, what it signifies, l.2.p.248
God is most blessed, l.2.p.245,to 249
Blessednesse what, l.2 p.247,250
Blindnesse spiritual the worst, l.3.p.301
Boasting, l 4.p.438
Bounty, l.7.p.808,to 811

Bread.

What meant by daily Bread in the fourth Petition of the Lords Prayer, l.8.p.893,to 897
Bribery, l.4. p.438,439
Brownism, l.4.p.500,501
Bucer commended, l.1.p.138

Bulls.

Popes Bulls whence so called, l.6.p.661

Buried.

Christ was buried, and why, l.5.p.603

C.

Cajetane commended, l.1.p.139

Calling.

Effectual Calling stands in four things, l.7.p 677, 678
Marks of it, l.7.p.679
Calvin commended, l.1.p.138

Canon.

Why the Scripture is called a Canon, or canonical, l.1.p.38.& 98
The conditions of a Canon, l.1.p.38
A three-fold Canon in the Church, ib.
Some abolish, some adde to the Canon, l.1. p. 65
The Canonical Books of the New Testament how divided, l.1.p.54
Why seven Epistles are called sometimes Canonical, and sometimes Catholick, l.1. p.61, 62

Canticles.

Canticles, how called in Hebrew and Latine, l. 1.p.47
Who the author of it, and who the best Interpreters of it, ib.
Cardinals of Rome, what they are, l.6.p.668, 669
Carnal-confidence condemned, l.4.p.439,440
Carpocrations, l.4.p.501
Catharists, ib.
Catholicks, the Papists falsly so called, l. 6. p. 626.m.
Ceremonies under the Law had relation to Christ l.5.p.549,550
Circumcellions, l 4.p.501,502

Chaldee Paraphrase.

The Chaldee Paraphrase of the Old Testament, why so called, of great esteem with the Jews, l.1.p.73
When written, ib.
Some part of the Old Testament written in Chaldee, l.1.p.70,72

Change.

A reasonable creature may be Changed many wayes, l.2.p.179
God is unchangeable every way, ib.
Children their duty, l.9.p.1112,1113
Chiliasts condemned, l.1.p.64

Christ.

Christ set forth three wayes in Scripture, l.5.p. 556,557
Was represented by the Levitical Ceremonies and Sacrifices, l.5.p.549,550
Christ is the great and free gift of God, l.5.p.550, 551
Is God, l.2.p.257,to 263
Why, and how he is God, l.5.p.554,555,556
Was Man, why and how he was Man, l.5 p. 534,535,556,to 562
Why born of a Virgin, l.5 p.561
When and where he was born, ib.
He was the Messiah promised of old, l.5.p. 562
Superlatively holy, l 5.p.553,554
God and Man in one Person, l.5.p 564,to567
He was a Saviour, Redeemer, Mediator, Surety, Christ, a Lord, l 5.p.566,to 572
He merited nothing by his death for himself, l.5.p.575,to 580
Christ what, l.5.p.576
A Priest, l 5.p.576,to 583
A Propher, l.5.p.576
A King, l.5.p.587,to 591
Christs double state of Humiliation and Exaltation, l.5.p 535,to 540
He died not for all, l.5. p.602,603,608,to 617
He died in our stead, l.5 p.584.m.
How he is begotten of the Father l.5.p.259, 260
Chronicles, who the authors of them, and the best Expositors of them, l.1.p.43,44

Chryſoſtom commended, l.1.p.136,137

Church.

Church, what it ſignifieth, l.5.p.541,& l.6.p.618,to 627
Why Catholick and holy, l.6.p.623,624
The true Church hath given teſtimony to the Scripture in all ages, l.1.p.18,19
We are firſt moved to hearken to the Scriptures, becauſe of the Churches teſtimony, l.1.p 24
It hath a four-fold office in reſpect of the Scripture, l.1 p.25
The Church of Rome will not ſuffer the Scripture to be read in a known tongue without ſpecial leave. l.1. p.26
The Marks of the Church, l.6.p.625
Whether it may erre, l.6. p.627,628
The Church of Rome Apoſtatical, l.6.p.626
There is a Church-government, and who have the power, l.6.p.645,to 648, & 655
How Church-members are to be qualified, l.6.p.658,669
Circumciſion, two things conſidered in it, l.1.p.118
Clemency, what in God, l.2.p 207
Clouds, a great work of God, l.3.p.304,305
Coloſſe the chief City of Phrygia, l.1.p.59
Coloſſians, who beſt expound it, ib.
Collyridians, l.4 p.501

Combate.

The ſpiritual Combate between the fleſh and Spirit, l.8.p.1016.1017,1018

Coming.

Chriſts ſeveral Comings, l.10.p.1157
How his firſt and ſecond Coming agree and differ, *ib.*m.

Commandments.

Commandments, General rules for interpreting them, l.9.p.1029.1030,1031
The general ſins againſt the Commandments of each Table. l.9.p.1031,1032,& 1041,1042
The diviſion of the Commandments, l.9.p.1023,1024
The firſt Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1033,to 1044
The ſecond Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1044,to 1071
The third Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1071,to 1095
The fourth Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1095,to 1109
The fifth Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1109,to 1126
The ſixth Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1126,to 1134
The ſeventh Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1134,to 1142
The eighth Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1142,to 1145
The ninth Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1145,to 1147
The tenth Commandment interpreted and handled, l.9.p.1147,to 1152

Communion.

Communion with Chriſt, l.7.p.706,707
Communion of the Saints, wherein it conſiſts, l.5.p.542.& l.6.p.669,670
Concordances, which the beſt, l.1.p.131
Concupiſcence a ſin, l.4.p.390
Conference of the Scriptures, l.1.p.32,33

Confeſſion.

Auricular Confeſſion not neceſſary to the pardon of ſin, l.7.p.721,722
We muſt make a Confeſſion or profeſſion of the truth, l.5.p.1081,1082
Carnal confidence, l.4 p.439,440
Chriſtian, l.7.p.810

Conſcience.

Conſcience, what it is, l.2.p.148,& l.7.p.755
And the force of it to prove that there is a God, ib.

Contentedneſſe.

Contentedneſſe required in the laſt Commandment, and deſcribed, l.9.p.1149,1150
Motives and means, l.9.p.1150,1151

Converſion.

Converſion, what it is, l.7.p.680,681
Wherein it differs from falſe Converſion, l.7.p.683
The properties of it, l.7.p.681,682
Motives to, and means of Converſion, l.7.p.682,to 685
Corinth, the metropolis in Achaia, l.1. p.59
Corinthians, the beſt Expoſitors of both Epiſtles, ib.

Councels.

The Florentine and Trent Councel cenſured, l.1.p.69,70
The true interpretation of Scripture not to be ſought from General Counſels, l.1.p.142
Councels, what they are, l.6.p.651,652,653
Who hath the power of calling Councels, and who are to be called to them, l.6.p.653
Whether General Councels may erre, and whether they be above the Pope, l.6.p.653,654
Whether there be Evangelical Councels, l.8.p.1013,1014

Courage.

Courage, what it is, its kinds, l.7.p.572
It muſt be well ordered, l.7.p.573
Motives to, and Means of Chriſtian Courage, ib.
Covenant of Redemption Grace, l.5.p.546,547 548,
Covetouſneſſe, l.4. p.441,442,443

Creation.

Creation taken two wayes, l.3 p.280
Deſcribed, and the deſcription explained, ib.
Conſectaries from the Creation, l.3.p.284,285

Creator

Creator of all things God, l.5 p.532

Creature.

Creatures made in the six daies, l.3.p.287,to 286
Every Creature is limited, l.2.p.289,290

Creed.

Creed, why so called, l.5 p 521
Why it is called the Apostles Creed, l.5. p.521, 522
Its authority, dignity, and antiquity, l.5.p 522, to 525
It is larger now than it was at the first, l.5. p. 524,525
Its division, l.5.p.525,526
It is not a Prayer, l.5.p.526
The Creed in several languages, l.5.p.428
Rules for the use and understanding of it, l.5. p.529
Adversaries to it, ibid.
All Christians agree in the Apostles Creed, l.5. p.529,530
The Apostles Creed handled specially, l.5.p.530, to 546
Crocodile, its huge bignesse, l.3.p.326
The meaning of that Proverb, Crocodili lacrimæ, ibid.
Crucifix what, l.5.p.356
Of the Crosse in Baptism, p.933,934
Cruelty a great sin, l.4.p.444,445
Crystal and Crystal-glasses, l.3.p.307
Cursing, l.4.p.445,446
Cyprian commended, l.1.p.137

D

Dangers: Christs Dangers, l.5.p.596

Daniel.

Daniel, when he wrote his Prophecy, l.1.p.49
Wrote much of it in Chaldee, ibid.
The best Expositors of him, ibid.
Dates, why so called, l.3.p.319.m.& l.7.p.755

Day.

Day, what it is, l.3.p.300
Its Creation a great work and usefull, ibid. & p.301
Its names in Greek and Latine, l.3.p.300.m
Death, Christs Death painfull, shamefull, cursed, l.5.p.601
Debts, why sins are called Debs, l.8.p.898
Decalogue, who first used that word, p.1021
And why so called, p.1022
Deceit, l.4.p.446,447

Decree.

Decree, what it is, l.3.p.268,269
Gods Decree described, p. 269
The properties of it, p.270
It is two-fold, ibid.
Consectaries from it, l.3.p.278

Deity.

Hereticks that opposed Christs Deity, and the holy Ghosts, l.2.p.256,261,265,266

Delight.

Delight in the Scripture, l.1.p.147
Delight of the Saints manifold, l.7.p.777

Demonstration.

Two kinds of Demonstrations, l.2.p.147.m

Descend.

Descend into hell, what that Article in the Creed means, l.5.p.604,to 608
Desire, the nature of it, Gods image in it, its corruption and sanctification, l.7.p.772,to 776
Despaire, what it is, l.7.p.786

Devils.

There are Devils, l.2 p 152,153
Devils, their names and nature, l.3.p.350,351
Their sinne, and why they fell irrecoverably with the time of their fall, l.3.p.351,352
They are malicious, subtle, powerfull, l.3 p.352, to 355
Questions about them resolved, l.3. p.354,to 357
Corollaries from the Devils, l.3.p.357,358

Deuteronomy.

Why the fifth Book of Moses is so called, l 1. p 42
The best Expositors of it, ib.
Dew what, l.3.p.306
How we Dishonour God inwardly and outwardly, l.9.p.1089,to 1092
Discipline, wherein it consists, l.9.p.1060,1061
Wherein abused, l.9.p.1068,1069
Distraction in duty, l 4.p.847
Distrust, l.4.p.447
Divination, l.4.p.447,448

Divinity.

Divinity that it is, l.1.p.1
What it is, l.1.p.1,2
Its definition and several kinds, l.1.p.2,3
How it is to be taught, l.1.p.3,4
How to be learned, l.1.p.4
The opposites of it, ibid.
Its excellency, p.4,5
The rule and matter of it, l.1.p.6
The English excel in practical Divinity, l.1.p.4
Division, l.4.p.448,449
Dogs faithfull to men, l.3.p.332,333
Dolphin very swift, l.3 p.327
A great lover of man, ib.

Dominion.

Dominion, What it is, l.2.p.185
God hath supream Dominion over all creatures, l.2.p.185,186

Donatiſts, l.4.p.502
Drunkenneſſe, l.4.p.449,to 452
Duel unlawful, l.9.p.1132,1133

E

Eagle flies high,ſees accutely, and is tender of her young, l.3.p.328,329

Earth.

Earth, whence that word is derived, l.3 p.294
The Creation of it a ſpecial work of God,l.3. p.295,296
Its circular motion refuted, l.3.p.295.m

Earthquake.

Earthquake, the cauſe of it, l.3.p.295.m
It is general or particular, ibid.
Eating and drinking, how ſanctified, l.7.p.805
Ebionites, l.4.p.502

Eccleſiaſtes.

Eccleſiaſtes, why ſo called,its Author, l.1.p.47
The ſumme of it, and the beſt Interpreters of it. ibid.

Election.

Election, what the word ſignifies, l.3.p.278
It is deſcribed, l.3.p.273
And the deſcription explained, ibid.
What the object of it, l.3.p.273,274
The end of it, p.274
Neither foreſeen faith,nor foreſeen works the cauſe of it, l.3.p.274,275
All are not Elected, l.3.p.275,276
There is an Election of perſons, l.3.p.276
Element what, and the number of the Elements, l.3.p.294,295
Elephant, his magnitude and underſtanding, l.3. p.332
Empty, no vacuum or meer empty place,l.3.p.315
Enthuſiaſts, l.4.p.503
Envy, l.4.p.451,452
Epicure confuted, l.3.p.375

Epiſtles.

Epiſtles,why ſo called, l.1.p.57
How they are divided, and who beſt expounds them, ibid.
In what order they were written,l.1.p.57,58
Epheſians, who beſt expound it, l.1.p.59
Eraſmus commended, l.1.p.135.& m & 116.m
Error, l.4.p.489,490

Eſther.

Eſther,why ſo called,and by whom written,l.1. p.44
Who are the beſt Expoſitors of it, ibid.

Eternity.

The world not Eternal, l.3.p.281, to 284
God is Eternal, l.2.p.176,to 179
What Eternity is, l.2.p.176

Evangeliſts.

Evangeliſts, who, l.1.p.55
The harmony and difference between them, l.1.p.53
Euchita, l.4.p.503
Eutychians, ibid.& 504

Evil.

Evil, what it is, l.8.p.903
What deliverance from Evil means,l.8.p.903, 904
Excommunication, what it is and its parts, l.6 p. 646,547

Exodus.

Exodus,why the ſecond Book of Moſes is ſo called, l.1 p.41 Contains a hiſtory of above a hundred years, ibid.
The beſt Expoſitors of it, ibid.
Expoſitors of Scripture, who are the beſt among the Jews, Fathers, Papiſts, Proteſtants, l.1.p. 133,to 141

Ezekiel.

Ezekiel, what it ſignifies, l.1 p.49
When he propheſied, ibid.
The beſt Expoſitors of it, ibid.

Ezra.

Ezra, who the Author of it, l.1.p.44
The beſt Expoſitor of it, ibid.

F

Faculty.

Faculty what, l.7.p.749
Three reaſonable Faculties in man, ibid.

Faith.

Faith, what it is, l.5.p.520. l.7.p.691, to 706
How taken in the New Teſtament,l.7.p.691, 692
Three things in it, l.7.p.692,693
Its object and acts, p.693,to 698
Its ſubject, l.7.p.696,697
The degrees of faith, l.7.p.698,699
Faith of Adherence and Aſſurance, ibid.
Its end is everlaſting life, l.7.p.699
How it is wrought, p.700
How it differs from hope, p.699
It is an excellent grace, l.7.p.700,701
Whether Infants have Faith,and whether it be in the glorified Saints, l.7.p.701,702
Whether juſtifying Faith be commanded in the Decalogue,whether it or repentance precede l.7.p.702,703
Chriſtians ſhould endeavour to live by Faith,and what it is to live by it, l.7.p.703.704
And die in the Faith, l.7.p.704,705
Motives to get Faith, and helps to it, l.7.p.705, 706
Whether Faith alone doth juſtifie, l.7.p.897

And how, l.7.p.697,698
Faith, required to the Sacrament, p.983,to 985

Faithfull.

God is Faithfull, l.2.p.223,to 225
What Faithfullneſſe is, l.2.p.224,to 230
Miniſters muſt be Faithfull in their calling, l.6. p.636
Fall of man, l.4.p.379,to 385

Familiſts.

Familiſts reſt wholly in an immediate private ſpirit, l.1.p.21
Confuted, l.4.p.504,505

Faſting.

What religious Faſting is, l.8.p.1005,1006
What we muſt abſtain from, l.8.p.1006
The ends and means of a religious Faſt, l.8. p.1006,1007
The uſual time of a Faſt and for Faſting, l.8. p.1007,1008
The Popiſh Faſting condemned, l.8. p.1008, 1009

Fathers.

Father, how God is our Father, l.5.p.531,& l.8. p.882,to 885
Fathers, what they were, l.1.p.134
Some of them commended, l.1.p.134,to 139
Origen and Jerom cheefeſt Hebricians of them, l.1.p.80,135

Fear.

Fear, what it is, the kinds of Fear, the meaſure of it, l.7.p.788,789
How it is taken, its object and effects, l.7.p. 788,789
Chriſts great Fear, l.5.p.597

Feaſting.

Holy Feaſting, the nature of it, and helps to it, l.8.p.1009,1010
Fire, l.3.p.298
Fiſhes, a great work of God, l.3.p.325,326

Flattery.

Flattery, l.4.p.452,453
Flight, what it is, l.7.p.775,776

Forgiveneſſe.

Forgiveneſſe of ſins what, l.5.p.543. l.7.p.719
Every one of Chriſts ſubjects hath his ſins forgiven, l.7.p.719
The Forgiveneſs of ſins is free and full, l.7.p.719, 720
God only forgives ſins, l.7.p.721
What is the meaning of the fifth Petition of the Lords Prayer, l.8.p.856,to 991
Auricular confeſſion not neceſſary to Forgiveneſs of ſins, l.7.p.721,722
Fornication why ſo called, l.9.p.1138
Fowls, their nature and uſe, l.3.p.328,to 332
Free-will, l.7.p.685,to 691
Froſt, what it is, l.3.p.306

G

Galatians, who beſt expound it, l.1.p.59

Geneſis.

Why the firſt Book of Moſes is ſo called, l.1.p.41
Contains a Hiſtory of above two thouſand years, ibid.
The beſt Expoſitors of it, ib.
Why the Jews might not read in the beginning of Geneſis, the beginning and end of Ezekiel, nor in Canticles, ibid.
The firſt Chapter of it divided, l.3.p.287

Gentiles.

Gentiles, many predictions of their converſion, l.1.p.12
Some of them give teſtimony to ſundry paſſages in the Scripture, l.1.p.20

Ghoſt.

The holy Ghoſt is God, l.2.p.262,263
Why called Ghoſt, and holy, and what it is to believe in him, l.5.p.539,540

Glory.

Glory, what it is in God, and its ſeveral acceptions, l.2.p.239,230
The difference between praiſe, honour and Glory, l.2.p.240
Gloria, whence derived, ibid.
How Gods Glory is manifeſted, l.2.p.241
A double Glory in things, l.2.p.242
Conſectaries from Gods Glory, l.2.p.243,to 247
Glorifie, We muſt deſire chiefly to Glorifie God, l.5.p.888

Glorious.

God is Glorious, l.2.p.239,241,242
Gluttony, l.4.p.453,454
Gnoſticks, l.4.p.505

God.

How he is called in ſeveral languages, l.2.p.144
That there is a God, l.2.p.144,to 156
The knowledge of God is neceſſary, profitable, difficult, l.2.p.144
We know God three wayes, l.2.p.145
There is a three-fold knowledg of God, ibid.
What God is, l.2.p.158,159
And whence God comes, l.2.p.154.m
How the word God is taken in Scripture, l.2. p.158,159
The ſeveral names of God, l.2.p.159
His Attributes, what they be, ibid.
How they differ from Properties, and what rules are to be obſerved in attributing them to God, l.2.p.160
How his Attributes are divided, l.2.p.161
Sweeten every condition, l.7.p.722

Good.

God is Good, the chiefeſt good, l.2.p.208,to 111

Goodneſſe.

Goodneſſe, what it is, and what in God, l. 2. p. 208, 209
The properties of his Goodneſſe, and the difference between his Goodneſſe and that in the creature, l. 2. p. 209, 210

Goſpel.

Goſpel was written by many, and why, l. 1. p. 53
Why they are called Goſpels, l. 1. p. 54
Its ends and parts, the terms of it, l. 8. p. 977, to 980
Sins againſt the Goſpel greater than againſt the Law, l. 8. p. 890
Government Eccleſiaſtical in whom, l. 6. p. 646

Grace.

Grace in Scripture ſet forth under divers notions, l. 7. p. 735
The beſt thing in this world, l. 7. p. 738
Reſtraining and renewing how different, l. 7. p. 740
Gracious. God is Gracious, l. 2. p. 211, to 214
Graſſe, a great work of God, l. 3. p. 318, 319

Great.

God is exceeding Great in nature, works and authority, l. 2. p. 182, 188

Greek.

The Greek Tranſlation of the Old Teſtament is not Authentical, l. 1. p. 74, 75
The Greek Text of the New Teſtament is not corrupted, l. 1. p. 92
Growth of grace, l. 8. p. 996, to 999
Guilt of ſin, what, l. 4. p. 397, 398

H

Habakkuk, when he wrote, and who beſt interpret him, l. 1. p. 50
Haggai, when he wrote, and who beſt interpret him, l. 1. p. 51
Hail, what, l. 3. p. 306, 307
Happy, God is Happy, l. 2. p. 244, 245

Hatred.

Hatred in God, what, l. 2. p. 204
What in us, and upon what it ſhould be exerciſed, l. 2. p. 204, 205
The Nature, Kinds and Cauſes of it, l. 7. p. 768
The object, quality and fruits of it, l. 7. p. 769, 770
The ſanctification of it, ibid.

Hearing.

Hearing the Word a duty, l. 8. p. 837
How we muſt Hear, l. 8. p. 837, 838

Heathens.

Heathens might by the light of nature know that there was a God, and that he was to be worſhipped, but could not know him ſavingly, l. 2. p. 145, 146
Nor be ſaved by the light of nature, l. 5. p. 552, 553, 570

Heaven.

The Creation of the Heavens is a wonderfull work of God, l. 3. p. 290, to 293
How the Heavens work upon inferiour bodies, l. 3. p. 292
The Philoſophers divide Heaven into divers orbs, the Scripture mentions only three Heavens, l. 3. p. 292, 293
We ſee not God in that great work of the Heavens, l. 3. p. 293, 294
Heaven is an excellent place, l. 8. p. 884, to 887

Hebrew.

Hebrew, why ſo called, l. 1 p. 37
The firſt tongue and a holy tongue, ibid.
Moſt of the Books of the Old Teſtament were written in Hebrew, ibid.
The Jews corrupted not the Hebrew Text, l. 1. p. 77, to 85
The Hebrew Text in the Old Teſtament Authentical, ibid.
Whether the Hebrew Text had Vowels or Pricks from the beginning, l. 1. p. 87, 88

Hebrews.

Hebrews, That Epiſtle is Canonical though rejected by ſome Hereticks, and Pauls, l. 1. p. 60, 61
And written in Greek, ibid.
Who beſt expound it, l. 1. p. 61
Helleniſts, who, l. 1 p. 66, 67
Helvidians, l. 4. p. 505
Hell, the torments and place, l. 10. p. 1165, to 1168
Herbs, their variety and uſe, l. 3. p. 317, 318
Hereſie, l. 4. p. 490, to 496

Hereticks.

Hereticks, wreſt the Scripture, l. 1. p. 34, 35
Hereticks which oppoſed Chriſts God-head and man-hood, l. 5. p. 563, 564
Herodians, l. 4. p. 505
High, God is moſt High, l. 2. p. 185

Hiſtory.

Hiſtory pleaſant, l. 1. p. 2.
None comparable to that of the Scripture, ibid.
What Books are called Hiſtorical in the New Teſtament, and why, l. 1. p. 54

Holy.

The Scripture is Holy, l. 1. p. 102, 103
The general nature of Holineſſe, l. 2. p. 231
What in man, what in God, l. 2. p. 231, to 234
God is Holy, ibid.
Conſectaries from Gods Holineſſe, l. 4. p. 233, 234

Hope.

Hope, What it is, the object, act and measure of it, l.7.p.785
The Image of God in it, its corruption, sanctification, l.7.p.785,786
Marks of a sanctified Hope, Motives to, and means of it, l.7.p.787

Horse.

Horse, an elegant description of him, l.3.p.334
Bucephalus, Alexanders and Banks his Horse, ibid.

Hosea.

Hosea, what it signifies, and when he prophesied l.1.p.49
The best Expositors of it, l.2.p.50
Humility what, an excellent grace, l.7.p.810, to 814
Hungring after Christ, l.8.p.995,996
Husband and wife, their mutual duties, l.9.p.1117, to 1121
Hypocrisie, l.4.p.455,456

I

James.

James, this Epistle was doubted of in ancient times, and why, l.1.p.62
What Luthers opinion was of it, ib.
Who best expound it, ib.
Jansenius commended, l.1.p.139
Ice what, l.3.p.307
Idlenesse, l.4.p.457,458

Idolatry.

Idolatry, what it is, l.9.p.1064,1065
A great sin, ib.& 1066

Jeremy.

Jeremy, when he prophesied, and who best expounds him, l.1.p.48
Jerome commended, l.1.p.140

Jesus.

Jesus, what it signifies, l.5.p.533,567,568
The Papists abuse that name four wayes, l.5.p.569
Bowing at that name taxed, l.5.p.570
Jesuites the Popes great pillars, but traiterous subjects, l.6.p.663,664

Jews.

Jews corrupted not the Hebrew text of the Old Testament, l.1.p.79,to 84
Their enmity to the Gospel, l.1.p.36
Who were the best Interpreters among them, l.1.p.133,134
Ignorance a great sin, l.4.p.458

Image.

Image and similitude the same, l.3.p.359
Of Idols and Images, l.9.p.1062
Images for worship condemned, ib. & 1063,to 1067
A four-fold Image or likenesse, and wherein the Image of God consisted, l.3.p.360,to 364 Immortal.

God is Immortal, l.2.p.169,170
A thing is Immortal two wayes, l.2.p.170
Four wayes, l.3.p.364
The soul of man Immortal, and the reasons of it, l.3.p.360,361,368

Immutable.

God Immutable, l.2.p.179,to 182
Impenitence, l.4.p.458,459

Imperfection.

Six Imperfections in all creatures, l.2.p.184
Imposition of hands why used, l.6.p.634
Imprecation, l.8.p.866

Imputation.

Imputation what, l.7.p.723
Of Adams sin, l.4.p.380,to 383
Of Christs righteousnesse, l.7.p.723,724

Incest.

Incest, a strange example of a horse about it, l.3.p.333

Independent.

God is Independent, l.2.p.188
Indulgences, the Pope cannot grant them, l.6.p.661

Infinite.

God is Infinite, l.2.170,171
Injustice, l.4.p.459
Intemperance, l.4.p.459,460

Inspiration.

Inspiration, what it is, l.1.p.7
Every part of Scripture is divinely Inspired, l.1.p.23

Intercession.

Christs Intercession what, l.5.p.578,to 582

Interpretation.

Interpretation of Scripture, l.1.p.125,to 143
Who the best Interpreters, l.1.p.133,to 140
Means to be used for understanding the Scripture, l.1.p.131,132,& 140,141

Invisible.

A thing is two wayes Invisible, l.2.p.165.m

Job.

Job, who the Author of it, l.1.p.44,45
Very ancient, ibid.
How divided, and who the best Expositors of it, l.1.p.44

Joel.

Joel, when he prophesied, and who best expound him, l.1.p.45

John.

John called the Divine by an excellency, l.1. p. 56
Describes our Saviours Divinity more expresly than any of the rest, l.1. p.56,57
Who best expound the Gospel, l.1.p.55
Who best interpret the Epistles, l.1. p 57
They are canonical, ibid.

Jonah.

Jonah, when he prophesied, and who best interpreted him, l.1.p.50

Josbuah.

Josbuah, why so called, l.1.p.42
The best Expositors of it, ib.

Joy.

Jovinians, l.4.p 305
Joy, the nature of the affection, Gods Image in it, its corruption and sanctification, l.7.p.776, 777
The properties of sanctified Joy, Motives, Marks and Means of it, l.7.p.779,780
Irenæus commended, l.1.p.137

Isaiah.

Isaiah elegant, oftner cited in the New Testament than any of the Prophets. l.1.p.48
The best Expositors of him, l.1.p.48
Of the bloud-royal, ibid.

Jude.

Jude, that Epistle is Apostolical, l.1.p.63
Who best expound it, ib.

Judges.

Judges, why so called, and who is the Author, l.1.p.42
The best Expositors of it, ibid.

Judgement.

The last Judgement, l.10.p.1157
All are to be judged, and by Christ, l.10.p.1158, to 1162
The day of Judgement terrible to the wicked, but comfortable to the godly, l.10. p.1159, 1160
The time uncertain, the place and signs of it, l.10.p.1157
The preparation and performance of it, and Collaries from it, l.10.p.1161,to 1164
Junius commended, l.1. p.138
Jurisdiction Ecclesiastical, l.6.p.645,646

Justice.

Whether inherent Justice be actual or habitual, l.7.p.717
Justice, what it is, l.7. p.813,814

Just.

God is Just, l.2. p.219,220
Whether God sees sin in the Just, l.7.p.724

Justification.

How the word is used in Scripture, and what Justification is, l.7.p.709,to 712
The difference between it and vocation, l.7. p.710
Whether all one with remission of sinnes, l.7. p.711
The parts of Justification, l.7. p.712,713,719, 720
One may be certain of his Justification, l.7.p.725, to 729
The several periods of Justification, l.7.p.713, 714

Justified.

Whether we be Justified by inherent or imputed righteousnesse, l.7.p.716,to 718
Whether we be Justified by Christs active and passive obedience, l.7.p.718
Whether faith alone Justifies, l.7.p.730, to 733

K

Kimchi commended, l.1.p.133

Kinde.

God is Kinde, l.2. p. 235

Kingdome.

Kingdome of God two-fold, l.8.p.889,890
The meaning of that Petition, Thy Kingdom come, ibid.

Kings.

Kings, why they are so called, the Authors of those two Books, and best Expositors of them, l.1.p.43
Knowledg, l.7.p.814,to 820
Required to the Sacrament, p.982

L

Labour, Christ underwent hard Labours for us, l.5.p.428
How our bodily Labours are sanctified, l.7. p.807,808
Lactantius commended, l.1.p.137

Lamentations.

Lamentations, why so called, l.1.p.48
Where and how long Jeremy prophesied, ibid.
Fit to write Lamentations, and why, ib.& 49
The best Expositors of it, ib.

Latine.

The several Latine Translations, l.1.p.77

The Vulgar Latine Translation, why so called, ibid.
Not Authentical, l.1.p.90,to 95
Which are the best Latine Translations of the New Testament, l.1.p.77

Law.

Law, what it is, l.9.p.1020,1021
The Moral, Judicial and Ceremonial Law, ib.
The Moral Law divided, p.1022,23
There are four precepts in the first Table, and six in the second, l.9.p.1023,1024
The Moral Law is in force in the Christian Church, l.9.p.1024, to 1027
It is a glasse, bridle, rule, p.1026,to 1030
The Law cannot be perfectly fulfilled in this life l.9.p.1151,1152
The Law divided by the Jews into fifty four Sections, l.1. p.40,41
Legends, why so called, l.1. p.31
Levellers, l.4 p.506

Leviticus.

Why the third Book of Moses is so called, l.1. p.42
The best Expositors of it, ib.

Lexicon.

Which are the best Lexicons for understanding the Hebrew and Greek text, l.1.p.132

Liberty.

The willing good necessarily hinders not Liberty, l.3.p.340,347.m, & 411,412
Libertines confuted, l.4. p.506

Life.

Several kinds of Life, l.2. p.167,168, & l.7. p. 745,746
How Gods Life differs from the life of the creatures, l.2. p.168,169
What spiritual Life is, l.7.p.745
Wherein natural Life and it agree and differ, ib.
Spiritual Life more excellent than the natural, l.7.p.745,746
Christians have a three fold spiritual Life, l.7.p 746.
Evidences of spiritual Life, Motives to it, and Means of it, l.7.p.747,748
Life everlasting, l.5. p.544,545, & l.10.p.1171, to the end.

Light.

Why the Scripture is called Light, l.1. p.118, 119,122,123
Light, an excellent work of God, l.3. p.299
Its abstruse nature and excellent use, ib.
Limbus Infantum & Patrum, l.10.p.1170

Lion.

A strange story of a Lion, l.3.p.334

Living.

God is Living, l.2.p.167,to 170

Long-suffering.

God is Long-suffering, l.2.p.230
Lord, l.5.p.533,534

Lot.

The nature and use of Lots, l.9.p.1076,1077
When abused, l.9.p.1087,to 1090

Love.

Love, what in God, l.2 p.200,201
The ends, effects and properties of it, l.2.p. 202
Our Love to him, l.2.p.203
The affection of Love in us what, l.7.p.763
Gods Image in it, ib.
Its corruption and sanctification, l.7. p.763, to 768
Is to be renewed before we come to the Sacrament, p.992,to 995

Luke.

Luke onely makes a Preface before his Gospel, and who best interpret him, l.1.p.56
The difference between Lumen and Lux, l.3. p. 299
The Lutherans confuted about the ubiquity of Christs body, l.2. p.176
Lying, l.4.p.461,462
Lyranus commended, l.1. p.139

M

Macedonians, l.4.p.507
Magistrate his duty, l.9.p.1123,1124
Maimonides commended, l.1.p.133
Malachy, when he wrote, and who best expound him, l.1.p.51
Maldonate commended, l.1.p.140
Malice, l. 4. p.462
Man made after Gods Image, l.3. p.359,360
Manichees confuted, l.4.p.507
Marcionites, l.4.p.507

Mary.

Four Maries in the Gospel, l.5 p.535

Mark.

Mark wrote in Greek, l.1.p.52,53,56. & l.3.p. 285
When he wrote, and who best expound him, l.1.p.140

Martyrs.

Divers suffered for the truth, l.1.p.18,19,20
How true Martyrs differ from false, l.1.p.20
Masius commended, l.1.p.140
Masora, what it is, l.1.p.80

Masse.

Masse, why so called, the evil of it, l.8.p.960, to 963
Private Masse unlawfull, l.8.p.963,964
It is not lawfull to be present at the Masse, l.8.p. 964
Massorites their exact diligence in numbring the words, and letters, and points of Scripture, l.1.p.79,80
Masters their duty, l.9.p.1170

Matthew.

Matthew wrote in Greek, l.1.p.52
Never any doubted of the authority of Matthew, l.1.p.56
When he wrote, and who best expound him, ib.

Mediatour.

Mediator who, and how Christ is our Mediator, l.5 p.572,to 576
Whether Christ was a Mediator according to both his Natures, l.5.p.574,575
Saints not Mediators, l.5.p.574

Meditation.

Meditation, what it is, and helps to it, l.1.p.32
When it is fit to Meditate of the creatures, l.3. p.287.m
Marks to try when we meditate fruitfully of the creatures, ib.

Meek.

How God is Meek, l.2.p.207
Melchisedechians, l.4 p.508
Memory, what it is, its sanctification, l.7. p.757

Mercy.

Mercy, what in God, l.2.p.215,to218
How his Mercy differs from mercy in us, l.2. p. 215,216
On what terms, and to whom he will shew Mercy, l.2.p.217
What i nus, l.7. p.820,to 825
Merit, the conditions of it, l.7. p.715

Metals.

Metals what, l.3.p.308
Which most precious, ib.m
Meteors, what they are, their several kinds and matter, l.3. p.302,303

Micah.

Micah, when he prophesied, and who expound him well, l.1.p.50
Millenaries, l.4. p.508,to 510

Minister.

Minister his calling, l.6.p,628,629
The Minister afore the Church, l.6.p.630,to 634 & l.9.p.1120,1121
His duty, l.6.p.635,to 638
The honour of that function, and their maintenance, l.6.p.637,638

Miracles.

Miracles of Confirmation and Preservation, l.1. p.16,17,18
How true and false Miracles differ, l.1.p.17
What they are, l.2.p.152
Monothelites, l.4.p.509

Monks.

Monks, why so called, they are highly honoured by Papists, l.6.p.665,to 669

Moon.

Moon, how called in Latine and Hebrew, l.3.p. 323
It is the cause of the Seas ebbing and flowing, ib.
Montanists, l.4.p.509,510

Mortal.

All men are Mortal, l.2 p.169.m.
Mortification, l.7.p.744
Mountains a great work of God, l.7.p.741

Murder.

Murder, what it is, l.9.p.1126
A crying sin, l.9.p.1128,1129
Self-murder a great sin, l.9.p.1130,to 1133
Murmuring, l.4.p.403
Musick, whether lawfull in the Church, p.841, 842

Mystery.

Mystery of the Trinity a great Mystery, l.2.p.267

N

Nahum.

Nahum when he wrote, and who expound him best, l.1.p 50

Name.

What is meant by Gods Name, l.8.p.887
What it is to take Gods Name in vain, ib.

Navigation.

The art of Navigation a great work, l.3.p.314, 315
Usefull, l.3.p.315
Nazianzen commended, l.1.p.136

Necessary.

The Scripture is Necessary, l.1.p.101
God is a Necessary Essence, l.2.p.187,188

Nehemiah.

Nehemiah, why so called, l.1.p.44
The best Expositors of it, ib.
Nestorians, l.4.p.510
Nicolaitans, l.4. p.510

Night.

Night, what. l.3.p.300
Its usefullnesse, l.3.p.300,301
Novatians, l.4. p.510,511

Numbers.

Numbers, why the fourth Book of Moses is so called, l.1. p.42
The best Expositors of it, ib.

O

Oath.

Oath, the nature and use of it, l.9.p.1073,to 1076,& 1087

The abuſes of it, l.9.p.1004

Obadiah.

Obadiah, when he propheſied, l.1.p.50
Dr Rainolds expounds him well, ib.

Obedience.

Obedience, what it is, l.7.p.752
Its kinds, ib.

Obey.

We ſhould Obey God, and why, l.2.p.199, & l.7.p.752,753. See p.1018,1019

Obſcure.

Many things in the Scripture Obſcure and difficult, l.1.p.121,122
And why, l.1.p.122
The difference between Mare and Oceanus, l.3. p.313,314
Officers of the Church, l.6.p.627,628

Omnipotent.

God is Omnipotent, l.2. p.236,to 239
Conſectaries from Gods power, l.2.p 238,239

Omnipreſent.

God is Omnipreſent, l.2.p.173,174
Chriſts body is not, l.2.p.176

Omniſcient.

God is Omniſcient, l.2.p.191,to 197

One.

God is wholly One, l.2.p.188,to 192
Oppreſſion, l.4. p.464
Ordinances, l.7.p.834,to 838

Ordination.

Ordination of Miniſters, l.6.p.633,634
Diſtinguiſhed from election, l.6.p.633

Origen.

He was the firſt Commentator on the Scripture, l.1. p.120
Origen commended for his diligence, l.1.p.135
Cenſured, ib.

P

Palm-tree, what, l.3.p.319,320
Papiſts confuted, l.2.p.213.l.4.p.390

Paradiſe.

Paradiſe, where, l.3.p.365,366
Whether deſtroyed by the floud, l.3.p.366

Paraphraſe.

The ſeveral Chaldee Paraphraſes, l.1.p.73
The uſe of the Chaldee Paraphraſes is very great l.1. p.73,74
Parents duties to their children, l. 9. p.1114, 1115

Paſtors.

Paſtors their names, they were of years before they entred into that function, l.6.p.627,628
Their Office vindicated, l.6.p.628,to 631

Patient.

God is Patient, l.2.p.229,230
What Patience is in us, l.2.p.231, & 825,826
Patropaſſians, l.4.p.511
Paul a great Champion of grace, l.2.p.213,214
Peace, l.7.p.827,828
Pearls, which beſt, and why they are called uniones in Latine, l.3.p.309
Pelagians, l.4.p.511,512

Perfect.

The Scripture is Perfect, l.1.p.103,to 114
God is Perfect, l.2.p.183,184

Perſon.

Perſon in the Trinity, the word uſed in Scripture, l.2. p. 251
The word may well be uſed, ib.
What a Perſon is, l.2. p.253
Several things required to a Perſon, l.2.p.254, 255
The communion and diſtinction of the Perſons in the Trinity, l.2.p.264

Pelagius.

Pelagius mentions grace often but hides his meaning, l.2. p.214
He ſaith, Grace is given for our merits, l.2. p.212
Pelagians confuted, l.4.p.388,389,416.m.

Pentateuch.

Pentateuch, why ſo called, l.1.p.40
Contains a Hiſtory from the beginning of the world to the death of Moſes, ib.
Who have written well on it, l.1.p.41
People, the duty of people to their Miniſters, l.9. p.1120
Perfectioniſts, l.4.p.512
Perjury, l.4.p.464,465
Perſeverance, l.7.p.825,830

Peter.

Whether he exerciſed a primacy at Rome, l.6.p. 456,457
Peter, who beſt expound both thoſe Epiſtles, l.1. p.63
Philemon, who beſt interpret him, l.1.p.60
Philippians, who beſt interpret it, l.1.p.59
Photinians, l.4.p.513
Piſcator commended, l.1.p.138,& 513

Plain.

The Scripture is Plain in fundamentals, l. 1. p. 122, 123
Poetical Books of Scripture, l.1. p 44
Polygamy, l.4.p.465,466

Poor.

Chriſt was Poor for our ſakes, l.5.p.425,427

Popes.

Pope.

Pope, what the word signifies, l.6.p.658
Whether the Pope of Rome be Antichrist, l.6.p. 657,to 661
Whether there was a woman Pope, l.4. p.460
Whether he be Christs Vicar, above all other Bishops,above Kings,can make Laws to bind the conscience, determine controversies of faith, l.6.p.650,to 653
Whether he can pardon sins, l.6. p.662,663
The Papists make the Pope a god in divers particulars, l.6.p.670.m
He cannot confer Indulgences, l.6.p.661
Several other questions concerning the Pope, ib. & 662, 663
Popery, l.4.p.413,414

Postils.

Postils,what they are, l.1.p.40
Censured, ib.

Prayer.

What it is, l.8.p.842,843
Prayer must be to God alone, not Saints,l.8. p. 842,843,848
And in Christs name, l.8.p.843,to 846
How we must pray, l.8.p.846,847
Kinds of Prayer, l.8. p.847,849
The excellency of Prayer, l.8.p 855,856
Helps to Prayer, l.8.p.856,857
It is a duty to pray daily, l.8. p.856,to 861
Objections against Prayer answered, l.8.p.861, 862
Kinds of Prayer, l.8.p.862,863,864,865,&c.
Mental and vocal Prayer, l.8. p.871,872
Sodain and composed Prayer, l.8.p.871
Set and prescribed Prayer, ib.& 872,873
Publick, l. 8. p.873
What gesture we should use in Prayer,l.8 p.875 876
The place and time of Prayer, l.8.p.877
Prayer toward the East condemned, ib.
What we must do after, ib & p.878
The Lords Prayer opened, l.8.p.878,to 907
Corollaries from the defects of our Prayers, l.8. p.852, to 858
Motives and means to Prayer, l.8.p.854,to 858
The efficay of Prayer, l.8.p 856
The godly must pray and persevere in Prayer, l. 8 p.858, to 861
Who not to be prayed for, l.8.p.865,866

Preaching.

Preaching, what it is, l.6.p.639,to 645
Whether private persons not in office may preach, l.6 p.640,to 643
How Ministers must preach, l.6.p.625,636
Ministers must preach often,and denounce Gods judgements against sinners, l.6.p.642,643

Predestination.

Predestination what, l.3.p.270,to 273
How it differs from Election and Providence, l.3.p.272
The parts of it, ib.
The errour of the Predestinati,l.3.p.278. & l.4. p.514
Predictions of Scripture most true, l.1.p.12

Prescience.

Gods Prescience or fore-knowledge, l.1 p.12.& l.2. p.197

Present.

God is every where Present, l.2.p.173, to 177
Presumption, what, l.7.p.579

Pride.

Pride a great sin, l.4 p.466,to 469
The punishment of it, l.5 p.565.m

Principle.

A double Principle in Divinity, l.1.p.6
How Principles may be demonstrated, l. 2. p. 146.m
Priscillianists, l.4.p.469

Prophets.

How the Prophetical Books are divided,l.1.p.47
Why twelve Prophets are called the lesser, l.1.p. 49
Who best expound the lesser Prophets, ib.

Promise.

Promises of and to Grace, l.7.p.697
What the Promises are ib.

Proverbs.

Proverbs by whom written,their excellency, l. 1.p.46,47
The best Expositors of it, ib.

Providence.

Providence, whence, l.3.p.369.m
That it is,and what it is, l.3.p.369,370
The object of it, l.3.p.370,371
The kinds of it, l.3.p.372,to 378
An objection against it answered, l.3.p.374, 375

Psalms.

Psalms,how called in Hebrew, l.1 p.45
Often quoted in the New Testament, ib.
Who the Author of them, l.1.p.46
And how divided, ib.
The best Expositors of it, ib.
A choice Book, ib.
The Turks swear solemnly by Davids Psalms,ib.
Psychopannychites, l.4.p 514

Pure.

The Scripture is Pure, l.1.p.102,103
Purgatory confuted, l.10. p.1168,1169,1170

Q

Quakers, l.4.p.515,516

Rabbins,

R

Rabbins, some censured, others commended, l.1.p.133,134
Railing, l.4.p.469,470

Rain.

Rain a great work of God, l.3. p.305,306
Rain-bow, the cause of it, l.3.p.306
Its several colours, ibid.
Rantors, l.4.p.516

Reading.

Who are commanded to read the Scripture, l.1. p.26,27
The Scripture is to be read publickly and privately, l.1.p.28,29,30
What Reading the Scripture is, ibid.
The Scripture read may be the instrument of Regeneration, ibid.
How the Scripture is to be read, l.1.p.31
Rebaptizing condemned, l.8.p.931,932
Rebellion against God and man, l.4.p.470,to 473
Recreations and sports how sanctified, l.7.p.806, 807

Recovery.

What mans Recovery is, l.5.p.546,to 551
Redeemer, Christ how, l.5.p.570,571
Redemption, what, ibid

Religion.

Three characters of the true Religion, l.1.p.6
Remora, able to stay the greatest Ship under sail, l.3.p.326

Repent.

How God is said to repent, and how not, l.2. p. 180
Repentance, what in us, l.8.p.986,to 990
Required before we come to the Lords Supper, l.8.p.898, 899

Reproach.

Christ reproached for our sakes, l.5.p.595,596

Reprobation.

Reprobation, what it signifies, and what it is, l.2. p.276,277
The word taken three wayes, and five evil consequences of it, l.2.p.277
Consectaries of Election and Reprobation, l.2.p. 278,279

Resurrection.

Christ rose from the dead, and why, l.5.p.609, to 613
Our Resurrection, l.5.p.543,544. & l.10.p.1154, to 1157

Revelation.

The manner of Gods revealing his will threefold, l.1.p.6
God revealed some things not revealed in Scripture, l.1.p.22
A double kind of Revelation, ib.
The Book of Revelation, why so called, l.1.p.63
It is Canonical, l.1.p.64
Difficult, ib.
The best Interpreters of it, l.1.p.65
Revenge, l.4.p.472,473

Reverence.

Reverence, l.7.p.796,797
In worship, l.9.p.1059,1060

Righteousnesse.

Whether original Righteousnesse was natural to Adam, l.3.p.364
The Properties of original Righteousnesse, l.3.p. 364,365
Christs Righteousnesse is ours, l.7.p.711,712,723, 724
Marks to try whether we have it, and means to get it, l.7.p.724

Rivers.

Rivers, Their original use and motion, l.3.p.312, 313
The River Nilus, ib.

Romans.

Romans an excellent Epistle, l.1.p.59
Who best expound it, ib.

Rule.

The properties of a Rule, l.1.p.98
The Scripture is the Rule of faith and life, ibid. & 99

Ruth.

Ruth, by whom written, l.1.p.42,43
The best Expositors of it, ib.

S

Sabbath.

Sabbath, l.9.p.1100,to 1103
It is moral, l.9.p.1103,1108
Sabellians, l.4.p.516

Sacraments.

Sacraments, their name and nature, l.8.p.907,908
The Church hath ever had Sacraments, l.8.p 908,909.
The use of Sacraments, and their parts, l.8.p.909
The necessity and efficacy of the Sacraments, l.8. p. 910,911
How the Sacraments of the Jewish Church, and ours agree, and how they differ, l.8.p.911,912
The Sacraments of the New Testament onely two, l.8.p.912,913,914
Sacraments are to be dispensed onely by a Minister, l.8. p.914,915
The use of the Sacraments of the New Testament, l.8.p.914
Sacrifice, l.5.p.582
Sadduces confuted, l.3.p.348
Saints on earth, l.2.p.234
Samosatenus, l.4.p.516

Samuel.

The Authors of the two Books of Samuel, and the best Expositors of them, l.1. p. 43

Sanctification.

What it is to sanctifie God, l.8.p.887,888
Sanctification, what, l.7 p.733,to 736
Its parts and properties, l.7.p.735
Why all godly men must be pure and holy, l.7. p.736,737
The excellency of Sanctification, l.7.p.738
It is imperfect here, and why, l.7. p.739
Evidences of Sanctification, and means to get it, l.7. p.739,740
The Sanctification of the whole man soul and body, l.7.p.748,to 751
Of the mind, l.7. p.749
Of the will, l.7. p.750,to 754
Of the conscience, l.7.p.754,to 757
Of the memory, l.7.p.757
Of the affections, l.7.p.758,to 761
Of the sensitive appetite, l.7.p.799,to 802
Of mans body, and all the external actions, l.7.p.801,to 805

Satisfaction.

Christ satisfied for us, l.5.p.579,580,583,584
The difference between merit and satisfaction, l.5.p.584

Saviour.

Christ is our Saviour, and how, l.5.p.567,to 590

Scandal, l.4.p.473,474
Schism, l.4.p.474,475
Schoolmen taxed, l.1.p.34
Scientia media, an errour, l.3.p.273.m

Scripture.

It is the rule of Divinity, l.1.p.6
Three general characters to know any word to be the word of God, ib.
God revealed himself divers wayes to the Fathers, ib.
The divers Epithetes of the Scripture, l.1. p.7
Why called the word of God, l.1. p.7.m
Why the Scripture, ib.
The Divine Authority of the Scriptures proved by many reasons, l.1.p.6,to 22
A description of the Scripture, l.1.p.8
The Scripture is not repugnant to humane reason and polity, l.1.p.23
It is for it self worthy to be believed and known to be of God, by it self, ib.
It hath its authority from it self, not the Church, l.1.p.23,24
It is to be read by the common people, l.1.p. 26,to 31
How it is to be read, l.1.p.31,32
Many contemn and unreverently handle the Scripture, l.1.p.31
The Canonical Books of Scripture, l.1.p.36,37
Of the Old and New Testament, l.1.p.50
What parts of Scripture have been questioned, l. 1.p.54
The Authentical Edition of Scripture, l.1. p.78, 79,80
Whether any Books of the Scripture be lost, l.1. p.86,87
Whether the Scriptures of the Old Testament had points from the beginning, l.1. p.87,88
The end of the Scripture, l.1.p.94.95
The Properties of the Scripture, its Divine Authority, truth, it is the rule of faith and life, necessity, purity, perfection, perspicuity, l.p.96 to 125
The interpretation of the Scripture, l.1. p.125
1. Its divers senses, l.1. p.125,to 128
2. To whom belongs the chief authority to expound Scripture, l.1.p 127,to 132
3. The means which must be used in the Interpretation of it, l.1.p.131,132

Sea.

Sea, a great work of God, the making of it, l.3.p. 309,310
Why called mare, p.309.m
Divers Questions about it answered, l.3.p.309, to 312

Sedition, l.4.p.476
Seekers, l.4.p.516
Self-love, l.4.p.477,478
Self-denial, l.7.p.830,831
Self-seeking, l.4.p.478,479

Septuagint.

Septuagint, the Greek translation of the Old Testament, l.1.p.74,75
Is not authentical, l.1.p.88,89

Serpents.

Serpents, a three-fold profit redounds to us from them, l.3 p.335
Why Satan is called the old Serpent, l.4.p.380

Servants.

Two kinds of them, three things commend a servant. l.9.p.1115,1116
Severity, l.7.p.800
Shakers, l.4.p.516
Shame, l.7.p.798,799
Shark, whence our English word comes, p. 1142
Ship, the materials of it wonderfull, l.3.p.316, 317
Signs, several sorts of them, l.8.p.908

Simple.

God is most simple, l.2.p.166,167
Sincerity, l.7.p.831,832
Singing of Psalms a duty, and how to be performed, l.8.p.839,to 842

Sin.

Sin, what it is, l.4.p.384
Divided into original and actual, ib.
That there is original sin, its names, and what it is, l.4. p.385,to 388
It comes from Adam and Eve, l.4.p.387
The subject of it, l.4.p.388
It is not the substance of a man, l.4.p.388,389
Many Hereticks extenuate it, l.4.p.389,390
All equally guilty of original sin, l.4.p.391,392
How it is propagated, l.4 p 393,394
Corollaries from original sin, ib.
We are all guilty of Adams sin, l.4.p.383,384
What actual sin is, l.4. p.395,396
Distinguished, l.4 p 396,397
Four things in sin, l.4.p.397,398
A reigning sin what, & how known, l.4.p 398,399

The evil of sin, l.4.p.400,to404
The degrees of sin, l.4. p.404,408
Inward sins in some respects are greater than outward, l.4.p.404,405
In others outward than inward, l.4.p.405
Sins of omission worse than sins of commission in some respects, l 4. p.405,406
And those of commission in others,l.4.p.407
What sins make us like the devil. l 3. p.358
Sins against the Gospel greater than against the Law, l 4. p.407,408
Of Gods people greater than the sins of others in some respects, not in others, l.4.p 407
What sins most grieve the holy Ghost, l 4.p.408
All sins are mortal, l.4. p.409,410
God not the cause of sin, l.4. p.411,to 414
How we communicate with other mens sins,l.4 p. 414
The punishments of sin, l.4.p.415,416
National sins what, l 4. p.417
Signs of a Christian in regard of sin, l.4.p.418
He may have great corruptions,l.4.p.419,420
Two questions about sin resolved,l. 4.p.421,422
The Saints are carefull to preserve themselves from sin,and especially their own iniquities, l. 4.p.423,to426
The sinfulnesse of sin should chiefly cause us to forbear it, l.4. p.426
We must not only avoid but abhor sin,l.4.p.426, 427
We must take heed of little sins and secret sins,l. 4. p.427
We must renounce all evil in affection, and grosse sins in life and conversation, l.8.p.1018
How God punisheth the sin. of parents in their children, l.9.p.1047

Sitting.

What Christs sitting at the right hand of his Father means, l.5.p.538,& 612
Of sitting at the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, l.8.p.1004
Slander, l.4.p.479,480
Sobriety, l.8.p.833

Socinians.

Socinians reject all things in Religion which they cannot comprehend by reason, l.1.p.121
Confuted, l.4. p.416,& 516

Soul.

Christ suffered in his Soul, l.5.p.600

Sorrow.

Christs sorrow godly, l.5.p.596,597
Sorrow in us what, and its sanctification, l.7. p. 781,782,&c.
Spectrum unde, l.3.p.356 m

Spirit.

Spirit what, l.2. p.163
God is a Spirit, ib. & 164
Angels are Spirits, l.3. p.336,to 339
Stars how distinguished, l.3.p.323,324

Steal.

Steal,what it is, l.9.p.1142,1143
It is forbidden, ib.

Stork.

Stork, why so called, l.3.p.328
Her love to her young ones, and theirs likewise to her, l.3 p.328

Subjects.

Subjects their duty, l.9.p.1121,1122
Sueuk-feldians, l.6.p.518

Sufferings.

Christs great sufferings, l.5. p.597,to 603
Sun,the making of it a great work,l.3.p.321,322

Superstition.

Superstition whence,and what,a great sin, l.9.p. 1066,1067

Supper.

The divers names of the Lords Supper,l.8.p.934 935
How described, l.8. p.935,936
The ends of it, l.8.p.936,937
It doth confirm, not convert, l.8.p.937,938
It is to be taken in both kinds,l.8.p.944,to948
Scandalous persons are to be kept from it,l.8 p.938,939
Yet one may receive with the wicked, l.8.p. 939, to 943
Whether Judas received the Sacrament of the Lords Supper, l.8.p.942,943
At what time the Lords Supper was instituted, and its elements, l.8.p.942,to 945
The elements may not be changed,l.3.p.947 948
The breaking of the bread in the Supper, not an indifferent Ceremony, l.8. p.948,949
It is not material whether the bread be leavened or unleavened, l.8. p.949,950
Wafer-cakes condemned, l.8.p.951
Whether it be necessary to mingle water with the eucharistical wine, l.8.p.951.952
The consecration of the elements, l.8.p.953,
Christ not corporally present, l.8.p.953,954
Of the keeping of theEucharist,l.8.p.959,960
It is not a Sacrifice properly, l.8.p.962,963
The ends of it, l 8.p.966,967
The elements must not be adored, l.8. p.960
The Sacrament is not to be carried up and down, ib.
It is not to be received privately, l.8.p.965
The necessity of the Lords Supper,and why we must receive it, l.8. p.965,966
Of preparation for it, l.8.p.967,968
There must be due carriage at it, l.8.p.970, to 975
And after, l.8. p.1000
How oft it ought to be received, and the gesture at it, l 8.p.1001,1004

Surety.

Surety what, l.5. p.575
Christ is our Surety, ib.
Sybils were counterfeit pieces, l.1.p.20
Symbola or Symbolum, why the Creed is so called l.5.p.521

Synods.

What they are,and their kinds,l.6.p.651,652 653
What required to them who are to be called to them, and whether General Councels may erre, l 6.p.653
Whether Councels or Synods be above the Pope, l.6.p.654

Syriack.

Syriack was ſpoken in our Saviours time, l.1. p.76
The Syriack tranſlation of the New Teſtament, l.1. p.75,76

T

Tale-bearing, Hearkning to Tale-bearers is a ſin, l.4. p.480,481
Targum why ſo called, l.1.p.73

Tempter.

Tempter, the Devil ſo called, and why, l.3 p.353
His wayes of Tempting, ib.
How to know his Temptations, l.3. p.355,356
Chriſt was Tempted by him, l.3.p.358
Man by ſtrength of nature cannot reſiſt Temptation, l.7.p.691
How the Devil and world Tempt, and how God preſerves his people, l.8.p.900,to 903
Tertullian, l.1 p.137

Teſtament.

The Scripture is diſtinguiſhed into the Books of the Old and New Teſtament, l.1.p.38
Why the Scripture is called a Teſtament, ib.
The Books of the Old Teſtament for the moſt part were written in Hebrew, ib.
And how divided, l.1 p 39
Of the New in Greek, l.1.p.51
And why, ib.
How divided, l.1.p.54,55
Thankſgiving, p.867,to 871

Theology.

What it is and its ſeveral kinds, l.1.p.2,3
Theology whether ſapience or ſcience, l.1.p.3
Theſſalonica, a chief City in Macedonia, l.1.p.59
Theſſalonians, who do beſt on both, l.1. p 60

Thought.

A Chriſtian is to make conſcience of his Thoughts l.9. p.1151
The cure of evil Thoughts, ib.
Thunder, what it is, and its uſe, l.3.p.302,to305
Timothy, who do beſt on both Books, l.1. p.60

Titles.

Titles of Books not uſed heretofore, l.1.p.111,to 114
Whence the Hebrews take the Titles of their Books, l.1.p.41
Titus, who beſt expounds him, l.1.p.60
Torpedo hath a benumming quality, l 3. p.326
Toſtatus commended, l.1.p.140

Traditions.

Traditions, what they ſignifie, l.1. p.111,to 114
Reaſons againſt the Popiſh Traditions, l.1.p.113, to 116
The ſeveral kinds of them, l.1.p.114,115
Arguments urged for them anſwered, l.1.p. 115,to 119.

Tranſlate.

The Scriptures ought to be Tranſlated into vulgar Tongues, l.1. p 28,29
The ſeveral Tranſlations of Scripture, l.1.p.72,to 77
Tranſubſtantiation refuted, l.8.p.956,to 959

Trees.

Trees, their nature and uſe, l.3.p.319,to322
The Tree of Life and Knowledge of good and evil in Paradiſe, why ſo called, l.3.p.367
Whether the Tree of Life was a Sacrament, ib.

Trinity.

Trinity, the word hath ſufficient ground in Scripture, l.2.p.251.m
The myſtery of the Trinity cannot be known by the light of nature, l.2. p.251,252
Yet it is neceſſary to be known by them that will be ſaved, l.2. p.252
A difference between Trinity and Triplicity, ib.
The Doctrine of the Trinity explained and applied, l.2.p.254,to 257

True.

The word of God is True and certain, l.1. p.97, 98
God is True, l.2. p.222,223
Truth, what it is, and the ſeveral kinds of it, l.2.p. 223

V

Vain-glory, l.4.p.481,482
Valentinians, l.4.p.518
Vatablus commended, l.1.p.138

Verſions.

The ſeveral Verſions of Scripture, l.1. p.72,73
What authority they have, l.1.p.72
Vertue, what in God, what in men, l.2 p.208
Violence, l.4.p.482

Virgin.

The Virgin Mary, why called Deipara, the mother of God, l.5.p.506
Viſiting two-fold, l.9.p.1040.m
Unbelief, l.4.p.482,to 485
Vivification, l.7.p.744,to 748

Underſtanding.

What Gods Underſtanding is, l.2.p.191,to 194
Differs from ours many wayes, l.2.p.198
What our Underſtanding is, and its ſanctification l.7.p.749,750

Union.

Union of two Natures in Chriſt deſcribed. l.5.p. 564,565
Our Union with Chriſt, l.7.p.672,673
Not only relative, nor eſſential or perſonal, l.7. p.673,674
Three myſtical Unions, l.7. p.674,675
Differences between the myſtical and perſonal Union,

Union, l.7. p.675
Marks of our Union with Christ, and Means to preserve it, l.7.p.675,676
Unkindnesse, l.4.p.485
Unprofitablenesse, ib.
Unsetlednesse, ib.& 486
Unthankfulnesse, l.4.p.486
Vocation or effectual calling, l.7.p.744,to 748

Vow.

What a religious Vow is, l.8.p.1011
How it is distinguisht from an Oath, ib.
Its ends and uses, l.8.p.1012
Rules to be observed in Vowing, and the manner of it, l.8.p.1012,1013
The Popish Vows of perfection, continence and poverty condemned, l.8.p.1013,to 1018
Uranoscope what, l.3.p.322
Usury, l.4.p.487
Vulgar, The Vulgar Latine Edition not authentical, l.1.p.90,to 94

W

Water a necessary element, its nature and use, l.3.p.297,298
Whales a great work of God, l.3.p.326
Whoredom how punished, l.9.p.1139

Will.

What it is in God, and how taken, l.2.p.197, 198
Its properties, and how distinguished, l.2. p. 198,199
The meaning of that Petition in the Lords Prayer, thy Will be done in earth as it is in heaven, l.8. p.891,892
The Will of man is desperately evil, l.4. p.309, 310
A double Will in Christ, l.5.p.598,& l.8.p.891
The sanctification of the Will. l.7.p.542,543
Willet commended, l.1.p.139
Winds a great work of God. l.3.p.307,308

Wisdom.

Wisdom what, l.2.p.194, to 197
Wherein seen, l.2. p.195
Godlinesse is true Wisdom, l.2. p.196
The grace of Wisdom, l.7.p.814, to 819
Witchcraft a great sin, l.4.p.488

Witnesse-bearing.

False-Witnesse against ones self or other evil, l.7. p.1145,1146
Whether the use of Witnesses be necessary in Baptism, l.8.p.928,929

Word.

Why the Scripture is called the Word, and why the Word of God, l.1.p.7
Why the Word of God was written, l.1.p,101, 102

Works.

Works of God distinguished, l.3.p.264
Good Works divided, l.7.p.716
Whether Works without faith merit grace ex congruo, and with faith ex condigno, l.7. p.714
Works of Supererogation, l.9.p.1013
Good Works flowing from the grace of Gods Spirit in us, do not merit Heaven, l.7.p.714, 715
Protestants no enemies to good Works, l.7.p.715
World how divided by Philosophers, and how by the Scriptures, l.3. p.288,289

Worship.

Worship, what is required to it, l.9. p.1047
What to the matter and manner, l.9.p.1048, to 1051
We must not Worship God under any form or picture, l.9.p.1049
How humane inventions in Worship have been brought in, l.9.p.1050
The several kinds and parts of Worship, l.9.p. 1050,to 1054
The manner of Worship, l.9.p.1053
Preparation to Worship, wherein it consists, l.9.p. 1054, 1055
What it is to Worship God in Spirit, l.2.p.164, 165
False Worship, what, l.9. p.1062,1063
True Worship abused, l.9. p.1067,1068
Worship solemn and common, l.9. p.1071,1072
Will-worship, l.9.p.1066,1067

Z

Zeal, l.7. p.797,798
Zechary, when he wrote, and who best interpret him, l.1.p.51
Zephany, when he wrote, and who best interpret him, l.1.p.50

ERRATA.

READER, If thou haſt ever printed any thing, thou wilt not much wonder if ſome faults paſſe the Preſſe, eſpecially in a great Book. Some of the chiefeſt are theſe, Pag. 225. is miſtaken, and made 229. and ſo all along after to the end.

PAg. 2. marg. legis in. p. 3. l. 9. conſcientia. l. 10. Baronis. p. 4. m. Matth. 11. 25. p. 5. dele &c. p. 6. l. 34. Act. 16. m. Dei conſignatum. p. 7. m. Epheſ. 6. 17. l. 3. Rom. 9. 6. m. dele the laſt 8. 5, 6, 7. per tot. Bayi after ſanction dele the later See. p. 10. m. loquuntur alia Moſis alia Jobi. 14. m. conjecturam. 17. m. ficta. 19. m. Martyr. Evangel. Domin. Analyſ. p. 22. l. 27. dele Non. p. 28. 2 John 2. 14. p. 30. l. 1. have. m. Acts 17. 13. p. 31. m. Sickardi. p. 34. l. 28. 1 Pet. 2. 25. p. 35. m. word. p. 36. m. [illegible] p. 37. m. Canonici. p. 40. m. Capita. p. 43. l. 45. Iſrael. m. 1 Chron. p. 44. m. Hebdomadibus. p. 45. m. Grotius. p. 47 m. divina, dele Scripturæ ſacræ, &c. in the text, and put it in the m. De Scripr. p. 50. m. Tſephaneiah. p. 52. m. in enim. p. 53. l. 15. Books, dele the comma. p. 55. l. 3. Peter. p. 57. l. 37. Dickſon. p. 70. l. 39. Serarium. p. 73. m. Erpenius. p. 76. m. Teſtament. p. 77. The firſt marginal note to (t) ſhould be put at the end of 76. m. p. 88. m. dele non. p. 114. l. 46. Petun. p. 118. m. verit. p. 142. m. Analyſis, &c. ſhould ſtand lower. p. 152. l. 42. that there, p. 183. l. 20. Perfectionibus. p. 188. m. after Schaddai ſhould follow Gen. 17. 1. & 35. 11. Wendelinus 217. m. pares. p. 275. l. 1. Secondly. p. 280. creaturarum rationalium. p. 295. l. 18. being in. p. 319. m. dele It is called alſo an Aſteriſm. p. 360. l. 33. dele of. p. 377. l. 40. ſo. p. 387. l. 48. dele 2. Reaſonings ſhould follow Fer. 4. 14. p. 445. l. 4. the. p. 446. l. 20. dele Gen. p. 461. m. for lying, p. 462. l. 20. after Æquivoca Sect. 15. p. 526. m. ab hoc ſcripta. p. 528. m. for Manichees r. Martinius. p. 556. c, 4th, and ſo on 5th, 6th. p. 564. l. 45. aſcribed. p. 597. m. voucheth. p. 628. m. fore d. a. p. 462. l. 20 by many of them. p. 641. l. 513. d. preaching. p. 656. m. Papam. p. 659. l. 43, 44. ſhould have been in two verſes thus, p. 662. m. Funckium. p. 710. l. 10. it. p. 736. l. 14. conſider. p. 773. l. 32. intenſeneſſe. p. 792. m. alÿs. p. 819. l. 29. neceſſity. p. 912. m. differentia. p. 919. l. 30. colder. p. 934. l. ult. but two oſtendit. p. 977. l. 3. dele of. p. 1070. m. volunt, columba, erranti obſtrictus. p. 1071. m. Quia enim. p. 1133. l. 31. pratum. m. Sardonius Patavinis. p. 1141. m. facilitate Italicis. p. 1149. l. 11. dele that ſpeech of Knewſtubs. p. 1165. m. not dead.

Papa Pius moritur Quintus, res mira tot inter
Pontifices tantùm quinque fuiſſe pios.

In the Additions.

Pag. 1. l. ult. but two Lipman. p. 2. l. 7. dele to be, and put it l. 8. after endeavour to be a. p. 3. m. delaver l. 37. after. p. 4. m. noſtra ſepulturam, Ruſca. p. 5. m. dele & twice. p. 7. dele Aut quid, &c. p. 12. l. 29. dele but from the diligent uſe of the means. p. 19. m. luculenta. p. 21. l. 19. make and that. p. 28. l. ult. but three, perverted. p. 36. l. 25. freer. l. ult. but two impoſui. p. ibid. thoſe words Men ſhould love home ſhould be diſtinguiſht from the former by a line ſcored. p. 37. l. 23. concord. ibid. l. 36. τὰ Βιβλία. l. 38. deſtituti, after Biblia ſhould follow Fabritij partitiones codicis Hebræi, and then begins the other Scriptura, &c. make a full point at ſignificat. ἱερὰ γράμματα. Eſcriture animadv. 1. devoté Honoratum. p. 38. l. 29. dele more. l. ult. Book.

ADDITIONS.

Hells Torments proved to be everlasting, notwithstanding what hath been Objected by Mr. Richardson against that Opinion.

There was a Book printed in London, in the year 1658. Of the Torments of Hell.

The Foundation and Pillars thereof discovered, searched, shaken and removed.

With many infallible proofs, that there is not a punishment after this life, for any to endure that shall never end.

To the glory of God, and comfort of all those in fear of the Torments of Hell, and for the furtherance of a holy life.

The Author of it is supposed to be one Mr. Richardson.

In the Epistle to the Reader he hath these passages.

I have the testimony of my Conscience, that the love of truth, and desire to learn, drew me into this search, and caused me to dissent, not for contention, but for truths sake, the truth we ought to seek and imbrace, though we should suffer for it.

I upon seeking of God, and diligent search, and from the clearness of the light of the truth herein, am fully & confidently perswaded that it is the truth I plead for.

He concludes his Book with as much confidence as he Prefaceth it.

Sure I am, from hence arise no inconveniency to the Gospel, nor is it any dishonour to God, nor any grief, nor hinders faith, and love in any good man, nor any discouragement to any in serving of God, that there is not to be a punishment for any to endure that shall never end. There is not any thing more plain than that which hath been said to him, that will agree to truth.

In the Book it self, p. 69, he saith, Let it be certainly made to appear, that God hath said in any thing, contrary to any thing that I have said, I desire with all my heart to submit to it, without that I cannot yield the soveraignty of my judgement and conscience, to the concurring consent of blind Guides, ignorant, and erroneous men, though in sheeps-cloathing, and covered all over with the titles of godly, learned and holy Saints, or Presbyters, or Ministers of Christ.

Truth is worth prizing and seeking after, and standing for, but as all is not gold that glisters, so this assertion of his, that there are no everlasting Torments in Hell (how ever he may judge it a glorious Truth) I hope, to the wise and impartiall reader, to discover it to be a gross and dangerous Errour, and if I shall by clear Scriptures, and evidence of Reason evince the same, I shall then require from him, to hearken to the Truth, and to submit unto it.

His gaudy Title and his confidence, make not his Cause the better.

Celsus the Philosopher having written a Defence of Paganism, guilds over his rotten wood with this golden Title, Verbum veritatis, the word of truth. Orig. Contra Celsum. l. 2.

Nizachon, or Victoria was the splendid Title of that cursed Book of Lipmana. See Dr. Heylins Preface to his How confidently will some Arminians write, against the truth of the Gospel as if Historia Quinquarticularis, Mr: Goodwins Answer to his five Antagonists, Polenburgy Dissertat. Epistol. p. 3. & 19.

they only were found, and as if the Synode of Dort opposed the Innocent and Orthodox.

How confident is Maldonate, in Mat. 13. 26. Calvinistas et Lutheranos, quis non cognovit, quis hæreticos esse non videt, qui vix ullam antiquam hæresin non renovarunt? Nullus unquam profecto hæreticus fuit, nullus hæreticus esse potest, si illi hæretici non sint, as that Learned and Noble Gentleman said to be.

Mr. Byles Preface to his Sceptical Chymist.

I shall endeavour Champion for truth, without being an enemy to Civility, and to confute the Opinion, without railing at him that holds it.

Pag. 39. Explaining eternal Damnation, he saith thus, The word damned, Mar. 16. 16. 2 Thes. 2. 12. Rom 14. 23. in Greek is, judged; Damnation, is Judgement; eternal damnation, is eternal judgment; a Judgment, is a Sentence, the Sentence is to a second death, called Eternal, because it is not to be reversed.

Beware 1. Whether this passage do not contradict the main scope of his Book. 2. Whether this criticism do any thing availe him, he might have added another text, 1 Cor. 11. 29. where the Greek κεῖμα, is rendred by Beza, Smidius, the vulgar Latine, and by us Damnation.

κεῖμα for κρίμα. Stephanus renders it Damnatio, as well as Judicium in his Greek Concordance.

Yet the compound Verb, Mar. 16. and Rom. 14. is rendred by us condemned, or damned, as it is by Beza and the vulgar Latin, and the simple Verb in 2 Thes. 2. 12. interpreted by the compound by Beza, and rendred by him damnentur. Damnation is the higheſt degree of judgment, He himself saith, the sentence is to a second death, which is but a synonimum to damnation. Damnation, and Hell are so neer a kin, that it is called the damnation of hell, Mat. 23. 33. and eternal damnation, Mar. 3. 29.

What he seems to presage p. 102. of burning his Book, as Dr. Crisps Book of salvation by Christ alone, and Mr. Archers his Treatise of comfort to Believers, against their sins and sorrow: (both which have prefixed splendid Titles to Heterodox writings, as well as he) had been but a just guerdon of his unprofitable pains in patronizing so false a Tenet.

French, reward

By way of Antithesis to his Thesis, I shall shew, that there is an everlasting estate beyond this life, of blessedness or misery, or that mans future condition, is an eternal condition. A thing is said to be eternal, or everlasting three ways.

Some think those phrases of πῦρ αἰώνιον and κόλασις αἰώνιος, and the like cannot be reconciled with Origens opinion. But the Objectors seem to take the meaning of the word αἰώνιος from Scholastick

First, most properly, perfectly and absolutely, a thing is everlasting, which never had beginning, succession of former or later, or any change, and never shall have end, in this sense God, and He alone is Eternal or everlasting: being incapable of beginning, succession or end.

Secondly, Improperly, a thing is stiled everlasting or Eternal, which though it had a beginning, yet never shall have end, so Angels, and the souls of men, so hells torment, and heavens happiness, are everlasting, Mat. 25. 46. See Mr. Wels his Prospective of eternity Ch. 14 19. and 20. and Mr. Baxters Everlasting Rest, Part 1. ch. 7. Sect. 19.

Thirdly, most Improperly, a thing sometimes is counted Everlasting or ‖ eternal, which is only Diuturnal, or long lasting, which hath had a beginning, and shall have an end, Gen. 48. 4. Numb. 25. 12, 13.

Definitions, rather then from the true and lawful Masters of Language, or the Authentick Rule of popular use. For tis notoriously known that the Jews, whether writing in Hebrew or Greek, do by Gnolam and αἰών mean any remarkable period of duration, whether it be of life, or dispensation, or Polity. An Account of Origen and his chiefest Opinions, p. 131. 132. See more there. ‖ Æternitatis nomen, interdum pro longo tempore accipitur, ut judicat Augustinus in 22. de Civit. Dei, vel cujus finis non constituitur; sic æterna urbs Roma: & æterni Imperatores secula seculorum pro æternitate dici videas, ut idem Augustinus dicit scribit in Ps. 21. Petavius de Deo, l. 3. c. 3. vide Medelam animi Doctoris Stearne, l. 1. c. 27.

After this life is ended, the souls of Gods children are presently received into Heaven, thereto enjoy unspeakable comforts. The souls of the wicked are cast into Hell, there to endure endless torments

Artic. of Relig. of Ireland

The reward is eternal, because of the infinite merite of Christ, and the punishment is eternal, because an infinite majesty is offended.

1. There is an everlasting estate of blessedness, Tit. 1. 2. and 2. 13.

Hope is of somewhat to come, 1 Cor. 15. 19. 2 Cor. 4. 17, 18.

Believers

ADDITIONS.

Believers have an earneſt of heaven, 2 Cor. 5. 5. Eph. 1. 14. part of payment. An earneſt, is ſome-what of the ſame kind with the whole ſum that we are to receive.

Joh. 14. 2. In my Fathers houſe are many manſions. Manſions à manendo, not houſes, not tents, to ſignifie the immutable duration of the Saints happineſs. Here are no manſion houſes though ſome are ſo called, Heb. 13. 14. Sometimes the future bleſſedneſs of the Saints is called everlaſting life, ſometimes a ſtate of immortality, and ſometimes heavens glory is entitled everlaſting joy, and ſometimes an eternal weight of glory, 2 Cor. 4. 17. and ſometimes an eternal inheritance, Heb. 9. 5.

Joh. 3. 16. 2 Tim. 1. 10. 1 Cor. 15. 53. Eſay 35. 10. and 61. 7.

So ſhall we be for ever with the Lord, 1 Theſ. 4. 17. It is ſaid, that Mr. Wood after ſome holy deſires, being at dinner fell a muſing, and cryed out for neere half a quarter of an hour together, For ever, for ever.

The ſpring of mercy is in election, it bubbles out in calling, runs to and fro in obedience and faith, and at laſt it loſeth it ſelf in the ocean of glory.

Mr. Wells his Proſpect of Eternity, ch. 17.

There is reaſon that the rewards of good actions ſhould be in the life to come, becauſe our work muſt be ended, before we receive our wages.

That the Soul is Immortal, is granted by all Chriſtians; an immortal ſoul muſt have an eternal good.

Nemo Chriſtianus dubitat tum Angelos. tum animas humanes æternas, id eſt, immortales eſſe. Petavius de Deo,

The Scripture ſpeaks of worlds, Heb. 1. 2.

Of this world and the world to come.

Of rewards and puniſhments in another life as well as this, of eternal bleſſings and eternal torments,

Deique proprietatibus. Mr. Jeanes in his mixture of Scholaſtical Divinity with practical, on Mat. 10. 28 ver. 29, 30. proves the immortality of the ſouls of all men, out of Eccleſ. 12. 7. the immortality of the Souls of the wicked, and their perpetual puniſhment from 1 Pet. 3. 29. Luk. 16. 23. the immortality of the Souls of good men, and their joy and everlaſting happineſs, from Luk. 16. 22. and 23. 43. 2 Cor. 5. 8. Acts 7. 59. Phil. 1. 23. Pſal. 16 11. Rev. 6. 9. 10. theſe things cannot ſtand with the ſouls utter abolition.

2. There is an everlaſting eſtate of miſery.

Hell is taken two ways in Scripture.

1. For the puniſhment, the Devils always carry their hell with them.
2. For the place of torment.

The Scripture is more ſparing in naming hell then heaven, becauſe

1. It teacheth the way to heaven, not hell.
2. It is written for the Church of God which is to go heaven, not hell.

That wicked men ſhall be puniſhed for ever, appears both from Scripture formerly quoted. And Reaſon, 1 Theſ. 1. 8, 9.

1. From the ſubject that doth offend, the immortal ſoul of a man. God having made a world of reaſonable creatures, it was neceſſary he ſhould govern them by Laws, and thoſe penal; he threatened Adam in innocency, if God ſhould puniſh them only with temporary puniſhments, after the ſuffering of them, an eternity, or everlaſtingneſs would have remained to them.

As Chriſt lives for evermore, ſo whatever iſſues from him, is like himſelf, everlaſting: his Word endureth for ever, his Law is eternal, his Interceſſion eternal, his puniſhments eternal, and his Rewards eternal, Mr. Farindon on Revel 1. 18.

2. From the object offended, God, all ſin is an hatred of Him who is an Infinite Good, and therefore deſerves an infinite puniſhment. Wicked men are unable to ſatisfie Gods juſtice, and to deliver themſelves from the puniſhment. God will not give them ſtrength.

3. There is a heaven, therefore a hell; and as the godly have a foretaſte of heaven here, ſo the wicked (by horrours of Conſcience) have the beginnings of eternal wrath, Oh ſaith Spira, That I might indure the wrath of God, but twenty thouſand years! but it muſt be eternally.

Si certus de Cœleſti gloria: neceſſario etiam certus eſſe debebis, de inferni ſupplicijs: & ſi credis fœlicitatem hanc juſtis præparatam eſſe, eadem neceſſitate credendum tibi eſt, tormenta malis reſervari. Juchini Conciones de quatuor hominis noviſſimis.

4. All Chriſtians agree in this greater truth, as the Harmony of Confeſſions, the various

Adv. gentes, I leave you to judge, whether the whole ſubject matter in this periodical doom, the nature of that fire and its fewel, the powers of a ſpirit incorporate, be not various expoſitions of the Apoſtles Creed, and the writings of eternity, and the four laſt things, & the Scriptures generally ſhew: Tatianus one of the moſt ancient of the Greeks, cals the eſtate of the damned in hell, θανατὸν ἐν ἀθανασίᾳ, a death which never dieth, an immortal miſery, Tertulian the moſt ancient Latine Father, Cruciatum non diuturnum ſed ſempiternum, not only along and tedious torment, but an everlaſting one, St. Auſtin cals it, mortem ſine morte. Eternal death was threatned for ſin; Gen. 3.15.

The fire is unquenchable, Mat. 3. 12. and everlaſting, Ch. 25. 41. the burning everlaſting, Eſay 33. 14. their chains everlaſting, Jude 6. the worm everlaſting, Eſay 66. 24. Mar. 9. 44.

ſuch as will enforce us to make it ſhorter then ſome men do, who having got eaſie ways of aſſuring themſelves it ſhall not be their portion, do as little pity thoſe calamitous ſouls whoſe lot it may be as they darkly fanſie, God himſelf does. But though we, from the reaſon of things and right uſe of words, do make it ſhorter then they do, yet according to our Hypotheſis the whole puniſhment of pain and death will neceſſarily be ſo long, as may juſtly be called αἰώνιος in a very high ſenſe of the word. An account of Origen, &c. p 133.

B. Ushers Body of Divinity, p. 450.

It is much that there ſhould be Atheiſts in the Church of God, and none in hell; that any ſhould deny or doubt of the everlaſtingneſs of hell torments, which the Devils believe and tremble at.

Alcoran, c. 14. & 20.

The very Turkes ſpeak of the houſe of perdition, and affirm; That they who have turned Gods grace into impiety, ſhall abide eternally in the fire of hell, and there be tormented.

‖ Hiſt Orient. L. 11. c. 111. p. 254.

Hottinger ‖ quoting an Author, which he ſaith, gives us a moſt abſolute Compendium of the Mahometan Religion, this is his judgement concerning Paradiſe the place of the bleſſed, and the oppoſite to it Hell.

Deus laudatus creavit Paradiſum, eumque paravit domicilium æternitatis amicis ſuis, quos in eo honorat aſpectu vultus ſui. Eſtque Paradiſus ille locus ex quo pulſus fuit Adam, Propheta & vicarius ejus, in terram quam ante ſua præſcientia deſignarat. Creavit etiam ignem, quem paravit, domicilium æternitatis iis, qui illi non credunt.

Hoornbeck contra Judæos, l. 8. c. 7. ſhews, that ſome of the Jews hold an eternity of torments in hell. Becauſe ſome of our Divines do interpret the article of Chriſts deſcent into hell, of the ſtate of the dead, Mr. Richardſon infers, that there are no everlaſting torments. Chriſts deſcent into hell, is his abiding in the ſtate of the dead, after his death and burial even to his reſurrection. So the Apoſtle expounds it, Rom. 10 7. Acts 2. 24, 29, 30, 31. And it is a thing very evident that the word Hell in Scripture, is often taken for the ſtate of the dead, without having regard to the receptacle of the ſoul or body, Pſal. 49. 15. that is, ſhall be in the condition of the dead.

Intelligit Scripturam per Sheol, communem ſtatum omnium defunctorum tam piorum, quam impiorum. Exqui facile eſt intelligere quid ſibi velit articulus fidei noſtræ, Deſcendit ad Inferos: nempe Chriſti mortem non fuiſſe fictitiam, ſed veram mortuum ac ſepultura, communem illum ſtatum defunctorum pro nobis guſtaſſe. P. Fag. tranſlat. Præcip vet teſtcal. lat. in Gen. 37. 15. See Ruſa de Inferno, l. 1. c. 4, 5. & 9, 10.

I ſhall not undertake particularly to anſwer all the paſſages of his Book, many times he cites not the place where to find things, or too generally, and often miſtakes the places he doth quote, or elſe they are fouly miſprinted. That is a rare criticiſm of his p. 11. The Greek tranſlates Sheol into Haiden or Haides, of Adam, becauſe Adam taſted death, and went to the grave, Gen. 3. 19.

He ſaith, p. 6. The proper ſignification of Sheol, is the grave, as all that be learned in the Hebrew do know.

I have ſpoken ſufficiently both of that Hebrew and the Greek word in my Critica, Pſal. 9. 17. If Sheol here ſignifie the grave, what puniſhment is then threatened to the wicked, which the righteous are not equally liable to, Mollerus and Muſculus ſeem to expound it of Hell. See Bucer in loc.

I am not ignorant that ſome (and they both ancient and modern) do underſtand it of the grave, and the deſtruction of the wicked by a temporal death. The Hebrew word (Sheol) bearing both ſignifications, as well of the grave, as of the place of the Damned. But I think it better to take it in this latter ſenſe, being led by theſe reaſons.

This Author hath ſo curiouſly deſcribed Hell, and all the parts and nooks of it, and for what uſes the ſeveral cels therein are, you would think he had been there imployed as a Surveyor or a Viewer; ſo punctual he is in the relation and ſurveigh of the place, Dr. Gell on Lev. 16. 8.

First,

ADDITIONS.

First, becauſe, as I conceive, 'tis Davids purpoſe here to comfort the faithfull, and excite them to thankſgiving, by the conſideration of Gods dealing with their enemies and oppreſſors.

A ſecond Reaſon I gather from the word turned, wherein the Pſalmiſt ſeems to allude to the forme of the ſentence at the latter day, Goe ye curſed into everlaſting fire. *Weems obſerves, that whenſoever this word Sheol is ſpoken of the wicked, and hath He locale added to it (as here Sheolah) it alwayes ſignifies Hell, and not the Grave.

* Exercitat. Divine Exercit 15. Philips Treatiſe of Hell.

I ſuppoſe Sheol may alſo be fitly taken, Prov. 15. for the locall place of Hell: So Cartwright and others interpret it. Though I will not deny but another Cartwright my learned Friend, now at Reſt, (who hath written a brief Expoſition on the Creed) ſaith, The words (in the Originall Sheol, Hades) which are tranſlated Hell, do not properly and directly ſignifie Hell, as taken for the place of torment; but they ſignifie either the grave, or the power of Death, and the eſtate of the dead in generall, whether their ſouls be in the place of torment, or in the place of comfort. So it is taken (ſaith Biſhop Bilſon) Pſal. 139. 8. Hell rather than the grave is oppoſite to Heaven, as being fartheſt from it.

Ad ſtatū mortuorum pertinent ambæ hæ voces, infernus ad animas, perditio ad Cadavera & Schotani diſſertat. De vero ſenſu Articuli, Deſcendit ad Inferna. C. 10.

Levi Ben. Gerſon intelligit infernum per Scheol, quem dicit eſſe in Centro terræ. Baynus in loc.

As both parts of man ſinned in the firſt tranſgreſſion, ſo was there a pit of perdition provided for either part; the grave for the body, which there ſhould rot; and hell for the ſoul, which there ſhould be tormented with everlaſting fire. Both theſe pits, becauſe they alwayes expect, and exact as their due, the bodies and ſouls of mortall and ſinfull men, and never are ſatisfied, are contained in the word Sheol, and are not diſtinguiſhed by the nature of the word, which is common to both; but by the Circumſtances added, which are proper to either.

B. Bilſon of the full redemption of mankinde by the death of Chriſt. p. 147.

He talkes much (after his manner) of Gehenna, and Tophet.

By the Entry of the Eaſt gate of Jeruſalem they had the Valley of Hinnom, and the high places of Tophet therein, as it were a viſible Hell, Joſh. 15. 8. Jer. 19. 2. They there burned their children in the fire unto Baal and Moloch, with great impiety againſt God, and cruelty to man, 2 Chron. 28. 3. 2 Kings 23. 10. Jer. 7. 31. This was ſo lively an image of Hell, that from this place the holy Ghoſt takes a double name of Hell, both of Tophet in the Old Teſtament, Iſa. 30. 33. And of Gehenna or the valley of * Hinnom, which is the name often uſed by our Saviour in the New Teſtament, and is commonly tranſlated Hell, Matth. 5. 22. 29, 30. & 10. 28. & 18. 9. Calvin interprets Eſay 30. ult. of Hell. See Beza and Bucer on Matth. 5. 22.

* What place that was amōg the Jews, ſee Glaſſius his Grammatica Sacra p. 814 Flacius & Illyr. Clav. Script. p. 356. Dilheolog. Sac. Dict. 111. p. 28. Selden. Syntag l. 1. c 6. Ruſca de Inferno l. 1. c. 6.

Rabbi Kimchi on Pſal. 27. 1. ſaith, there was a perpetuall fire in the valley of Hinnom to burne the Carkaſſes caſt thereinto, which our Saviour (as ſome think) alludes to: See Peter Martyr on 2 Kings 2d. ver. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. p. 192, 193.

By that which he hath written more ſpecially againſt me, in his Book, I ſee, though my body of Divinity was generally approved by Divines, and other judicious perſons, yet it never was the hap of any book, to meet with no oppoſition: Deus omnibus placere non poteſt, & tu placere credis? ſaid Julius Scaliger.

But I hope I may ſay as truly of this worke, as *Petavius doth of Crellius his Book againſt the Trinity; Quid eſt illius in libro novum, & reconditum? quæ ratio tam deducta ſubtiliter? quæ tam ad aſſenſum evidens concluſio? quod Argumentum adeo firmum & præclarum, ut vel mediocriter iis in Controverſiis tritoac ſubacto moram poſſit afferre.

* Theol. Dog. l. 3. c. 11.

I ſhall before I come to anſwer what he objects againſt me, onely relate a ſtory to him out of Sir Thomas Mores Supplication of Soules. A lewd gallant ſeeing a poor Friar going bare-foot in froſt and ſnow, asked him why he did take ſuch paines; he anſwered that it was very little paine, if a man would remember Hell. Yea, Fryar, quoth the gallant, but what and there be no Hell? then art thou a great fool. Yea, Maſter, quoth the Fryar, but what and there be Hell? then is your maſterſhip a much more fool.

The ſtory of Dives, Luke 16. 30. is not any proof of any torments in Hell, becauſe

it

it is a parable, not a history; of a parable we are not to ground a doctrine, The story of Dives is no more a proof of a punishment after this life, than Judg. 9. 8. is a proof that trees did walke and speake, though it is said the trees went forth, and said, &c. The story of Dives is not to be understood according to the letter, for these Reasons: 1. It saith, there was a rich man in Hell, yet all confesse the body is in the grave 2. How could Dives see so far, as Abrahams bosome is from hell? Mr. Leigh saith, the great Chaos between Abraham and Dives, signifie an infinite distance, which overthroweth their seeing, and speaking to each other. So Mr. Richardson.

Controversum pro confesso. Vide Maldonati Comment. & Calvinum in loc.

First, he takes it for granted (of which there is great question) that it is a Parable, not a History, whereas Maldonate and others say it was partly a Parable, and partly a History. Bucer, that it was a History, which most of the Ancients likewise affirme.

Hæc sive historia, sive parabola (quanquam mihi historia videatur, sed quæ res futuræ vitæ, ad modum præsentis describantur) habet quo à facultatum abusu deterreat, & ad benignitatem quodammodo compellat. Bucerus in loc.

2ly. We are not to ground a Doctrine on a parable, yet we may (by his leave) argue from the scope of a parable, as that very place by him quoted, Judg. 9. 8. shewes. Animadvertendum est hic Dominum res futuræ vitæ, ad modum rerum præsentis vitæ proponere, quas scilicet aliter agnoscere nequimus. Igitur quæ corporalia hic scribuntur, ut visus distantia, exustio lingua, refrigeratio, digiti in aquam intinctio, beatus, &c. omnia spiritualiter accipienda sunt. Bucerus in loc. Vide plura ibid. Cœlestem gloriam aspicere objective, nihil aliud est quam à longe illam ita intueri, ut tamen ea nullo pacto frui liceat. Inchini Concio de Inferno, here Christ teacheth two things saith a learned ‖ Divine.

‖ Doctor Ingelo on Luke 16. 29.

1. That a poor man whose soul is rich in goodnesse, though he be distressed in this world, shall one day be carried into the regions of repose and Blisse, and the luxurious unmerciful rich, shall suffer ineffable torments.

2ly. That observance of the directions of the holy Scripture is the best way to escape those torments, and to be truly happy.

By this that hath been said, his ten reasons vanish; for though he takes it to be a parable, yet he urgeth strictly every passage in it against the old rule, neque valet à simili argumentum, nisi quatenus sumitur ut simile. I say the great Chasme or Chaos between Abraham and Dives signifies an infinite distance, Dr. Ames against Bellarmine saith as much.

Maldonate saith, Certe corporeus locus erat. Epiphanius hæres. 59. Contra Catharos & Chrysost. Hom. 2. de Lazaro. Collect hence, that the torments of the wicked in hell are everlasting.

I shall refer him to Bunyans few sighes from Hell, for his better understanding of the 16th. of Luke concerning the Rich man, and the Beggar.

He saith I alleage Luke 5. 2. to prove hell torments, and the Papists alleage it to prove their Purgatory, and to as much purpose.

This great Confuter, when he writes again, should learn to quote the Book and place he excepts against. I suppose by his antecedent words, they shall not come out thence till they have paid the utmost farthing, He meanes here, Matth. 5. 24. In my Annotations on that place, I quote a passage out of Doctor Prideaux confuting the Popish interpretation of that place, proving Purgatory thence; if I should expound it of Hell, I should not be singular in so doing.

Afterward, he dicusseth the question about the fire of Hell, whether it be corporeall, spirituall, or metaphoricall, I speak enough of that in the Book. Petavius in his 3d Tome of Theologica Dogmata de Angelis l. 3. c. 5. holds, that the fire of Hell is corporeall, and quotes Austin to that purpose, and shews how the Devils and Spirits are tormented with it.

He saith there are ten opinions of the Learned, of the places of Hell.

Quid facilius, quam in magno opere quærere quod arrodas? Erasmi, Apologia ad Jac. Lop. Stunicam.

Mr. Edward Leigh, Hugo, and others say; Hell is a bottomlesse pit: but there is a place without a bottome, which is the Earth.

These last words, which is the Earth, I understand not, unlesse he mean which is in the Earth.

I say

ADDITIONS.

I say Hell is called a bottomless pit, Luke 8. 31. See Doctor Hammond on that place, Rev. 20. 3. Is not the same Greek word Ἄβυσσος used in both places, and so rendred by our Translators? Abyssus is never in Scripture used for the grave; it signifieth sometimes the depths of the sea, and bottom of the earth, and is Metaphorically taken for the deep Counsells of God, and desperate troubles of Men in the Old Testament; But in the New, onely for the bottomlesse pit. Doctor Nicholsons Exposit. of the Apost. Creed, Part 2d. Sermon 20.

Infernus seu locus damnatorum Spirituum longè profundissimè est. Unde etiam Luc. 8. 31. Abyssus vocatur, & Rom. 10 7 Vide Esa. 30. 33. Ubi profundissimus simul & latissimus vocatur, ubi satis amplè fore prædicat.

Some would have it to be rendred Sea. They say the Greek word signifies often so in Scripture. Job 38. 38. and 41. 23. and Psalm 105. 10. Esay 63. 13. Jon. 2. 6. Doctor Mores Explanation of the Grand Mistery of Godlinesse, l. 5. chap. 15.

How many of these opinions also which he reckons up, are coincident?

It is generally agreed that Hell is in the lower parts of the Earth.

B. Bilson, Mr. Wheatly, and others say, Hell is below.

Regi Assyriorũ, cum toto ejus comitatu excipiendo. Cartw. in Prov. 15. 11. Infernus appellatur Abyssus, id est, sine basi & fundo, quia est miseriarum Pelagus adeo immensum, ut nec fundum nec littora habeat. Inchini Concio De Inferno.

Bellarm. and others say, Hell is in the Earth, near the Center thereof.

Mr. Leigh and others say, Hell is a Lake. Hell cannot be a Lake, because Hell was cast into the Lake.

Aut quid abjectius quam in alieno libro ambulare quod Corpus?

Sodom and Gomorrah was burned with fire and brimstone, Gen. 19. 24, 25. For it's sin, it was turned into a brimstony-lake, as it is commonly called of Historians, Locus Asphaltites, and from the similitude of this place, is Hell denominated and called in Scripture, the Lake of fire and brimstone, Rev. 19. 20. and 20. 10. and 21. 8. A truth so known amongst the Gentiles, that by the Verses of the Poets, and the works of the most Learned Philosophers: Illius ignei fluminis admonentur homines; Men were admonished to beware of that burning Lake. By some of the Ancient Fathers, it is called Divinus Ignis, by others Æternus ignis. The fierce wrath of God is often in Scripture compared to burning and devouring fire, Deut. 32. 22. Jer 15. 14. Ezek. 21. 31 and 22. 21. Zeph. 1. 8. And accordingly is the torment in Hell described unto us by the name of Hell-fire, Matth. 5. 22. See Rusca De Inferno, l. 2. c. 4.

Minut. Fal. in Octav.

Rev. 20. 14. When it is said, Death and Hell were cast into the Lake of fire. By Hell, (saith Mr. Cartwright in his Exposition upon the Creed) cannot be meant the Hell of the damned; For that is meant by the Lake of fire, but the Power and Dominion of Death is meant, which after the Resurrection there spoken of, shall have no place any where but in that Lake of fire, which is there called the second death.

Doctor Hammond.

This phrase (the second death) seemes to be taken from the Jewes, who use it proverbially, for utter irreversible destruction. The second death hath relation to the first Resurrection, arising from the death of sin, the first death is a death in sin, the second death, the death of the soul and body, everlasting damnation.

Bishop Usher on Rev. 21. 8.

The death of the body is no death at all, for if it were, then this were the third death. For there would be a death in sin, a death of the body, and a death of the body and soul.

Mr. Ainsworth on Psal. 16. 10. Saith, That place through Custom, is taken for the place of the damned, but is not so to be understood, the word being Sheol. Marlorat on Apoc. pag. 282. saith, the fire of Gehenna is the place of the damned, others of them deny it; Mr. Leigh saith, Dives proves it; Dr. Fulk and others deny it. See ye not the great doubting and uncertainty they are at among themselves.

Ainsworth saith, this word Hell, though by Custom it is usually taken for the place of Devils and damned Wights, yet the word is more large: and as Heaven is generally all places above us, so Hell is all places beneath us. Wherefore it may in this large sense, serve to expres the Hebrew word Sheol here used, and it with the Greek word Hades is opposed to Heaven.

Veteres Christiani frequenter ab Ethnicis vexabantur, ejusmodi objectionibus, ex dissidiis de Religione. Easdem proferunt adversus Christianos Mahumetani, & Judæi Infideles. Quapropter Veterum Christianorum responsio nostra quoq; debet esse. Præfat. ad Corpus & Syntagma Confessionum Fidei. Vide plura ibid. Varia fuit hujus de descensu Christi ad inferos, articuli interpretatio, qui à nonnullis Ecclesiis retentus, à nonnullis verò omnino prætermissus est. Danæus in August. De Hæres. c. 79.

Though there should be different opinions about the sense of this Article of Christs discent into Hell, and also about the place of Hell, yet this should not weaken our faith so far, as to call so great a truth into question.

Mr. Edward

Mr. Edward Leigh Esquire, and Master of Magdalen Hall in Oxford, presents his reasons to prove Hell-torments, or punishment after this life, for some to endure, never to end. Let them be considered, Prov. 18. 17 Mr. Leigh saith, The Conscience of man hath a fear of some punishment after this life, proves it.

Answ. If they have, that doth not prove it; because the Consciences of men are as they are instructed, according to the Proverb, such Doctor, such Scholar.

I never wrote my self Master of Magdalen Hall, but Master of Arts of Magdalen Hall. He grants I prove it, and yet saith, that I alledge, doth not prove it, I do suppose it will go for a proof to an unprejudiced and indifferent Judge, whatever he urgeth to the contrary; The Heathens and Infidels have a naturall Conscience, which is Gods Deputy as Christians have an enlightned Conscience, tells them that such as do evill shall be punished, Rom. 1. 32. Plutarch in his moralls saith, some demanding how God could be just, since the wicked were so long unpunished, a Philosopher answered, notwithstanding that, they had many lashes in their Consciences. Jer. 2. 19.

If any doubt of the everlasting punishment of the wicked after this life, let him consult his Conscience, the secret rebukes whereof do anticipate Hell, and give the sinner an earnest of that sum of misery, the payment whereof shall never have end. Let me ask such a sinner, if he feele not the worm crawling in his breast, which shall never die? But I should be sorry to think my self speaking to any who are worse then Devils, (mark that Mr. Richardson) who believe what I am to speak, and do tremble. Mr. Longland in his Quatuor Novissima of Hell.

Mr. Leigh, the Heathen held there was a Hell, a being and place for wicked men after this life.

Yet p. 177. of his Book, he speaks of Gods manifesting a great truth to the Heathen's See Mr. Baxter's Holy Common Wealth, ch. 2d. Thes. 12. Vide D. Duport, Gnomologiam Homeri Cam.

Answ. Why did ye not say and prove it, that they hold that they shall be in torment never to end.

Your opinion is fitter for Heathens then for Christians: if the Heathens do hold as you do, are we to believe in Religion as the Heathen?

There were guesses among the Heathens about the world to come, but immortality is brought to light by the Gospel, 2 Tim. 1. 10. Rusca De Inferno, l. 3. c. 9. and 11th. shewes that Plato and Plutarch affirmed things near the truth, concerning Hell and its torments, and acknowledged the eternity of them.

The Heathens speak both of the Elysian Fields, which answers to Heaven or Paradise, and also of Tartarus, which answers to Hell, Sisyphus there rolls a stone up a hill, which he no sooner hath at the top, but it tumbleth down again upon him, and so continually renewes his labour; They speak also of Tytius, who hath Vultures feeding upon his Liver, which yet consumes not, the Mythologie of which, is nothing else but a perpetuity of punishment.

Porrigitur: rostroque immanis vultur obunco
Immortale jecur tondens, fecundaque pœnis
Viscera, rimaturque epulis, habitatque sub alto
Pectore: nec fibris requies datur ulla renatis.

Virg. Æneid. Lib. 6. Vide Ovid Metam. l. 4. Fab 13. Lib. 10. Fab. 1.

But because Mr. Goodwin in his Divine Authority of the Scriptures asserted, saith; The Hell of the Philosophers, is but like the Hell of the Poets, which is an Hell to play and make sport withall: it is the Scripture-Hell that makes the Hearts, and Soûls, and Consciences, of all that is in men, to quake and tremble; And because Mr. Richardson saith, He passeth not what any can say, unless they can read it him in the Word of God, Esay 8. 20. Therefore I shall wish him to consult these following Scriptures, concerning the Torments of Hell, and their everlastingnesse which he denieth. Matth. 3. 12. and 10. 28. and 13. 42. 50. and 18. 8, 9. and 25. 30, 41, 46. Mark 9. 43. 44, 45, 46, 48. Luke 16. 26. John 3. vlt. 1 Thess. 1. 8, 9, 10. Jude 7. Rev. 20. 10. Let him evade them if he can, or if not, retract his Errour.

Mr. Leigh saith, Clear reason proves it, God is just, many abominable sinners enjoy more prosperity in this life, than those that live far more innocently, must be punished hereafter, according to the multitude and hainousnesse of their sins, Psalm 73. 17.

Answ. If ye are more bold to affirm, than able to prove; doth reason deny the pu- nishment

niſhment to be juſt, except it never end, the Scripture you alleadge ſay they have an end, and you ſay they ſhall never have an end, that is your clear reaſon, to ſay ſome are worſe than others, therefore they are to ſuffer a puniſhment never to end, ſo you exclude Mary Magdalen and the poor prodigal, but it is but your bare affirmation without proof, your reaſon is, that God ſhould ſhew mercy to little ſinners, but none to the great ſinners, they muſt not be ſaved; But this your clear reaſon, is clear againſt the Will and Wiſedom of God, who is pleaſed to ſave of the worſt of ſinners, as appears Luke 7. 47. 1 Tim. 1. 19. Acts 9. 13. If ſome enjoy more proſperity then others, muſt they therefore ſuffer a puniſhment never to end? Outward proſperity is a great Bleſſing, and you make it a great Curſe; if that you ſay were true, there is no cauſe in the day of proſperity to rejoyce, Eccleſ. 7. 24. Nor to ſay, O Lord I beſeech thee ſend me now proſperity, Pſalm 115. 25. in ſaying greater ſinners you judge according to outward appearances, both for ſin and puniſhment, may be miſtaken in both, for they are in the inner man; for ſin and puniſhment you know not, the heart of unbelief and rebellion in others, not how God puniſheth them in their ſpirits; ſin is puniſhed in this life. For my boldneſſe to affirm what I am not able to prove, I leave that to the Judicious and impartial Reader to judge as he pleaſeth; but I am ſure a great deale you ſay here, tends little towards the refuting of what I ſaid.

The wiſe Heathens conjectured there was another life after this, becauſe many good men were afflicted here, and evil men proſpered; Therefore they thought the one would be rewarded hereafter, and the other puniſhed. See Luke 16. 25: Rev. 18. 7.

Neither do I conceive that the Scriptures which I alledge, prove the puniſhment hath an end.

Luke 16. proves it not, when the rich man was in torments, and was denyed a drop of water; Neither doth Matth. 13. 30. prove it, binding the tares in bundles, or faggots to burn them, he hath a pittifull ſhift to evade this, fire is not long in conſuming chaffe. But the wicked ſhall be allwayes burning, yet never conſumed, dying, yet never dead. God with one hand puniſheth them, and with the other ſuſtaineth them in their being. Hell fire is not like to ours, it is an unquenchable fire, Eſay 66. 34. Mark 9. 44. Rev. 14. 11. An everlaſting fire, Matth. 18. 8. and 25. 41. Neither do thoſe Texts in the Revelation 14. 10, 11. and 20. 10 prove it, it is eternal torment, for ever and ever, therefore it never ends.

Faſciculos ad comburendum ligare, eſt hos qui æterno igni traditi ſunt, pares cum paribus ſociare, ut quos ſimilis culpa inquinat, par etiam pœna conſtringat. Greg. 9. moral. Cap. 4. Momentaneum eſt quod delectat, æternum quod cruciat, ait idem Greg. Diverſa hominum in hoc ſeculo vita, cui indignum ſæpe pro nunc contingit præmium, adeo efficax mihi videtur argumentum, ut etiam ſi Scripturæ teſtimonium deeſſet, ſufficeret

Did I deny outward proſperity to be a great bleſſing, but as afflictions being ſanctified do better Gods people, ſo mercy (through mens corruption) being abuſed and perverted, ſhall increaſe the condemnation of many wicked men: Were there no other Argument to prove there is a Hell, then the proſperity of the wicked in this preſent world, it were ſufficient to prevaile with any rationall diſputant. And prevail'd it hath in all times, even with all ſorts of people, not onely Chriſtians and Jewes, but Gentiles too. Dr. Pierce his Sinner Impleaded, Part 1. Chap. 3. See more there.

Wicked Men may have ſpirituall puniſhments here, and yet ſuffer eternall torments. All puniſhment is either Spiritual, the loſs of Gods favour, or of inward comfort from a ſenſe of his goodneſſe; Temporall, the loſs of an eſtate, baniſhment, infamie, Eternall, the want of the Beatificall Viſion of God and Chriſt, and everlaſting torments in Hell. His other impertinencies I let paſs.

ad convincendum, animam poſt mortem hominis manere: quoniam videmus in hac vita præſenti peccatores ſceleratiſſimoſque homines ſæpiſſimè proſperari, nullaſque ſuis meritis dignos hic luere pœnas, è contrario juſtos adverſis vexari morbis cruciari, plurimaque pati incommoda. Alphonſus De Caſtro adverſus Hæreſes.

Mr. Leigh ſaith, It is juſt they ſhould ſuffer for ever, who if they had lived would have ſinned for ever: caſt them out of my ſight, Jer. 5. 1.

Anſw. If it be juſt we ſhould ſuffer for ever, it is juſt our Surety ſhould ſuffer for ever

Do you conſider that the creature was made ſubject to vanity, not willingly, but by reaſon of him that hath ſubjected the ſame in hope, Rom. 8 20.

Caſt them out of my ſight is no proof that they ſhall ſuffer for ever, but rather that they ſhall be utterly deſtroyed, for if they have any being, where ever they be, they cannot be out of the ſight of God.

Your justice is not Gods, his is a death; yours is not a death but another thing.

That is a grosse non sequitur, if it should be just we should suffer, it is just our Surety should suffer for ever.

The dignity of Christs person did set a prize on his sufferings, it was more for him (being God) to suffer for a few hours, then for sinfull Men to suffer for ever.

That place I alleadge is *Jer.*15.1. Non dubium est (saith Calvin) quin vulgari modo hic loquatur, Facessant a me. That death the Scripture mentions, is to be understood figuratively. He would have their death to be an annihilation; Wherein then are Men distinguished from beasts, if they cease to be when they dye?

I consider that *Rom.*8.20. (as many other things by you alleadged) is nihil ad rhombum.

Man sinneth in suo æterno, as long as he can, and therefore is punished in Æterno Dei. Greg. Dial. l. 4. c. 44. None that believes a God, disbelieves his justice, in rewarding the good as well as punishing the evil doers; It followes then, that as sure as God is just, if well-doers have not their reward in this life, they shall have it after. So on the other side, the wicked that escape their punishment here, shall meet with it hereafter. B. Parrys, David Restored, *p.*218.

Mr. Leigh saith, Gods intention from everlasting, was to glorifie his justice as well as his mercy, Rom.9.21,23. fitted to destruction.

Answ. Know you any of the intention of God, that is not revealed in his Word, Deut.29.29. Or doth the Word say that God doth not glorifie his justice, unlesse he inflict so great a punishment without end, you give neither Scripture nor Reason to prove what you say is just.

I take not upon me to know Gods intention any farther then he hath revealed himself in his Word, but what think you of that Text *Prov.*16.4.

See Mercer and Cartwright upon it, and Dr. Manton on the 4 and 6. Verses of Jude.

All Lawes have their sanctions, Præmium & Pœna, Reward and Punishment, have in all Ages been esteemed the rule, not onely of all Earthly Governments, but of Heavenly also. See Rom. 2. 5,6,8,9,16. 2 *Thess.*1.6. Compared with 8,9. Verses.

Non est inficiandum, quin divinæ justitiæ, eorum similiter causa gehennam condiderit, qui post habito gehennæ metu, & conculcatis Dei monitis, sese flagitijs dedunt. Qui enim ob paratam peccatis

It is Gods generall justice, that it should be well with the good, and ill with the wicked, Psalm 18.25,26. Wages is given in the evening, *Rom.*8.3. If ye live after the flesh ye shall die eternally. The day of Judgement is called a day of manifestation of the righteous Judgement of God, and Hell is a place of pure justice.

The place or state of torment is purposely ordained for the glorifying of the Attribute of Gods Justice. Mr. Baxters Saints Everlasting Rest, Part 3d. Chapter 4th. Section 2d. See there Section 8th. and 9th, Of the Eternity of the Torments.

pœnam negligit evitare scelera, dignus est ut sibi parata sit pœna. Rusca De *Inferno l.*1. *c.*59.

Mr. Leigh saith, The Covenant under which unregenerate men stand, and by which they are bound over to this wrath is everlasting.

Answ. There is but Two Covenants, Gal.4 24. The Old and New, Heb.8.13. and 12. 24. The Old is no more everlasting then the Priesthood of it, the breach of the Covenant of works is death; Therefore not eternal life in misery.

The Covenant of God in generall is, promissio sub certa aliqua conditione, a promise made with some certain condition.

Vide Cocceium De Fœdere, C. 1,2. & 4. Rollocum De vocatione efficaci, C.2.3,4 See my Treatise of the Divine Promises, l.2. Ch.1.

There are but two Covenants between God and Man, The Covenant of Works and the Covenant of Grace, called in Scripture the Law of Workes, and the Law of Faith, *Rom.*3 27. *Gal.*3.15,16,17,18. and 4.24.

The first Covenant with Man was a Covenant of Workes, wherein life was promised to Adam, and in him to his posterity, upon condition of perfect, personall, and perpetuall obedience; Man by his fall having made himself uncapable of life by that Covenant, the Lord was pleased to make a Second, Commonly called the

And my Saints Encouragements in Evill Times, Chap.4th. and 5th. In the Covenant of Workes made with our first Parents in the state of Innocency, there was Law without Gospel, but the Old Testament and New both consist of Law and Gospell put together, onely they had most of the one, we of the other. Mr. Carter of the Covenant.

Covenant

Covenant of Grace: wherein he freely offered unto ſinners life and ſalvation by Jeſus Chriſt. requiring of them Faith in him, that they may be ſaved, and promiſing to give unto all thoſe that are ordained unto life, his holy Spirit, to make them willing and able to believe.

This Covenant of Grace is often called a Teſtament in Scripture. It was differently adminiſtred in the time of the Law, & of the Goſpel. Under the Law, it was adminiſtred by Promiſes, Propheſies, Sacrifices, Circumciſion, the Paſchall Lamb, all foreſignifying Chriſt to come, and is called the Old Teſtament or Covenant. Under the Goſpell it was diſpenced under the preaching of the Word, and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and it is called the New Teſtament or Covenant.

You make theſe two, the Old and the New Covenant; different Covenants, which are but one and the ſame Covenant of Grace, under an Old and New Adminiſtration.

Heb. 8.13. The Covenant of Grace made betwixt God and Man in Chriſt Jeſus, was ever ſince the fall one & the ſame, in the dayes of Adam, Abrah., Moſes, and of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, though the adminiſtration thereof was divers, according to the different Ages and eſtates of Gods Church and Children. Mr. Hind of the uſe of the Morall Law in the dayes of the Goſpell.

When I ſay the Covenant, under which unregenerate men ſtand, is Everlaſting, I mean the Covenant of Workes, therefore what you ſay of the Prieſthood is impertinent, and your conſequence, inconſequent; The breach of the Covenant of Workes is death, therefore not Eternall life in miſery. The Curſe of this Covenant being broken, is death Temporall, Spirituall, and Eternall. Eternall life in miſery, is your own expreſſion, conſonant to Mr. Hobbes Leviathan, as proper as ſome others which you uſe; It is rather Eternall Death in miſery, vita non eſt vivere, ſed valere.

Mr. Leigh ſaith, in that torment, they curſe and accuſe one another.

Anſ. When you write again, I pray tell us how you know that in Hell they do ſo, for the Word of God ſaith not ſo, nor have you been there to hear it, nor they that told you; To affirm things in Religion not revealed in the Word of God, is to preſume above that which is written, and contrary to 2 Cor. 4.8. Rom. 15.4. One ſaith, their torment in Hell is ſo great, that they cannot forbear roaring. And you ſay they curſe and accuſe one another; And all of them the Word of God; they will not deny that thoſe in Hell are in the greateſt trouble, and they in leſs trouble cannot ſpeak, Pſal. 17.4. Therefore they cannot curſe and accuſe one another as you affirm.

Wicked men curſe and accuſe one another here on earth, and why it may not then be imagined, that they do the like in Hell, (where there ſhall be the moſt perfect hatred) I know not.

Aquinas ſaith well, ſicut in Beatis in patria erit perfectiſſima charitas, ita in damnatis perfectiſſimum odium. Suppl. Part. 3ª. Quæſt. 98. Artic. 3.

It is frequent with Divines to ſay, that execration and blaſphemy is the language of Hell.

Where thou ſhalt have nothing about thee but darkneſſe and horrour, wailing and wringing of hands, deſperate yellings and gnaſhing of teeth, thine own Companions in vanity and ſin, to ban and curſe thee with much bitterneſs and rage. Wicked Devils to inſult over thee with helliſh cruelty and ſcorn, the never dying Worm to feed upon thy ſoul and fleſh for ever and for ever! O Eternity! Eternity! Eternity! Mr. Boltons 4. laſt things of Hell. Blaſphemy, Yelling and Curſing, ſhall be all the muſick of Hell. Mr. Wells his Proſpect of Eternity, Chap. 19.

But though you or others diſlike this, you may give them liberty to be of this Judgement, till you can by plain Scripture evince it to be an errour.

Ibi ſocius contra ſocium, amicus contra amicum exclamabit. Pater Filio, & contra Filius Patri maledicet. Mater Filiæ, et Filia Matri malè precabitur. Inchini Concio De Inferno.

Mr. Leigh ſaith; Divines unanimouſly concur.

An. If they doe it is not binding to us, for we are ſatisfied they are not infallible, The Prieſt, Popiſh and Mahometan Prieſts, Baals Prieſts, and all other ſorts of Prieſts concur. How much might there is in your Reaſons to prove a puniſhment after this life never to end; let who will judge: I for my part profeſſe, I do not ſee how they ſerve to your purpoſe, your nakedneſſe appears, and that your opinion hath neither Scripture nor Reaſon to ſupport it, therefore it muſt needs fall. 2 Timothy 3. 9. You have done all you can, and can come to no ſurer bottom to reſt upon, then ſuppoſalls and imaginations, wreſting Scriptures, and consent of others, your glory is, that all are of your mind, though without ground, or reason, as is shewed. Also in that you alleag reasons to prove Hells Torments, it giveth me occasiō to believe, that in your own judgement the Scripture you alleag to prove it, prove it not; or if you believe your Scripture proves it, to what purpose serve your Reasons? for doe you think that those that doubt of the sufficiency of your proof of it by Scripture will be satisfied with your Reasons as a full proof of it, if there be any such, they may be to them of some use

See Mr. Boltons four last things of Hell p. 95. 96.

I say that Divines unanimously concur, that pœna damni is the worser part of Hell, to be for ever totally separated from all gracious Communion with God

There is

1. A privation of all outward enjoyments, of all desireable good.

2. And cheifly, a privation of the Beatifical vision, and comfortable presence of God, and the Society of Saints and Angels.

Juxta unanimem Theologorū assertionē, separatio hæc sive privatio, quæ ab illis pœna damni appelatur, ipsum etiam inferni ignem superat. Imo damnati mallent mille gehennas sustinere, quam Dei gloriæ ipsius. Visione privari. Inchini Concio de extremo judicio.

It were noe Difficult province, to alleag many more Divines of the same judgement, but since this Gentleman, seemes not moved therewith, I shall not spend any time to quote many Authors this way.

For urging Reasons, as well as Scriptures, to prove this great truth, how usual is it with Divines, both in confirming the Creation and the Corruption of nature, the immortality of the Soul, to prove it both by Scripture and Reason? vide Crocii Syntagma Theol. l. 2. c. 2. There are some Antiscripturists, and Scripture is of little use to them. I wonder he should think the Scriptures I alleag prove it not, I am so confident that the Scriptures I alleaged before and those I quote now, prove it so evidently and fully, that shall rather wonder, if he (or any other of his perswasion) be not convinced with the cleareneſſe of the Divine Testimony.

Hæc ipsa oratio qua quis infatibilitate gloriatur, dicens, non possum errare quid est nisi vox Antichristi se vestiens divinis pari, quisquis dicit, Judice

For infallibility of judgement, the Pope onely challengeth that, yet it is not an Apostolical infallibility, for he challengeth no infalibility by immeditate Revelation from God, but from the Diligent use of the meanes, neither doth he challenge an infalibility in his writings as the Apostles did, but onely in the Conclusion of matters of Faith.

elogiis. Hæc enim oratio, errare non possum, a solo Deo, sine mendacio & superbiæ Crimine potest usurpari, quisquis dicit, errare non possum, hoc ipso errat gravissime. Theses Sedanenses De Summo controversiarum

The Learned contradict themselves, Mr. Bolton saith, thou must live in endless woe in Brimstone and fire, which thou mightest so often and easily scaped, which overthrows the Doctrine of election. Also they say the sence of loss in Hell is greater then the sence of pain, so they make the sensible want of the presence of God the greatest torment in Hell, & that is in this life, I am Cast out of thy sight Psal. 31. 2. it followeth by their Doctrine that the greatest torment of Hell is in this life.

Mr. Leigh saith in his Body of Divinity, the sense of Gods wrath, rage of Conscience, guilt, fear, dispair, the soul cannot melt with greater torment; if so, then this is not a worse torment in Hell, then is in this life.

Water is so scarce in Hell, that Greenwood saith, the damned prize a drop of water above ten thousand worlds, and yet they affirm, those in Hell shall continually weep, therefore their own sayings agree not.

Where is the Contradiction of themselves, by him mentioned in the beginning? How doth Mr. Boltons opinion overthrow the doctrine of Election? That the evill of loss in Heaven, is greater than the evill of pain; I think it is clear, the loss of God the chiefest Good, is the worst of Evils.

The soul cannot melt with greater torment then the sense of Gods wrath, rage of conscience, guilt, wicked men and others may be is punished here in part with this evill. But here is utter darkneſſe, the punishment of losse in Hell is a total and finall separation from the face, presence, and favour of god, Mat. 7. 23, 25, 41. 2 Thes. 1. 9. This is worse then all the fire and brimstone in Hell.

Mat. 8. 12. & 13 42. 50 & 13. 13 & 4. 51 & 25 30. Luke 13. 28.

The Scripture saith there, shall be weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth.

The weeping shews greife; the gnashing of teeth is a signe of indignation and impatience, or of horrour, and it saith in the parable, they shall not have there so much ſo much as a drop of water to coole their Tongues.

I hope it is not herein contrary to it ſelf.

He ſaith, The firſt Authour of the opinion of the Torments of Hell never to end, was Marcion the Heretick, and p. 75. He ſaith, The Greek Fathers were the firſt pillars of Hell Torments.

P. 126. He mentions many infallible proofs, that there is not to be a puniſhment after this life never to end.

Proof I. Becauſe the Scriptures hold forth no ſuch thing, as hath been ſhewed, Deut. 29.29. I have before alleadged ſuch plain Texts, as you cannot evade.

Proof II. Their opinion of puniſhment never to End, is contrary to the Word of God, in that it doth maintain that the wicked ſhall have eternal life. The Word ſaith, Him will God deſtroy, Matth. 21.41. 1 Cor. 3.17. and 6.13. They ſhall be deſtroyed, 2 Pet. 2.12. Swift deſtruction, their end is deſtruction, Phil. 3.13. Their opinion ſaith, they ſhall never be deſtroyed, die, nor end, which is no deſtruction.

Deſtruction is to be underſtood, not in a Naturall, but Morall ſenſe, thoſe expreſſions are Metaphoricall, none calleth it eternall life but your ſelf.

He ſaith p 130. with the Pelagians; If Adam had not ſinned, he ſhould have dyed; againſt the very words of Scripture, By one Man ſin entred into world, and death by ſin. Yet after p. 133. He ſaith, he denyes not but the wages of ſin is death. He was not immortall by Nature, but by the help of God.

Proof VI. The opinion of the Torments of Hell never to end, hath and doth daily cauſe much ſin.

Firſt it cauſeth Fear, 1 John 4.8. 1 John 4.18. a ſervile and a ſlaviſh fear is ſin. Slaviſh fear is the fear of puniſhment, a tender ſenſe of Gods wrath and diſpleaſure againſt ſin, is a Grace, Pſalm 90.11.

Slaviſh fear is diſingenuous, we fear more our own ſmart, then Gods diſpleaſure. Chriſt ſtrives to awaken and ſtir up this kind of fear in us, tells us of Hell and Everlaſting darkneſſe, of a flaming fire, of weeping and gnaſhing of teeth, preſents his Father with power to kill both body and ſoul. We muſt not fancy God all mercy and ſweetneſſe, Deut. 29.30. Hell is part of our Creed, as well as Heaven: Gods Threatnings are as loud as his Promiſes; and could we once fear Hell as we ſhould, we ſhould not ſear it. We may ſerve God ſub intuitu mercedis, with reſpect unto reward; Why then not ſub intuitu vindictæ, upon the fear of puniſhment. Deſcendamus in infernum viventes, ne deſcendamus morientes, ſaith Bernard. Prudenter timeamus, ne inaniter timeamus, Auſtin.

Mr. Farindon Part 9th. Sermon 5th. on Ezek. 33. 11.

The Proteſtants in Poland ſay, there will come a time when the Angels and wicked men ſhall be freed. Origen, one of the Fathers held, that at laſt all ſhould be ſaved, Men and Devils.

The Proteſtants in Poland have been anſwered ſufficiently. Origens opinion hath been long ſince exploded in the Church, and condemned for hereſie by the fifth Generall Council held at Conſtantinople, under the Emperour Juſtinian. Oſiand. Cent. 6. l. 3. c. 4. Canon 9th. and 10th. and largely refuted by Auſtin in his Book De Civitate Dei, l. 21. c. 17. Vide l. 12. c. 20. Et Aug. de Hæreſ. c. 43. Ruſcam de Inferno, l. 5. c. 30, 31, 32. Et Alphonſum à Caſtro Adverſus Hæreſes, l. 3. p. 215. & l. 8. p. 58. Alphonſus à Caſtro quoting the latter end of the 16th. of Luke (the place ſo much oppoſed by Mr. Richardſon) Quibus verbis (ſaith he) nihil aptius dici potuit ad Origenis inſaniam revincendam. See Hornbecks Summa Controverſiarum Religionis l. 7. De Socinianiſmo.

This opinion of Origen may go therefore for an Errour, notwithſtanding all that which is ſpoken by a learned Writer of late in defence of Origen and the chief of his Opinions, and his queſtion likewiſe, what difference there is betwixt a Devill made an Angel, and an Angel made a Devil. Patres quidem hanc Origenis ſententiam tanquam ſanæ et Catholicæ fidei adverſam ſummo conſenſu ſemper rejecerunt, et quotquot de Hæreſibus ſcripſerunt, ut inter alios Epiphanius, Philaſtrius, Auguſtinus eam inter hæreſes recenſuerunt. Animi medela Doctoris Stearne, l. 1. c. 26.

That the Proteſtants of Poland he ſpeaks of are Socinians, the Racovian Catechiſm ſhews. They with Crellius, Bidale, and your ſelfe conceive, a finite Creature cannot undergo torments of an infinite duration, becauſe it is ſaid, the wicked ſhall be deſtroyed, 2 Theſ. 1. 8, 9.

To which I anſwer.

1 The ſame infinite power of God, which preſerves Angels and men, veſſels of mercy, to the glorifying of his grace, can preſerve veſſels of wrath, to the glorifying of his juſtice; And God will do ſo, becauſe his mercy cannot contradict his juſtice.

2 The deſtruction mentioned, is rather in a continuall fieri, then in facto eſſe, perpetually doing, though never finally done.

The living of the wicked in Hell, is a dying life, and their dying, is a living death.

The ſame (for ever) that is for the bleſſed ſouls, the ſame (for ever) is for the accurſed ſouls. But the bleſſed ſouls ſhall die no more, Rev. 21. 4. It follows therefore that the worme of Conſcience, and the unquenchable fire of Hell have no period at all, but ſhall continue as long as God laſts.

Dr. Jer. Taylors Fooliſh Exchange, Part 2*d.*

Eternall life and death in Scripure are oppoſed in the ſame ſenſe. See Dan. 12 2. Mat. 25. 27. Luke 16. 26. Apoc. 14. 11. & 19. 3.

Nihil eſt Chriſtianorum tam doctorum quam indoctorum ſenſibus inſitum magis, quam damonum, at damnatorum hominum, perinde atque immortales ipſi ſunt, ſic aternas eſſe pœnas, ac nullo unquam tempore deſituras. Petavii Theol. Dog Tomus tertius de Angelis, l. 3. c. 6. Vide plura ibid. et c. 7.

Mr. Rowe on Romans 1. 16.

I ſhall conclude with the ſaying of a Reverend Divine, our late Lecturer at Weſtminſter-Abbey.

Whoever ſhall claſh with the great Fundamentall Doctrines, the Doctrines about ſinne, whether there be any ſuch thing yea or no, touching the Reſurrection, Heaven, Hell, the laſt Judgement, he that ſhall play and dally with theſe things, and take liberty to ſpeak againſt them, ſuch wantonneſſe as this is, will prove his ruine in the end. Did you not once believe theſe things? were they not once Articles of your Faith? how is it that you come to caſt them off? Oh! it is the moſt dangerous thing in the world for a man to be medling, and tampering with, and at laſt come to a flat down-right denying of the great Fundamental Truths of Religion, the things which ſometimes he believed and profeſſed the belief of, this man is in a fair way to the unpardonable ſin.

This both Mr. Richardſon, and the learned Writer in the defence of Origen, and his chiefeſt opinions maybe pleaſed to conſider ſeriouſly of, the laſt of which hath this paſſage in that Treatiſe. So that whitherſoever we look, whether to the gracious providence of God, or the neceſſity of the Nature of things, we find ſome probable hope that the puniſhment of the damned, as it implies the ſenſe of pain, ſhall not be eternall in the higheſt ſenſe of the Word.

OF

OF THE CEREMONIALL LAW.

CHRIST was long defer'd before he came in the flesh.

1. For the greater Majesty and State, all the Types made way for him.

2. For the better Confirmation, that He was the Messiah intended, all the Ceremonies pointed at something in our Saviour. He came to fulfill and restore the Morall Law to its primitive vigour and sense, to fulfill and antiquate the Ceremoniall Law.

The summ of the Ceremoniall Law may be reduced to Two Heads.

1. Such things as belonged to the publick externall Worship of God.

Or 2. Such as concern'd their private conversation.

The First may be reduced to Four Heads.

1. Holy things, all their Sacraments and Sacrifices for Expiation and Thanksgiving.

2. Holy Persons, the Tribe of Levi, out of which their Priests and Levites were separated from their brethren, and set apart to attend on Holy things.

3. Holy places, the Tabernacle, and after Solomons Temple.

4. Holy times, times set apart for the publick Worship of God, besides the Sabbath, every New Moon, some Holy dayes, Annual, the Great Feasts of the Passeover, Pentecost and Tabernacles.

Dictum est veterum Sapientiâ Hebræorum, qui contemnit solemnitates Ecclesiasticas, is non habebit partem futuri seculi, quod rectè & verè dicitur de contemptoribus Verbi & Sacramentorum. P Fag. Annotat. in Chald. Paraph.

2. Ceremonies which concerned their private Conversation, some concerned their Meats and Drinks, some their Apparel, all which shadowed out Christ.

I shall not undertake to speak of all these particulars, but somewhat of the Sacrifices, and a little of some of the other things before mentioned.

Of the Sacrifices.

Sacrifices were used in the Worship of God, for Two ends.

1. When a Sacrifice was offered, especially of Beasts; when a man saw the blood of Beasts powred out, it put him in mind of his own sins, and the desert of them, and taught him to say thus: Even as this Creature is here slain, and his blood distills and drops away; so my sins deserve that my blood should be shed, and my Soul be drenched in Hell for ever.

2. Sacrifice served to put them in mind of the Messiah to come, and the slaying of the Beasts shewed them, how the Messiah should shed his blood, and give his life for the sins of the people. Mr. Perkins.

Ecclesia vetus voce ex V. T. petita, ut Judais & Ethnicis sacrificiis ritibusque vocibus assuetis se accomodaret, omne ferè cultum Novi Testamenti & præcipuè Cœnæ Domini, sacrificij nomine commendavit Rivetus in Gen. See Doctor Gouges Saints Sacrifice, p. 229. 2 0. 241. Vide Willetum in primum Caput Levit quæst. 3. 4, 5, 6, 7. In generali significatione ex Latina Etymologia ad omnes sacras actiones potest referri, cum sacrificium dictum sit quasi sacrum factum. Isidor. Orig. l. 6. c. 19. In sacrificio propriè dicto quatuor semper observata sunt. 1. Certa res externa & sensibilis quæ offerri debuit. 2. Certus ritus in offerendo servatus. 3. Certa persona administra.

Sometimes

Sometimes for the ſpiritual Worſhip of the whole man, Rom 12.1. And in this ſenſe the Fathers called the Lords Supper a Sacrifice. Feſtus derives the word Hoſtia, from an old word Hoſtio to ſtrike. Iſidore ſaith, they call'd among the Ancients Hoſtiæ Sacrifices, which were made before they went againſt an enemy, Victimæ Sacrifices which were offered after victory, when they had conquered the enemy, and the Victimæ were greater Sacrifices then the Hoſtiæ.

Victima quæ cecidit dextra victrice vocatur:
Hoſtibus à victis Hoſtia nomen habet.
Ovid in Faſtis.

The Sacrifices which were commanded, ordinary and inſtituted were Five.

1. The Burnt-Offering, Levit. 1.2. It was for all ſins in generall, a Sacrifice all burnt to aſhes, except the skin and intrals, *Pſal.*51. † 16. It was a Bullock, a Ram, a Lamb among the Beaſts; or a Turtle Dove or young Pigeon among the Fowles, without blemiſh, to ſignifie the purity and perfection which was in Chriſt, and our perfection in him, *Heb.*9 13. It was to be of the choice of the flock, to teach us to honour God with our ſubſtance, *Prov.*3.9. And to ſerve him with a perfect heart, 1 *Chron.*28.9. Onely tame and profitable beaſts were offered, meek and loving, of Fowle the Dove or Pigeon, to ſhew, that as Chriſt was ſerviceable and loving, ſo muſt true Chriſtians be. Here a Goat as well a Sheep might be offered, now a Goat is by Chriſt uſed as an emblem of a wicked man, to ſhew both that Chriſt was reputed as a ſinner for us, though in himſelf he was righteous, & we in him are accepted as righteous, though in our ſelves ſinners, ſo now a Goat is accepted on Gods Alcar. Alſo the blood was ſtill to be ſprinkled on the Altar, to ſignifie that the merit of the ſufferings, & all came from the Godhead of Chriſt, and from thence is all the acceptation of our ſervices. Likewiſe the Crop and feathers of the Dove was to be pulled away, and the Beaſt flead, it may ſeem to ſignifie, that Chriſt was ſtripped of all worldly excellencie, and made himſelf of no reputation, and that true Chriſtians muſt do ſo too, be humble and content with all for Chriſts ſake.

4. Certus locus qui huic actioni deſtinabatur. Sacrificium eſt actio ſacra, qua res aliqua externa offertur & conſecratur Deo, in eum finem & iis ritibus, qui ob eo ſunt inſtituti. Rivetus Catholi. Orthod. Tractatus 1. quæſt. 19.

† Holocauſtum עוֹלָה Golah ex עָלָה Galah aſcendit, erat hoſtia, qua detractis extis, integra ara imponebatur, & tota præter pellem Comburebatur. Ita dicebatur ab elevatione ſui ſuper altare, vel ab aſcendente fumo; eratque Typus Chriſti, unici holocauſti pro nobis in cruce elevandi & offerendi; nec non precum ſurſum aſcendentium, Pilkerri Not. Dikiol. in loc.

The Living Sacrifice was cut per ſpinam dorſi) through the Chine-bone of the back, the Apoſtle alludeth to this *Heb.*4.13. and Chriſt, *Matth.*24 51.

The filth was to be caſt on the Eaſt part of the Altar with the aſhes, as far as might be from the Ark, which was on the Eaſt end of the Tabernacle, to ſignifie the removing of our ſins from Gods preſence, and all the infirmities of our ſervices, for Chriſt had no infirmity. The Birds wings were to be nipped almoſt aſunder, not all out, to ſhew it may be, Gods favourable accepting of weaker Chriſtians in the leſs degree of mortification which they can attain.

2. The Meat. Offering, which conſiſted of things without life, as of Fine Flower, Oyle and Incenſe, *Levit.*2.2. Fine Flower without any bran, which ſignified the pure Eſtate of Chriſt and all Chriſtians in him. Oyle was powred upon it, to which the Apoſtle alludes, 2 *Cor.*1.21. 1 John 2 27. and Incenſe joyned with it, the Apoſtle alludeth to this, *Eph.*5.7. Sometimes it was fryed in a pan, to which David alludes, Pſalm 45 2.

3. The Peace-Offering, which was a ſacrifice of Thankeſgiving, for the ſafety of the Offerer. One part of it was due to God, one due to the Prieſt, and one to the Offerer, Amos 5.5. The Fat was onely due to God, the reſt of it was divided between the Prieſt and people, and they made a Feaſt of it, 1 *Sam.*9.24. And Solomon alludeth to it, *Prov.*11.1. See 1 *Sam.*20 6. The breaſt and the right ſhoulder of it was due to the Prieſt, the ſhoulder to ſignifie, that He carried the burden of the people, Numb. 11.11. The Breaſt to ſignifie his Compaſſion and Love to the people, Eſay 40.11. The High-Prieſt carryed the names of the Twelve Tribes on his breaſt, to ſignifie his Compaſſion, and he carried their names in Onyx-ſtones upon his ſhoulders, to ſignifie that he carried the burden of the people. They had a Feaſt of joy adjoyned to it, Judg. 21.19. wherein they danced, and that figured our ſpiritual mirth and joy for our Redemption by Chriſt.

4. The Sin-Offering was for ſins commited, for which they craved pardon. They were were commanded to lay their hand upon the Head of the Sin-Offering, *Levit.*4. to signifie that they laid their sins upon the Beast, which was a Type of Christ, who was made an Offering for sin, Esay 53.10. 1 *Cor.*5. 21.

5. The Trespasse-Offering, was a Sacrifice for sins of Omission, or sins of Ignorance, *Levit.*5 15.

These Ceremonies were temporary things, and to expire when Christ came, *Col.*2.17.

Reasons 1. They were a distinction of the Jews from all other Nations, called their Law, John 10.34. and 15.25. the distinction is now taken away, John 4. 21,22. and 12. 16. Acts 15. 8,9.

2. It was a Law Typical, and to foreshew something to come, *Heb.*7.18,19. Therefore when the substance came, these shadows vanished. Though the Ceremonial Law be now abolished, *Heb.*10.1. Yet God had a spirituall intention in it, it was not onely a Type of Christ, but of the worship of Christ in the time of the Gospel, therefore we should study it as long as we live.

It is difficult to determine when the legall Ministry ceased. Some say at Christs death, others at his Resurrection, a third, at the day of Pentecost, at the dissolution of the Judaicall Government, most probably when the Temple was destroyed.

God esteems not Ceremoniall Services, unless the Spirit be in them, Esay 1.13. and 66. 3. Amos 5.21. *Mal.*2.3

The spirituall Sacrifices required under the Gospel are,

1. A daily and serious consideration of that one great Propitiatory Sacrifice, offered to the Justice of God for the sins of Mankind, in which the same person was Priest, Altar, and Sacrifice; Priest and Altar as God, the Sacrifice as man; Call to mind Christs death, and take notice of the worth, sufficiency, and necessity of it, and therein contemplate the odiousnesse of our sins for which he dyed, and the infiniteneſse of his wonderfull love, which induced him to save us from sin, by so dear a price. This is the Morning and Evening Sacrifice, which every true Christian as a Spiritual Temple, must offer daily unto God for the renewing of his faith and repentance day by day.

The Sacrifices were, 1. Propitiatory to satisfie justice, pacifie wrath, make reconciliation, all those Sacrifices were bloody, they were but a shadow, Christs blood is the onely true Propitiatory Sacrifice.

The 2d. Sacrifice is that of a Contrite Spirit, humbled soundly, and grownd to powder, made base, vile, and less then nothing in its own eyes, in consideration of the odiousnesse of its sin, by which the God of Heaven hath been provoked, the Lord of life crucified, and the Holy Spirit grieved, and all misery to our selves deserved, *Psal.*51.

2. Eucharistical of gratitude, by way of homage, which declared those that offered them to be debtors unto God, these remain still in the Church. 1 Pet. 2.5.

3. The Sacrifice of Prayers and Supplications, the fervent and faithful begging of Christ and grace, and the Spirit, and remission of sins, and power against sin, and preservation, and salvation, in a word, all good things, Psalm 50. 14, 15.

4. The offering up of Almes to God, by relieving his poor members, Paul calls that which the Philippians sent him, an odour of a sweet smell, a Sacrifice acceptable to God, and Paul in the Hebrewes, bids us do good and distribute, for with such Sacrifices God is well pleased.

THE TABERNACLE.

THe moveable Tabernacle ſignified our Eſtate and Condition here, and the Temple which was unmoveable, ſignified our eſtate in future glory.

It was built with three diſtinct roomes.

1. The moſt Holy Place, in which were the Ark and Cherubims. This did ſignifie Heaven, and the Ark, Chriſt as He is received up into glory, ſitting at his Fathers right hand, protecting his Church, and uſing the Miniſtery of his Angels for their good and welfare. There was no light in the holieſt of all, neither in the Tabernacle nor Temple, *Rev.*21.23.

The 2d. was called the Holy Place, and this did ſignifie the true inviſible Church of the Elect of God here militant on Earth, into which none entred but the Prieſts, which ſignified the Elect people of God, which are a holy and royall Prieſthood unto him. Herewas firſt a Golden Candleſtick, which having lamps was dreſſed every Evening, and gave light all night, to ſignifie the work of Chriſt by his Spirit, affording the true light of ſaving knowledge of himſelf, and of his ſpirituall benefits to them, when it is dark night to all the world beſides; here was the Golden Tabernacle, which had ever upon it Bread and Incenſe, ſignifying Chriſt giving himſelf as ſpirituall food unto his people, to ſtrengthen and confirm their hearts in obedience, and alſo giving the pure Frankincenſe of his merits unto them, by which they become acceptable unto his Father.

The 3d. room was the Outer Court, where all the people came, and it ſignified the Church viſible; wherein are elect and reprobate, true and falſe Chriſtians mixed, there was the offering of Bulls, Goats, and other Beaſts, and ſprinkling of blood in all the ſervices to be performed, ſignifying the revelation of God himſelf in the Miniſtery of the Goſpel, to the Sons of Men, that they might be brought to believe in him.

The word tranſlated *Ark, ſignifies a Coffer, or Cheſt. It was the place from which the Lord gave his anſwers to his people, and therefore it is called Debir, his ſpeaking place, 1 Kings 6.23.

It was the fulleſt and cleareſt Type of Chriſt they had, beyond the Tabernacle or Temple, there the Tables of the Law were laid up; Therefore it was called the Ark of Teſtimony, Exod. 25. To ſhew that Chriſt was the end of the Law for righteouſneſſe, *Rom.*10.4. In it was the pot of Manna, *Heb.*9.4. Chriſt was the true Bread that came down from Heaven.

2. It was the fulleſt Type of all Ordinances under the Goſpell.

3. A ſpeciall ſign of Gods gracious preſence amongſt them, *Joſh.*15.6.7. See Rev. 21.3. *Zech.*2.10. Here was the Propitiatory, where God only was to be found. It is called the Propitiatory or Mercy-ſeat, *Rom.*3.25. 1 John 2.2. which covereth our ſins.

Nihil aliud erat Tabernaculum, quam una, ex decem cortinis ſimul junctis confecta Cortina. Dickinſ. Delph. Phœn. C. 11.

See Mr. Cartw. 2d Sermon on Pſalm 15. and Dr. Willet on *Exod.*25. quæſt. 2d. and 11, 12. Mr. Pierſon on Pſalm 84.1. Tabernaculum Hebræis jam Miſchan, jam Ohel vocatur, Miſchan à Shacan quieſcendo, quod Deus ibi quaſi quieſcere, habitare & ſedem ſuam habere videbatur. Ohel verò à tentoriis & Cortinis unde conſtabat. P. Pagius.

There was a double Altar. 1. A brazen one for Burnt Offering. 2. A golden one for Incenſe, both did ſet forth the God-head of Chriſt. See Rev. 8.3.

*See Dr. Willet on 25. of Exod. quæſt. 18, 19, 20, 21, 22.

Maſter Ley on 25. of Exod. It covered the Tables of the Law, that it ſhould not riſe up againſt us to condemn us; Noahs Ark was a Type of the Church, 1 Peter 3.22. Quæ ſit ſalva per lignum in quo pependit Mediator Dei & Hominum, Homo Chriſtus Jeſus. Et quod de lignis quadratis fieri jubetur, undique ſtabilem vitam ſanctorum ſignificat. Aug. De Civit. Dei, l.15. c.26.

THE TEMPLE.

THere was onely one Temple then at Jeruſalem, which after was deſtroyed by the Romans; Every thing in the Temple was a Type of Chriſt.

The Vail was a Type of his fleſh, *Heb.*10. 20.
The Golden Altar of his interceſſion, *Rev.*8.3.
And the Brazen Altar of his Paſſion.
The Temple it ſelf was a Type of Chriſts body, *John*2 19.

In the Temple was,

1. Atrium, The outward Court where the people ſtood.
2. Sanctum, The holy place where the Prieſts offered their daily ſacrifice.
3. Sanctum Sanctorum*, where the High-Prieſt appearedonce a year at the ſolemn day of Expiation,

It is to be conſidered,

1. Morally, as a place of the publick Worſhip of God, it was One of the wonders of the world, and a moſt glorious ‖ pile of building.
2. Typically, It was a Type
   1. Of the Humane Nature of Chriſt, John 2.21.
   2. Of the Church of God, where Souls ſhould be gathered unto the Lord in one myſtical body, 1 *Cor.*3.16. 1 Peter 2.5. Rev. 11.1.

   It reſembled the Church,
   1. In variety of goodly ſtones, 1 Peter 2.5.
   2. It was the perfection of beauty, ſo the Church.
   3. Gods preſence was there in a ſpecial manner, *Ezek.*48.35 2 *Cor.*6. 16.
   4. The Temple was a permanent, fixed place, ſo the Church in the dayes of the Goſpel, in reſpect of Ordinances and inſtitutions,

* Munus Pontificis nobile atq; primarium fuit, Templi adyta intrare, quæ Sancta Sanctorum Hebræi appellitant, idq; ſemel in anno non amplius fiebat, ſolemni expiationis die, atque ea hora tantum, quæ dicata piaculari ſacro erat. Cunæus De Repub. Heb. l. 2. c. 1.

‖ Nihil rerum judaicarum pulchrius, magnificentiuſque fuit, nec quod magis celebratum monumentis omnium ſit, quam illud immenſæ opulentiæ Templum, quod in urbe Hieroſolyma extructum, dedicatumq; à Solomone eſt. Ejus deſcriptio luculentiæ apud Flavium Joſephum extat in octavo Antiquitatum libro. Cunæus De Repub. Heb. l. 2. c. 12. Vide plura ibid.

The Veſſels of the Temple were far larger then thoſe of the Tabernacle; in it were the Ark, Cherubims, Baſons, Candleſticks, Spoones, Cenſers of Gold, they had the Teſtimony of Gods acceptance, by fire from Heaven, and the Clouds covering of it, and promiſes to thoſe who worſhipt in or toward the Temple.

An ingenious Gentleman of my name, hath put out a Treatiſe of the Temple; I heard an honeſt man in Banbury bewaile the loſs of Mr. Wheatlies Sermons of the Temple, which I believe would have deſcribed it excellently.

*Exod.*23.14. Three times thou ſhalt keep a Feaſt to me in the year,)

The Paſſeover called the Feaſt of unleavened bread, Pentecoſt named the Feaſt of firſt fruits, and the Feaſt of Tabernacles, called the Feaſt of gathering fruits in the end of the year. They had divers other Feſtivall dayes but theſe are therefore named, becauſe in them onely the people were bound to come up before the Lord, theſe three were ſpeciall Feaſts above the reſt.

Erant hæc Tria Feſta; Feſtum Paſcha, Pentecoſtes & Tabernaculorum. Feſtum Paſcha dicunt celebratum in memoriam Liberationis Ægyptiacæ. Feſtum Penticoſtes, ut primitias frugum offerant Domino. Feſtum Tabernaculorum pro collectione omnium fructuum qui per totum annum creverunt, ſic Hebræi ſentiunt, Paul. Fag Annotat. in Paraphraſ. Chald. Vide Rivetum in loc.

OF WAR, PESTILENCE, and FAMINE.

Πόλεμος. Λοιμὸς. Λιμός.

THese are Gods Three great Judgements, whereby he puniſheth the ſins of a people or Nation.

1. Of War, Bellum eſt quando per vim certatur. It is War when Men ſtrive by force. War is a great Curſe in regard of Two evill effects of it.

1. It cauſeth a ceſſation, and as it were a vacation of all actions profitable and comfortable to the lives of men. The exerciſing of Arts and Sciences, of Traffick and Merchandize, of Husbandry and Tillage are put to ſilence. None can buy or ſell, or travell and viſite friends, or be viſited of friends, or perform any ſervice and buſineſs freely and chearfully. This interruption of the affaires of humane ſocieties is a great affliction.

2. Much miſchief and violence is to be ſuffered; Every one is put to extraordinary labour, plundring and ſpoiling is then practiſed, and many loſe their lives: War hath its name in Greek from much blood. The quality of the perſons uſed in ſuch a buſineſs, is fitly deſcribed, Ezek 21. 31. Bruitiſh men, and skilfull to deſtroy. Wars are undertaken either by Gods immediate appointment, as were the Wars of Iſrael againſt the Midianites, Ammonites, Canaanites, and the reſt of thoſe Nations, and then the War muſt needs be lawfull, or without ſuch immediate appointment, upon Common Grounds and Rules of Equity, and then alſo they are warrantable. Of theſe Wars, ſome are

1. Civill and Domeſticall, undertaken by the Chief Governour, or Governours of any ſociety, againſt diſorderly, ſinful, rebellious perſons, which live within the bowels of the State.

2. Forraign and Externall, and thoſe are either

1. Offenſive to revenge publick and groſs injuries done to the State it ſelf, or to the Neighbours, and Allies thereof; or elſe to recover ſuch things as have been violently and unjuſtly taken away, either from them, or their Allies, by any their evil Neighbours.

2. Defenſive, ſuch as are forced upon them, to protect themſelves or others their Allies, againſt wrongfull Incurſions, Invaſions, Conqueſts, or other violences.

Sicut Bellum (M'lchamah) apud Hebræos venit à comedendo conſumendoq; quòd omnia veſtet & perdat. Sic (Shalom) pax venit ab integritate & perfectione, quòd ibi omnia maneant perfecta & integra. It begins in Terrour, Cumber, Coſt, it proceeds in Killing, Burning, Stealing, Waſting, Beſiegeing, Taking Cities; it ends in Captivity and ſervitude. Ovid calls them, Horrida arma as ſtriking terrour into men, Bellum quia minimè bellum, vel quia belluinum.

Joſhuah's War againſt the Canaanites, Saul's againſt the Amalekites. Civill War is called Inteſtine, a burning in the Bowels, or Intrailes. The Netherlanders Civill Warrs continued 23 years, without any peace. The Civill Warrs of France continued 30. years, they had often Peace, and a long time together. In theſe actions were imployed all the braveſt Nations of Europe, their greateſt Captaines, Engineers and Counſellors for Warr. Sir Roger William's brief Diſcourſe of Warr, p. 48.

Of Wars upon ſuch quarrels undertaken, we have manifeſt examples in Scripture warranting them, but for Wars entred into, upon other quarrels, there is no warrant, ſay ſome able Divines. David 1 Sam. 3. 5, 6. fought againſt the Philiſtims to defend his Country-men, and for the ſame cauſe did Saul fight againſt the Ammonites, which b ſi eged and oppreſſed Jabeſh Gilead.

All War is an Abridgement of all woe, with this Mace the Lord bruiſeth the Nations in his wrath. Thus God alwaies puniſhed his people Iſrael in the dayes of the Judges, when they by imbracing falſe gods, did provoke his wrath againſt them, Scatter them (ſaith the Scripture) that delight in Warr. Sapientes pacis cauſa, bellum gerunt. Saluſt. Juſtum bellum quibus neceſſarium, & pia arma quibus nulla niſi in armis relinquitur ſpes. Livie.

Judges

Judges 3.8,12. and 4.2. and 6.1. Jer. 51.34. This is the punishment threatned, Deut 38.25,49.

One saith, Open War may justly be undertaken on some of these Considerations.

1. In defence of ones Country and priviledges against forraign force, or domesticall insurrection; as David being annointed King, did make War on Ishbosheth the Son of Saul, the Philistims and Absalom; and against Sheba the Son of Bickri, to crush his conspiracy.

2. To revenge and punish wrongs and indignities offered to the State, contrary to the Law of Nature and all civil Equity; so when Davids men were abused in a shamefull manner by the King of Ammon, (they being Ambassadors ought to have found at least safety and freedom from wrongs) upon this occasion he made a sharp War upon the Ammonites, and did subdue them to him.

3. To help, succour, and aid neighbours, friends and allies in their just wars, against such as have or do wrongfully and injuriously oppress them, usurping over them, or the like; This is an honourable War, to relieve the oppressed, so Abraham made war upon the four Kings that had taken Lot captive, and Eshcol and Mamre his Associates, and were in league with him, joyned their forces with him for that purpose. David made Warr against them, which burnt up Ziglag.

4. To punish disorders, in those that do willfully stand out in the same, and will not otherwise submit themselves to punishment, being under their authority and jurisdiction; so the Tribes of Israel did all come up to war against Benjamin, when as Benjamin would stand out in the maintenance of the foul and hatefull crime that was committed in Gibeah.

See Dr. Ames De Consc. l.5.c.33. Quæ conditiones requiruntur ad bellum. The prayer of the valiant Gustavus King of Sweden was, Lord bless and prosper the Battle of this day, according to the right desire of my heart, for the glorifying of thy name, and the Churches good.

It is a question, An bellum justè utrinque possit geri. Some hold there can never be a lawful War on both sides, one is in the fault.

It is also a question about using Stratagems in War. Aquinas 2da. 2da. Quæst. 40. Artic. 4. determines it to be lawfull in bellis uti insidiis. See Dr. Ames De Consc. l.5.c.3.

Though Wars be heavy Judgements, yet it is the Will of God there should be war-like dissentions.

1. To punish the wickedness of the world.
2. To let men know how sweet a blessing peace is.
3. To be a Nursery and School of breeding gallant men.

Abraham, Moses, Joshuah and Gideon were warriours. The first Christian was a Souldier, Acts 10. God calls himself the Lord of Hosts and War, Exod. 15. Psalm 80.

Scholastici hæc quinque requirunt ut bellum sit justum, nempe,

1. Justum Legitimi magistratus.

2. Causam justam.

3. Intentionem justam.

4. Militem.

5. Tempus pugnæ justum.

Nos autem docemus tria duntaxat requiri, ut bellum justum sive legitimum sit & nominetur.

Primum requiritur causa propter quam bellum decernitur, & arma corripiuntur, nempe ut quisq; quod justum est, quodque Deus ipse cuiq; grati & populo dedit, quietè & pacificè teneat, eoq; uti possit, atque illud possideat libere.

2do. Salus seu pax reipublicæ.

Secundo requiritur ut author ipse jubendi decernendiq; belli sit legitimus & justus magistratus, qui in ea (quæ bellum suscipit & gerit) regione summus est, vel à summo magistratu illi loco tuendo præfectus, & præpositus. Tertio requiritur, ut sit illud bellum denuntiatum hostibus, & jis quos sumus bello impetituri. Itaque Veteres Romani Fœciales suos habebant, & Hebræi bellum prius denuntiare jubentur. Deut. 20. v 10. Danæus Ifag. Christ. c.40. Eventus belli est quadruplex, Subjectio, Victoria, Præda, & Captivitas. Id. ibid. See Dr. Hackwels Scutum Regium, l.2.c.5. And Rivet on Psalm 68. p 558. And Mr. Caryll on Job 5. 20. Aquinas 2da. 2dæ. Quæst. 40. Artic 3.

In such honourable repute was the Martiall Man, * that all or most of the titles of honour had their originall from the field: witness the title of Dukes, for their Valour in leading: Of Marquesse, from defending some bounds and frontiers: Of Barons, for being the strength of the VVar: witness the title of Knight, signifying a Souldier: Of Baronet or Banrettie, because his Father was dubbed in the field under a banner: Of Esquire, for being an Armour-bearer to a Knight: Of Gentleman for Puissance and Courage. And witnesse Mens Armes, which had their beginning from bearing Armes in the Field.

* Bentham's Christian Conflict Ch. 1.

Dux à ducendo, Marchio, or Præsul limitaneus, quasi robur belli. Bracton l. 1. c. 6.

Miles.

Armiger.

Generosus.

Arma.

The Socinians and many Anabaptists hold VVar altogether unlawful, there were many Christian Souldiers in Tertullians time.

It was lawfull in the Old Testament, the Law of Nature teacheth us to defend

our

Alicubi Tertullianus argumentatur, non militandum Christiano, ut cui ne litigare quidem liceat, quod tamen cū temperamento quodam est intelligendum. Grotius De Jure Belli, l. 2. c. 236.

our selves, and in the New Testament, when the Souldiers askt John what they should do, Luke 3. 14. he doth so direct them, that he doth not bid them to leave their Calling, but orders them how they shall behave themselves in it. The good Centurion had Souldiers under him, and Paul desired a safe-guard of Souldiers, which he would not have done, if the Calling had been unlawfull.

The Anabaptists alleadge, we are to bear all wrongs, and not to strike again.

This is to be understood,

1. Of private persons.
2. This may well be urged against all unlawfull Warrs.

There are two sorts of Souldiers,

1. Such as are of their own accord, and voluntarily bent to the exercise of Warr. Volonteers.
2. Such as are pressed by the Authority of their Prince or Governour to fight.

Vide Gerh. loc. Commun. De Magistratu Politico, & Amef. De Consc. l. 5 c. 33.

These latter (say some Divines) are not over-curiously to ransack their Princes Counsells, but to account the Warr just, unless they perceive it to be palpably unjust, and if the matter be onely doubtfull, they must favourably interpret their Princes doings for the best. But the voluntary Souldier which is at his own choice, must be more carefull and warie, and be sure by good reasons, that his Princes cause be righteous, under whose banner he fights. Other Divines are of another judgement.

Secondly the PESTILENCE or PLAGUE.

Our English word Plague, comes from the Latine word Plaga, and that from the Greek πλαγὴ. It is usually put for a stroak or stripe.

THE word Plague is applyed,

1. To the Leprosie, which was a spreading disease, it is called therefore the Plague of the Leprosie.
2. To the Woman which had the Bloody Issue, it is called in Greek a stroake.
3. It is more peculiar to one Grand disease, called the Sickness, Plague, Pestilence, which is an extreme inflammation and corruption of the Spirits, by means of some most malignant vapour sucked in or insinuated into the body, Deut. 32. 24.

It is,

1. A most acute disease, dispatcheth speedily.
2. A contagious disease, therefore Magistrates make Lawes to shut up persons visited with it.
3. It is a foule disease, fills one with botches, it is called the noisome Pestilence, Psalm 91. 3.
4. Dangerous and deadly, sweepes away thousands, 2 Sam. 24. 15.
5. Comes more immediately from God, then other Judgements. In our Language we call the Pestilence, the Visitation of God, and the tokens thereof Gods markes, and the inscription on their doores is, Lord have mercy upon us. 2 Sam. 24. 14.

It is so sore an evill, that

Three dayes Pestilence is set against seven years of Famine, and three moneths Warr, 2 Sam. 24. 13.

Some question whether a godly man may be visited with the Plague, because of the promises, Psalm 91. 5, 6, 7, 10. But I conceive that all outward things happen alike to all. Mr. Fenner saith, Godly Junius and his Wife died of the Plague. Many thousand godly men and women (saith He) in Cyprians dayes died of the Plague, Lazarus died of the Plague, David and Hezekiah, both (saith He) were sick of the Plague. The Turks will willingly converse with those that have the Plague, and buy the goods which did come out of the houses of such, as died but the day before of the Pestilence, as if the disease were not infectious at all; affirming that their end is written in their fore-head, and that it is a vain thing to think, or seek to prevent it by any humane care or policy. Whereas the Physitians advice for places infected with the Plague is mox, longè, tardè, cedè, recede, redi. Get away speedily, go farr off, return slowly.

Sir Henry Blunt's voyage into the Levant p. 156. 157. Grand Signiors Seraglio c. 7.

God

God hath all diſeaſes in his hand, he kills and makes alive; he wounds and heals. See *Deut.*28. 58, 59, 60, 61. Therefore this Land and this Great City hath great cauſe to bleſſe God, for keeping off the Peſtilence ſo long.

Thirdly, Of FAMINE.

THis is numbered amongſt the ſore judgements of God, Ezek. 6. 11. Jer 24. 10. Job 5.20.

God ſometimes puniſheth men with a Dearth, *Gen.*12.10. and 26.1. and 41. 53. 2 Sam. 21. *Apoc.*6.5. See the Book of the Lamentations, eſpecially Chapter 4. and the Lamentations of Germany, the Letter of the Miniſters of Germany, Chapter 8, 9, 10. The Lord hath threatned this Plague amongſt others, *Levit.*26. *Deut.*28. and that in ſuch extremity, as they ſhould ſeeth and eat their own Children for want of other food: and often by the Prophets he threatens to break the ſtaffe of Bread.

Famine is the want of neceſſary food, whether it aſſault whole Countries and Kingdomes; or onely particulars, as Cities, Armies, and Perſons. In Egypt there was a Famine, in Abrahams, Iſaacs, and Jacobs dayes, yet God provided for them all, *Gen.*12.10. and 26.2. and 41.

It growes moſt times from unſeaſonable weather, or from immoderate raine, or the rage of Warr; God is the Maſter of the Heavens and of the Sword

Reaſons of it.

1. Men abuſe Gods Bounty, with Riot, Exceſſe; fullneſſe makes them wanton.

2. God is able to bring this croſs, He can command the Heavens above, and they ſhall be like braſs or iron, can cauſe the Eaſt wind to blaſt Fruits. It is reckoned in the Revelation among Gods Viſitations, Apoc. 6. 5. See 2 Samuel 21. 1.

3. When other judgements reform not a people, Amos 4.3.

We ſhould obſerve herein alſo, Gods goodneſſe to this Nation of ours, and in our own time: that he hath ſeldome viſited us with this heavy ſcourge; Famine hath not raged amongſt us in any extremity for this many years; our Dearths are not ſo much of Gods as our own making.

2. We are to magnifie the Name of God, and admire the Infinitneſs of his long-ſuffering and goodneſſe, which hath not cut us ſhort, it is not becauſe we deſerve not ſuch ſeverity, for there is great Exceſs and Wantonneſs amongſt us, but becauſe Mercy pleaſeth him. His ſteps have dropped down Plenty to us, we are fed to the full. How terrible a thing is Famine? How inſufferable is Hunger and Thirſt? It taketh away Courage from the ſtout-hearted; and Beauty from the faireſt Cheekes; it makes all Faces black and withered; the Youth to look like Old Men; the Old Men to give up the ghoſt. Hunger is a lingring rack, an inexpreſſible torture, which maketh the Stomak a prey to it ſelf, and cauſeth a Mans naturall heat to eat him up, becauſe it hath nothing elſe to feed upon. The heavier the croſs, the more thankfull ſhould we be, and more abundant in praiſing God, who filleth us with all good.

This judgement falls heavieſt on the poorer ſort uſually.

Doctor Gouge hath done ſo well in his Gods Arrowes of theſe Three judgements, that I need not inlarge herein.

Ter omnino accidiſſe comperior in Judæa ut matres carnibus veſcerentur liberorum ſuorũ. Primum id accidit Samariæ, cum à Benadado Syriæ rege obſideretur: quod proditum extat, 2 Reg. 6. 26. Accidit idẽ Hieroſolymæ à Babyloniis obſeſſæ, ſub principatu Sedeciæ regis Judæ. Thren. 4. 10. & Cap. 2. v. 20. Druſ. Miſcel. centuria 1a. c. 56.

See Speede in Edward the Second p. 558.

OF

OF ADMONITION AND REPROOFE.

They are both necessary and useful duties, if rightly performed.

I. OF Admonition.

There is great use of Admonition.

1. It was one of the great ends for which the Word of God was written, 1 *Cor.*10.11.

2. The Lord hath this duty in high esteem, and calls it by high names, *Matth.*7.16

3. It is a duty that the best of the Saints have need of, *Eccles.*4. 13.

4. It is an argument of a great deal of Grace, to be ready to admonish others, not onely to do the duty himself, but to be ready to warn others to do their duty.

5. In this a high degree of Communion of Saints is exercised, *Rom.*15.14.

6. It is dangerous to neglect it, thou shalt become guilty of all those sins which thou mightest have hindred, *Levit.*19.17. 2 *Thes.*3. 14, 17.

How should this duty be rightly performed.

1. A Christian should labour to prepare himself for it, since to perform it aright shewes great prudence and strength of grace, *Rom.*15.14. *Col.*3.16. It is not onely sin to be defective in the practise of it, but to want ability to perform it.

2. He that will admonish others, must himself accept of Admonition, *Rom.*12. 1,2. *Matth.*7.46. Job despised not the advice of his Maid-servant.

3. Let it come from the Spirit of Meekness, not from an imperious humour, or desire of medling, but a principle of love.

Secondly REPROOFE.

See Dr. Gouge, and Mr. Burgesse on Ephes. 6.10.

TO Reprove is a duty, strictly and earnestly commanded, Psalm 141.5. Levit. 19.17. *Matth.*18.15. Luke 17.3. *Ephes.*5.11. 1 *Thes.*5.14. 2 *Thes.*3.14.

Reasons,

1. It helps to awaken the Conscience, which may be cast into a sleep by sin, which hath a stupifying force, it benumms the Conscience and blinds the Mind.

As David's was, till Nathan came to him and dealt plainly and particularly with him.

2. It helps most against Satans temptations; For faults which are openly committed, such as are present and have some way to do with the offender, may and ought to reprove them, if the party offending be not much his Superiour, or incapable of Reproofe. For example, If a Man swear publickly, any of those that hear him, and have occasion to deal with him in buying, selling, or any other affaires of this life, hath a calling and warrant to reprove him for that his swearing. So in all other sins, if either Nature, Office, or Neighbourhood, or a present occasionall medling with him doth tie us to him, we must discharge this duty. But if I go through a Market or Faire, and hear some Man in his buying, or selling, to swear, if he be a stranger, I am not bound to tell him of it, but to grieve for it; if he be a Neighbour or Kinsman, I am bound to tell him of it.

Rules for private Reproofe. A Man shall know his calling by these things.

Prov 19. 11: and 20 3.

1. There must be a fault worthy Reproof, not every light and small offence, but but ſuch a one, as for the frequent committing of it in the party, or elſe for the groſneſſe of it, grows ſomething offenſive and infectious.

2. A Man muſt have ſome intereſt in the party, either in regard of authority or familiarity, or elſe ſome preſent familiar converſe or dealing with the party, or elſe he is not called ordinarily to reprove.

3. The party muſt not be a known ſcorner, a dog or a ſwine.

2dly. When one hath a calling to reprove another.

1. He muſt be well provided with arguments able to convince the party, that it is a fault which he reproves. 2 Tim.4. 2. Tit.1.9.

2. He muſt labour to be able to meet with thoſe excuſes and ſhifts which they may have for their ſin, that do commit it.

3. He muſt ſo carry himſelf in words and geſture, that neither in his ſpeeches or behaviour, there appear wrath and bitterneſſe againſt the party reproved; but rather ſuch as may cauſe him to apprehend the Majeſty of God in the reproofs, and alſo love and compaſſion in the reprover.

As a Potion muſt be given ſomewhat warm, but not ſcalding hot, ſo muſt a reproof Dan.4.12.24. 27. 1 Tim.5.1. Amos 5. 19.

Laſtly, One muſt take the party at ſo fit a time, as he is not drunk with paſſion or diſtemper, and the more ſecret the Reproof is, the better if the fault be ſecret.

The Snuffers of the Temple were to be of pure Gold, a man muſt be free from that fault he reproves in another.

It is a dangerous ſign God hath determined the deſtruction of a Man, when he cannot abide to have his ſin plainly reproved, 1 *Sam.*2.25. *Prov.*15.10.

But it is an argument of a gracious Spirit to be content to hear of his faults, even this way, Let the righteous ſmite me, it ſhall be a precious balm.

Genus quoddam non ignobile eſt maxyrij reprehenſionem patienter ferre.

OF EXCUSE.

WEe are prone to excuſe our faults, 1 *Sam.*13.11,12.

This corruption is very ancient, and the practice of it began immediately upon the fall of Man; Eve laid the fault upon the Serpent, and Adam upon Eve, Gen. 3.11,12. Vitia noſtra quia amamus defendimus, & malumus excuſare quam excutere. Seneca.

Reaſons.

1. It hath its originall from Self-love, Pride, Guile, Blindneſſe, Unbelief.

2. The effects which follow upon it are bad.

1. It aggravates the fault in deed, and in Gods account, ſhewing that it was not done ſo much out of infirmity, as either out of wilfulneſs or careleſneſſe.

2. It hinders repentance in both the parts of it, it will not ſuffer a man to be ſorrowfull for what is paſt, nor to be reſolute and carefull to amend for time to come, but breeds a great hardneſs of heart, and obſtinacy in evil doing; for on the apprehenſion and acknowledgement of the grievouſneſs and heinouſneſs of ſin, the care of lamenting and amending muſt needs be founded.

3. It hinders alſo remiſſion of ſin, and ſo all proſperity, for he that hideth his ſin ſhall not proſper; It cannot ſtand with the juſtice of God to pardon an impenitent ſinner, ſeeing none of the promiſes appertain unto him, and Chriſts intention never was that he ſhould have any benefit by his death, and alſo ſince his Condition is ſo forelorne, that to pardon him, would but animate him to be more ſinning.

Forgetfulneſs of God it is a great ſin, and much provoketh God, When Men thruſt him out of their mindes, ſeldomeor never thinking what he is in himſelf, and what he hath done for them, what he requireth of them, how near he is to them, *Deut.*6.12. and 9.10,11,14. and 32 18. Judges 3.7.

Reaſons.

1. From God, in regard of his own exceeding glorioufneſſe and excellency, rare and excellent things are remembred.

2. Man, He is infinitely indebted unto God, by receiving many favours and tokens tokens of Love, and we are vile and baſe, no way able to recompence the Lord.

3. Our Memories will ſerve our turns well enough for other things, and ſhall God himſelf who hath given us this power of Remembring all things, be onely forgotten?

4. It ariſeth from Three notable Diſorders. 1. The natural and inbred Atheiſm of our hearts. 2. The ſurpaſſing multitude of earthly vanities ſurchargeth the Memory; therefore Moſes adviſed the Iſraelites to beware, leſt after their eating and drinking, and growing rich, their hearts ſhould be lifted up, and they forget God. 3. Many ſins committed againſt the Conſcience, do by degrees wear out the little remnant of naturall light which was left in Man ſince his fall.

5. The effects of it are generally theſe.

1. Notorious Licentiouſneſs, and a bold ventrous running on to commit any ſuch ſin, as ones inclination and occaſion ſerves him to commit; for what ſhould reſtrain him, what ſhould ſtand betwixt him and his content in ſinning?

2. All the good he doth, he doth in meer Hypocriſie and fraud, not drawn thereto by due Motives.

3. God will ſee it and abhor him, as Moſes reports in his ſong.

Forgetfulneſs is a blotting out the image of another out of the mind, wherein it was once imprinted. But not onely an utter blotting out of the very name and memorial of God, is accounted forgetfulneſs, but a heedleſneſs of thoſe things we do remember of him.

God is forgotten four wayes.

1. When his works which he hath done generall or ſpeciall, are not conſidered of, with reference to him as their cauſe, and as Motives of praiſing and obeying him.

2. When his Lawes and Commandements are not called to mind in due time to obey them.

3. When his holy Attributes are not conſidered of, as Motives to a good Life, when we do not ponder upon the Righteouſneſs, Truth and Juſtice of God, to incourage our ſelves in well-doing, and to reſtrain our ſelves in ſinning.

See Doctor Willet on Lev. 19. 18.

4. When his particular and ſpecial preſence in obſerving and ruling all things, is not conſtantly, continually, and heedfully marked, and every minute almoſt, actually thought of, to work a diligent care of obeying, and fear of offending him.

There are four Things ſaith Mr. Greenham we muſt forget.

1. Wrongs, Levit. 19. 18.
2. Benefits beſtowed, Matth. 6. 3.
3. The pleaſure taken in ſin, Rom. 6. 21.
4. The progreſs already made in godlineſſe.

OF

OF IMPENITENT SINNERS.

OBstinate impenitent Sinners shall be destroyed, 1 Sam. 12 15. He which hardneth his heart against many reproofs shall surely perish.

Reasons,

1. From God.

He is most perfectly Just, Infinite Justice cannnot be overcome of sinne, God will not hold the wicked innocent.

2. Christ, he had never any purpose nor intent that his blood should be beneficiall to the impenitent.

The will of Christ in suffering was to bring life onely to the penitent, therefore he sent John before him to preach the Doctrine of Repentance, and himselfe did also Preach it, and he bade men amend their lives, because the Kingdome of God was at hand, and the Apostles also preacht the same Doctrine of Repentance.

3. From the Law, it denounceth vengeance against all that continue not in the whole Law to fulfill it: all impenitent Sinners are under the Law, because under sin.

4. The promises of the Gospel appertain to those onely, who walk not after the flesh, but the Spirit, who are heavy laden, and take Christs yoak upon them, to those which confesse their sins and leave them, which mortifie the deeds of the flesh by the Spirit, for with such kind of speeches they are limited, but these things agree not to the obstinate sinner.

5. This obstinacy of sinning is a denying of Gods Justice, and abusing of Gods mercy.

6. The obstinate Sinners harden their own hearts, and blind their own minds so long, til at last they come to a reprobate sense to be past feeling, and come to a heart which cannot Repent.

It perfectly conformes one to Satan who is in malo obstinatus. He is a wilful sinner which either holds in himselfe a purpose that he will sinne, or is irresolute and not setled in firme purpose of not sinning, or that purposeth to mend, but not till hereafter.

OF REVENGE.

DO

OF IMPUDENCE IN SINNING.

So farre as a man hath put off shame, he hath put off humanity nothing but reason can discern of God, therefore neither can any thing but reason discern of the turpitude of sinne therefore shame is incident onely to the reasonable creatures. Beasts cannot be ashamed or blush, the more shameless, the more brutish; he that is past shame, is past grace. Erubescentia est fugarei indecentis. Impudence is the contrary: Sinne is the most indecents thing, Et maxime erubescibile, Ezek. 2.4. Prov. 7.13. Jer. 3.3. and 8.12

IT is a grevious thing to grow Impudent in evill doing, 2 Sam. 16.22,23. Were they ashamed when they had done Evil? no, they could not be ashamed, they declare their sin as Sodome, the Whores Fore-head, Jer. 3. The Brow of Brass, Esay 48.4. Is complainied of in the Prophets, see Esay 3.9.

Reasons Taken,

1. From the Causes of this Impudence, one or all of these three things.

An extream Stupidity and blindnesse procured by long continuance in sinne. Shame is a passion stirred up at the apprehension of some reproach that is coming, or alreadie upon a man; take away the apprehension of reproach, and there will be no shame

2. A high degree of pride, which makes a man disregard the opinions and censures of others.

3. A setled giving over ones selfe to some one or other evill end, as Absolom's ambition made him Impudent in deflouring his Fathers Concubine.

2. From the evill effects of it.

1. Such a one is past grieving for sin. The same thing that causeth a Man not to be ashamed of sin before, and in the doing, will hinder him from lamenting for it after.

2. He is past leaving it, and reforming.

3. Past all probability of pardon, seeing he will neither lament nor leave his sin.

OF REVENGE.

MEn for the most part are very Revengefull, prone to Revenge, as Cain, Josephs Brethren, Esau the sons of Jacob, bitterly revenged the wrong done unto their Sister, Absalom the deflouring of his Sister, so Haman, Mordecai's not bowing to him; Saul, 1 Sam. 15.24 with 28. 26. The Pharisees who perfected Gods Commandement; for when God said thou shalt love thyneighbour, they added another sentence as if it had necessarily followed thereupon, but shalt hate thy Enemy. As if God had injoyned love onely to neighbours, that that is, ſuch as did dwell quietly by us, and uſed us in a kind and neighbourly faſhion, but that he allowed us to hate ſuch as were our enemies, and did miſuſe us. To this purpoſe they perverted another ſaying of the Law, A hand for a hand, as if God had there given way to Revenge, and allowed every man to returne evil for evill, whereas it is ſpoken of the Magiſtrates duty in puniſhing wrong-doers, not of every mans own liberty if he ſhould be wronged.

Reaſons.

1. Carnall reaſon perſwades this is a thing very equal and righteous, becauſe it ſeems to approach ſomewhat near to that which is indeed a known and approved rule of Equity, viz. to do as we would be done to; wherefore corrupt reaſon a little varieth that Maxime, and alloweth us to do as we are done to, and ſaith, why ſhould not I uſe him, as he uſed me.

2. Carnall reaſon doth alſo perſwade it is a courſe of ſafety and ſecurity for ones ſelf. For by this means one ſhall make Men more afraid to do me wrong, if I return their wrongs upon them.

3. Pride poſſeſſeth all Men naturally, this ſtirreth up to Revenge.

4. Every Mans heart aboundeth with Self-love, and Love cannot endure to ſee evil done to the Perſon loved.

5. We are all void of Charity or love to our Brethren; hence an aptneſſe to be provoked, and to doe them hurt, if we ſeem to have any Cauſe.

6. It gives a kind of pleaſure and ſatisfaction to hatred or envie, of which it is a kind of exerciſe, as ſcratching doth to him that hath the itch.

Revenge is a requiting of evill for evill, a doing hurt again to them of whom one hath received hurt, and ill meaſure for ill meaſure.

Some directions or meanes for the crucifying of this unruly affection.

1. You muſt ſubdue Pride, and labour to make yourſelves baſe and vile in your own eyes, being worthy of all the indignities that can be offered to us in regard of our ſinfulneſs,

2. You muſt obſerve God in the wrongs, as David, the Lord hath ſent him to curſe.

3. You muſt often conſider of the goodneſs of God in forgiving your ſinnes many and hainous, Epheſ. 4. 32. and 5 2.

4. You muſt often ponder of the neceſſity of crucifying of this effection, which appeareth by three things.

1. The clear and expreſs Commandements given about it, Math. 5, 39. Reſiſt not evill, that is, by doing the like evill to him, which he doth to thee, but prepare thy ſelfe to bare another rather, then by doing the like to repell the former, whereby he meeteth with the Cavill, which fleſh doth enforce to juſtify Revenge, or elſe I ſhall be perpetually obnoxious to wrongs: be it ſo ſaith our Saviour, thou muſt rather bear it then reſiſt, Rom. 12. 17. 19. 1 Theſ. 5. 15. No man may render evil for evil, that is, evil word for evil word, evil deed for evil deed, taunt for taunt, blow for blow.

Vetet eum ferendo injuriam invitas novam

2. The great danger, if it be not mortified, our ſinnes ſhall never be pardoned. We pray in the Lords Prayer, Forgive as we forgive. He therefore which forgiveth not, can never have any true aſſurance of being forgiven, Math. 6. 14, 15. Lo, as manifeſt a promiſe and threat as any the Scripture containeth, or can be made. Now to forgive a wrong, and requite it with ſome evill done to the wrong-doer, are as quite contrary as any thing in the world: ſo that he which wil do the one, doth not the other, as he which ſues and impriſons a man for debt doth not forgive his debt: ſo he that recompenceth a man evil for his evil doth not forgive his evill.

3. The worthy examples which we have of good men, that have gone before us in mortifying of this affection, not to ſpeak of Chriſt himſelfe who was without the leaſt taint of this or any corruption, the Saints may be our example herein.

4. To theſe Meditations add fervent prayers to God, that he would vouchſafe to ſeaſon our hearts with humility meekeneſſe, and forbearance, that he would ſtrengthen us too paſſe by injuries, indignities, that he would give us his Spirit to crucify this as well as other luſts of the fleſh.

OF THE DIFFERENCES OF SAINTS,

In Respect of the divers degrees of GRACE.

1 John 2.12. 13.14.

THere be Babes, young men, and old men.

1. The Babes are known.

1. By comparing his present with his former estate, then he had no life of Grace. Now some, though feeble a child hath all the parts and faculties of a Man, though all weak, so he all graces.

2. By knowing the Father, acquaintance with God, they goe to him as a father, trust upon him, submit to him, love and obey him as children.

3. They perceive and complain of weakness, and are often dejected that they are so bad, as a Child is troubled he is able to runne no faster, carry and do no more,

4. Are hungry after the word, that they may grow thereby.

2. Young-men are knowne thus.

1. They are strong, and with great strength maintain the combate against their strong corruptions.

2. They use spiritual weapons against their lusts, viz. The word of God, his Commandements, Threats, Prayer, the consideration of the love of God, the death of Christ, the vileness of Sinne, his Covenant made with God, his benefits received. St. John saith, the word of God is in them, and with that as a sword they strike at their corruptions,

3. Is comforted when he overcomes his corruptions, as David when Abigail hindered him from accomplishing his evil designe, but troubled when he is foyled by them, he overcometh as John saith.

3. The Old-man in Christ is,

1. Humble in himselfe, though I be nothing, saith Paul.

2. Very forbearant towards others. I suffer all things, saith Paul. A old man is able to passe by the folly and rashness of young men and Children, so Abraham carried himselfe to Lot.

3. Heavenly-minded, Paul desired to be dissolved, and to be with Christ.

4. Is very fruitfull, as an old tree setled in the Courts of Gods house. Paul was abundant in labours, Moses carefull in exhorting the people, and David of providing for the Temple a little before they died.

5. Is careful of, and much affected with the good or evil of others, and the publick good or evill.

Of PROSPERITY

PRosperity is the injoying of all, or in a manner all things in some good measure according to the desire of a mans heart, when the Lord answereth to the wishes of his soul, when he dwels in a large place, and sits in safety, no man making him afraid.

Prosperity

Prosperity is double.

1. Outward, when for bodie, state, name, friends, and all things which pertain to him in this present life, He is so blessed, that all succeeds well with him, as Deut. 28. &c. So it was with Job, and David, when he sate at home, and God had subdued all his enemies under him, and it was so with the state of Israel generally considered in the beginning of Solomons Raigne, when every man sate eating, drinking, and rejoycing for all the good which God had done for his people Israel. A true Christian being in this flourishing estate, having strength, and health, and food sufficient for him, and it may be also to spare; and finding all things going well with him, is enabled to make some spirituall use of such outward blessings, sees God in them, and is stirred up to blesse God for them, and to serve, love, and obey him. How doth David in many Psalmes praise God for good things received, that God had annointed his head, and therefore resolved that he would dwell in Gods house for ever. What shall I render to the Lord for all his goodnesse bestowed on me, I will take the cup of salvation and blesse the Lord. So in the dayes of Solomon, they rejoyced for all the good which God had done to Israel; that is, with a spiritual and inward rejoycing: And when a little rest was granted to the Church after the persecution of Saul, they were edified and grew in grace. Daniel was in the Kings favour, had gotten the better of all his enemies, yet then he fasts and prayes, and confesseth his owne and the publique sins, and humbleth himselfe before God. The godly also then have a sense of the afflictions of others, though themselves be free. Nehemiah being the Kings Butler, and in great favour (as it may seem) with the King and Queen, yet hearing of the misery of the people at Jerusalem, was greatly afflicted, and so much troubled, that his countenance betrayed it. Lastly, good men will use their prosperity to the advancement of Religion, and the comforting of the Saints, to do some common and publique good, and particular acts of mercy. They do spiritually use as well as spiritually enjoy their prosperity. Honour God with thy substance, be rich in good Works, Job, Daniel, Nehemiah, David did so. A good man stands so affected in the midst of all earthly benefits, that he would willingly leave and forsake all for Christs sake, rather then deny and forsake him. Daniel would hazard the losse of the Kings favour, and be cast into the Lions den, rather then he would forbear to worship God: And the three Children would rather suffer a cruell death, then fall down and worship the graven Image. So the Saints mentioned in Heb. 11. were willing to be spoiled of all their goods, that they might finde a better Resurrection. Outward prosperity so bewitcheth the hypocrite, that it draws him from God, they vvax fat and kick up the heel. Psal. 37.4.11.

2. Inward of the soul, 3 Ep. of John 2. I wish above all things that thou mayst prosper and be in health, even as thy soul prospereth. The true Christian makes greatest account of this prosperity, and it comforts him in the midst of sore outward afflictions, when God heareth his prayers, and answers him, when he can feelingly lament sinne, when he finds decay of his corruptions, and some increase of grace; when he finds the fruits of the Word and Sacrament, and meets with God in them. Now he is alive, this doth him more good then corne, and wine and oile; and sometimes he finds himselfe thus affected. But on the other side, when he cries, and God shuts out his prayers, when Gods face is turned from him, when he enjoys not the salvation of God, when corruptions are strong temptations stirring, then he feels it too, that greatly disquiets him. To dwell in Gods Courts vvas better to David then all outward prosperity. Psalm 4.

2. When his soul thrives, then he sets light by all earthly things, and counts them nothing. As a child, the more he grows to find the worth of money, cattle, house and land, the more he disesteems his former childish contents, of points, pins, Birds nests, and such trifles, Psal. 16.5.

3. They then long to be dissolved, and be with Christ, they love and long for the appearing of Christ, would fain be with him, from whom they receive these mercies, that they might enjoy the fulnesse of that, whereof they have here but a drop, and the possession of that whereof they have here but the earnest.

OF

Of the word BEHOLD.

Behold is used,

1. To stirre up the observation of a thing necessary to be observed, or doing of any thing necessary to be done, as, *Psal.*134. 1.

2. Sometimes to note a thing which fell out suddenly, and unexpectedly, 1 *Sam.*10. 10.

3. Sometimes to note a strange thing, wondring at it, as admirable; Behold a Virgin shall conceive, Esay 7. 14. Moses said to Pharoah, Behold, when I am come out from thee, I will intreat the Lord.

4. To note a thing most certain, plain, evident, and undeniable. When Abraham looked toward Sodom, Behold, or Loe, the smoke of the City ascended.

5. Sometimes to signifie two or more of these things at once. We may find the exposition of this word by comparing, *Matth.*6.26. with Luke 12.24. It is as much as consider, and seriously weigh what it is that shall be spoken.

Of outward Blessings and Benefits.

1. Outward blessings are mercies to be sought for from God, and such for which we are to praise him, when we have them.

See 26 Chapter of Levit. and 28. of Deut. Psal. 144.ult. Acts 14.17. 3d Epistle of John 2.

1. These things make our life comfortable, some cautions being observed.

1. Look not on them as discriminating mercies, as if they were signes of Gods love or hatred.

2. Not as our happinesse.

3. As worldly comforts onely, nothing to the Soul.

4. Not esteeming them our portion.

2. They should be rightly used.

1. We should make them as ladders to ascend up to God by.

2. Use them as Talents given us, to glorifie God, and do good to others with them.

2. Gods Benefits do greatly aggravate our sinnes, 1 *Sam.*12.8. ver. to 13.1 Sam. 2.28,29. 1 *Sam.*15.17.19. 2 Sam. 12.7,8,9. Esay 1.2. As if all Creatures should be astonished at the sinfulnesse of those to whom the Lord had shewed more then ordinary kindnesse.

Reasons,

Ingentia beneficia, ingentia vitia, ingentia supplicia. To whom God hath given great mercies, if they abound with great vices, God will inflict great punishments upon them.

1. Gods benefits are so many obligations and bonds tying our consciences to obedience; these cords of kindnes should hold us fast unto him, because they are on his part bestowed freely without any precedent merit, or expectation of future satisfaction, seeing he is no way bound to give them, nor standeth in no need of us, or any thing that we can do. The more bonds any one hath to tye him to obey, the more odious and punishable must his disobedience needs be accounted, because it sheweth a greater willingnesse and obstinacy in sinning.

2. It sheweth great ingratitude, for it is a testimony of a most unthankful disposition to requite good with evil; to sinne after great favours bestowed is a notorious ingratitude. God bestows many great, constant, undeserved, and unrequitable benefits, yet against him we sin.

Food and Nourishment is a great blessing.

1. Seasonable and temperate use of Food is very comfortable to nature, it strengthens thens the heart, revives the ſenſes; therefore it is ſaid, God made bread to ſtrengthen mans heart: and Sampſons ſpirit came unto him after he had drunk of the water that came out of the hollow Place in Lehi, not of the jaw bone. And the Amalekites pirit came again after David had given him ſome food.

Reaſon,

Food taken into the body gives matter to the ſtomach, and other parts to work upon for the making of good blood and ſpirits, which are the neceſſary inſtruments of the ſoul, whereby ſhe worketh in and with the body, for performing of all her needful operations; it's a marvail to think how the ſtomack ſhould make ſuch a quick conveiance of things to all the Body: that a drooping, dying, and fainting corpſe immediately within one half quarter of an hour & leſs, upō the taking of two or three morſels of Bread, or a little Liquor, ſhould gather force and vigour, and ſtrait grow lively. What hidden way, what ſecret skill, whereby it maks ſo quick and haſty a diſtribution of ſome things unto each part which is moſt uſeful for it?

Bodily ſtrength a great bleſſing.

THere is a threefold ſtrength.

1. Of body ariſing from a healthie conſtitution, and good temper of the Limbes, being wel compacted and knit together.

2. Of mind, an undaunted reſolution of mind, by which a man is made bold to encounter dangers, and not to be afraid of any evil, which ſhall meet him in the way of his calling.

3. Of State, when a man hath money, Friends, Servants and the like helpe to joyne with him and bare him forth in his enterpriſes.

We ſee what great feates Sampſon did by his ſtrength. It appeares to be a great bleſſing, becauſe bodily weakneſſe and infirmitie is very troubleſome.

Thoſe that are ſtrong have cauſe to bleſſe God for this mercy, but they muſt take heed.

1. Of being proud of it; let not the ſtrong man glory in his ſtrength.
2. Of abuſing it; give not thy ſtrength to Women.

Conſider.

1. How weak theſe gifts are in compariſon; a Canibal, nay a Bear, a Lion may be ſtronger, nay the Devil himſelfe.
2. It is a gift of ſhort continuance; an Ague, nay old Age will bereave you of it.
3. It cannot keep a man from being overcome in fight.

Of IMPRISONMENT.

IT is a croſſe and miſery to be kept under lock and key, as a Bird in a Cage.

Reaſons,

1. The mind of man is deſirous of liberty, the will is a free power and deſirous of freedome, nature wiſheth thoſe things which are moſt agreeable to it. It is moſt agreeable to a man to be at his own diſpoſing and command, that he may be where he will, when he will, doe what he will; that which robs a man of his libertie cannot but be troubleſome.

2. It depriveth a man of many contents, Impriſonment will fill a mans head, with the thoughts of ſuch things and perſons which once he ſaw and enjoyed, but now cannot, and by reviving the thoughts of them, ſtirre up the deſire of them; and deſire unſatisfied endeth in grief.

There are two ſorts of Impriſonment

1. Free and large, when a man enjoyeth good lodging, good diet, and the company of fellow priſoners, and of thoſe his friends, which will come to viſite him, gardens, walkes and variety of exerciſes, and delights, yet this croſſe is troubleſome enough. Becauſe though a man have many contents, yet he wants many, and confinment is irkſom to a mans nature.

2. Straight in a dungeon, or at leaſt under heavie fetters, in one cloſe roome where he is barred the viſite of friends, and hath no variety of objects to delight the eyes, this is a heavy croſs; many men of quality in our late unhappy diviſions had experience of one at leaſt of theſe reſtraints.

We ſhould therefore.

1. Be thankfull for our liberty, and uſe it well,

2. Learn to provide for this croſſe, ſince we may ſuffer it.

Since many priſons are houſes rather of corruption then correction, it were a uſeful work for ſome able Divine to compoſe a treatiſe of the ſinnes and temptations that are incident to ſuch a reſtrained condition, and of the graces that are to be then exerciſed, and the comforts and promiſes which they may lay claim to (notwithſtanding their confinement) if they carry themſelves as they ought at ſuch a time.

Quinimo debemus carceri multos virorum doctrinâ aut ingenti pietate Illuſtrium libros: quos forſan abſque hoc fuiſſet; nunquam habuiſſemus. Paulus enim divinus ille Gentium Apoſtolus ſcripſit in vinculis ad Coloſſenſes, & Epheſios, Philippenſes, Philemonem, & ſecundam Epiſtolam ad Timotheum. Naudai Panegyricus dIIusVrbano octavo Pontifici maximo. vide plura ibid. Mat. 7. 12.

Some Birds ſing ſweeteſt in the cage. Severinus Boethius never wrote ſo elegantly as in priſon, nor Paul ſo devoutly; moſt of his Epiſtles were dictated in his bonds: Sir Walter Raleigh's Hiſtory was written in priſon. Chriſtianus etiam extra carcerem ſæculo renunciavit, in carcere autem etiam carceri. Tertul.

Of Common PRINCIPLES.

EVery one ſhould labour to ſtore himſelfe with good Principles; for no man is better then his Principles, though many are worſe: I remember 'tis the ſaying of a worthy Divine, that he could not but pittie ſuch as acted according to their principles.

1. It is a common Principle in nature and Scripture that there is a God, and that this God the Creator is infinitly better than all the creatures.

2. That this God being Spiritual, is to be worſhipt in the Spirit.

3. That the Soul of a man is immortall, and that there is another world beſides this.

There are ſome higher principles, that ſome of the wiſer Heathens reacht to.

1. That nothing is good which is not honeſt.

2. That nothing can be durable which is unequal.

3. To wrong noe man, and ſuum cuique tribuere, to give every one his due.

4. That one ſhould doe to another, as he would deſire another to doe to him in the ſame condition.

5. That no man is a free man but he that is a good man; Tully proves this by many arguments.

God will condemne the Pagans, that never had the Law or Goſpel, for not improving the light of nature, and walking up to their principles.

I am ſure it is a clear Scripture principle, that ſinne is worſe than all other evils; I would men would live according to ſo great a truth, and not ſin to avoide the greateſt evil, or to obtain the greateſt good.

It is a principle in nature, that every thing ſhould ſeek its own preſervation:

Of Holy Purpoſes and Reſolutions.

ONe part of Repentance or converſion, is a purpoſe and reſolution to leave ſin, and an endeavour to caſt away all our tranſgreſſions.

We ſhould renew our reſolutions againſt ſin by conſidering

1. The puniſhment of ſinne, if we reſolve not to leave it, faith in Gods threatnings, muſt beget a holy fear and trembling.

2. The reward of amendment; if we leave ſinne, we ſhall be pardoned, ſaved. Caſt away your iniquities, and iniqnity ſhall not be your deſtruction. Turne and live. If the wicked man forſake his wayes, I will blot all his ſinnes out of my remembrance. Promiſes are plainly made to him that ſtudieth to amend his life.

3. Renew this reſolution to amend by conſideration of the ſufferings of Chriſt, 1 Pet. 4. 1. God ſhewed his extream loathing and deteſtation of ſinne, by laying ſuch heavy puniſhment upon his own Son for it, ſhall not I hate it and caſt it from me, Christ died to redeeme us from all iniquity, and that we being dead unto sinne should live unto righteousnes.

me

4. I should get good proofs out of Scripture, to convince my heart of the unlawfulnesse of sin.

5. I should set against sinne in Gods strength, and therefore beg often his help, be strengthened in the power of his might by his Spirit. He will cause us to walk in his wayes, He workes all our workes for us. He will heal the diseases of our soules. He hath said, Sinne shall not have dominion over us. He will tread Satan under our feet shortly.

6. Oppose the first motions of it. Take no delight in evill desires.

7. Fly from the occasions of it.

It must be a resolution.

1. On knowledge.
2. It must be taken up with Deliberation.
3. Without any Reservation.
4. With the heart lifted up to Christ for strength.

Of COURTESIE.

COurtesie is the vertue of observing all due wayes of testifying respect and love to another.

Samuel, 1 Sam. 9. 25, 26, 27. and the beginning of the tenth, was courteous in going out to meet Saul, in his inviting him, in his cheering and welcoming him, courteous in his Communication, Dismission, in all these demonstrating a loving respect.

When Abraham saw the Angels (which he took for none other then men of good account) coming toward him, he ranne to meet them, bowed and worshiped them, and with words which carried a sweet savour of kindnesse, he earnestly requested them to refresh themselves with a morsell or two in the heat of the day, and then himselfe brings in the Provision which he had made, and attends upon them. So when Abraham had to deal with Ephron, he bowes himselfe, gives him a reverent Title, and in a kind manner refuseth to be chargeable to him in taking a Field for nothing.

Booz and his Reapers kindly saluted each other; the Apostle Paul wisheth them to salute each other, and remembers himselfe and others to and from many persons of good note in the Church. He writes divers Salutations to and fro in most of his Epistles, and in some is this way very large.

A good man should have a kind tongue, ready to salute those whom he meets with words of love and peace, with good wishes of welfare and prosperity. Especially when friends meet, they should with loving salutations welcom each other, and shew their affections, as Moses and Jethro did at their meeting, after that he was come out of Ægypt.

Reasons,

That we may both shew and winne affection; good wishes and kind language argue good affection, and increase love in others.

If men be so churlish as to yield no testifications of good will, it is either out of a particular grudge which they bear to the party whom they meet with, or else out of a generall sowrnesse and bitternesse of disposition, or out of a conceit that such kind of salutations are idle and unnecessary; from which soever of these three it ariseth, it deserveth blame.

There is one case wherein not to salute those we meet, is not blame-worthy. viz. when hast or weightinesse of businesse forceth a man to use such speed, as that he cannot mind a work of lesse weight. So Elisha bade his to salute none by the way, the like command is given by Christ to his Apostles, Luke 10. 4. Doctor Price thinks best to interpret those words, as hyperbolicall, q. d. Negotio quod in posui vobis toto animo incumbite, praterhabitis vel levissimis (quod genus sunt salutationes in via occurrentium) obstaculis et morumentis. In Loc.

The good of the Church is to be minded by all, 1 Cor. 12. 7. Every member is to have a care of the whole body. Tullies resolution was, Ne immortalitem quidem contra rempublicam acciperem. Luther said, nothing else should content him but to be a faithfull servant to the Church.

A gracious spirit is always a publick spirit, Psal. 51. 18. Psal. 137. 6. & 69. 9. Psal. 48. 2. Esay 33. 21. & 66. 10, 11. Exod. 32. 32. Nehem. 1. 1 Sam. 12. 23. The Lords Prayer refers all to the publick, our father and us. The Commandements are to be preserved as well as observed. One Article of the Creed, is The communion of Saints. Grace is compared to light, fire, oile, water, which are communicative of themselves. Modo memoriente floret Ecclesia.

Motives to desire a publick Spirit.

1. In respect of God, consider the relation of the Church to him.
   1. Their persons are the onely beloved children and friends that God hath in this world, the world is upheld for theirs sakes.
   2. Their cause is as dear to him as their persons; the cause of the Church is Gods cause, all the opposition they meet with in the world is for his sake, Psal. 23. 24. Because they are the seed of the woman, and called out of the world, the world hates them. It is an honourable cause.

2. In respect of the Church, thy relation. It is thy Mother if thou feareſt God, it's welfare or misery is thine. The Church alwayes most flourished in grace, when it's members had publicke Spirits. In the second and fourth Chap. of the Acts, they counted nothing their own if the Church needed it; and thou canst never discover thy love more to the Church then by helping it when afflicted.

3. In respect of thy self. What ever talent the Lord hath given thee, he hath given it to this end to serve the Church, 1 Cor. 12. 2. The manifestation of the spirit is given to profit withall.

2dly. No frame of spirit will be so cleer an evidence of thy being a right Christian, as thy regarding the welfare of the Church. Because Hezekiah set his heart to do good in Israel, therefore he saith, Remember how I have walked before thee with a perfect heart.

3dly. No frame of spirit will prove so really gainful and advantageous to thee. See Luke 18. latter end.

4. It is the greatest honour that ever God put on any creature, thou art like God, Christ, the Angels who do good to the Church.

4thly. In respect of the enemies who are,
1. Unweariable in their endeavours to destroy the Church, 1 Pet. 5. 8.
2. Wise, subtill, powerfull, Ephes. 6.
3. They are united against the Church.

Meanes to attain a publicke Spirit.

1. Set a light esteem on our selves, Phil. 2. 4. 21. get a self-denying spirit.
2. Get thy heart fill'd with brotherly love.
3. Think often how well the Church deserves thy love.

How to root out of our hearts the love of Earthly things, and to draw them from these transitory Delights.

1. We must be convinced of the utter impossibility of having God, if we cast not off the love of these things. The wisdome of the world is enmity against him. If I be a servant of men (saith Paul) I cannot be a servant of Christ. She that liveth in pleasures, is dead while she liveth. No man can serve God and riches, remember the stony and thorny ground.

If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him.

2. Consider advisedly and frequently of their nature especially in these respects.
   1. They are mean and base. Beasts live and take pleasure in these outward contents as well as men; the worst men may have greater honours and dignites than the best.
   2. They are short, they all perish in the using: As the flower of the grasse, so doth the rich man passe away many times.
   3. They are most uncertain. He that now is alive, may die suddainly; he that is now rich, may be soon poor.
   4. They are unprofitable, can do us little good when we have them. Can the plea-pleasures of the body, delightfull food, fine apparell, great heaps of silver and gold, high Titles and renowned Dignities, Offices and places prevent, or remove, or mitigate the tooth-ache, or any other of those innumerable troubles to which our bodies are subject?

5. These things are harmfull and mischievous many wayes; Wine and Women rob men of their heart and health. Salomon tels us, that he had observed riches laid up for the hurt of the owner, they make men proud, selfe-conceited.

Consider withall the unspeakable excellency, infallible certainty, never ending Continuance, and great benefit of spirituall and heavenly blessings.

Of rising early in the Morning.

IT is very needfull and a duty to rise early, and to be up betime about such Affairs and Employments we have to do. It is thrice recorded of Abraham, that he rose early, to excommunicate Ishmael, and to go to offer Isaac, two services not so pleasing. It is often noted of Christ, that early in the morning he went out to pray, and up to the Temple. The good woman is commended, as for other good properties, so likewise for this, that she riseth while it is yet night, that is, betimes, 1 Sam. 9.25. Salomon often condemneth sluggishnesse, Prov. 6. 9, 10, 11. Which saying he repeats again, Prov. 24. 33. See Prov. 20.13. Gen. 19.27. & 21.14. & 22.13. Prov. 31. 1 Sam. 9.26.

Reasons.

Thrift, piety, and health are furthered by it.

First, The morning-season is the fittest for the dispatch of any businesse almost, whether of Religion or our Calling, in regard of the freshnesse and livelinesse of the body and minde, both having been as it were by former sleep repaired.

2dly. That time is freest from distractions both inward and outward then the rest of the day is.

3dly. By a seasonable shaking off of sleep, and betaking ones selfe to worke, one shall be beforehand with time, and so go more cheerfully and prosperously about his Affairs all day after. Gods blessing goes with the diligent, it will advantage his Estate.

4ly. It is very wholsome for the body, the health and livelinesse of which we are bound to preserve by the sixth Commandement.

Weaknesse and sicknesse of body, interruption of sleep in the night, and occasions of more then ordinary wearinesse the time before, may dispense with a longer lying in bed then usually. Master Wheatly said, he never did spend a day with any measure of comfort as other dayes, wherein he lye over-long in bed in the morning.

The measure of every thing is best taken from the end of it, the chiefe use of sleep is to refect the Senses, to coole the Body, to repair the Spirits by calling the heat inward, and so perfecting all the Digestions: And for this end Experience shewes, that for the most seven hours sleep, specially if it be free, and not interrupted by forcible occasions, is largely sufficient.

It is most certain in the experience of all Christians, that Morning-Prayers are most fervent, zealous, and effectuall; therefore David saith, In the morning thou shalt heare my voice, and in the morning I will order my Prayer, and waite Men should love home, and not be longer thence then just occasion detains them. This is three times specified in the first and second Chapter of the first of Samuel. The names of Husband and Houf-wife teach this duty. God tels the woman that she must keep home, and the man that he must dwell with his Wife. David saith, he will walk uprightly in the midst of his house.

Reasons.

1. There is the place where those persons are to whom one is most bound in the obligation of nature, there is ones Wife, himselfe divided, who is as it were

one

one flesh with him, whom next to God he ought to love above all Creatures, and his Children, himself multiplied, plants issuing from himself.

2. That is the place where most of his business lies, which God hath most charged upon his Conscience. There lies the work of a Husband in dwelling with the Wife as a man of knowledge, of a Father in bringing up his Children in the information of the Lord; of a Master, in commanding his servants to serve God, and overseeing their wayes. Of an Housholder in looking to his Goods, Cattle, Estate, and the businesse most time of his own honest employment in his particular Calling.

3. In his owne house he hath most fit opportunity of performing Christian duties of Religion, as Praying, Reading, Meditating, wherein he is freest from occasions of Distraction, which another place will thrust upon him.

4. There he is freest from temptation, from the infection of evill company, there he is in his wayes, and stands under the guard of Angels.

5. Unnecessary ablence from home brings many inconveniences: Like the Hen which wandereth from her nest, so is the man that leaveth his owne place. All things grow addle and unprofitable, there grows a strangeness between him and his yoke-fellow, and Family, holy Duties are interrupted, Servants grow careless and negligent, the Masters eye fatts the horse, and the Masters foot soils the ground.

Helps to this.

1. Love and Conconcord of Yoke-fellows.

2. Delighting in honest Imployments.

Mocking is a sin, and offensive to those that are mocked. See *Psal.*22.7. & 35. 21. & 69.12. Job 30.9. 1 Cor. 4. 13. 2 Cor. 6. 8. *Heb.*11.36. They are called cruel mockings. Ishmaels mocking of Isaac is called persecution.

Scorning is the scoring of a mans name with another mans contempt and disgrace; 2 King. 2. latter end.

Reason.

It is contrary to mans desire and inclination, for every man hath a good opinion of himself, and hath a great desire that others should entertain a good opinion of him. Nothing doth more naturally provoke anger then contempt, therefore some have accounted it the proper object of anger, Rom. 1. 29. The same man who is despightfull and apt to contemn others is likely vainglorious, and a boaster and bragger.

Of the SCRIPTURE.

Codicem Hebræum Græci Scriptores Ecclesiastici vocarunt Τὰ βιβλία, libros plures sanctos in unum volumen digestos. Hanc appellationem Latini & Germani, retinuerunt propria appellatione fere distituti, hunc Dei Librum vocantes Biblia.

Fabritii partitiones Codicis, Hebræi Scriptura vocabulum præsertim in N. T. ipsum Dei verbum, at Cœlestem Doctrinam literis comprehensam in eo volumine, quod per excellentiam Sacra Biblia, id est Sanctos libros nominamus, significat in Nov. Test. Math.22.29. John 15.39. 2 Tim.3.15. Nomine, γραφὴ Κυριακὴ aut τὰ γραφικὰ indigitatur. Gallis Escriptura. Schererzii Animadvers. circa Philol. l. 1. animadv.

Quicquid est, mihi crede, in Scripturis illis, altum et divinum est: in est omnino veritas & reficiendis instaurandisque animis accomodatissima disciplina: & planè ita modificata, ut nemo inde haurire non possit quod sibi satis est, si modo ad hauriendum devote ac pie, ut vera religio poscit, accedat. August. de utilitate credendi ad Honoratum.

Da hominem qui non intelligat, putabit etiam in multis, quæ ad Christi passionem pertinent Evangelistas sibi non convenire da verò qui intelligat, & ubi quo conveniunt. Aug. contra Faustum manichæum, l.29.

Scriptures are often indefinitely quoted. He saith, Heb.13.5. the Holy Ghost saith Heb.3.7. It is written, Matth.21.13. In the Law it is written, John 8.17. Sometimes a Prophet is indefinitely ſet down, Math. 1.22. Sometime the name of the Prophet is expreſſed Math. 2.17. Sometimes the Book of Moſes, Mark 12.26. And the Book of the Pſalms, Acts 1.20. Once the ſecond Pſalm is mentioned. Acts 13.33.

ADDITIONS.

They are ſo quoted, becauſe the Churches to whom the Evangiliſts and Apoſtles wrote, were ſo well acquainted with the Scriptures, as the very naming of a Scripture might be ſufficient for them readily to find it out, becauſe they well knew where it was written: or it may be the Apoſtles did it purpoſely to move them more diligently, to ſearch the Scriptures, that ſo they might the better acquaint themſelves there withal. Dr Gouge on Heb. 2.6. Sect. 50.

1. Many take great delight in Antiquity and in ſearching ancient Records, but none comparable to ſacred Scripture in Antiquity. It beginneth with the beginning of the world, yea it revealeth what God decreed even from Eternity. Dr Gouge on Heb. 12.17. Sect. 94.

2. Others are much taken with rare and extraordinary maters; herein doth the Scripture ſurpaſſe all other writings. Witneſſe the ſtory of the Creation, of the Deluge, of the deſtruction of Sodom, of Gods bringing his people out of Egypt, and governing them in the Wilderneſſe, and ſetling them in Canaan, and the many Miracles therein recorded.

3 Many ſeek after profound Myſteries; and what Books herein comparable to the Sacred Scriptures? for inſtance, the great Miſtery of Religion, as of the Trinity of Perſons, incarnation of the Son of God, his Birth, Life, Death, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, Interceſſion.

4. Many prudently ſtudy the things that are moſt profitable; but the Scriptures declare what is moſt advantagious. They make known true riches, and true Honour; they ſhow the way how to attain thereto: Among other Books Salomons Proverbs are of ſingular uſe to this end.

It is obſerved by many learned men, that the begining of the firſt Chapter of John is one of the higheſt ſtraines in all the Scripture More volans aquilæ verbo petit aſtra Joannes. Sedulius.

How blame worthy are they who neglect reading of the word? how many be there who never in their lives read thorow the Scripture? Men have little reaſon to except againſt the ſtile of the Scripture (though once a Cardinal did) as if the reading of them ſpoiled their elegant ſtile. A Noble ‖ and Learned Gentleman hath well of late vindicated their ſtile in an excellent Tract of that argument, wherein he writes ſo favourly of the word of God, as if he himſelf had felt the power of it in his own heart.

‖ Mr. Boile.

That conceit, that part of the Canonical Scripture is loſt, is not to be admitted. For,

1. It impeacheth that Scripture which we have of imperfection, or elſe that which is loſt of needleſneſſe.

2. It impeacheth the Providence of God in ſuffering Canonical Scripture to be loſt.

3. It layes a blemiſh on the fidelity of the Church, which is the Pillar of truth.

4. It takes away ſome meanes of our Learning, and grounds of our comfort and hope, Rom. 15.4.

Morinus, in his exercitations now in Folio layes hold of what our learned Whitaker ſaith that way. Dr. Gouge on Heb. 11.35. Sect. 244.

As for the inſtances given of bookes of Scripture loſt, they are either of Politick records and Chronicles, as 1 Kings 14.19. Or of Philoſophical diſcourſes, as 1 Kings 4.33. Or of ſuch bookes as are yet extant, but under other Titles, as 1 Chron. 29.29.

The Body of the old Teſtament was long in compiling, much about a thouſand yeers from Moſes to Malachi. God ſpake unto the Fathers by ſtarts and by fits, one while raiſing up one Prophet, another while another. When Chriſt came, all was brought to a perfection in one Age: the Apoſtles and Evangiliſts were alive ſome of them when every part of the New Teſtament was fully finiſhed, B. Smith on Heb. 1.1.

Judæi & Pontificii inter ſe collati.

Duplex verbum Dei à pontificiis ſtatui notum eſt, nempe Scriptum & non Scriptum. Ita etiam Judæi aſſerunt duplicem Legem divinitus eſſe datam, nimirum legem ſcriptam, ſeu quæ ſcripto continetur, et legem oralem, vel quæ ore tradita eſt. Eos qui Scripturæ adhærent ejuſq; ſolius autoritate in rebus fidei nituntur Pontificii convitiis proſcindunt, & per contemptum appellant Scripturarios; imò eo ipſo nomine illos inter hæreticos recenſent, ut videre eſt apud Praeolum in Elenchoſuo, l.17.c.16. Ita etiam Judæorum plerique eos qui, lege orali rejectâ, legem duntaxat ſcriptam amplectuntur, ignominioſo, ut putant vocabulo appellant Karaitas q. d. Biblicos, vel Scripturarios. Duo eſſe doctrinæ Chriſt and principia omnes Catholici nôrunt, verbum ſcriptũ et verbum traditum. Morini exercit. Bibl. l. 1. Exercit. 1. c. 1

ADDITIONS.

Mr. Cartwright confirmes what he saith here out of R. Salomon in Glossa ad megillà. Therefore that of Morinus Exercit. Bibl. Exercit. 7. c. 3. will not hold, Karaim dicti sunt illi Rabbini quòd essent in Scripturis exercitatissimi, non turarios, eosq; pro hæreticis habent, Cartwrighti mellificium Hebraicum l. 4. c. 5.

To the best expositors on the several books of Scripture, mentioned in my body of Divinity, These may be added.

Oleaster on the Pentateuch and on Esay.
Lippomans Catena on Genesis and Exodus.
Pererius on Genesis.
Gallasius on Exodus.
Cocceius on the Psalmes.
Cappella on Jeremy.
Leo Castrius on Esay.
Petter a large expositor in English on Mark.
Scipio Gentilis on Philemon.

quod spretis traditionibus solam Scripturam amplecterentur.

Suavissima utrinsque Instumenti harmonia, harmonia veteris cum vetere, Prophetarum cum Mose, inter se; harmonia novi cum novo, Apostolorum cum Evangelistis, Evangelistarum inter se; harmonia novi cum vetere, Apostolorum & Evangelistarum cum Mose & prophetis. Prælect. Theol. D. Holdsw. partis 1ª. Lectio 12.

Morinus (the great opposer of the Hebrew Text) Exercit. Bibl. l. 1. Exercit. 1. c. 1. saith, Fateor quidem, & a me dissentiet opinor nemo, Apposolorum et prophetarũ αὐτόγραφα regulam esse et amussim ad quam versiones omnes exigendæ sunt. Repræsentetur ipsissimus liber Mosis qui jussu Dei in arca conservabatur. Ad ipsum exemplum & præscriptum versiones omnes emendandas esse libentissimè concedo: nec 70. Interpretum translationem excipio. Repræsentetur ipsissimum Evangelium à S. Matthæo conscriptum; quis dubitat ejusmodi codicem versionum omniũ normam esse? de cæteris libris eadem lex esto. Verum enimvero, quo argumento docebunt, imo quâ probabili conjecturâ insinuabunt Judaicos Græcosque Scriptores in describendis codicibus suis aberrare non posse? Ipsum Mosis αὐτόγραφον ad usque captivitatem Babylonicam conservavit divina providentia, ex quo alia exemplaria & describi & corrigi potuerunt. Sed antiquissimorum patrum nemo αὐτόγραφα Apostolica se legisse commemorat, ubinam locorum conservarentur fama nunquam divulgavit. Morinus Exercit. Bibl. l. 1 Exercit. 2. c. 2.

Si penes aliquem deprehenderentur ipsa exemplaria Prophetarum & Apostolorum manibus exarata, vel ipsa exemplaria è quibus Sanctus Hieronymus vetus Testamentum transtulit aut novum emendavit, quin ad ea vulgata versio meritò exigeretur: nemo opinor ambigit. ibid. l. 1. Exercit. Plura dico, adhibeantur codices ipsissimi quibus usi sunt 70. Interpretes, aut S. Hieronymus, vulgatam ad horum normam, Græcã vero translationem ad illorum emendari agrè nemo ferret.

Leusden in his Philologus Hebræus Dissertat. 9. acknowledgeth that the Autographa Exemplaria veteris Testamenti are lost, but saith, the Church of God, hath even yet Apographa Authentica. In his 33. dissertation he asserts the integrity of the Hebrew Text, and shews that the Jews neither would nor could corrupt the Hebrew text, and that it is not corrupted. Vide Hottingeri Thesaurum Philologicum p. 147. &c. Besides, how will Morinus assure us that this is the right Septuagint which we now have? our Divines say that the Septuagint was very consonant to the Hebrew text. Or how will he be able to prove (though he take it for granted) that the now vulgar version was Jeromes worke? their owne Lippoman in his Catena on Genesis (as I remember) saith, versio ista Hieronymi, si scito Hieronymi. See Mr. Cartwrights preface to his Annotations on Genesis.

My memory much failes me, if I have not read that Tertullian de præscript adversus Hæret relates that the Autographs of many of the Epistles written by the Apostles were to be seen in his time. Pagnine, Vatablus, Masius often discover the errours of the vulgar version, and for the Septuagint Mr. Cartwright in his preface to his Annotations on Genesis, saith, Plurima procul dubiò injuria temporum, ac librariorum incuria in translationem istam menda irrepserunt; sed et ipsorum interpretum multa pariter sunt errata. vide plura ibid.

Morinus in his Exercit. Bibl. l. 2. Exercit 9 c. 2 saith the Commentaries vulgarly called Rabboth maxima habentur apud Judæos autoritatis. They are five, viz. upon the five Book of the Law, and are named from the names of every book of the Law; because the books of Genesis is called by the Jewes Bereshith, from the first word word of that Book, therefore the Commentary on this first Book is called Bereſith ‖ Rabba; the Commentary on Exodus, Schemoth Rabba, or Veelle Schemoth Rabba; and ſo of the reſt.

The manner of interpreting which the Jewes affect (ſaith he) is allegoricall and anagogical, ſometimes moral, ſcarce ever literal. Univerſim (ſaith he ſtill) tota narratio & ſermocinatio fabellis & dictis de Rabbinis ſuis & eorum geſtis velut luminibus et margaritis amplificatur et ornatur. Yet Mr. Cartwright in his preface to his Annotations on Geneſis, ſhews that the writings of the Rabbines are very uſeful for the underſtanding of the Scripture, and that in ſix reſpects. But in his Epiſtle Dedicatory to his Annotations on Exodus, he ſaith, there is a choyce to be made, as in writers of all kind, ſo in the Rabbines. Alia namque Talmudicorum, alia Commentatorum eſt ratio; myſtici illi commentarii, quos vocant Midraſhim (ut de Cabbaliſtarum nugis nihil dicam) ineptiis ſæpe referti ſunt: at expoſitiones quas appellant Peruchim ab inſulſis iſtiusmodi commentis plerumque immunes eſſe apparet.

‖ This book Mr. Cartwright often mentions in his Melliſicium Hebraicum which I ſuppoſe I might purchaſe for him (as I did ſome others of that kind) of Menaſſeh Ben Iſrael, and likewiſe by my intereſt in Biſh. Uſher and Mr. Selden, and my importunity with the laſt in his behalfe I procured him Kimchies Roots, and alſo (as I conceive) Abarbinel on the Pentateuch, both which books he mentions in his Epiſtle Dedicatory to his Annotations on Exodus.

Of the Popiſh Vowes of POVERTY.

WHatſoever is the matter of a lawful vow, muſt be either officium pietatis, in it ſelf an act of holineſſe, Beggerie is not; or it muſt be adminiculum pietatis, an help, and furtherance to piety. Theſe vows of Beggerie are,

1. Superſtitioſa, without warrant.
2. Periculoſa, beſet with temptations.
3. Injurioſa, reproachful to God.
4. Preſumptuoſa, and blaſphemous, pretending merit and ſupererogation. B. Brownrig on Prov. 30 8.

Of a LIE.

A Lie is a voluntary, and willful telling an untruth, with a purpoſe to deceive.

Three things are required to the nature of a lie.

1. There muſt be an untruth and falſeneſſe in the thing.
2. This untruth muſt be known to be ſo; he muſt be conſcious to himſelf that it is falſe.
3. He muſt have an intent and purpoſe to utter this falſehood, with a deſire to deceive another by it.

Three ſorts of ſpeeches are not lies,

1. Dark ſpeeches that conceal ſome truth. Thus Samuel concealed his annointing of David.
2. Figurative and Parabolical ſpeeches, as to ſay, a Drunkard is a ſwine.
2. Hyperbolicall and exceſſive ſpeeches, John. 21. 25. B. Brownrig. on Prov. 30. 8. See more there of the ſeveral ſorts of lies, and that no lie is lawful, Dr. Gouge on Heb. 6. 18. Sect. 142. 143.

It is the juſt puniſhment of a Liar not to be believed when he ſpeaks true; as both the Hebrews and Arabians proverbially ſay. Hackſpan. fides & leges Mubammedis.

Of Common PLACES.

NUncupantur loci, quia ſunt inſtar capſularum, quæ oſtendunt, quid quoque loco ſit repoſitum; communes cognominantur, cum quia omnibus communiter ſunt neceſſarii, tum quia continent titulos communes, ad quos omnia queunt referri, quæ apud alios occurrunt, Dilherri Apparatus Philologicus.

Illi ſunt tituli generales verborum et rerum maximè memorabilium, ita diſpoſiti ut ſub iis quicquid ſive in lectione bonorum aut horum, ſive e auſcultatione doctorum virorum occurrit memoria et obſervatione dignum, conſignari poſſit, ad eloquentiam & ſolidam ſententiam conſequendam; alii Adverſaria, Polyantheas, Florilegia appellant. Id. ibid.

ADDITIONS.

Of the FATHERS.

ABsque ipsorum scriptis non valeamus multiplices veterum Hæreticorum fraudes & præstigias retegere, nec varios priscæ Ecclesiæ status aut vicissitudines observare: absque ipsis continuus et universalis veteris Ecclesiæ orthodoxæ in præcipuis Religionis Christianæ capitibus Consensus non potest judicari. D. Holdsworth, prælect. partis 1ª. Lectio. 35.

Quod si vel Vitæ probitas, vel dignitas Loci, vel Scientiæ meritum, vel Ætatis reverentia authoritatis quicquam scriptis humanis conciliet, procul dubio ipsorum scriptis plurimum est deferendum; cum in ipsis luceat eminentia quædam, & Loci, & Temporis, & Pietatis & Conditionis. Id. ibid.

Patres dicuntur, sive ætatem spectes, quâ multis annorum centuriis tempora nostra prædecesserunt, sive doctrinam, quam divino gurgite & suis inculcarunt, et posteris transmiserunt, relictis post se non paucis pietatis & eruditionis suæ monumentis. Id. ibid.

Of HERETICKS.

Dr. Hammond in his Annotations on the new Testament, speaks much of the Gnosticks. Dr. Holdsworth in his Lectures speaks much of the Antinomians; in the nineteenth Lecture of his first part, he saith, the Antinomians misunderstanding, many sentences of Luther on the Galathians drew thence the poison of their opinion. Of Manes, and the Manichees, See Mr. Gataker's Adversaria Miscellanea c. 35.

That is a wicked conceit of Mahomet. Filium Deo esse negat, eò quòd uxorem planè nullam habeat Surat. LXXI.

Hackspan. Fides et leges Muhammedis

That is a true maxime in Divinity which B. Brownrigg mentions; Deus nec æternum sibi potest condere creaturam, vel inæqualem gignere Filium. God cannot make a creature equal, or beget a Son unequal to himself.

FINIS.

The Bookseller to the Reader.

THus have you now the whole and entire Book of this Body of Divinity; supplimented and finished by the Learned and Judicious Author, and now bound in this volume: I need not say how acceptable this work hath been to the World, a large impression thereof having already been sold, in a short time, and great inquiry made after this; nor acquaint you with what advantages, of Oxford and other Libraries, for searching of choice of Latin, French, and English Books, conducing to his purpose, this worthy Gentleman proceeded in this pious labour. All therefore I shall add is, that the additions now made, which upon the Authors review are scattered in the main, and adjoyned to the Conclusion, are the Ultimate and last, that either will be written by him (on this whole Subject) or printed by me.

There is newly Reprinted the third time this Authors work, Critica Sacra, on the Hebrew words of the Old Testament, and likewise the Greek words of the New Testament, with a Supplement also thereto added.

March 1662. WILLIAM LEE.

A CATALOGUE OF BOOKS,

Printed for William Lee, and are to be sold at his shop, at the Turks-head in Fleet-street.

A Systeme, or Body of Divinity, in 10. Books, wherein the Fundamental grounds of Religion are opened, Heresies and Errors confuted, the Orthodox truth maintained: a work seasonable for these times, wherein so many Articles of our Faith are questioned, and many grosse Errors of late published, to the scandall of all good Christians; the Second Impression, with many Additions, with the Authours Epistles never to adde any more hereafter. 1662.

Annotations upon all the New Testament in Fol.

The Saints encouragement in evil Times, 12 by Edward Leigh Esquire and Master of Arts in Magdalen-Hall in Oxford.

A Sermon of the Nature of Faith, by Barten Holyday, Dr. in Divinity, 1654.

The Innocent Love-Feast, a Sermon by Wil. Clark, 1656.

Two Treatises of the mentainance of Tithes, 1654.

Certamen Religiosum, or a Conference between the late King of England, and the late Lord Marquesse of Worcester, Concerning Religion 4. 1652.

Barker on the Commandements. 4.

An Exposition on the prophesie of Haggy in 15 Sermons by that Famous Divine John Reynolds, D. D. 4. 1652.

Dod, and Cleaver, on the 13, 14, 18, 19, 20. and last Chapter of the Proverbs. 4.

An Exposition of the Psalms of Degrees.

The young mans Tutor, both written by Tho. Stent, in 8.

Heresiography or a description of all Heresies and Sectaries of these latter times, the Sixth Edition, by E. Pagit, much enlarged with Brasse Pictures, 8vo. large, 1662.

Contemplations, Sighs, Groans, of a Christian, published by Will. Styles Esq; of the Inn. Temple 12.

The Saints Comfort in evil Times, 12.

Dods 10 Sermons on the Lords Supper, with his Life, and two Epistles, and his Picture, 1651 8vo large.

Gerrards Day-book for a Devout Soul 12.

Conquest of Temptations, 12.

Jeromes 7 helps to Heaven, in 8. large.

Burning Bush 12.

Heavenly Advocate.

Hind's Catechism.

Historie.

Plutarchs Lives in English, with a new Addition of twenty lives, never before published in English, with the several dates of the yeeres of the world, and the yeers before and after Christ, when they lived, in large Fol. 1657.

Gods Revenge against Murther, in thirty Tragical Histories, by John Reynolds, the third Edition, whereunto is added the lively Pourtraicture of the several Persons, and Resemblances of other passages mentioned therein, ingraven in Copper Plates, 1657.

Silva Silvarum, or a Naturall History, in ten Centuries, whereunto is added the History of Life and Death, or the Prolongation of Life; by the Right honourable Francis Lord Bacon, Baron of Verulam, in Fol. 1658. with some new Additions, 1662.

Resuscitatio, or bringing into publick light, several pieces of the Works hitherto sleeping, of the Right Honourable Francis Lord Bacon, Baron of Verulam; together with his Lordships Life, not before published.

The second Edition, with some Additions, by William Rawley, Dr. in Divinity, his Lordships first and last Chaplain, and now Chaplain in ordinary to his Majesty, in Fol. 1661.

The Ternary of Paradoxes.

The { Magnetick cure of wounds. / Nativity of Tartar in Wine. / Image of God in Man.

Also another Treatise, of the Error of Physicians concerning Defluxions.

The Darknesse of Atheism dispelled by the light of Nature, 4. 1653. All written by Dr. Charlton Physician to his Majesty.

A Discourse concerning the King of Spains surprizing of the Valtoline, Translated by the Renowned Sir Thomas Roe, many times Embassadour in Forreign parts, 4.

The Roman foot and Denaries, from whence as from two principles, the measure and weights may be deduced, by John Greaves of Oxford, 8. 1647.

A Treatise of the Court, written in French by that great Counsellor De Refuges, many times Embassador for the two last French Kings, Englished by John Reynolds, 8.

Amynta, A Pastoral, Translated out of Torquato Tasso; 4. by Henry Reynolds.

The Hebrew Common-wealth, Translated out of Petrus Cunæus, in 12. 1653.

Hugo Grotius, his two Treatises, Of God and his Providence, and of Christ and his miracles; together with the said Authours judgement of severall points controverted, in 12 1658.

The Right of Peace and War, in three Books, written in Latin by the Illustrious Hugo Grotius, together with the Life of the said Authour, in English, 8 large 1654. All three Translated by Clem. Barksdal.

The Battel of Agen-Court, fought by Henry the Fifth; The miseries of Queen Margaret, with other Poems, by Mich. Drayton Esq; 8.

The Odes of Horace, Selected and Translated by Thomas Hawkings, in twelves.

The Spanish Gallant, instructing men in their Carriage to be beloved of people.

Youths behaviour, or Decency in conversation amongst men; with new additions of a Discourse of Poudering of Hair, of black Patches, and naked Breasts, 8. 1653. With three Tables New, 166[illegible].

The Village of Light, A Treatise of the Philosophers Stone.

The Innocent Lady, or the illustrious Innocence, written Originally in French by the learned Father de Cerezieres, of the company of Jesus, rendered into English by Sir William Lower, Kt. 1654.

A Disputation at Winchcomb in Gloucester-shire, wherein is much satisfaction given in many fondamentall points of Religion, in the presence of many many eminent Persons, 1654.

Order of Orthography.
Cabinet of Wisdome, or Rich Cabinet.
Levat of Bees.
History of Albasto.
Parthenus and Tisby.
New merry News.
Davisons Poems.
Vaubans Directions for Health.
Aristo's Satyrs.
Phantasticks.
Latham's Faulconry, with many new additions, 1661.
Secretaries study:
Haddocks art of Painting.
Navigators supply
Laudable Customs of London
Interpretation of Dreames.
Spanish Schoolmaster.
Wentworths Miscellanies.
Shepards Callender by Spencer
Bondman a play.

Books Printed for William Lee, and others, and are to be sold at the Turks-head in Fleetstreet.

THeatre of Plants, or a large Herbal, by John Parkenson.
Orlando furioso in English.
Mare Clausum, by John Selden, Esq;
Fleta, an Ancient Manuscript, of the Laws of England, published by John Selden, Esq;

These Books following are to be sold by W. Lee, D. Pakeman, at their Shops in Fleetestreet.

A Collection of all the Statutes frequent in use, with notes in the Margin and references to the Book Cases, with an Abridgement of the residue which be expired or repealed by Ferdinando Pulton of Lincolns Inne, 1640.

The second, part of the Institutes, concerning the Exposition of many Ancient, and other Statutes of Magna charta.

The third part of the Institutes, concerning Pleas of the Crown, and Criminal Causes.

The fourth part of the Institutes, concerning the Jurisdiction of Courts, all written by Edw. Coke Milite, sometime Chief Justice of the Kings Bench, Fol. 1648.

The Reports of the Reverend and Learned Judge, Sir Henry Hobard, Lord chief Justice of the Common pleas, being enlarged and perfected by his own Copy, in Fol. with a large Table 1658.

All the 11. Reports of Sir Edward Coke, Lord Chief Justice of the Kings Bench, Fol. in French.

All the said 11. Reports in one vol. Translated into English.

His Declarations, and Pleadings, in English alone, 1659.

The first, second, and third Volumns of Reports, written by Sir George Crook.

A Brief Chronicle of all the memorable things from 1640 to November last. 1661.

The Year-Book of Edward the 4th. also, Long Quinto of Edward the 4th. both Fol.

The Register of Writs, Fol. 1634.

Kelaways Reports. Fol.

Vicessimo primo Jacobi, & primo & tertio Caroli. Fol.

The Abridgement of my L. Cokes 11. Reports by Ed. Tratman, 8. in French.

Henric. de Bracton, de legibus & consuetudinibus Angliæ. 4. 1640.

Precedents, first and second parts, by W. West, in large 4.

The Touchstone of Common Assurances, by W. Shepard Esq; 4.

Brumptons Jurisdiction of Courts. 4.

The Elements of the Laws of England, by Sir Francis Bacon, sometime Lord Chancellor of England 4. 1639

The Judges Arguments about Ship-mony.

Natura Brevium, by Fitz Herbert, in French, and in English.

The Office of sheriffs, by Wilkinson, 1.

A Book of Precedents.

The compleat Copy-holder, with the Reading of Copyhold, the first by Sir E. Coke, the second by C. Caltrop Esq;

The Order of keeping a Court-Leet, and Court-Baron, 4.

A little Treatise of Bail and Mainprise, by E. Cook, Knight, 4.

A Declaration of Nusance, concerning dwelling Houses, with the Resolutions of the Judges of Assize, upon Questions touching Parishes.

Special and Selected Law-Cases, out of the Reports and Year-Books, concerning the Persons and Estates of all men.

Analecta, formerly called the Country Justice, the sixth Edition carefully Corrected from the grosse Errors of the former Impressions, in 12. with new additions to this present, 1662.

Statua Pacis, containing all the Statutes in order of time, as concern a Justice of Peace, in 12

The Laws Resolutions concerning womens Rights, in 4.

Books Printed for W. Lee, D. Pakeman, and G Bedell, & are to be sold at their Shops in Fleetstreet

REports, first, second, and third part of Sir George Crooke Kt. late one of the Justices of the Kings Bench; published by Sir Harbottle Grimston, Baronet.

The History of the civil wars of France, written in Italian, by H. C. Davila, Translated out of the Original, Fol. 1647.

Divine Essays, by the Right honourable Walter Montague Esq; 4. 1648.

The first, second, and third part of the Reports of Edward Bulstrod Esq; of the Inner-Temple, sometime chief Justice of North. wales, in Fol. 1659

The Epitome of the Laws of England, by W. Shepard Esq; in Fol.

Reports or Cases in Chancery, Collected by Sir George Cary one of the Masters of the Chancery.

The Reading upon the Statute of Bankrupts, by John Stone Esq; 1656.

The Clerks vade mecum, or a Choice Collection of Modern Presidents, according to the best form extant: Published by T P. Barrester of the Inner-Temple, 1655.

The whole office of a Country Justice of Peace, with an Abridgement of all the Acts, and Ordinances, which any wayes concern a Justice of Peace, by William Shepard Esq; with many new Additions added, in this Year, 662.

6 JA 70 FINIS.